1. The 20th Rule, of April 1861, does not apply to cases of persons lodging caveats "in the goods," who are not by interest entitled to do so. In such cases an appearance entered, accompanied by a notice in the terms of that rule, and the caveat, will be set aside with costs.—Russell v. R., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 40. (P.)

LXXII. 6. Caveat.

2. An executor instituted for his testator's widow, a caveator, a suit to establish the will. Persons, alleged to be next-of-kin and heir-at-law of the testator, were cited. By consent a verdict establishing the will was taken.

The present defendants knew of the former trial; had been in Court during part of it; but had not been cited. They were not parties to the consent, of which they remained unaware till after the verdict. Before probate issued, they, as next-of-kin, lodged a caveat. Held, that they were not bound by the verdict.—Davidson v. Woods, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 307. (P.)

3. A caveat, lodged by a person who had not a right to prevent the issue of a grant of administration, dismissed with costs.—Flood v. Bradley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 114. (P.)

LXXII. 7. Citation.

- a. Generally.
- b. When Proper or Necessary.

LXXII. 7. a. Generally.

4. When a party would be bound by a citation, the Court will allow it to be served on him out of its jurisdiction, but merely for the purpose of giving him notice.—In re Joseph Rogers, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 77. (P.)

5. A testator's heir-at-law was a lunatic, though not so found by inquisition; and was an inmate of an asylum. It was desired to prove the will in solemn form. The Court, having ordered service of a citation on the heir-at-law himself, as well as on his mother and the keeper of the asylum, permitted the case to go to trial; the order for trial, and all further orders and notices, being served in the same way as the citation.—Massy v. Pennefather, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 205. (P.)

6. When a citation, which had been served abroad, was, on its return voyage, rendered illegible by shipwreck and salt water, but the affidavit of service was forthcoming, and also the præcipe for the citation, the Court ordered a duplicate to issue and to be filed in the office, instead of the original.—Robinson v. Ince, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 52. (P.)

7. Service of a citation, on a minor's father or proper guardian, is valid, and will bind the minor.—Kelly v. Dunbar, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 151. (P.)

LXXII. 7. b. When Proper or Necessary.

8. A suit was instituted by one of several next-of-kin. The ptf., wishing to withdraw from the litigation, neglected to deliver the issue within the time limited by the 39th Rule. The Court refused to allow the deft. to proceed in the cause without citing the other next-of-kin.—O'Keeffe v. Hughes, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 304. (P.)

9. When an executor has warned a caveat filed by a next-of-kin, who has appeared, he is entitled then to an order giving leave to cite the heir-at-law.—[Coplestone v. Nicholas 33 L. J., Pr., 57, considered.]—In the Goods of Loftus, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 97. (P.)

10. When the heir-at-law of the deceased is also a next-of-kin, and it is desired to bind him by the proceedings as to the real estate, it is proper to apply to the Court for an order to allow him to be cited.—In the Goods of Rankin, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 38. (P.)

11. When a suit was pending at the suit of the executor in a will to establish it, and the validity of the residuary and executorial clauses was disputed by one of the legatees, the Court directed a motion to fix the mode of trial to stand over, to allow time for such legatee to cite the legatees in a former will lodged in the registry, to see proceedings, in order to bind them.—Kelly v. Dunbar, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 383. (P.)

LXXII. 8. Costs.

12. The Court will not establish, as a general rule, that the security to be given for costs shall not exceed a particular sum. The special circumstances of each case must be enquired into.

Semble—In inexpensive cases, £100 may be sufficient security.—O'Keeffe v. Hughes, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 204. (P.)

13. A next-of-kin, who enters a caveat, and merely cross-examines the witnesses at the other side, is entitled to an indemnity against costs; but, if he or she goes into a separate case, and makes charges against the opposite party, and fails to establish those charges, it is at the peril of costs.—Kenny v. K., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 352. (R.)

14. The next-of-kin of a testator, although unsuccessful in disputing his will, may obtain their costs out of the estate, if the Judge be of opinion that they were justified in disputing it by reason of circumstances of a suspicious character appearing in the case.—Carberry v. Healy, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 304. (P.)

15. Semble—When newly-acquired evidence supports the deft.'s case, the Court will not, after verdict, take it into consideration in deciding the question of costs.—Crozier v. Philpott, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 292. (P.)

16. The sheriff is not entitled to a fee of £3. 3s. for summoning a special jury for a trial in this Court; and, having been paid that fee under protest by the ptf.'s attorney, was ordered to refund £2. 2s., with costs.—Richardson v. R., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 247. (P.)

1. A final decree ordered each party to bear his own costs. The short-hand writer, who had, by the Judge's direction, taken notes of the evidence, was held entitled to an order for payment of one moiety of his fees by the ptf.—Kelly v. K., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 125. (P.)

2. The costs of proving a will in the common form are always paid out of the residue, and should not be charged on a legatee.—Nugent v. N., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 52. (P.)

3. A testatrix, being in extremis, and of doubtful capacity, the drawer of the will gathered her intentions from previous declarations, and introduced into the will words in favour of himself and his wife. These words were omitted from the will, the Court not being satisfied that the testatrix understood their meaning, or intended that they should be inserted.

The drawer destroyed that will which, nevertheless, the jury found to be valid. It contained a clause of revocation. To it an executor and express trustee for charities in a former will pleaded undue execution and want of capacity. Held, that he was justified in pleading thus, and he was allowed his costs.

As a general rule, intervenients do not get their costs; but when the Att.-Gen. intervenes as a necessary party his costs will be allowed. Daly v. Burke, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 73. (P.)

4. In a suit between a residuary legatee in a will (there being no executor named in it) and the next-of-kin, touching the validity of that will, when, after a plea filed by the next-of-kin, the parties consented that the proceedings should cease, and the ptf. (the residuary legatee) should have his costs in the cause out of the estate, and the defts. should pay their own costs, the Court refused to make that consent a rule of Court as regarded the costs.—Smith v. Brunker, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 38. (P.)

5. When final judgment is postponed after argument, additional Court fees on the day of the delivering of judgment are necessary; and also refreshers to counsel.—Gamble v. Robinson, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 55. (P.)

6. Semble—The Court of Q. Sessions has not a discretion as to costs in cases sent there by this Court; but must award costs according to the Civil-bill Act, to the successful party. The Probate Court will not give additional costs beyond what the Chairman had jurisdiction to award.—Flinn v. F., 9 I. Jur. N. S. 383. (P.)

7. A legatee under a will disputed the due execution of a later will, of which the watermark showed that it had been antedated. He was allowed his costs, though the later will was established.—Cowan v. Rankin, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 38. (P.)

8. A legatee, being also next-of-kin, impeaching, as legatee, a later will, because of want of capacity, or undue influence, if he fails, is generally liable to costs.

Next-of-kin are more favoured regarding costs. Three wills, differing materially from each other, were written within four days. The latest will was established; but the next-of-kin, who had intervened, got his costs.—Doyle v. Leary, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 58. (P.)

9. When a deft. as next-of-kin has pleaded undue influence, with other pleas, and withdrawn them promptly on finding that they could not be sustained, the Court will not impose costs on him.—Irwin v. Blakeley, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 178. (P.)

LXXII. 9. Judgment.

10. In order to obtain final judgment in a cause, commenced to be heard in Vacation and concluded in Term, the party who got the verdict must apply to the Judge to limit a time within which the other party shall, if he thinks fit, move to set the verdict aside, pursuant to the power reserved in the 85th Rule (Contentious).—Maloney v. Casey, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 184. (P.)

LXXII. 10. Jury.

11. A motion for a special jury should not be made until a replication has been filed to the plea alleging a will.—Parke v. Sinnott, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 214. (P.)

12. The Court will not order a special jury to be struck according to the old system, unless an affidavit be filed showing the necessity for doing so.—Woods v. Murphy, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 61. (P.)

LXXII. 11. Notice.

13. If a party desires to serve a notice of motion out of Term, he must apply to the Court for liberty to do so, on an affidavit stating the pressing circumstances which necessitate the motion.—Pilsworth v. Nash & Nolan, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 78. (P.)

14. To a plea denying that A. had died intestate, and propounding a will, ptf., without serving notice, moved for leave to file special replications. Held, that deft. should be served with two clear days' notice of the motion.—Meek v. M., 5 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (P.)

15. The Court will only give a conditional order to assign an administration bond to be put in suit against sureties, unless notice of motion has been given.—In the Goods of De Morin, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 205. (P.)

16. Parties going to trial must give, under the 44th Rule (Contentious), regular notice, besides the eight-day notice given under the 40th Rule; which latter notice was considered sufficient notice of trial.—Crossley v. Andrews, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 186. (P.)

1. Notice is requisite of a motion for a conditional order to assign an administration bond.—Russell v. R., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 198. (P.)

2. When by leave of the Court an heir and devisees are cited in a cause in which pleadings have been filed, there should be given with the citation a notice, stating that proceedings in the cause would be suspended for ten days, so as to allow the cited parties to intervene.—Parke v. Flinn, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 314. (P.)

3. The notice to be given under the 46th G. R. of 1865, that deft. intends only to cross-examine the witnesses produced by ptf., applies to cases in which, besides the plea of undue execution, want of capacity and undue influence have been pleaded.

The cause, being heard before the Court, his Lordship decreed for the will, and excused the deft. from costs, being of opinion that the Rule applied to such cases.—Murphy v. M., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 154. (P.)

4. It is necessary to give notice of a motion for leave to file a suggestion of the death of a ptf. who was named sole executor in the will in dispute, and administration to whose goods had been granted to the applicant.—McCarthy v. Matthews, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 120. (P.)

LXXII. 12. Parties.

5. Parties cited in a cause, instituted to ascertain the validity of a will, cannot therein plead and allege a prior paper-writing as the last will of the deceased.—Curtis v. C., 4 I. Jur. N. S. 248. (P.)

6. Semble—To administration suits brought by married women, their husbands should be parties.—In re Mahony's Goods, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 107. (P.)

7. In testamentary causes the husband of a ptf. propounding a will should be joined as a co-ptf.—Gamble v. Williams, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 159. (P.)

8. In case of the death pending suit of a deft. the Court will not, within fourteen days from his death, allow a citation to issue, on behalf of the ptf., to deft.'s next-of-kin, to accept or refuse letters of administration.—Norton v. Casey, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 383. (P.)

9. An intervenient, who has appeared to a citation to see proceedings, but has not pleaded, is not entitled at the hearing to cross-examine witnesses or address the jury.

An application made on his behalf at the hearing, for liberty to plead want of capacity and undue influence, was refused.—Kelly v. Dunbar, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 16. (P.)

10. When a deft. dies after plea pleaded, the ptf., who desires to proceed, may file a suggestion stating the deft.'s death, and the grant of administration to his goods.—Casey v. C., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 58. (P.)

11. When the interest of an alleged next-of-kin is disputed on the ground of the illegitimacy of his ancestor, the objecting party may require the next-of-kin to file a pleading setting out his kindred; and the Court will direct him to do so.—Eastwood v. E., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 310. (P.)

LXXII. 13. Petition.

12. Objections to the interest of caveators should be raised by petition; and not, as in the Prerogative Court, by peremptory exception.—Davidson v. Woods, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 202. (P.)

13. Ptf. propounded a will, and got an order that either party be at liberty to set down the cause for hearing; but did not pay the duty, and declined to act on the order. Thereupon deft. moved to dismiss the petition, and condemn the will. Held, an irregular motion. The deft.'s proper course is, to pay the duty, take out a copy of the order, and set down the cause.—Goslin v. G., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 306. (P.)

14. A party, alleging himself to be next-of-kin, questioned the legitimacy of a person represented as the father of an alleged next-of-kin. The practice is to raise such a question by petition and affidavit; and, if either party asks for an issue, to direct an issue to a jury on that point.—Davidson v. Woods, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 40. (P.)

15. In cases in which the facts are peculiar, it is proper to adopt a petition in order to have a caveat, appearance, and plea set aside.

The costs of proving a will in the common form are always paid out of the residue, and should not be charged on a legatee.—Nugent v. N., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 52. (P.)

16. Semble—A petition, by way of peremptory exception, in an interest suit, is irregular. Being wrongly intitled, it was dismissed with costs.—Flood v. Bradley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 114. (P.)

17. To have an administrator pendente lite appointed, it is not necessary to present a petition. A motion grounded on affidavit suffices.—Finn v. Gorman, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 217. (P.)

18. In interest cases, when the kindred of either party is disputed, the question should be raised by petition, by way of peremptory exception, and not by affidavit.—Corcoran v. Duggan, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 17. (P.)

19. In cases by petition, questioning the legitimacy of a person who had taken out letters of administration as a next-of-kin, the proper course is, when an answering affidavit has been filed and an issue raised, to apply to the Court for its directions as to the mode of trial of that issue, and not to file affidavits.—Cannon v. McIntyre, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 388. (P.)

1. Charges of fabrication and fraud, made in a petition, having failed—Held, that it should be dismissed with costs.—Stubber v. S., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 153. (P.)

LXXII. 14. Pleadings, Defences, Issues.

2. Form of issue when the entire will is impeached on the ground that the testator was not of sane mind; particular devices being also impeached on special grounds.—Lord Guilanore v. O'Grady, 2 Jon. & L. 210. (C.)

3. The deft., in answer to the ptf.'s declaration, which relied upon a document said to be the last will of the deceased, pleaded a prior will, and alleged that it had been destroyed by the ptf. Pleadings held insufficient, the deft. not having stated his case fully on the face of them.—Connolly v. Teevan, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 303. (P.)

4. It is only in those cases which are to be tried before the Judge and a jury that it is necessary to settle any issues.—Connolly v. Teevan, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 350. (P.)

5. When there are several defts. who rely upon the same defence, and who appear by separate counsel and attorneys, the Court will compel them to consolidate their defences; and to appear by one set of counsel at the trial.—Benson v. Derrig, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 351. (P.)

6. Whenever a plea alleges a will, the ptf. must file a replication.—In re Martin, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 214. (P.)

7. When several defts. appear by the same attorney, and severally file similar defences, the Court will order them to consolidate their defences, to save expense.—Campbell v. Robinson, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 270. (P.)

8. Except by consent, the Court will not order, when only one will is alleged by the ptf., the validity of other wills to be tried at the same time.—Campbell v. Pepper, 5 I. Jur., N. S. 313. (P.)

9. The Court will not send to a jury an issue touching the validity of a will which has not been formally pleaded, unless some party interested under it alleges it in a distinct pleading.—Kiernan v. K., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 46. (P.)

10. A plea, that no instructions were given by the testator to the drawer of his will to include therein a certain property, is bad.—Ratty v. Potts, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 168. (P.)

11. A will and codicil, propounded by different parties, were respectively impeached in the pleadings. Held, unnecessary to have separate issues touching the validity of each.

The proper issue is, Whether the will and codicil together are, or is either and which of them, the last will, &c.—O'Connor v. Herbert, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 125. (P.)

12. A plea, alleging that a testamentary instrument incorporates another testamentary instrument, need not, if they are lodged in the registry, set out the passage of the will or codicil relied on as constituting the incorporation; but the instruments must be specially referred to in the plea as being then lodged in the registry, and thereby their contents will be considered as if fully set out in the pleadings.—Bell v. The Att.-Gen., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 127. (P.)

13. Several earlier wills of a deceased person, not propounded by any party, cannot, except by consent, be put in issue in a suit by an executor to establish a later will; nor can the next-of-kin, by a citation on the interested parties, oblige them to litigate such wills in that suit.—Bradley v. Reilly, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 135. (P.)

14. At the hearing, the Court will allow the pleadings to be amended, by filing a further plea to meet the evidence.—Gumley v. G., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 198. (P.)

15. In a suit to establish the contents of a lost will, the contents must be set out in an affidavit, or a copy lodged in the registry, and referred to in the declaration. A record, made up in the ordinary form, applicable to an existing will, was at the hearing ordered to be amended accordingly.—Connor v. M'Gettigan, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 338. (P.)

16. Several parties propounded different wills, each of which was impeached, because of the exercise of undue influence by persons different as regarded each will. The Court ordered the issue to be confined at the trial to the validity of the will latest in date.—Gamble v. Robinson, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 373. (P.)

17. A party impeaching a propounded will cannot, in addition to pleas objecting to its validity, plead a further plea propounding a former will, though intended to be used only in case any intervenient should propound an intermediate will.

A legatee, who is next-of-kin, impeaching as legatee a later will, because of want of capacity or undue influence; but failing, is in general liable to costs.

Next-of-kin are more favoured regarding costs. Three wills, differing materially from each other, were written within four days. The latest will was established; but the next-of-kin, who had intervened, got his costs.—Doyle v. Leary, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 58. (P.)

18. An executor and residuary legatee propounded a will, of which the defts. impeached only the residuary and executorial clauses.

A minor intervenient, a legatee in a former will, being cited to see proceedings, appeared by solicitor, but did not plead. At the trial, a verdict was, by consent, taken in favour of the will, except the residuary and executorial clauses. The jury expressed a strong opinion against the whole will. A curator was appointed for the minor; and the Court, on the curator's motion, set aside the verdict, as to the rest of the will, and directed a new trial on terms.

The issue at the trial was, whether the paper writing, dated the 4th Nov. 1863, or any and what part of it, was the last will of the deceased? Held, that the issue should have been amended, by confining it to the residuary and executorial clauses.

That a verdict had by consent cannot be set aside on the ground of being against evidence.

That service of a citation on a minor's father or proper guardian is valid, and will bind the minor.—Kelly v. Dunbar, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 151. (P.)

1. A declaration alleged a will. The plea alleged undue execution, incapacity, and undue influence, and averred that the will was not the last will of the deceased, for that he made his last will, &c. (alleging a former will). Held, a good plea, provided that the former will be alleged with the same formalities as are required in a declaration.—Berry v. Millar, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 119. (P.)

2. The ptf. was executor of a testator, who had propounded a will in which he was named executor and principal legatee. The intervenient propounded a former will, which appointed the same executor, and principal legatee; but made the intervenient also legatee. The deft. impeached both wills, for forgery, and undue execution; and the last for want of capacity and undue influence. Different persons witnessed the wills. Held, that an issue touching both wills should go to the jury.—Mullarkey v. Mathews, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 220. (P.)

LXXII. 15. Sealing: Re-sealing.

3. Testamentary papers executed by one who, domiciled in Scotland, died before the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 56, came into operation, there being assets in Ireland, may, if confirmed in Scotland, be proved here—the clause about resealing the confirmation being inapplicable.—In Oag's Goods, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 134. (P.)

4. When a Scotch confirmation omitted by mistake to state that the inventory included in it, as it did, property in Ireland, the Court refused to permit it to be re-sealed in Ireland.—In Goods of Murray, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 140. (P.)

LXXII. 16. Suits, Transfer of, to Assistant-Barrister.

5. If it appears from an affidavit that a contentious suit is within the jurisdiction of an Assistant-Barrister, the Court will transfer it to him, and will order the original will to be transferred to the Clerk of the Peace of the county to which the cause is transferred, if there be no District Registrar for that county.—In re Plant, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 123. (P.)

6. A motion, to transfer a suit commenced in the Court of Probate to the jurisdiction of the Assistant-Barrister, who, under the terms of the Act, would have had jurisdiction over the case if it had not been commenced in the Probate Court, should be made on notice to the opposite party.—In re O'Donnell, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 303. (P.)

7. When assets give the Court of Q. Sessions jurisdiction, the Court of Probate will order (unless under special circumstances) the case to be tried there, not giving an option to the parties to try it before this Court.—Barry v. Milligan, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 292. (P.)

8. On consent, a case, in which a creditor of the testator propounded a litigated will, was sent to the Sessions.

Quære—Can a creditor be allowed, except upon consent, to propound and litigate a will? —Derlin v. M'Carthy, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 159. (P.)

LXXII. 17. Trial, New.

9. Verdict against an alleged will. Conditional order for a new trial refused, the evidence being conclusive that undue influence had been practised on the testator by the person chiefly benefitted, who was most active in directing the preparation of the will and in preparing it.

No part of the will in favour of other persons was allowed to stand, nor was the appointment of an executor.

Degree of proof necessary when the case is suspicious.—Moloney v. Casey, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 156. (P.)

10. When an important witness in the case, who had ample opportunities of knowing the capacity and testamentary intentions of the testator, and had written letters at the time to the deft. detailing the facts, not consistently with the evidence which he gave at the trial, the Judge directed the jury not to be content with only striking out his evidence if they disbelieved it; but that it reflected on the entire case of the deft. Held, a correct direction.

When there is no allegation of surprise, mistake, accident, or newly-discovered evidence, a new trial is not considered requisite, even when the title to an inheritance is involved.—Campbell v. C., 9 I. Jur. N. S. 39. (P.)

11. A verdict had, by consent, cannot be set aside on the ground of being against evidence.—Kelly v. Dunbar, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 151. (P.)

LXXII. 18. Venue, Changing the.

12. On an affidavit stating the great age and infirmity of some of the witnesses, and that their removal from Sligo to Dublin might prove fatal to them, the Court ordered the venue to be changed to the county of Sligo.—Benson v. Derrig, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 350. (P.)

1. The Court will require a stronger case to be made for changing the venue from Dublin than the Common Law Courts require; because, prima facie, all Probate cases should be tried before the Court specially created for them.—Fowler v. Connolly, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 352. (P.)

2. It appeared likely that persons really interested in the litigation would, from their position and influence, occasion a disagreement among the jury at the Assizes. They had put forward as a deft. an uninterested person. The Court refused to send the case for trial at the Assizes, though all the witnesses resided in the county; but fixed a special day for the trial.

A will and codicil propounded by different parties were respectively impeached in the pleadings. Held, unnecessary to have separate issues touching the validity of each.

The proper issue is:—Whether the will and codicil together are, or is either and which of them, the last will, &c.?—O'Connor v. Herbert, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 125. (P.)

3. When the assets do not appear, by affidavit or otherwise, to be small, the Court will not send the case to the Assizes, though all the parties and witnesses reside in the country.—Adams v. Quinn, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 52. (P.)

4. The Court will not send for trial to the Assizes a case, merely because the parties, and the great majority of the witnesses reside in the country; nor because the parties' characters are known to the jurors there, and the result will probably depend on the credit to be given to the parties.—Cassell v. Doyle, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 219. (P.)

LXXII. 19. Will, Execution of.

[See PRACTICE, LXXVII. 2.—PROBATE, ADMINISTRATION.]

5. A plea "that the will was executed by testator according to the provisions of the 1 Vic., c. 26, in presence of the witnesses whose names severally appear upon the said will" is bad, without stating that the witnesses subscribed the same in the presence of the testator, and of each other.

One of the attesting witnesses subscribed the will after the signature of testator, but before execution, in the presence of the other witnesses. Held, a bad execution under the 1 Vic., c. 26, unless the first witness signs again. Mitchell v. Huffington, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 40. (P.)

LXXIII. PROCESS. See LETTER MISSIVE—PRACTICE, ATTACHMENT—PRACTICE, COMMITMENT—PRACTICE, CONTEMPT—PRACTICE, COSTS—PRACTICE, HABEAS CORPUS—PRACTICE, WRIT.

6. If a female deft., against whom process has issued, marries during the suit, the process will be continued against her and her husband.—M'Namara v. Lysaght, Hay. & J. 623. (E.E.)

7. Attendance at Quarter Sessions, when the Chairman threatened to fine the sheriff for absence, will not be admitted as an excuse for delaying to execute the process of this Court.—In re Comyns, 1 I. E. R. 72. (R.)

8. When a deft. has been served, out of the jurisdiction, with subpoena to appear and answer, but does not appear, process entered against him without the Court's order is irregular, and will not be permitted to stand.—Perse v. Bayley, 5 I. E. R. 586. (E.E.)

9. In a cause petition, an order against a minor cannot be made without process.—Holmes v. H., 3 I. C. R. 126. (C.)

10. A trader debtor summons is not a "process" within the meaning of the order for protection under the 343rd section.—In re Dobson, 8 I. C. R. 388. (B.)

12. When one person is next friend to infants and to a femme covert, co-ptfs., the Court will compel ptfs. to give security for costs, on the ground of insolvency alone. In such a case, the form of the order is—that the proceedings be stayed until the next friend of the femme covert be changed, or security for costs be given.—Drinan v. Mannix, 5 I. E. 1. The deft. in a foreclosure suit not having complied with the order in the decree to bring in the title deeds, the Court on motion referred it to the Master to appoint a receiver, although the decree was merely for a sale, and did not direct a receiver to be appointed.—Harris v. Shee, 6 I. E. R. 543. (C.)—[See 1 Jon. & L. 91. (C.)]

3. A petition stated that the testatrix intended, and that the respondent knew that she intended, that a residuary bequest to him was not for his own personal benefit, but was to be applied to certain charitable purposes which she did not then indicate to him; and that he agreed, on those conditions, to accept the bequest, or promised her that he would dispose of the residue in conformity with her wishes. As evidence thereof, the petitioners referred to a letter dated, &c., and written and sent by the respondent to the testatrix shortly before her death. Held, on the authority of Hardman v. Ellames, 2 M. & K. 725, that the respondent was not entitled to the production of the letter.

That the respondent was not entitled to production of the letter before answer, under the 4th G. O. of Nov. 1852.

Semble—To entitle a party to production of a document under that G. O., its possession need not be admitted.

Semble—As a general rule, the Court will not, before answer, order the production of a document under that G. O.—Fitzgerald v. Simpson, 17 I. C. R. 141. (R.)

LXXV. 2. By Solicitor, of Documents within the Doctrine of Privilege.

4. In a suit against an attorney, to set aside a conveyance made as a security for untaxed costs, the Court refused to order the deed to be lodged in Court.—Carr v. Moulds, H. & J. 714. (E.E.)

5. After decree to sell, the solicitor of one deft., a mortgagee, who had been paid, but had not re-conveyed, having the mortgage-deed in his possession, being made a party by supplemental bill, admitted by his answer that he held the deed, upon which he had a lien for the mortgagee's costs. On motion by ptf. against the solicitor—Held, that he should bring in the deed, without prejudice to any claim that he might have against his own client.—Plumptre v. O'Dell, 1 I. E. R. 113. (R.)

6. An attorney, C., refused either to proceed with a cause, unless ptf. furnished him with the necessary funds, or to hand the papers to another attorney, unless repaid costs out of pocket. On ptf.'s petition—Held, that C. should hand to the new attorney, D., such papers and documents connected with the cause as, upon inspection, D. might deem necessary to the effectual prosecution of the suit: ptf. consenting that C. should have a lien on any funds that might be realised thereby, and D. undertaking to proceed without delay to bring the suit to a termination, unless counsel should otherwise advise; in which event D. undertook to hand back all the deeds and papers to C., immediately upon receipt of such advice.—Strangways v. Harman, 1 I. E. R. 467. (E.E.)

7. When a solicitor, as such, receives from his client muniments of title, the Court has jurisdiction, under a decree binding the client, to order his solicitor to bring in such of the client's deeds as are in his possession, though he never appeared in the cause, and though it be uncertain when the deeds came into his possession.—Hargrave v. Holland, 2 I. E. R. 137. (R.)

8. When a party, claiming by title paramount to the client, enforces production of a paper—Semble, the benefit which thereby accrues incidentally to parties deriving under the client, cannot be taken from them; and the solicitor's lien is lost.—Blunden v. Desart, 5 I. E. R. 221; 2 Dr. & War. 405; 2 Con. & L. 111. (C.)—[Reversing the decision respecting the solicitor's priority over a judgment creditor—5 I. E. R. 52; Fl. & K. 572. (R.)]

9. This Court has not jurisdiction to order the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor to deliver up title deeds on which they claim a lien.—Allen v. Jervoise, 11 I. E. R. 583. (R.)

10. A deft., by answer, stated that a deed was in the possession of the personal representative of a solicitor who claimed a lien on it. The Court ordered him to produce it, with liberty to apply, if production or inspection of the deed was refused by the party who had it, on payment of the costs due to him.—Monseil v. Lindsay, 13 I. E. R. 144. (R.)

11. A solicitor who claimed a lien on deeds was summoned as a witness with a s. d. t., and brought the deeds into Court, but refused to produce them, claiming a lien against A., and he was then precluded from giving secondary evidence of their contents.—Att.-Gen. v. Ashe, 10 I. C. R. 309.

LXXV. 3. *In Favour of Heir.*LXXV. 4. Production of Deeds, &c.: upon what Admission or Evidence of Possession.

1. The Court will compel the production of a document referred to by the answer of a deft. as in his possession, although such document refers merely to the deft.'s title.

When the deft. makes a document part of his answer, and states that it is in his possession, ready to be produced and proved; and that the truth of the matters stated in his answer will more fully appear from the document when produced; the ptf. is entitled to the production of it.—Phumpre v. O'Dell, Fl. & K. 589; 4 I. E. R. 602. (R.)

2. Semble—When the bill charges that deeds are in the possession of a particular deft., who allows the bill to be taken as confessed against him, the charge in the bill is equivalent to the deft.'s admission by answer, so as to ground a motion for an order upon him to produce the deeds.

But when the bill charged that deeds were "in the possession of said defts., or some or one of them," and two of the defts. allowed the bill to be taken as confessed against them, and all the others answered, positively denying possession of the deeds, the Court would not act upon the argumentative conclusion as an admission by the defts. against whom the bill had been taken as confessed, that the deeds were in their possession; although the ptf.'s solicitor offered to make an affidavit as to the fact that their solicitor had distinctly admitted to him having possession of the deeds. The ptf.'s course in such a case is to proceed by attachment for want of an answer, and not to take the bill pro confesso.—Purcell v. Langston, 4 I. E. R. 443. (R.)

3. In a bill by one partner for an account on foot of the dissolved partnership, letters written by the deft. to the ptf., after the dissolution, were set out as in ptf.'s possession, and forming the basis of the partnership agreement, which the deft. in his answer denied. A motion by the deft., for the production of the letters, refused.—Palmer v. Mahony, 6 I. E. R. 504. (R.)

4. The Court will not compel the ptf. to produce copies of accounts furnished by the deft. as agent of ptf.'s deceased husband, which were stated to be taken from the books of the deft.—Magan v. Coffey, 6 I. E. R. 506, n. (R.)

5. Ptf. sought a renewal of a lease not in his possession. Deft.'s answer denied his right to the renewal "inasmuch as he is convinced, from documents in his possession, to which he will hereafter more particularly refer, that no such lease was executed." Deft. further stated that it appeared by a certain deed and schedule, which he admitted to be in his possession, that a lease for a different term and rent had been executed; and that it was manifest from the schedule that a renewal, if obtained, was fraudulent. Held, that deft. had referred to the deed and schedule in such a way as to make it part of his answer, and must produce it.—Phelan v. Hamilton, 9 I. E. R. 264. (R.)

6. The answer admitted that a certain document, evidencing ptf.'s title, was in deft.'s possession. Held, that ptf. was not entitled to call for its production at the hearing.—Dowling v. Legh, 9 I. E. R. 418; 3 Jon. & L. 716. (C.)

7. In a suit instituted to set aside an assignment of a mortgage, the Court refused to order the production of an alleged assignment to the assignor, endorsed on the original mortgage. This assignment not being admitted in the answer, the Court directed its production.—O'Keefe v. Langan, 1 I. Jur. 210. (R.)

8. The defts. by answer admitted that two deeds were in their possession; stated them partially, and referred to them (when produced) for greater certainty. Held, that they were bound to produce them for the inspection of the ptf.s, on motion.

On a bill filed to sell the inheritance, it appeared on the face of the answer of the tenant for life, that the parties entitled to the remainder immediately expectant on the life estate were not before the Court. Held, that the Court could not compel the tenant for life to produce the deed under which the absent parties held their estate, although as against the tenant for life the right of the ptf. to inspection was complete.

That it is not a valid objection to a motion by the ptf.s for the production of documents, for the defts. to show that the bill is open to a demurrer for want of equity.—Dundas v. Blake, 9 I. E. R. 640. (R.)—[Varied by ordering production of both deeds; 10 I. E. R. 260. (C.)]

9. The deft. in his answer set out the contents of documents, but did not refer to them when produced, or admit them to be in his possession, nor was he directly interrogated to the fact. Held, that the ptf. could not compel the production of them.—Southwell v. Daly, 10 I. E. R. 7. (R.)

10. In a suit affecting the inheritance, the Court, on the admission of a tenant for life, will direct the production of the documents.—Murphy v. Balfie, 1 I. Jur. 218. (R.)

11. A title deed of the deft., which was not directly the subject of the suit, was charged by the bill to have been fraudulently altered. The charge was denied by the answer. The Court refused to order its production until the hearing of the cause.—Swift v. M'Ternan, 18 I. E. R. 119. (R.)

12. A deft. by answer stated that a deed was in the possession of the personal representative of a solicitor who claimed a lien on it. The Court ordered him to produce it, with liberty to apply, if production or inspection of the deed was refused by the party who had it, on payment of the costs due to him.—Monsel v. Lindsay, 13 I. E. R. 144. (R.)

1. After an answering affidavit to a cause petition had been filed, and the petition had been amended, without interrogatories to the amendments, the Court refused, without a cross-petition, to order the production of documents stated in the petition to be in the petitioner's possession.—The Marquis of Sligo v. Hildebrand, 2 I. C. R. 118. (R.)

2. The principle on which Hardman v. Ellames, 2 M. & K. 755, was decided is applicable to cause petitions.

A petitioner referred for greater certainty to a document as in the petitioner's possession. Held, that the respondent was entitled to its production.

Some of the petitioners were minors, and sued by their next friend. The Court allowed the petition to be amended, by withdrawing the words of reference to the document.—Peyton v. Lambert, 6 I. C. R. 9; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 93. (R.)

3. A general order to bring in and lodge documents relating to lands, without specifying the particular documents, cannot be sustained.

When deeds appear to evidence the petitioner's title affirmatively, he is entitled to a production of them by the respondent, though they are the title-deeds of the respondent also; otherwise, if parties not before the Court are interested in them.

In a suit to raise the amount of two judgments out of lands of the conuzor, after his death, the owner of the lands, a minor, by his guardian filed a discharge, claiming, under certain deeds, to be a purchaser of the lands, without notice of the judgments. The guardian, in his affidavit, admitted generally that he had in his possession all documents relating to the lands. The first of these deeds was a conveyance by the conuzor (subsequent to the rendition of the judgments) of the lands to trustees for the benefit of creditors. Held, that the petitioner was entitled to the production, by the guardian, of this and other deeds, before the judgments were declared to be charged upon the lands.—Chaytor v. Peyton, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 486. (R.)

4. A mere general charge of fraud in the execution of a deed will not entitle a party to production of it by the opposite party. An account-book ordered to be produced; it being endorsed, and marked, and referred to in the answering affidavit, to avoid prolixity.—Ball v. Flanagan, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 97. (R.)

5. The petitioners filed an affidavit stating that the matters in issue would appear from the documents mentioned in a schedule annexed thereto. Upon this affidavit the case was again referred to the Master, who ordered the production of all the documents in the petitioner's power relating to the matter; the order referred to that affidavit. That order was not appealed against.

The petitioners refused to produce some of these documents, the relation of which to the matter in issue they denied by affidavit. The Master ordered the production of the withheld documents. Against that order the petitioners appealed. Held, that their first affidavit, and the order unappealed against, concluded them; and that they must produce those documents.—Reilly v. R., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 166. (R.)

LXXV. 5. Upon what Admissions or Evidence of Possession.

The writ of prohibition may be issued to stay proceedings before magistrates, even after conviction. The application to the Court of Ch. for a writ of prohibition is to the Common Law side of that Court; and the conditional order, though issued from the Registrar's office, should not resemble an injunction order.—*Rich v. LXXXVIII. 1. Receiver, generally.

1. The Court will not order a receiver to pay to the inheritor's attorney the amount of expenses incurred, without the Court's authority, in legal proceedings relating to the lands.—Dudgeon v. Bowen, H. & J. 717. (E.E.)

2. Service on the respondent, of the conditional order for a receiver on a judgment, will be substituted, when the respondent keeps out of the way to avoid service.—Armitage v. Palmer, 1 Jones, 594. (E.E.)

3. The expenses of repairing the glebe-house are the first charge upon the profits of the benefice received by the receiver.—Sterling v. Wynne, H. & J. 817. (E.E.)

4. It is not the practice of this Court to entertain an application for a receiver upon the answer, when the bill is not filed by a creditor, and when a special case, as of irreparable mischief, is not made out.—Galway v. Barron, 2 Jones, 723. (E.E.)

5. A petition for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, should in all cases be verified by the affidavit of the person interested, if such an affidavit can possibly be procured.—Cloncurry v. Piers, S. & Sc. 669. (R.)

6. A conditional order for a receiver will be discharged, if there be not a verifying affidavit by the attorney respecting service of the conditional order.—Keogh v. K., 2 I. E. R. 412. (E.E.)

7. Before decree, a receiver was appointed over the assets of a company formed under the 6 G. 4, c. 42, which had stopped payment. The Court refused to restrain a creditor from suing out execution under sec. 18, against the shareholders, upon a judgment against the company.—Acheson v. Hodges, Fl. & K. 371. (R.)—[See 3 I. E. R. 516.]

8. It is not an objection to a conditional order for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, that it was granted on reading an affidavit made by a third person, verifying the petition, and that there is not an order of Court directing that the petition shall be verified in that manner. Bennett v. Power, 5 I. E. R. 152. (E.E.)

9. On an application under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, the Court will not substitute service of a subpoena to answer on a person appointed receiver over deft.'s lands in a Chancery cause, unless it can be sworn that he remits the rent to deft.—Butler v. Goold, Long. & T. 270. (E.E.)

10. Quare—When a receiver has been appointed to collect and get in outstanding personal estate, has the Court jurisdiction to order a debtor to the estate to pay the sum due by him to the receiver?

The Court declined to make such an order, when the debtor had paid the money to the personal representative before he had notice of the order appointing the receiver.—Kirk v. Houston, 5 I. E. R. 498. (E.E.)

11. Ptf. having been appointed assignee of an insolvent, a considerable time after the insolvency, is not sufficient proof that there are debts justifying the Court in granting a receiver over the insolvent's property, on bill and answer, when it is sworn by the answer that ptf. and all the creditors have been paid.—Fogarty v. Burke, 2 Dr. & War. 580; 1 Con. & L. 565. (C.)

12. The vesting order under the English Insolvent Act transfers to the assignee the property of the insolvent, subject to the operation of the laws in Ireland relating to such property. A creditor by judgment, before the date of the vesting order under the English Act, is entitled to obtain a receiver over the lands of the insolvent in Ireland.—Reilly v. Jacob, 7 I. E. R. 199. (R.)

13. When a petition for a receiver has been presented under the Mortgage Act, the respondent cannot show cause without filing a petition. If the petition has not been filed, the Court has no jurisdiction, even to give costs, against the respondent, of a motion to show cause.—Pakenham v. Darcy, 7 I. E. R. 476. (R.)

14. When a party in the cause, and a tenant of deft. was appointed receiver in the cause, all, but one, of the ptf's., who had carriage of the order, concurring in the appointment, the Court refused to set aside the Master's report on the application of the dissenting ptf.—Turner v. Lord Donegal, 8 I. E. R. 235. (R.)

1. Practice respecting showing cause against an order for a receiver under the Old Rules.—Wilson v. Owens, 8 I. E. R. 516. (E.E.)

2. A conditional order to appoint a receiver under the Sheriffs Act, having been obtained in the Court of Exchequer, the solicitor for another judgment creditor, who had knowledge thereof, petitioned the Ld. Ch. for a receiver, but suppressed the fact of the Exchequer order. The Court dismissed the petition, and directed that the solicitor should not have the costs thereof against his client.—Daly v. D., 9 I. E. R. 461; 2 Jon. & L. 752. (C.)

3. An affidavit filed, and notice of it, is not "cause shown" against an order to appoint a receiver, unless moved on pursuant to notice.—Jameson v. Scarry, 9 I. E. R. 476. (R.)

4. An order, appointing a receiver, and directing all parties to come in under one cause, will not take the case out of the operation of the 81st G. O.—Young v. Wilton, 10 I. E. R. 265. (C.)

5. On motions to extend receivers, the only persons entitled to be heard are the petitioner and the debtor, and not the parties who have appointed or previously extended the receiver.—Walsh v. W., 11 I. E. R. 607. (C.)

6. D. was tenant for life of estates, subject to a charge on the inheritance vested in S. A bill was filed by D.'s own creditors; and a receiver was appointed over the estates. S. filed a bill to raise his charge. D. died in Oct. 1844; and S. obtained an order in Jan. 1845, that the receiver should be extended to S.'s cause, so far as related to the rents due at the decease of D., and then remaining uncollected. A sum being in the receiver's hands, consisting of rents due in D.'s lifetime,—Held, that the creditors of D.'s life estate were entitled to the rents received before, and S. to the rents received after, the order of Jan. 1845.

The extension of a receiver in an abated suit against a tenant for life, after his death, to a suit by a creditor on the inheritance, is not irregular.—Moore v. Donegal, 11 I. E. R. 412. (C.)

7. If a receiver be appointed in a plenary suit, instituted in Ch. by a prior creditor, the Court of Exch. will restrain a receiver appointed in a petition matter in the Exch. from interfering further with the land over which he was appointed, till the Ch. suit be concluded.—Cochrane v. Fitzpatrick, 1 I. Jur. 10. (E.E.)

8. When the interest in a leasehold, over which a receiver has been appointed, has been evicted by the head landlord for non-payment of rent, the landlord is entitled, out of the funds in the receiver's hands received out of the evicted lands, to be paid the arrears of rent.—Donovan v. Sweeney, 1 I. Jur. 165. (R.); Elliott v. Elliott, 1 I. Jur. 165. (E.E.); Sherlock v. Roe, 1 I. Jur. 177. (R.)

9. In an incumbrancer's suit, A., the inheritor, admitting his liability to an arrear of interest, and disputing his liability for more; on motion for a receiver, A. was ordered to pay, within a certain time, the admitted amount, and pay the accruing gales of interest for the future. He paid accordingly for some years. Having made default afterwards, the receiver was appointed under this order; and under a consent order, subsequently made, applied the funds from time to time in paying the future interest. The receiver was afterwards extended on the petitions of several puisne judgment creditors of A. A fund, brought in by the receiver after paying the interest, having accumulated—Held, that it could not be claimed by the judgment creditors, while the principal and the disputed arrear of interest were due to the ptf.; the receiver, when once appointed, being so for all purposes of the cause, and not to be considered limited to the payment of the accruing interest. On an appeal, counsel for the appellant only can be heard in support of his case, and not counsel for others in the same interest, who have not appealed.—Stewart v. The Marquis of Donegal, 13 I. E. R. 106. (C.)

10. An order was obtained at the Rolls, pursuant to the 154th G. O., for a receiver under the Judgment Acts, unless cause shown in ten days. On the last of the ten days, the respondent filed an affidavit as cause, to the effect, that on that day a receiver had been appointed, by his consent, in the Eq. Exch., pursuant to the 139th G. O. of that Court. This cause his Honor disallowed, on the ground of collusion between the petitioner and respondent in the Exch.; and directed his order, appointing a receiver, not to be acted upon until the order of the Exch. should be discharged. The Court of Exch., on an application under this direction, refused to discharge their receiver.—Swift v. Le Strange, 2 I. Jur. 29. (E.E.)

11. The conditional order for the appointment of a receiver in Chancery renders every party to the cause or matter, interfering with the rents payable to the receiver, guilty of a contempt.

Entering into a consent does not preclude a party from appealing.—Delacherois v. —, 2 I. Jur. 89. (C.)

12. A creditor seized under a fi. fa. an equitable interest, on the 19th June. An order having been made on the 26th for the appointment of a receiver, the Court refused the motion to set aside the order for the receiver with costs, unless the party moving, who was out of the jurisdiction, should give security for costs.—Scott v. Nixon, 2 I. Jur. 90. (R.)

1. After a decree pro confesso, notice of the appointment of a receiver should be given.—Johnson v. Mason, 2 I. Jur. 106. (R.)
 2. In future it will not be necessary to present a petition in order to show cause against an order for a receiver under the Mortgage Act. All applications under that Act, after an order made on the first petition, may be by motion.—Hart v. Carleton, 1 I. C. R. 231; 8 I. Jur. 131. (R.)
 3. Petitions for receivers on tenants' and receivers' recognizances should be intitled in the Queen's name. The Att.-Gen. should be the petitioner.—Reg. v. Cruise, 2 I. C. R. 65. (C.)
 4. The parties in a cause, the receiver, and A., consented that A. should be substituted for B. as receiver; that certain persons be approved of as A.'s sureties; that the security be measured at a named sum, without reference; and that the existing sureties be discharged; that A. should pay B. an advance made by B., and all his costs; that A. should have credit in his accounts for such payments; that a policy of insurance on B.'s life should be discontinued; that the premiums on the life of a third party already insured should be kept up by A.; and that the amount of the insurance when realised should be applied to recoup his advances. Held, that such a consent might be made a rule of Court, it appearing that there was not any intention to traffic with the office of receiver.—Farran v. Morris, 4 I. Jur. 366. (C.)
 5. A poor-rate was struck in 1849. The poor-rate collector did not make a demand on the receiver until 1852, on foot of any arrear of that rate, although he was paid the rates for 1850 and 1851. An application being made for an order on the receiver to pay the arrear; under the circumstances, the rate-books of the union not being produced, the motion was refused.—Palles v. O'Ferrall, 5 I. Jur. 141. (R.)
 6. The M. R. will not order the receiver to pay poor-rates due on one denomination of the land out of the funds in his hands for the whole estate, if it appears that there was negligence on the part of the poor-rate collector.—Blakeney v. B., 5 I. Jur. 145. (R.)
 7. After an absolute order by the I. E. C. to sell lands, a petition was presented in the Court of Ch. praying a sale thereof, and in the meantime a receiver. Held, that the receiver was ancillary only to the sale; and that, the prayer for the sale being bad under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 42, the petition must be amended by praying the receiver only; but without prejudice to any question as to costs incurred in the Master's office on the petition before amendment.—O'Beirne v. Reade, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 403. (R.)
 8. When by an order of the M. R. in England a receiver was appointed over a minor's estates in Ireland, and by that order the tenants were directed to attorn to the receiver and pay their rents to him, the Court in this country refused to make an order carrying out the English order; but made the minor a ward of Court in this country, and referred it to the Receiver Master to appoint a receiver. By the Irish practice the tenants of an estate do not by the appointment of receiver become his tenants.—In re Trant, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 51. (R.)
 9. In Ireland, a creditor, having an annuity or a charge on the lands, may obtain an order, that the receiver shall pay him his annuity, or interest on his charge, in the proper priority, without filing a petition to extend the receiver.—Foss v. F., 15 I. C. R. 215. (R.)
- LXXVIII. 2. a. Appointment of Receiver generally: in what Cases.
- [The Mortgage Act, 11 & 12 G. 3, c. 10, repealed by 19 & 20 Vic., c. 77, s. 4.]
10. When the answer has been filed six months, a receiver will not be granted without an affidavit.—Loveday v. D'Esterre, Hay. & J. 151. (E.E.)
 11. The appointment of a receiver in a puisne creditor's suit in Chancery is an answer to a prior creditor's application in a suit in the Exchequer. Semble—Filing an answer is cause against a conditional order for a receiver on sequestration.—Cuppige v. Atkinson, Hay. & J. 515. (E.E.)
 12. Even upon consent, a receiver will not be appointed without a recognizance.—Conolly v. Codd, H. & J. 624. (E.E.)
 13. The Court will not grant a receiver to compel an appearance by the deft. to an elegit, when the judgment has been obtained in an adversary suit.—Anon., H. & J. 719. (E.E.)
 14. The Court will not grant an absolute order for a receiver, on the deft.'s answers, when the first answer has been filed eleven months before the motion, though the last answer has been filed in the preceding term.—Spratt v. Ahearn, H. & J. 800. (E.E.)
 15. When the object of a consent is to appoint a receiver over outstanding personal estate, the amount of his salary should be fixed by the consent.—Burke v. B., Fl. & K. 89. (R.)
 16. A consent that a receiver may be appointed, and that he may be obliged to account before the Master, will not be made a rule of Court.—Richey v. Gleeson, Fl. & K. 99. (R.)
 17. Upon a motion for a receiver upon bill and answer, an affidavit by the ptf. may be read in explanation of a doubtful passage in an answer not disclosing the whole truth.—Bell v. M'Loughlin, Fl. & K. 272. (R.)

1. A receiver, appointed in a cause in the Court of Exchequer, will not be extended to one in this Court.—Weldon v. O'Reilly, Fl. & K. 320. (R.)

2. The ptf., as mortgagee of the tithe rent-charge, filed a bill against the incumbent, and a sequestration creditor in possession. The answer of the creditor submitted that the mortgage was void under the 10 & 11 Car. 1, c. 3. The Court appointed a receiver.

In case of the appointment of a receiver over a benefice, he will be directed to appropriate a portion of the profits, to be settled by the bishop, for the performance of the religious duties of the benefice.—Kenny v. Cumming, Fl. & K. 321. (R.)

3. It is contrary to the practice of the Court of Exchequer to appoint a receiver after a final decree.

Semble—That the practice is different in the Court of Chancery.—Barber v. Roe, Long. & T. 662. (E.E.)

4. An order, dismissing a bill with costs, for want of prosecution, is an order within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27; and the Court will, after the taxation of such costs, and without any further order, appoint a receiver (on petition) under that section.

It is not necessary that there should be an order directing, in specific terms, the costs to be paid to some particular person; but the person who would be entitled to issue a subpoena for costs made payable by an order of the Court, is entitled to have a receiver appointed under this Act.

It is not necessary for the appointment of a receiver under this sec., that the Court should, after the costs have been taxed, make a separate order for their payment.—Madden v. Davis, Fl. & K. 475. (R.)

5. On the 3rd March 1841, the petitioner obtained a conditional order for a receiver, under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, on a judgment entered in 1828, by warrant of attorney, against the respondent, who was then a trader, and against whom a commission of bankruptcy issued, within two months after the conditional order in this matter was made absolute. On motion of the assignee—Held, that this case was within the Bankrupt Act (6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 126), and that the receiver should be removed.—Burt v. Bernard, 4 I. E. R. 328. (R.)—[Affd.: 5 I. E. R. 425. (C.)]

6. A petition for a receiver on a judgment over a rentcharge, will not authorise the appointment of a receiver over the lands themselves, although it appears on the affidavit of the respondent that he is entitled to the lands and not to the rentcharge.—M'Alister v. Martin, 4 I. E. R. 428. (E.E.)

7. The only cause against a conditional order for a receiver on process, is an answer on the file—M'Cartney v. O'Neil, 5 I. E. R. 494. (E.E.)

8. The affidavit to verify the petition for a receiver may be sworn before the petition has been presented.—Clendinning v. O'Malley, 2 Dr. & War. 210; 1 Con. & L. 363. (C.)

9. V., by will, dated 1805, gave R. an annuity of £300. By a subsequent will, revoking the former, V. gave R. an annuity of £600. The will of 1805 was admitted as valid. The subsequent will was impeached, and a suit instituted to establish it. Held, that, pending the litigation, R., though entitled in any event to £300 a-year, was not entitled to an order that the receiver should pay her that annuity of £300 out of the rents.—D'Alton v. Lord Trimleston, 2 Dr. & War. 531. (C.)

10. In an administration suit, the Court by decree appointed a receiver to collect the testator's outstanding personal estate, and "to be continued until the further order of the Court."—Raymond v. Franks, 5 I. E. R. 24. (E.E.)

11. When the head landlord threatened to evict mortgaged premises for non-payment of rent, the Court, on bill filed for a foreclosure, and before answer or process, granted a conditional order for a receiver.—Barrett v. Mitchell, 5 I. E. R. 501. (E.E.)

12. When the ptf. in an administration suit obtained an order for a receiver in 1822, but did not complete the appointment of the receiver until 1834, the Court directed an enquiry to ascertain by whose default the receiver was not appointed; and directed, that if it was by the ptf.'s default, and if he might, through such appointment, have kept down the interest on his own demand, he should not now be entitled to so much of the interest on his debt as would have been paid by the receiver, had he been appointed as early as he might have been.—Newby v. Drew, 1 Jon. & L. 445. (C.)

13. The deft. in a foreclosure suit, not having complied with the order in the decree to bring in the title deeds, the Court, on motion, referred it to the Master to appoint a receiver, although the decree was merely for a sale, and did not direct a receiver to be appointed.—Harris v. Shee, 6 I. E. R. 543; 1 Jon. & L. 91. (C.)

14. Upon the death of a respondent, the receiver over whose lands has been extended to the matters of several judgment creditors' petition; the proper order under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, s. 32, is to continue the proceedings in all the matters.—Brady v. Fitzgibbon, 7 I. E. R. 1. (R.)

15. A judgment creditor having sued out a fi. fa. and obtained a return of goods on hands for want of bidders, presented his petition for a receiver, without having proceeded to a sale under the fi. fa. Held, that he was not entitled to a receiver until the execution at law was consummated and at an end; the proceedings under the the Sheriffs Act being analogous to an execution.—Chatterton v. Allen, 7 I. E. R. 64. (R.)

1. Upon notice of motion to appoint a receiver, the Court will not entertain an application to extend one.—Pringle v. Little, 7 I. E. R. 205. (R.)

2. When a receiver neglects to lodge the balance due on foot of his account, within the time directed by G. O. 147, the poundage which he is to be disallowed on passing his next account is to be the poundage on this last, not that on the preceding account of which he neglected to lodge the balance.—Maxwell v. Boate, 7 I. E. R. 281. (R.)

3. In 1822, the ptf. obtained an order for a receiver over the shares of F. and P., but did not prosecute it. No receiver was appointed until 1834; interest on the ptf.'s demand running on in the meantime. Held, that if the non-appointment of the receiver was caused by the ptf.'s default, he must bear the loss of so much of the interest as would have been paid out of F.'s (the deficient) share by the receiver if he had been appointed in due time; and an enquiry directed accordingly.—Newby v. Drew, 7 I. E. R. 349; 2 Jo. & L. 416. (C.)

4. When a petition for a receiver has been presented under the Mortgage Act, the respondent can show cause without filing a petition; and if the petition has not been filed, the Court has no jurisdiction, even to give costs, against the respondent, of a motion to show cause.—Pakenham v. Darcy, 7 I. E. R. 476. (R.)

5. The time of presenting the petition under the Judgment Creditors Acts, as appearing by the endorsement of the Chancellor's Secretary, and not the date of the fiat, is the period at which the petitioner must be entitled to sue out his elegit.

If the petition be presented within a year after the judgment has been obtained, it is sufficient, though not fiated until after the year.—Robertson v. M' Cabe, 7 I. E. R. 477. (R.)

6. Leave given to the ptf. to move under particular circumstances, for a receiver in a suit defective for want for parties.—Sullivan v. S., 8 I. E. R. 72. (C.)

7. The Court has a discretion to grant or withhold a receiver under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 108, s. 30 (Tithe Rent-charge Act). Therefore, though a prima facie title be stated in the petition, if a fair doubt be cast on it by the answering affidavit, the Court will not appoint a receiver.

Semble—A certificate by the Commissioners under the Tithe Composition Act (4 G. 4, c. 99, s. 25) is valid, though it only finds generally that tithes are payable to a lay proprietor, without giving his name.

Semble also—The title to the tithes is not concluded by the certificate.—Greville v. Fleming, 8 I. E. R. 201; 2 Jo. & L. 285. (C.)

8. A receiver refused on a bill filed by a termor for years who leased for his entire term, reserving rent, with a power of distress; it being doubtful whether the bill could be sustained, the ptf. having a remedy at law.

Cremen v. Hawkes, affirmed on appeal.—Cremen v. Hawkes, 8 I. E. R. 503; 2 Jon. & L. 674. (C.)—[Affg. 8 I. E. R. 153.]

9. When a conditional order was obtained under the Old Rules for a receiver, any person who might be affected might come in and show cause.—Wilson v. Owens, 8 I. E. R. 516. (E.E.)

10. The wife's estate was upon her marriage conveyed to trustees to the use of the husband until bankruptcy, insolvency, or until an elegit should issue against the lands on foot of any judgment against the husband; and, from the happening of any of these events, to the use of the wife for her separate use. Held, that a judgment creditor of the husband could not appoint a receiver over the lands.—Woodroffe v. Marshall, 8 I. E. R. 670. (R.)

11. In a suit to carry into execution the trusts of a will, a receiver will not be appointed over the lands in the possession of the heir-at-law, unless he admits the will, or until it is proved against him.—Dobbin v. Adams, 8 I. E. R. 157. (R.)

12. When, by appointment of different receivers over distinct portions of the deft.'s estates, the entire is extended, the Court will remove all the receivers except one, who will be retained for the benefit of all parties.—Kelly v. Rutledge, 8 I. E. R. 228. (R.)

13. When a party in the cause, tenant of the deft., was appointed receiver, all (except one) of the ptf's. who had the carriage of the order concurring in the appointment, the Court refused to set aside the report of the Master on the application of the dissenting ptf.—Turner v. Lord Donegal, 8 I. E. R. 285. (R.)

14. W. mortgaged leasehold premises to the ptf. The deed contained a clause of redemption on payment of the principal and interest on the 1st May 1842. By deed of the same date, reciting an agreement on the treaty for the mortgage, that the principal should not be called in until after the death of W., and that by mistake it was stated in the mortgage deed that it might be called in after the 1st of May 1842, the ptf. covenanted that the principal should not be called in until after the decease of W. He became insolvent; the interest fell in arrear. The ptf. paid an arrear of head-rent to save the premises from eviction by the head landlord. Held, that the ptf. was not entitled to foreclose the mortgage during the life of W., but was entitled to a receiver to keep down the interest on the mortgage and his advances.

The premises were subject to an annuity prior to the ptf.'s mortgage, and the annuitant was made a party to the suit in respect of the salvage claim. Held, that he was not a proper party to the suit, and the bill was dismissed against him with costs.—Burrows v. Molloy, 8 I. E. R. 422; 2 Jo. & L. 521. (C.)

1. When a prior creditor applies for a receiver in his cause in this Court, there being a receiver in the Exchequer appointed by a prior creditor, this Court will appoint the receiver, the ptf. undertaking to remove the receiver in the Exchequer, the receiver in this Court not to act till then.—Mills v. M., 9 I. E. R. 1. (R.)

2. An injunction against proceedings on a judgment granted, after premitting the opportunity of pleading at law, when the neglect to do so was accounted for by the creditor's solicitor having said that he would proceed no further if the lands were not subject to the judgment.

Seemle—It is good cause against the appointment of a receiver under the Judgment Acts, that the party against whom the judgment was obtained was only a trustee of the lands.—O'Neill v. Browne, 9 I. E. R. 131. (C.)

3. The 143rd G. O. applies as well to the extension, as to the appointment of a receiver. Where a solicitor's clerk was appointed a receiver before the making of the order, he will not be extended to other lands of the debtor, on the application of another judgment creditor.—Meara v. Egan, 9 I. E. R. 259. (R.)

4. An order appointing a receiver should state that the Court has been informed by petitioner's solicitor that no order appointing a receiver has been made over any part of the respondent's lands, either in this Court, or in the Court of Exchequer, unless a special case for appointing a second receiver is made.—Clarke v. McMahon, 9 I. E. R. 462. (R.)

5. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 21, does not authorise the appointment of a receiver in a case of constructive trust. The Court refused to appoint a receiver when the interest of the conuzor of a judgment in a lease had been evicted for non-payment of rent, and a new lease had been granted to a third party under circumstances which would constitute the new lease a graft.

Leave given to show cause after the appointment of a receiver, on an affidavit stating that the respondent had been informed and believed that the ten days for showing cause, mentioned in the conditional order for the appointment of the receiver, were sitting days in Term; the respondent paying the costs of the absolute order, and the costs consequential thereto.—Cassidy v. Hopkins, 10 I. E. R. 208. (R.)

6. The Court refused a receiver in a foreclosure suit, after a decree to account and a report finding but half a year's interest due, there being no special circumstances.—Hackett v. Snow, 10 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

7. Real property of the wife was on the marriage conveyed to trustees to the use of the husband for life; or until he should commit an act of bankruptcy; or until he should make a composition with his creditors, or should assign his effects for the benefit of his creditors; or until he should become insolvent, or take the benefit of any Act, &c.; or until an elegit should issue against the lands; and, after the husband's death, or the happening of any of those events, to the separate use of the wife. The husband assigned all his real and personal estate to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors. On a bill filed by a judgment creditor of the husband, the Court refused to appoint a receiver, his life estate having determined by the assignment.—Hayes v. Marshall, 10 I. E. R. 429. (R.)

8. Hayes v. Marshall, affirmed on appeal; the Court considering that the receiver should be refused also on the ground that the suit was defective for want of parties.—Hayes v. Marshall, 10 I. E. R. 445. (C.)

9. The doctrine of civil death by profession ceased to be law at the Reformation, and was not revived by the R. C. Emancipation Act (10 G. 4, c. 7). The Court granted a receiver, on a bill filed to raise the arrears of an annuity devised in trust for a lady who afterwards became a nun, during such period of her natural life as she should continue unmarried.—Evans v. Cassidy, 11 I. E. R. 243. (R.)

10. When a petition is presented under the Mortgage Act, the mere impeachment of the mortgage by affidavit, without showing probable grounds for such impeachment, will not prevent the Court from making the usual reference to appoint a receiver.

Seemle—If a bill should be filed to impeach the mortgage, the Court would not distribute the fund received by the receiver until such suit was disposed of.

Cosgrave v. Gannon, 3 I. E. R., approved of.—Whaley v. W., 11 I. E. R. 276. (R.)

11. A, B, and C. were judgment creditors, B. and C. being sureties for A. The Court appointed a receiver over lands which came to C. from A. by quasi descent.

Seemle—When all the conuzors of a joint judgment are principal debtors, and one dies, the Court will not appoint a receiver over the lands of the survivor alone.—Mercer v. McKee, 11 I. E. R. 322. (R.)

12. The petitioner in the second matter was receiver in the first. The Court refused to extend him to the second matter, though the respondent consented.—Harvey v. Wallace, 11 I. E. R. 339. (R.)

13. Lord D. was tenant for life of certain estates, subject to a charge on the inheritance vested in S. A bill was filed by Lord D.'s own creditors, and a receiver was appointed over the estates. S. filed a bill to raise his charge. Lord D. died in October 1844; and S. obtained an order in January 1845, that the receiver should be extended to S.'s cause, so far as related to the rents due at the time of the decease of Lord D. and then remaining uncollected. A sum being in the receiver's hands, consisting of rents due in Lord D.'s lifetime,—Held, that the creditors of Lord D.'s life estate were entitled to the rents received before, and S. to the rents received after, the order of January 1845.

The extension of a receiver in an abated suit against a tenant for life, after his death, to a suit by a creditor on the inheritance, is not irregular.—Moore v. Donegal, 11 I. E. R. 412. (C.)—[Affg. 11 I. E. R. 364. (R.)]

1. The appointment of a person as receiver over a kind of property, the management of which he does not understand, with an undertaking to act under the direction of a person who does understand it, is improper.

The appointment of a receiver who acts under the directions of a defendant is objectionable.

A reference to appoint a receiver, sent back to the Master, though the Master's selection had been affirmed by the M. R.—Lupton v. Stephenson, 11 I. E. R. 484. (C.)

2. Receiver appointed on a judgment, notwithstanding a voluntary deed executed the same day as the judgment was entered, the judgment having relation back to the first day of the preceding Term.—Beamish v. Phaire, 11 I. E. R. 559. (R.)

3. The Court is not bound to make an order under the 102nd Rule in favour of a puisne incumbrancer. A petition was presented by a party, the consideration of whose security was impeached by affidavit: the Court made no rule on the petition, without prejudice to the petitioner filing a bill.—Heenan v. Berry, 11 I. E. R. 587. (R.)

4. A bill filed to raise the amount of a judgment was taken pro confesso. The bill did not pray for a receiver; but a motion for a receiver was granted.—Richardson v. Austen, 1 I. Jur. 20. (R.)

5. A receiver will not be appointed under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, pending a writ of error on a judgment at Law, although the petition be presented before the issuing of the writ of error, and security for costs be not entered into; the ptf. in error being the ptf. in the Court below. A Court of Equity will not entertain the question of irregularity in proceedings at Law.—Nugent v. Waters, 1 I. Jur. 35. (R.)

6. When a receiver dies, it is of course to obtain an order of reference for the appointment of a new receiver.—Wright v. O'Brien, 2 I. Jur. 20. (R.)

7. A creditor proved a charge in the Master's office, on foot of several judgments. Afterwards, he presented a petition to have a receiver extended to the matter of one of the judgments. Held, that filing the charge was not cause against the extension of the receiver, and the order was made; but no costs of the petition were given.—Geale v. Nugent, 2 I. Jur. 33. (R.)

8. Bill to raise an annuity. Answer by purchaser of part of the lands charged, claiming to be exonerated from payment of the annuity. Upon motion for a receiver, the ptf. relied on an affidavit showing that, to obtain payment of the arrears, it was necessary to have the receiver over the sold lands. An order was made referring it to the Master to appoint the receiver over sufficient part of the lands to secure payment of the annuity.—Bonyng v. Colgan, 2 I. Jur. 156. (R.)

9. In future it will not be necessary to present a petition in order to show cause against an order for a receiver under the Mortgage Act; and all applications under that Act, after an order made on the first petition, may be by motion.—Hart v. Carleton, 1 I. C. R. 281; 3 I. Jur. 131. (R.)

10. The petitioner is entitled to be paid the costs of the appointment of a receiver out of a fund realised by him in priority to the landlord's claim for rent.—Read v. Corcoran, 1 I. C. R. 235. (R.)

11. A receiver cannot be appointed or extended over tithe rentcharge by petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, or 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105.—Lymberry v. Helsham, 1 I. C. R. 633. (R.)

12. A judgment in sci. fa. on a recognizance, being merely an award of execution, a receiver may be appointed on a recognizance (notwithstanding the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 95, s. 10), if it was enrolled more than a year before the petition is presented, though the judgment was entered within the year.

Petitions for receivers on tenants' and receivers' recognizances should be entitled in the name of the Queen; the Attorney-General should be the petitioner.—The Queen v. Cruise, 2 I. C. R. 65. (C.)

13. The Court will, in order to save expense, refer in the first instance to the Receiver Master a cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, praying the appointment of a receiver over lands in respect of an annuity charged thereupon.—Murphy v. Harman, 2 I. C. R. 39. (C.)

14. Lands were devised in trust to pay a rentcharge to a husband and his wife for their natural lives, and the natural life of the survivor. A receiver was appointed on a petition of a judgment creditor of the husband, by his consent. The rentcharge was not received by the receiver during the husband's life. Held, after his death, that as the rentcharge, if a legal one, might have been extended by the creditor, an elegit bill would lie for it; and therefore the receiver had been rightly appointed, and was entitled to the arrears.

An estate to husband and wife by entireties may be extended by a judgment creditor of the husband.—Crofton v. Bunbury, 2 I. C. R. 465. (R.)

1. In a case under 12 & 13 Vic., c. 95, when a judgment in case was entered for a sum under £150, but which, including costs, amounted to more than £150—Held, that this was not a judgment on which a receiver could be appointed.—M'Donnell v. Malone, 4 I. Jur. 124. (R.)

2. Lands were devised in trust, to pay a rentcharge to a husband and his wife, for their natural lives, and the natural life of the survivor. A receiver was appointed on a petition of a judgment creditor of the husband, by his consent. The rentcharge was not received by the receiver during the husband's life. Held, after his death, that as the rentcharge, if a legal one, might have been extended by the creditor, an elegit bill would lie for it, and therefore the receiver had been rightly appointed, and was entitled to the arrears.

An estate to husband and wife by entirety may be extended by a judgment creditor of the husband.—Crofton v. Bunbury, 2 I. C. R. 465. (R.)

3. A. obtained, as of H. Term 1850, a judgment against B., whose interest in a term of years was sold at the close of that year under an execution issued on foot of a judgment obtained against B. in T. Term 1850. The purchaser had no notice of the judgment vested in A., who applied for a receiver under the Sheriffs Act. Held, that A. was not entitled to a receiver, without first establishing at law his rights against the purchaser.—Power v. Kelly, 5 I. Jur. 57. (R.)

4. In a foreclosure suit the Court will not appoint a receiver unless a year's interest is due, or that there is danger to the security.—Herbert v. Greene, 3 I. C. R. 270. (R.)

5. After a judgment debtor has become bankrupt, a receiver cannot be appointed on petition of the judgment creditor, though cause is shown only by a puisne mortgagee in possession.—Ryan v. Lefroy, 3 I. C. R. 351. (C.)

6. Order made extending the receiver under the Judgment Acts, on a petition verified by the petitioner's solicitor, without the leave of the Court (the petitioner residing out of the jurisdiction), on production of an attested copy of the affidavit of the petitioner, filed in the Court of Law, on which the judgment was revived, and which verified the material facts in the case.—Casement v. Rorka, 4 I. C. R. 36. (R.)

7. Two judgments were obtained in 1803, and another in 1805, against A., who, being seized in fee of lands, died; and they descended on B. and C., his daughters and co-heiresses. In 1809, on the marriage of C., her moiety was settled to uses, under which the respondents M'C. and wife claimed. An agreement, which was never carried into legal execution, for a partition, was afterwards made between the owners of the two moieties. One of its terms was, that the judgment should be thrown on B.'s moiety. In 1843, B.'s moiety was mortgaged, in trust, to the petitioner, who had notice of the agreement for the partition. The judgments were also assigned as a collateral security. Petitions were filed in the I. E. Court to sell both moieties, but the Commissioners stayed the sale of C.'s moiety, until it should be ascertained whether B.'s moiety would be inadequate to pay the judgments and the mortgage. A petition was filed in this Court for a receiver, pending the proceedings in the I. E. Court. The Master appointed a receiver over both moieties.

On appeal from his order—Semble, that the petition was not sustainable as against the appellants, M'C. and wife; because no elegit had issued on the judgments, and the suit was not for the administration of the conuzor's assets; because the judgments were not made charges by the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, as against M'C. and wife, as purchasers under the settlement of 1809.

Held, that the petitioners having had notice of the agreement to throw the judgments on B.'s moiety, the Court would not, until it was ascertained that that moiety was insufficient to pay them, appoint a receiver over C.'s moiety.

Semble, that the petitioner, as mortgagee of B.'s moiety, having had notice of the said agreement, was not entitled to throw the judgments on C.'s moiety, in order that the proceeds of B.'s moiety might be sufficient to pay off the mortgage.

The Court, in appointing a receiver, whether by interlocutory motion or by decree, exercises a discretion to appoint him over a competent part of the lands charged with the debt. An incumbrancer has no right to a decree for a receiver over the entire of the lands, without reference to the question of the amount of security, and the value of the lands.

The Court will not in general admit affidavits not used before the Masters, on appeals from orders made by them in cases referred under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act; more especially when they refer to matters not put in issue by the petition or discharge.

In this case, such affidavits were admitted by consent.—Tressilian v. Caniffe & others, 4 I. C. R. 399. (R.)

8. When a judgment has been revived within six years, and no interest paid on it, a receiver will be extended to pay the amount of such judgment and interest.—Viridet v. Evans, 7 I. Jur. 17. (R.)

9. When a receiver has been appointed under the Judgment Acts, to pay the amount of a judgment out of lands, he may, on motion upon notice, be extended to other lands to pay the same judgment.

If a receiver petition be presented for this purpose, the Taxing Master will be directed to tax the costs of the petition as costs of a motion.—Minchin v. Dillon, 7 I. Jur. 325. (R.)

1. In motions for a receiver, the applicant must, in consequence of the 19 & 20 Vic., c. 77, state the value of the property over which the receiver is sought to be appointed.—Colvan v. Gregg, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 46. (R.)

2. When there are no proceedings in the L. E. C., a receiver will not be appointed, unless a sale is prayed.—Ryan v. Fitzgerald, 5 I. C. R. 228. (C.)

3. When the receiver under the Mortgage Act, in a matter pending at the passing of the 19 & 20 Vic., c. 77, dies, the Court has power to appoint a new receiver, notwithstanding the repeal of the former by the 5th sec. of the latter Act.—Hartstonge v. Tottenham, 6 I. C. R. 144. (R.)

4. Under Pigot's Act, a judgment creditor may obtain a receiver over Ecclesiastical property of his debtor.

Form of order in such case.—Winter v. Ho-man, 6 I. C. R. 479. (C.)

5. A. demised lands for lives renewable for ever, at £70 a-year, and afterwards agreed to purchase the lessee's interest, then vested in B., in consideration of a perpetual rentcharge of £20 a-year. To carry out the contract, B. demised the lands for the same lives, renewable for ever, at a rent of £90 a-year, to C., in trust for A. C. died. The interest in the latter lease vested in B., C.'s heir-at-law. Held, that a suit could be maintained by B., for a receiver, to recover the arrears of the profit rent of £20, there being no remedy for it at Law.—Tobin v. Redmond, 11 I. C. R. 445; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 121. (R.)

LXXVIII. 2. b. Appointment of Receiver before Appearance and Answer.

6. A receiver, to compel deft.'s appearance, will not be granted in a suit instituted by a bond or simple contract creditor to pay his debt out of the debtor's real estate.—Williams v. Dillon, Hay. & J. 704. (E.E.)

7. It is the daily practice of the Court to appoint receivers over real estate, and to order the tenants to pay their rents to the receiver, although those rents are in fact debts founded on contract, and there may be a dispute as to the person entitled to them.

Upon a creditor's bill, founded on the equity of the 33 G. 2 (Bankers Act), against the public officer of a joint-stock banking company, incorporated and registered pursuant to the 6 G. 4, c. 42, the bank having stopped payment, an injunction was granted to restrain the directors, &c., from interfering, and a receiver to collect the joint property, &c., was appointed before answer, the deft. having made an affidavit for the purpose of resisting the motion, and going into the merits of the case.

Form of order in such case, authority and duties of receiver, his recognizance, sureties, and remuneration.—Acheson v. Hodges, 3 I. E. R. 516, 522. (R.)

8. The head landlord threatened to evict mortgaged premises for non-payment of rent. On a foreclosure bill being filed, and before answer or process, the Court granted a conditional order for a receiver.—Barrett v. Mitchell, 5 I. E. R. 501. (E.E.)

9. The Court having decided that the ptf. was entitled to an annuity on the lands of G., on which persons not parties to the suit were entitled to a charge; and a question of priority having arisen between the ptf. and them; the cause stood over to make them parties. Held, that they must be made answering parties, and that it was not sufficient to serve them with notice under the 15th G. Rule of March 1843.—Sullivan v. S., 8 I. E. R. 72. (C.)

10. When a receiver has been appointed by a puisne incumbrancer, the Court will not extend him to the suit of a prior incumbrancer before answer, upon the consent of the inheritor, as the puisne incumbrancers would be thereby deprived of the rents received until the receiver could be extended after answer.—Lynch v. Nolan, 10 I. E. R. 57. (R.)

11. The Court, upon the application of the ptf., appointed a receiver over the lands of a minor deft. before his appearance or answer, upon an affidavit that the rents could not be enforced from the under-tenants of the minor (who was not a ward in Ch.), and that his interest was in danger of being evicted; the head landlord having served ejectments for the non-payment of the head-rent.—Whitelaw v. Sandys, 12 I. E. R. 393. (E.E.)

12. A creditor who has obtained a receiver under the Judgment Acts is a necessary answering party in a cause seeking a sale of the lands. Therefore the receiver cannot be extended from the matter to the cause, unless the creditor has filed his answer, and has had notice of the motion to extend.

But when it is sought to extend a receiver from one matter to another, or from a matter to a cause, in which a receiver only is prayed for, the debtor only, and not the creditor who has obtained the receiver, should be served with notice of the motion.—Le Grand v. O'Neill, 2 I. C. R. 569. (R.)

LXXVIII. 2. c. Who may be Receiver.

13. It is no objection to a receiver, that he is a party in the cause.

There should not be two receivers over the same land. This Court will, therefore, order that a receiver already appointed by the Court of Ch. be extended to a cause here, upon his giving security proportionate to the additional lands over which he may be appointed.—Downshire v. Tyrrell, Hayes, 354. (E.E.)

14. A receiver appointed in a cause in the Exchequer will not be extended to a Chancery suit.—Weldon v. O'Reilly, Fl. & K. 320. (R.)

1. A receiver appointed by the Court of Ch. in an adverse suit is not the inheritor's receiver within the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82.—Anon., 3 I. E. R. 501. (E.E.)

2. The terms of the 143rd Rule (prohibiting the appointment of a solicitor's clerk or agent as receiver) are general, and are not confined to the clerks or agents of the solicitors in the cause or matter.—In re Stokes, 7 I. E. R. 450; 1 Jo. & L. 675. (C.)

3. An attorney or solicitor ought not to be appointed a receiver; and the Court will, upon motion, direct a solicitor who has been appointed receiver to be removed on that ground.

When several judgments are vested in one person, separate petitions for the appointment of receivers should not be presented on foot of each judgment—they should be included in one petition.

Any solicitor who nominates a solicitor's clerk or apprentice to the office of receiver will be suspended from practising in this Court.

If a solicitor, solicitor's clerk, or apprentice, shop-keeper, or person carrying on a profession or trade, is nominated or appointed receiver, he will be removed; and the person having the carriage of the proceedings must pay the costs of appointing another receiver.—Geale v. Nugent; Molony v. Nugent, 1 I. Jur. 819. (R.)—[Rev'd.: 1 I. Jur. 841. (C.)]

4. A receiver may be appointed or extended under the Sheriffs Act, though an order for a sale has been made by the Commissioners for Sale of I. Estates.—Corban v. Lord Mountcashel, 1 I. C. R. 234. (R.)

5. Upon a consent entered into bona fide by the parties in a cause; by B., the receiver; and A., a person proposed to fill that office; the Court will order that A. be substituted for B. as receiver, and that persons be approved of as his sureties, and the security measured at a given sum, without reference; and that B. and his sureties be discharged from their recognizance; that A. should pay to B. an advance previously made by him for the benefit of the property, and all his costs; that A. should have credit in his accounts for such payment; that a policy of insurance effected on B.'s life should be discontinued; that the life of a third party already insured by B. should be kept so by A. out of the rents; that the proceeds of such insurance, when realised, should be applied by the latter in recouping his advances; and that he might, from the balance of the rents, effect an insurance on his own life as additional security for those advances.

Secus—When there appears to be an attempt to traffic in the office of receiver.—Farran v. Morris, 1 I. C. R. 680. (C.)

6. An accountant in the office of an attorney, though not strictly an attorney's clerk, and notwithstanding that he holds other occupations, is a clerk or agent of the attorney within the meaning of the 143rd G. O. (1843), and is incapable of holding the office of receiver under the Court.—Crawford v. Chaine, 3 I. Jur. 361. (C.)

7. A consent to appoint as receiver a particular person, nominated in the consent, is not one which ought to be made a rule of Court.—Leach v. Tisdall, 4 I. C. R. 209. (C.)

8. The M. R. may, under special circumstances, appoint a solicitor receiver: 41st G. O. (1850)—Cromie v. Peyton, 5 I. Jur. 142. (R.)

9. Petitioner was appointed guardian of the persons and fortunes of a testator's children; and, though a barrister, was appointed receiver over the property, in consequence of a direction in the testator's will. The collection of the property was accompanied with some expense. Under these circumstances, the receiver was allowed poundage fees for collection at £5 percent.; but without deciding the general question that the 2nd G. O. of 1844 did not apply to such cases. There having been two separate orders, one directing the receiver to account for dividends of stock before the Master in the matter, and another directing him to account before the Receiver Master for the rents, an order was made directing both accounts for the future to be taken before the Receiver Master.—In re Doolys, 7 I. Jur. 285. (R.)

LXXVIII. 2. d. Against Executors, Administrators, and Trustees.

10. The petitioner issued an elegit, and obtained a finding on the inquisition. The Court refused to appoint a receiver unless the petitioner consented to waive his costs at law.—Hudson v. Williams, 1 Jones, 630. (E.E.)

LXXVIII. 2. e. Appointment of Receiver over Infant's Estate.

11. Before the Court of Ch. Reg. Act 1850, no step could have been taken in a minor matter without a petition. Under that statute, minors may be made wards of Court by cause petition; and if they were now made wards of Court by cause petition instead of an ordinary petition, all subsequent orders might be made on motion, and without petition; and expense would then be saved to the minors' estate.—Hart v. Carleton, 1 I. C. R. 231; 3 I. Jur. 131. (R.)

12. The Lord Chancellor of Ireland has power, under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 7, to appoint a receiver over the estate of the minor, upon a petition, and without the filing of a bill for that purpose.—In re Goode, 1 I. C. R. 256; 3 I. Jur. 50. (C.)

LXXVIII. 2. f. Against Joint Tenants and Tenants in Common.

13. A receiver will not be granted on a bill of partition, filed by one tenant in common against another, unless a case of exclusion is shown.—Spratt v. Ahearne, 1 Jones, 50. (E.E.)

LXXVIII. 2. g. Receiver against Mortgagor or Mortgagee, and other Incumbrancers.

1. A receiver will not be appointed over a life estate to raise arrears of interest which accrued due during the time of a former tenant for life.—Garnett v. Pratt, Hay. & J. 303. (E.E.)

2. An order to appoint a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, will not be suspended upon an allegation that the consideration for the judgment was fraudulent or usurious; but the order for payment will be stayed, to allow the consideration for the judgment to be impeached.

Semble—A receiver will be appointed over an equity of redemption, when the debtor is in receipt of the rents.—Maxwell v. O'Dell, S. & Sc. 194. (R.)

3. It is not a sufficient cause against the appointment of a receiver upon a judgment under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, that the debtor is seized only of an equity of redemption, unless the mortgagee be in possession, or will go into possession.

The impeachment of the security may be good cause against distributing the funds, but not against granting a receiver.—Smith v. Egan, S. & Sc. 238. (R.)

4. The Court will not appoint a receiver on a judgment under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, without the consent of a prior creditor who is in receipt of the rents.

The affidavit to show cause against appointing a receiver under that Act, need not be made by a party interested in the lands. The Court will listen to any person who states that a third party, not the respondent, is in receipt of the rents, and may be affected by the order.

The statute gives the creditor, at whose instance the order is obtained, a right to costs in certain cases, out of the funds brought in by the receiver. In other respects, the Court has complete control over these funds.—Kennedy v. Whitney, S. & Sc. 375. (R.)

5. In a suit for payment of an annuity, the Court of Exchequer will appoint a receiver on the answer, and an affidavit of the sum due, though an issuable Term and Vacation have elapsed since the answer was filed.—Fay v. F., 2 Jon. 350. (E.E.)

6. Quare—Whether the filing of a petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, is not, for the purpose of a suit to have equitable execution, equivalent to issuing an elegit?—Handley v. Lord Langford, 2 Jo. 421. (E.E.)

7. A receiver was appointed in an equity cause, and was afterwards extended to the matter of a petition presented by a prior mortgagee under the Mortgage Act. Held, that rents received by the receiver before the conditional order for extension, and which were still in Court, belonged to the annuitant.—Davoren v. Collins, 2 Jo. 806. (E.E.)

8. Deft. executed a deed purporting to grant ptf. an annuity of £52, for deft.'s life, in consideration of £350 paid by ptf. to deft. upon the execution of the deed. The annuity becoming in arrear, ptf. filed a bill to raise the arrears, by selling the premises charged, and a receiver in the meantime. Ptf. now moved on the bill for a receiver. Deft., by her answer and affidavit, impeached the grant of the annuity on several grounds; and insisted that the deed was not bona fide, but merely an evasion of the statutes against usury; that the real agreement was for an usurious loan, of which the repayment was secured by an insurance on deft.'s life, to be maintained at her cost; and referred to letters of ptf.'s agent, which treated the transaction as a loan, not as a purchase. Deft. also denied that the consideration was duly paid. Held, that there was a prima facie case for a receiver, since deft.'s unproved allegations could not avail against her solemn deed.—Kelly v. Butler, 1 I. E. R. 435. (R.)

9. When, upon a decree pro confesso in a foreclosure suit, ptf. moves for a receiver, he must show, by affidavit, the sum due for principal, interest, and costs, after all just allowances, and that deft. is in possession. The statement in the bill respecting the sum due is not enough.—Rogers v. Newton, 2 I. E. R. 40. (R.)

10. When the deed reserving a f.-f. rent out of lands thereby conveyed in fee, was of ancient date, and the rent, after various mesne assignments, was vested in the ptf., as assignee, and was in arrear; and the estate conveyed by the deed, after various mesne assignments, was vested in the deft., as assignee; upon a bill by the assignee of the rent, praying a receiver, &c., and the deft.'s answer admitting the ptf.'s title, but insisting that his remedy was at law, the Court granted a receiver over the premises conveyed by the deed, to pay the arrears and future accruing gales of the rent, although the deed contained clauses of distress and re-entry in case of non-payment.—Stevell v. Murphy, 2 I. E. R. 448. (R.)

11. A judgment creditor is entitled to a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, in every case in which at law he could issue an elegit. In such a case, although the parties in possession may show, as cause against the receiver's appointment, an equitable defence which, upon a bill filed for that purpose, would probably entitle them to a decree, the Court will appoint the receiver on the judgment creditor's petition; but will retain the fund until the party relying upon the equity has had the opportunity of having it regularly established by a decree.—Walsh v. Keane, 3 I. E. R. 426; Fl. & K. 174. (R.)

1. It is contrary to the practice of the Court of Exchequer to appoint a receiver after a final decree.

Semble—That the practice is different in the Court of Chancery.—Barber v. Roe, Long. & T. 662. (E.E.)

2. As cause against the conditional order for the appointment of a receiver under the Mortgage Act (11 & 12 G. 3, c. 10), the respondent impeached the mortgage, and showed by affidavits very strong grounds to induce the Court to believe that it was obtained without good consideration and by fraud. The cause was allowed without costs, it having been the practice hitherto not to appoint a receiver under the Mortgage Act, except where the right of the mortgagee was uncontroverted; and it appearing by the petition in this case, that from the date of the mortgage to the present time (thirteen years) no payment had been made or demanded, as the respondent alleged, on foot of the mortgage, although the parties were close neighbours all the time. But the M. R. declared it should not be understood that petitions under this Act may be defeated whenever the respondent comes in on motion and impeaches the mortgage; that for the future the conditional order for a receiver shall be made absolute notwithstanding such impeachment, unless the grounds for such impeachment clearly appear: and that the former practice held out a strong temptation to parties in receipt of the rents to make improper statements upon oath, and ought not to be followed.—Cosgrave v. Gannon, 3 I. E. R. 433; Flan. & K. 228. (R.)—[Approved: Whaley v. W., 11 I. E. R. 276. (R.)]

3. Ptf., as mortgagee of the tithe rentcharge, filed a bill against the incumbent, and against a sequestration creditor in possession; and that creditor's answer submitted that the mortgage was void under the 10 & 11 Car. 1, c. 8. The Court appointed a receiver.—Kenny v. Cumming, Fl. & K. 321. (R.)

4. A puisne mortgagee having obtained a receiver under the Mortgage Act, a prior mortgagee in a year after extended the receiver, no rents having in the meantime been collected by him. Held, that the prior mortgagee was entitled to all the rents due before the extension by him, but not collected until afterwards.—Boyd v. Burke, 8 I. E. R. 660. (R.)

5. A judgment creditor having obtained a receiver under the Judgment Acts, over lands of his debtor, may, after the lapse of more than a year, get a receiver under the Acts over other lands of the debtor, without reviving his judgment.—Clendinning v. Oranmore, 9 I. E. R. 150. (R.)

6. A judgment creditor, in 1836, obtained a conditional order for a receiver. In 1837 a consent order directed that the respondent should pay the instalments; and, in default, that a receiver should be appointed. In 1846, upon default being made, the creditor presented a petition to extend a receiver appointed in the meantime in the matter of a puisne creditor. Held, that the petition was a continuation of the original petition, and that it was not necessary to revive the judgment.

That, properly, the application should be made by motion.—Dyas v. Cruise, 9 I. E. R. 256. (R.)

7. A cause petition, for the appointment of a receiver to keep down the interest upon a charge, is not in general regular. The fact of the charge having been put in settlement is not a sufficient reason for presenting such a petition.

Bennett v. Briscoe (1 I. C. R. 594) disapproved of.—Ryan v. Fitzgerald, 5 I. C. R. 223. (C.)

8. The appointment of a receiver in a mortgage cause does not take the case out of the operation of the 81st G. O. of 1843.—Woodroffe v. Greene, 15 I. C. R. 176. (C.A.)

9. The receiver of the rents of a mortgaged estate is the mortgagor's receiver.—Chinnery v. Evans, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 281. (H.L.)

LXXVIII. 2. h. In Partnership Cases.

LXXVIII. 2. i. Pendente lite.

10. Upon the hearing, the Court, though entertaining a strong opinion in favour of the ptf., directed an ejectment against the deft., who obtained a verdict, which was afterwards set aside. The Court granted a receiver over the deft.'s possession, it being shown that the rents were in danger.—Scott v. S., 13 I. E. R. 212. (C.)

11. B. was donee of a general power of appointment enabling him to charge respondent's estate with £1500 and interest. He exercised it in the petitioner's favour, who was B.'s only son by a second marriage, and who now sought to have a receiver appointed over the estates, as no interest had been paid for fifteen or sixteen years.

The respondents impeached the petitioner's security, on the ground—that the power of appointment was contained in a deed intended to carry out a prior contract; that the power was too general, and should have been confined to the children of the first marriage; and that a cross-bill to remedy the mistake had been already filed. Held, that a receiver should, notwithstanding this impeachment, be appointed pending the litigation.—Blake v. B., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 301. (R.)

12. C., being entitled to an equity of redemption, confessed a judgment. Afterwards, C., and the mortgagee, by C.'s direction, conveyed the estate to a purchaser with notice of the judgment. The Court would not, at the judgment creditor's instance, appoint a receiver over the estates in the purchaser's hands.—Barrett v. Merrick, 2 Jones, 193. (E. E.)

1. A purchaser, without notice of a prior judgment, at the time of the purchase, took to a trustee for himself an assignment of an outstanding mortgage prior to the judgment. Upon the petition of the judgment creditor, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the Court refused to appoint a receiver.—Chapman v. Dunbar, 3 I. E. R. 202; Fl. & K. 86. (R.)

LXXVIII. 2. j. Against Vendor and Purchaser.

LXXVIII. 2. k. In cases of Judgment and Custodiam Creditors, under the Sheriff's Act, 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, and under the Rentcharge Acts.

2. When a bill is filed against a deft., residing out of the jurisdiction, to raise a charge specifically affecting his lands, a receiver will be appointed, to compel his appearance.—Nash v. Hughes, Hay. & J. 400. (E.E.)

3. A prior creditor, having obtained a receiver in a Chancery suit to which a puisne creditor is a party, cannot remove a receiver appointed by the Exchequer in the puisne creditor's suit in that Court, to which the prior creditor is not a party.

Semble—At the desire of the prior creditor, the Exchequer will direct the puisne creditor to make him a party to the suit.

But the Exchequer will not remove its receiver when the receiver in Chancery was collusively appointed to obstruct the puisne creditor.—Barry v. B., Hay. & J. 508. (E.E.)

4. A receiver to compel the deft.'s appearance will not be granted in a suit instituted by a bond, or simple contract creditor, for payment of his debt out of his debtor's real estate.—Williams v. Dillon, H. & J. 704. (E.E.)

5. An order to appoint a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, will not be suspended on an allegation that the consideration for the judgment was fraudulent or usurious; but the order to pay will be stayed, to give an opportunity to impeach it.—Maxwell v. O'Dell, S. & Sc. 194. (R.)

6. A judgment is not a sum charged upon, or payable out of land, within the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42. Therefore, an application for an order to discharge a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, on payment of the principal due on the judgment, with six years' interest, was refused.—Kealy v. Bodkin, S. & Sc. 211. (R.)

7. A petition for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, should be verified by the affidavit of the person interested, whenever it is possible to procure such an affidavit.—Cloncurry v. Piers, S. & Sc. 669. (R.)

8. Semble—A receiver will not be appointed over a term of years, upon a judgment creditor's petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55.—

Littlewood v. Brierley, 1 Jo. 606. (E.E.)—White v. W., 1 Jo. 610. (E.E.)

9. The Court will not appoint a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, over the possession of a prior legit creditor.—Hobson v. Murphy, 2 Jo. 169. (E.E.)

10. On the Attorney-General's consent, a receiver will be appointed under the 5 & 6 W. 4, s. 55, when the conuzor of the judgment has died intestate, and without heirs.—Fox v. Auldjo, 2 Jo., 180. (E.E.)

11. The Court will not appoint a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, over a prior creditor who, by an agreement entered into with the debtor after the petitioner's judgment, is in possession of the debtor's estate, to pay off an incumbrance.—Balfie v. Lynch, 2 Jo. 185. (E.E.)

12. The 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, applies only to cases in which the creditor has not had the benefit of his judgment.

A judgment creditor filed an 'legit bill, and got into possession of part of his debtor's estates by a receiver appointed under a decree in that suit. Under this Act, the Court refused to appoint a receiver over other parts of the debtor's estate.—Davidson v. Langford, 2 Jo. 189. (E.E.)

13. Under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, this Court has not jurisdiction to appoint a receiver over an equity of redemption in fee, even though the conuzor of the judgment be in possession of the lands.—Handley v. Lord Langford, 2 Jo. 343. (E.E.)

14. In an affidavit, verifying a petition for a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, it is sufficient to state a lump sum to be due on foot of the judgment for principal, interest, and costs, when the only costs incurred are the ordinary costs of entering judgment.—Anon., 2 Jo. 349. (E.E.)

15. The Court will appoint a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, over a reversion in fee expectant on a term of years. Against an application for a receiver, the respondent showed cause that the conuzor had, before the rendition of the judgment, conveyed all his estates to respondent. It being alleged that the conveyance was voluntary, and void as against creditors, the Court directed an enquiry into the consideration for the deed.—Costello v. Jones, 2 Jo. 352. (E.E.)

16. A receiver will not be appointed over an ecclesiastical benefice, with cure of souls, if no sequestration has issued, and the bishop was not a party to the suit.—McCurdy v. Chichester, 2 Jo. 358. (E.E.)

17. In answer to a petition for a receiver to pay tithe composition, under 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 15, the respondent cannot set up as a defence that the lands are in the occupation of his under-tenants, who hold under unstamped accepted proposals in writing, executed prior to the 16th August 1832.—Orpen v. Allen, 2 Jo. 484. (E.E.)

1. Semble—A person in possession of lands under a contract for a lease thereof for a term greater than three years, but upon which an action at law could not be maintained, is not a person having an estate or interest therein greater than a tenancy from year to year, within the meaning of 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 12, though a Court of Equity would decree specific execution of the contract, on the ground of part performance.—Orpen v. Moore, 2 Jo. 435. (E.E.)

2. After the appointment of a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the petitioner died, having appointed two executors, of whom only one proved the will. Held, that the proceedings on the petition must be continued in the names of both executors.—Anon. 2 Jo. 781. (E.E.)

8. Under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, and before the G. O. of March 1843, the absolute order was the order appointing the receiver, and to the date of it, and not of the conditional order, his appointment had reference, so as to give priority over the rights of a bankrupt's assignee.—Burt v. Bernard, 2 Con. & L. 271. (C.); 3 Dr. & War. 464: confirming, on appeal, the judgment of the M. R.; Fl. & K. 414. (R.)

4. The order extending a receiver under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, does not attach, for the benefit of the extending creditor, the arrears of rent accrued due before, and received after the extension.—Rede v. Henry, Fl. & K. 97. (R.)

5. An affidavit to verify a petition under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, made by the agent of the petitioner, will not suffice; the affidavit, unless some special facts are stated, must be made by the petitioner himself.—Phelan v. P., Fl. & K. 177. (R.)

6. In proceedings under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the Court will not refer it to a Master to ascertain the priorities of the judgment creditors, but will itself decide upon them, on the motion to draw out of Court the money brought in by the receiver.—Hinton v. Gill, Fl. & K. 183. (R.)

7. A receiver appointed in a cause over a life estate, and not discharged upon the death of the tenant for life, will be extended to the matter of a petition upon a judgment obtained against the tenant in tail.

Semble—That a receiver appointed over a life estate is not discharged by the death of the tenant for life.—Vincent v. Going, Fl. & K. 275. (R.)

8. On application by a judgment creditor for a receiver over a chattel interest, the Court will not consider the year limited by the 3 & 4 Vic. c. 105, s. 22, to have elapsed, unless it has elapsed before the date of the conditional order appointing the receiver.

The proviso in the 22nd sec. of 3 & 4 Vic. c. 105, requiring the judgment to have been a year entered, applies to cases in which the judgment creditor petitions for a receiver, as well as to cases in which he proceeds by bill.—M'Dermott v. Moylan, Long. & T. 555. (E.E.)

9. An elegit issued twenty-four years before, but never executed, is not such an elegit as will support a petition for a receiver under the Sheriffs Act.

A party in possession under an elegit must abandon the proceedings which he has taken thereunder, before the Court will grant him a receiver under the Sheriffs Act.—Mahon v. Fitzgibbon, 1 I. E. R. 6; 1 Dr. & Wal. 651. (C.)

10. A mortgagee in possession, having a collateral judgment duly revived, may, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, have a receiver extended over the freehold in his possession, but subject to an account of the rents, &c., received, or which might, without wilful default, have been received out of the premises during the period of possession under the mortgage. If petitioner omits to state a material fact, which is within his knowledge, and the respondent or a third person comes in to show cause against a conditional order thus obtained, and shows the fact withheld, the petitioner must pay the costs, even though the cause be disallowed.—Adams v. Horn, 1 I. E. R. 69. (R.)

11. It is still unsettled in this Court whether a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, will be extended over a term of years. If a party in receipt of the rent shows, as cause against a conditional order for a receiver under that Act, that it has not been served on himself, that cause will be allowed; and the petitioner will be compelled to pay the costs.—Reynolds v. Falkner, 1 I. E. R. 95. (R.)

12. On consent, a provision will be allowed to maintain the tenant for life over whose estate a receiver has been appointed under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55; but that provision will be made by discharging the receiver from over so much of the lands as will give respondent a sufficient income; not by directing the receiver to pay respondent a specific portion of the rents.—Evans v. Blennerhasset, 1 I. E. R. 115. (E.E.)

13. A mortgagee, who has extended a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, to the matter of a judgment collateral to the mortgage, will not be allowed afterwards to set up the mortgage against a creditor whose judgment is pious to the mortgage, and who seeks to extend the receiver to his judgment.—Waller v. Blennerhasset, 1 I. E. R. 386. (E.E.)

14. The petition, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, must be presented in the name of the person entitled at law to issue execution on the judgment.—Hanley v. Blennerhasset, 1 I. E. R. 478; 2 Jo. 188. (E.E.)

1. It is not an answer to an application for a receiver under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, that the party in possession is a purchaser of the legal estate affected by the judgment, without notice of it.—Fletcher v. Eley, 2 Jo. 505. (E.E.)

2. In an application for a receiver under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the judgment of revivor upon the sci. fa. to revive the original judgment, is conclusive to show that the petitioner is entitled to issue an elegit, and therefore to have a receiver appointed.—Crofts v. Hewson, 2 Jo. 499. (E.E.)

3. An affidavit to verify a petition under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, which merely states, in general terms, that the contents of the petition are true, is insufficient.—Johnson v. J., 2 Jo. 430. (E.E.)

4. An elegit which, by lapse of time, cannot be acted upon, is not a sufficient foundation for a petition for a receiver under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55.—Colville v. Adams, 2 Jo. 540. (E.E.)

5. A judgment creditor who has obtained a conditional order to extend a receiver in another matter to his demand, which order is afterwards made absolute, though prior to the creditor on whose adjudication the receiver has been first appointed, is not entitled to the arrears of rent due at the date of the order extending the receiver, and subsequently received by him.

The words "money received," in the 38th sec. of 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, must be taken to include money which there is a right to receive, that is, rents due.

When there has been a final decree, and a subpoena for the amount of the costs which have been taxed and ascertained, no second order for their payment is necessary to entitle the person to whom they are to be paid, to have a receiver appointed under the 27th sec. of 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105.—Gregory v. Hand, Fl. & K. 480, note. (R.)

6. When a bill filed by husband and wife to foreclose a mortgage, the separate property of the wife, was dismissed with costs, the Court, upon petition under 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, refused to appoint a receiver, as a means of enforcing payment of those costs, over certain other property, to which the wife was entitled to her sole and separate use.—Hackett v. Farrell, Fl. & K. 549; 4 I. E. R. 515. (R.)

7. In the Court of Ch., when a judgment creditor presents a petition for a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the affidavit to verify need not state separately the sums due for principal, for interest, and for costs on foot of the judgment.

Petition to appoint a receiver over lands. It afterwards appeared, and that very obscurely, that the respondent had an estate in the lands, but only in portion thereof. The Court refused to make the conditional order absolute.—Tredennick v. Graydon, 1 Dr. & Wal. 316. (C.)

8. A receiver would not be extended to the matter of a petition under the Sheriffs Act, over a chattel interest, although the receiver had been appointed in a cause.—Cashen v. Hayes, Jo. & Car. 103. (E.E.)

9. When a receiver, appointed under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, has been extended to the matter of a second petition under the same statute, in which second petition the judgment is prior to that of the first petitioner, the latter is entitled to the entire rents received before the receiver was so extended; and also to be paid the costs of appointing the receiver out of the rents to be subsequently received, in priority to the demand of the petitioner in the second matter. But the costs of orders and references, obtained by the petitioner in the first matter for his own benefit, are to be paid in the same priority with the residue of his demand.—Keough v. Waring, Jo. & Car. 189. (E.E.)

10. A puisne judgment creditor was in possession, under an elegit, of a small portion, called P., of the conuzor's estate. A prior judgment creditor, proceeding under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, sought a receiver over P.; and, as to the rest of the estate, K., only stated that persons were in possession to pay private charges. A conditional order having been obtained, the elegit creditor showed cause, charging that the petitioners were in collusion with the respondents; that all K. was not subject to the prior charges; and that, therefore, the petitioner should go against those lands, and not disturb him. There was not any evidence of collusion. Held, that the prior creditor should not be put to search whether any part of K. was unaffected by the prior charges, when P. was in possession of a creditor by an inferior title; and that the judgment creditor, proceeding under the Judgment Act, must be deemed entitled to all the rights of priority which he should have had if he had sued out an elegit at law. The cause was, therefore, disallowed, and the conditional order was made absolute.—Harnett v. H., 2 I. E. R. 20. (R.)

11. The Court will extend a receiver on a judgment, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, over a trust term, unless it appears that the trustees are in possession. It is not cause against extending a receiver, that the judgment is only a collateral security, and that the petitioner has filed a charge in a Chancery suit on foot of the same demand.—White v. Blake, 2 I. E. R. 111. (E.E.)

12. Semble—The absolute order is the order for the appointment of a receiver within the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, s. 37.—Baker v. Pettigrew, 2 I. E. R. 144. (R.)

13. A lease under the Court for seven years, pending the cause, being about to expire, the lands were sold under the decree. The purchaser stated that he did not wish a new letting; but that the receiver should levy the accruing rents from the tenants until the conveyance should be executed. After the lease had expired, the tenant continued to occupy, and the receiver to take the rent as before, but without any express agreement respecting a new tenancy. Afterwards, the purchaser, by injunction, took actual possession, and turned out the tenant. On motion for a writ of restitution, on the ground that a tenancy from year to year had been created, and that the tenant was entitled to a notice to quit—Held, that, as to the tenancy under the Court, the cause was determined by the execution of the conveyance; and that the tenant overholding, without special agreement, held impliedly subject to the conditions of the lease, so that his tenancy was determined by the execution of the conveyance.—Johnson v. Reardon, 2 I. E. R. 123. (R.)

1. An agent's affidavit, to verify a petition under the Sheriffs Act, will not be admitted unless a strong case be made for dispensing with the principal's oath.—Sligo v. O'Malley, 2 I. E. R. 169. (C.)

2. In proceedings under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the Court will not refer it to the Master to ascertain the priorities of the judgment creditors, but will itself decide the question, upon the motion to draw out of Court the money brought in by the receiver.—Hinton v. Gill, Flan. & K. 183. (R.)

3. A receiver under the Sheriffs Act will be directed to pay money in his hands to the petitioner, although he has not accounted, when it appears that the petitioner is the only creditor in Court.—In re —, 2 I. E. R. 412. (E.E.)

4. Upon an application for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, over premises held under a lease, the tenant's interest in which had been evicted by ejectment for non-payment of rent, but the time for redemption had not expired, the Court made an order for a receiver; the petitioner undertaking to pay the sum due to the landlord for debt and costs, and will not put the party to a redemption bill.—In re Executors of Hill v. Kerr, 2 I. E. R. 410. (E.E.)

5. The affidavit upon which it is sought to obtain a receiver under the Sheriffs Act must state expressly when the judgment is revived. It is not sufficient to state that the petitioner is entitled to sue out an elegit.—In re —, 2 I. E. R. 418. (E.E.)

6. A conditional order for a receiver will be discharged, if there be no verifying affidavit by the attorney, as to the service of the conditional order.—Keogh v. K., 2 I. E. R. 412. (E.E.)

7. On petition of a judgment creditor under the first sec. of 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, this Court will appoint a receiver over a term for years. Semble—In such case, the relative priority of several judgment creditors is to be ascertained by the date of the absolute order for the appointment or extension of the receiver obtained by them respectively.—Egan v. Mulholland, 2 I. E. R. 454. (R.)

8. When the receiver had been extended on the petitions of other judgment creditors, after the Remembrancer had made his report, ascertaining the priorities of those who had appointed the receiver, the Court would not order the report to be amended (it being originally correct); but referred it to the Remembrancer to take an account of what was due on foot of the judgments of the present petitioners, having regard to the previous report, the respective priorities of the parties, and the orders made in the matters; the payments theretofore made not to be disturbed.—Kavenagh v. Murphy, Jon. & Ca. 273. (E.E.)

9. The conditional order for the appointment of a receiver, on a judgment under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, is the order appointing the receiver within the meaning of that Act, it being subsequently made absolute.

The order appointing or extending a receiver on a judgment attaches the arrears of rent then in the tenant's hands, for the benefit of the person obtaining it. Quære?

Tenant for life confesses a judgment, is afterwards discharged as an insolvent, and then dies. The Court has jurisdiction, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, after his death, to make absolute, as against his assignees, a conditional order for extending a receiver, obtained in the lifetime of the insolvent, upon a petition against him, so far as to give effect to the lien of the petitioner on the life estate, and the rents received by the receiver theretofore, and the purposes necessarily connected therewith.

Before the passing of the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, a judgment creditor proceeded by elegit and inquisition, but was kept out of the possession of the estate by prior creditors. He afterwards obtained an order extending a receiver obtained on the petition of a prior creditor to the matter of his petition on his judgment. Held, that he was entitled to the costs of his proceedings at law in the same priority with his demand.—Barry v. Wilkinson, 3 I. E. R. 121. (E.E.)

10. Upon an application to let lands in the possession of A., in the matter of a petitioner upon a judgment against the conuzor, it appeared that A. was the alienee of the conuzor by deed subsequent to the rendition of the judgment. The Court refused to make the order, holding that the petition and orders thereon were wrong, for that the petition should have been presented against the person over whose estate the receiver was sought to be appointed.—Dunn v. Massey, 3 I. E. R. 129. note. (E.E.)

11. A creditor by judgment, entered pursuant to a warrant of attorney, obtained an order for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c.

55, more than two calendar months before the issuing of a commission of bankrupt against the respondent, the conuzor. Held, that his execution was protected by the 95th sec. from the operation of the 126th sec. of the 6 W. 4, c. 14.—Read v. Davis, 3 I. E. R. 153. (E.E.)

1. When a receiver on a judgment is appointed over a portion of lands held under one lease, the residue remaining in the possession of the respondent, the latter must either pay his proportion of the head rent, or submit to a receiver over the whole of the lands. If otherwise, the lands over which the receiver has been appointed would be insufficient to pay the petitioner within any reasonable time.—Henegan v. Little, 3 I. E. R. 189. (E.E.)

2. A receiver will not be appointed under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, on the petition of a judgment creditor, over lands which such creditor could not have extended upon an elegit, as where the judgment attached only upon an equity of redemption, unless the equitable title to relief is clear. Therefore, a receiver was refused over the possession of a purchaser of the equity of redemption for valuable consideration, when it appeared that the judgment in question, having been entered as against J. D., his full name being J. K. D., was not discovered by negative searches made on behalf of the purchaser for judgments against J. K. D., and there being contradictory affidavits as to the fact of the purchase having been made with notice of the judgment; it also appearing that the legal estate outstanding in a prior mortgagee had been assigned to a trustee for the purchaser of the equity of redemption, and there being nothing before the Court to show that the petitioner's judgment was at any time redocketed.—Chapman v. Dunbar, 3 I. E. R. 202; Fl. & K. 86. (R.)

3. A judgment creditor is entitled to a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, in every case in which he could at law issue an elegit. In such case, although the parties in possession may come in and show, as cause against the appointment of a receiver, such an equitable defence as, upon a bill filed for that purpose, would probably entitle them to a decree, the Court will appoint the receiver on the judgment creditor's petition, but retain the fund until the party relying upon the equity has had the opportunity of having it regularly established by a decree.—Walsh v. Keane, 3 I. E. R. 426; Fl. & K. 174. (R.)

4. The matter of a petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, having abated by the death of the respondent, the Court will not, on the petition of another judgment creditor, order the proceeding in the first matter to be revived, and the receiver appointed therein to be extended to the second matter; but will order that the receiver already appointed be appointed in the matter of the second petition.—O'Brien v. Kenny, 3 I. E. R. 55. (E.E.)

5. An absolute order for the appointment of a receiver on a judgment under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 65, which has not been acted on for more than a year, will not be renewed, unless it appear that the judgment has been revived within the year previous to the application.—Carr v. Austin, 3 I. E. R. 492. (E.E.)

6. When a receiver has been appointed under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, and not extended to any other matter, the Court will not, at the instance of the petitioner, make an order for him merely to pay the petitioner the costs of his appointment, unless the latter take the order at his own expense.—Anon., 3 I. E. R. 504. (E.E.)

7. A receiver appointed over lands on a judgment creditor's petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, collects the arrears as well as the accruing rents; but the petitioner's right is analogous to that of an elegit creditor proceeding at law, and attaches only the rents accruing after the appointment of the receiver, the arrears being collected for the debtor, in order to prevent the inconvenience of two receivers over the same premises.

In the Court of Ch., the order extending a receiver from the matter of one petition to that of another, is absolute in the first instance; but attaches only the after-accruing rents, and not those which had accrued due before, although received after such order was pronounced.—Marquis of Sligo v. O'Malley, 3 I. E. R. 527. (R.)

8. The Court of Exchequer has not decided in Barry v. Wilkinson, 3 I. E. R. 121, that the order appointing a receiver on a judgment attaches the arrears in the tenant's hands for the benefit of the person obtaining it.—Barry v. Wilkinson, 3 I. E. R. 564. (E.E.)

9. The Court of Ch. refused to appoint a receiver under the Mortgage Act, when it appeared that the petitioner had a foreclosure suit pending in the Court of Exchequer.—Chamley v. O'Brien, 3 I. E. R. 440, n. (C.)

10. Upon a bill filed to raise the arrears of an annuity, it is quite settled that the debt, cannot resist the appointment of a receiver by coming in on the receiver's motion and impeaching the security.—Cosgrave v. Gannon, 3 I. E. R. 487. (R.)

11. A receiver on a judgment was appointed over a rentcharge issuing out of the lands of a third person. The Court refused to make an order on that person to pay the rentcharge to the receiver.—Walsh v. W., 4 I. E. R. 428. (E.E.)

12. A suit by husband and wife, as co-ptfs., although for the wife's sole benefit, and relating exclusively to her separate property, is the husband's suit; he is alone liable for the costs. When the bill was dismissed with costs, the Court refused to appoint a receiver over the separate estate of the wife, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27.

Quære—Whether, if a bill by a married woman, suing by her next friend, be dismissed with costs, the Court has jurisdiction, on petition under 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, or otherwise, to appoint a receiver for payment of the costs, over separate property of the married woman, which was not the subject of her suit?—Hackett v. Farrell, 4 I. E. R. 515. (R.)

1. On a judgment creditor's petition for a receiver under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the debtor is entitled to all rents due before the conditional order for the receiver has been made absolute. After the absolute order he is guilty of contempt by interfering with the receipt of the rents, although the tenants, before service on them of the order to pay to the receiver, will be justified in paying him.—M'Loughlin v. Longun, 4 I. E. R. 325. (R.)

2. The absolute order for the appointment of a receiver on a judgment under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, is the order within the meaning of the 37th section of that Act. Decision in Barry v. Wilkinson, 3 I. E. R. 121, considered, and disapproved of.—Burt v. Bernard, 4 I. E. R. 328; Fl. & K. 414. (R.)—[Affd.: 5 I. E. R. 425. (C.)]

3. Rents which have accrued due before the pronouncing of an order extending a receiver upon a judgment to the matter of a prior judgment creditor, although received afterwards, are to be distributed as if the order extending the receiver had not been made.—Coleman v. Mason, 4 I. E. R. 421. (E.E.)

4. After a final decree, a receiver in a cause will not be extended to the matter of a petition on a judgment, if the petitioner could have proved his judgment under the decree. The proper course is, to apply for liberty to prove his demand under the decree.—Furlong v. Bateman, 4 I. E. R. 699. (E.E.)

5. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 21, disallows the costs of any further petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, or that Act, presented during the sitting of the Court; and after an order made on the original petition, such further petition ought not to be received. Any fees taken in the office in respect of it are illegal.—Keene v. Bannon, 4 I. E. R. 521. (R.)

6. Neither a person in contempt, nor a third person, will be heard to show cause against making a conditional order for a receiver on process absolute.—Creed v. Moore, 4 I. E. R. 684. (E.E.)

7. An affidavit verifying a petition for a receiver on a judgment, which is entitled in the law cause as well as in the petition matter, cannot be used.—Wilson v. W., 5 I. E. R. 117. (E.E.)

8. It is no objection to a conditional order for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, that it is granted upon reading an affidavit verifying the petition, made by a third person; and that there is not an order of Court directing the petition to be verified in that manner.—Bennett v. Power, 5 I. E. R. 152. (E.E.)

9. Upon a judgment creditor's petition, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, a receiver was appointed on the 9th of May 1840, over the lands of the debtor. That receiver was extended, on the 16th of June 1842, to the cause of a prior and specific incumbrancer, to whom a large sum was due, and whose rights were clear, and fully admitted. After the extension of the receiver, the prior incumbrancer applied for payment of arrears of interest out of the fund in Court, which was the produce of rents received in the matter before the receiver was extended to the cause, and not more than enough to pay the sum due on foot of the judgment.—Held, that the rents were not attached in the prior incumbrancer's cause until the receiver was extended to it; the Court declining to follow the decision in Bland v. Gould (1 I. E. R. 5.)

That the fund in Court should be considered as bygone rents belonging to the puisne creditor; as it was realised by him before the prior incumbrancer attached the rents, and by a proceeding to which the prior incumbrancer was not a party, and in which no account could be taken of his demand.

That the puisne creditor in the present case was entitled to the fund now in Court, on another ground; namely, that it was realised by means of a receiver in the matter of a judgment creditor's petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55; and was therefore (to the extent of the sum due on foot of the judgment and costs) to be considered as if it had been received by the judgment creditor himself after an execution executed under an elegit.—Morogh v. Hoare, 5 I. E. R. 195. (R.)

10. The affidavit verifying a petition under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109 (Tithe Rentcharge Act), s. 30, may be, in a proper case, made by the agent of the petitioner; as, where the agent has peculiar knowledge of the facts.—Kellett v. Sturgeon, 5 I. E. R. 159. (E.E.)

11. The ptf. having been appointed B.'s assignee, under the Insolvent Court, filed a bill against B., and a former assignee of B., for an account. B., by answer, denied the debt of the ptf. Held, that ptf. was not entitled to have a receiver appointed.—Fogarty v. Burke, 2 Dr. & War. 580; 1 Con. & L. 565. (C.)

12. In a petition matter under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the respondent, tenant for life, died; there being at the time of his death a fund in Court, brought in by the receiver. Held, that the proceedings must be revived against the personal representative of the respondent; and that there must be a petition presented for that purpose.—Anon. 5 I. E. R. 245. (E.E.)

13. A judgment creditor's petition for a receiver under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, ought to state how much of the demand on foot of the judgment is for principal, how much for interest, and how much for costs.—Fahy v. Blake 5 I. E. R. 406. (R.)

1. A judgment creditor of a trader presented a petition for the appointment of a receiver over his lands, under the Sheriff's Act, and obtained a conditional order for that purpose, which was made absolute. Before that order was made absolute, the debtor committed an act of bankruptcy, and was declared a bankrupt after it was made absolute. Held, that the assignee of the bankrupt was entitled to have the receiver discharged, as the judgment creditor was not in the position of a creditor having an "execution executed."

The conditional order pronounced in such cases was only notice to the debtor, and did not bind the lands.

Semble—The order which did bind the lands was the order which, according to the practice previously to the Rules of 27th of March 1843, was made upon the return of the Master's report, directing the tenants to pay their rents to the receiver.—Burt v. Bernard, 5 I. E. R. 425; 3 Dr. & War. 464; 2 Con. & L. 271. (C.)—[Affg. 4 I. E. R. 328; Fl. & K. 414.]

2. A receiver will not be appointed on the petition of a judgment creditor under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, if there be a clear equity to restrain him from proceeding at law.—Whaley v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 444. (R.)

3. The words, "entitled to sue out, or who has already sued out a writ of elegit," in the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, s. 31, refer to the time of presenting the petition for a receiver.

If, at the time of presenting a petition for a receiver, the judgment creditor have the legal title required by the Act, it is not necessary for him to continue his proceedings at law, to keep alive the legal title pending the proceedings in the petition matter.—Alcock v. Bernard, 5 I. E. R. 529. (R.)

4. When, by marriage settlement, freehold lands of the wife were conveyed upon trust to pay the rents and profits, after payment of the head rent and renewal fines, to the wife, during her life, to her separate use, and a judgment was afterwards obtained against the husband and wife, the Court refused to appoint a receiver over such separate estate, upon the petition of the judgment creditors, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, and 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105; holding, that the separate estate of a femme covert is cognizable only in a Court of Equity; that her right of disposition over it is not within the meaning of "a disposing power" in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 19; and that that sec. does not render extendible under an elegit any species of trust estate which was not extendible under the Statute of Frauds.—Digby v. Irvine, 6 I. E. R. 149. (R.)

5. A judgment creditor's petition for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, must state the amount due for principal, for interest, and for costs, each separately.—Jackson v. Rutledge, 6 I. E. R. 364. (R.)

6. A renewable freehold was by settlement limited to R., quasi in tail, remainder over (in default of issue of R.) to W., his next brother. R. confessed a judgment, and afterwards died without issue, and without having opened the estate. W. was heir of R.; and a sci. fa. to revive the judgment against the heir and terretenants having issued, W., being summoned simply as heir, allowed judgment to go. The judgment creditor then presented a petition for a receiver, against which W. came in to show as cause that he was in by title paramount; and not as heir of R. The M. R. would not entertain the question of title; being of opinion that W. should have pleaded specially to the sci. fa., and that on the judgment creditor's petition, the Court could not look behind the judgment in sci. fa. by which the petitioner appeared to be clearly entitled to sue out an elegit and extend the lands.—Fletcher v. Steele, 6 I. E. R. 376. (R.)

7. When a receiver, having obtained leave from the Court, brought an ejectment, and the deft. filed a bill in equity to restrain the proceedings in the ejectment action—Held that the receiver was not entitled to the costs of defending the suit, he not having obtained the leave of the Court to take defence to it.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 6 I. E. R. 657. (E.E.)

8. It is not necessary that the petition or other proceedings under the Judgment Creditors Acts, should be entitled of those Acts.—Nayle v. Creagh, 6 I. E. R. 265. (R.)

9. On the death of a respondent over whose lands a receiver has been extended to the matters of several judgment creditors' petitions, the proper order under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, s. 32, is to continue the proceedings in all the matters.—Brady v. Fitzgibbon, 7 I. E. R. 1. (R.)

10. On a notice of motion to appoint a receiver, the Court will not entertain an application to extend one.—Pringle v. Little, 7 I. E. R. 205. (R.)

11. The 154th G. O. applies to the appointment of a receiver under the Judgment Acts, and not to the extension of one already appointed.—Taylor v. Emerson, 7 I. E. R. 280. (R.)

12. The time of presenting the petition, under the Judgment Creditors Act, as appearing by the endorsement of the Chancellor's Secretary, and not the date of the fiat, is the period at which the petitioner must be entitled to sue out his elegit. If the petition be presented within a year after the judgment has been obtained, that suffices, though the petition be not fiatd until after the year has expired.—Robertson v. M'Cabe, 7 I. E. R. 477. (R.)

13. A bequest of chattels real to a femme sole, to her sole and separate use and benefit, vests the property in her to the exclusion of marital control; and, in equity, her husband is merely a trustee for her. A receiver will not be appointed over the property on the petition of a judgment creditor of the husband.—Archer v. Rorke, 7 I. E. R. 478. (R.)

1. A judgment creditor, in applying for a receiver under the Judgment Acts, should state every material fact affecting his demand: otherwise he will not be allowed his costs. In calculating his demand, interest barred by the statute should be deducted.—Lane v. Townsend, 8 I. E. R. 53. (R.)

2. In a petition matter, a conditional order to appoint a receiver to pay £1506, stated to be due to the petitioner on the judgment, was made absolute, with liberty to the Master, at the respondent's instance, to ascertain the sum due.—Costello v. Burke, 2 Jon. & L. 665. (C.)

3. The wife's estate was, on her marriage, conveyed to trustees, to the husband's use, until bankruptcy, insolvency, or until an elegit should issue against the lands on foot of any judgment against the husband; and, from the happening of any of those events, then to the use of the wife for her sole and separate use. Held, that a judgment creditor of the husband could not appoint a receiver over the lands.—Woodroffe v. Marshall, 8 I. E. R. 670. (R.)

4. Real property of the wife was, on her marriage, conveyed to trustees, to the husband's use for life, or until he should commit an act of bankruptcy, or until he should make a composition with his creditors, or should make any assignment of his effects for the benefit of his creditors, or until he should become insolvent, or take the benefit, &c., or until an elegit should issue against the lands; after the husband's death, or the happening of any of those events, to the wife's separate use. The husband assigned all his real and personal estate to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors. A judgment creditor of the husband filed a bill. Held, that the Court would not appoint a receiver, since the husband's life estate had been determined by the assignment.—Hayes v. Marshall, 10 I. E. R. 429. (R.)—[Affd.: 10 I. E. R. 445. (C.)]

5. Joint judgment against A., B., and C.: A. was the principal; B. and C. were sureties. A. dies. Judgment revived against B. and C. C. was heir-at-law of A., but the revival was against him as one of the surviving conuzors and not as heir. The Court appointed a receiver, on petition, over the lands which had come to C. by quasi descent from A., the principal debtor.

Semble—As a general rule, when there is a joint judgment, and all the conuzors are principal debtors, and one of them dies, the Court will not appoint a receiver over the lands of the surviving conuzors alone. The judgment ought to be revived against the surviving conuzors, and the heir and terretenants of the deceased conuzor, and the Court should appoint a receiver over the lands of the heir and terretenants of the deceased conuzor, as well as over the lands of the survivors, in order to enforce contribution.

An arrest under a ca. sa., and discharge under the Insolvent Act, is not cause against the appointment of a receiver on the judgment.—Mercer v. M'Kee, 11 I. E. R. 322. (R.)

6. A receiver was appointed on a judgment, notwithstanding that a voluntary deed had been executed on the day on which the judgment was entered, the judgment relating back to the first day of the preceding Term.—Beamish v. Phaire, 11 I. E. R. 559. (R.)

7. Pending a creditor's suit, a petition was presented by a judgment creditor, a deft. in the suit, for a receiver over the lands in the pleadings mentioned. Held, that the pendency of the suit was not sufficient cause against the appointment of the receiver, and that the petitioner was entitled to his costs.—Townsend v. Barry, 1 I. Jur. 19. (R.)

8. The Court refused to appoint a receiver, on the petition of a judgment creditor, over an allowance directed by the Court to be paid to the inheritor for maintenance.—Gardiner v. Blessington; Byrne v. Gardiner, 1 I. Jur. 250. (R.)

9. By marriage settlement, lands, the property of the husband, were settled upon M. and N., husband and wife, to their use, during their joint lives, independently of the husband, and without being subject to his debts or engagements; but so that M. and N. should not have power to affect them by any sale, mortgage, or charge in the way of anticipation. The Court refused to appoint a receiver over these lands, at the suit of a judgment creditor of the husband.—Manning v. M'Garry, 2 I. Jur. 29. (R.)

10. A receiver will not be appointed over lands upon the application of a judgment creditor, there being a prior equitable mortgage who offers to go into possession.—Fitzsimon v. Mannix, 2 I. Jur. 34. (R.)

11. A mortgagee being in possession of an estate in respect of a salvage advance, the Court refused to appoint a receiver upon the application of a prior judgment creditor.—Larkin v. Kenny, 2 I. Jur. 35. (R.)

12. A. and B., claiming by title paramount to a judgment creditor, were served with sci. fa., as tenants of the lands of the conuzor, and, having neglected to plead thereto, were not permitted to show cause against the appointment of a receiver on foot of the judgment.—Johnson v. M'Donnell, 2 I. Jur. 59. (R.)

13. On the 26th Nov. 1849, a petition was presented to extend a receiver on foot of an old judgment, which had been revived in H. Term, 1848. A fi. fa. issued in M. Term, 1849, but had not been returned or filed at the time of presenting the petition. Held, that the petitioner was entitled to have the receiver extended.—Carr v. Robbins, 2 I. Jur. 83. (R.)

1. The appointment of sequestrators, for disobedience of an order on a receiver to bring in the balance due by him on foot of his account, is good cause against the appointment of a receiver, by a creditor whose judgment is p^uisne to the recognizance.—Warren v. W., 13 I. E. R. 69. (R.)

2. A decree against several, to pay costs, is joint and several; and a receiver may be appointed over the lands of one of them, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, without making the others parties to the petition.—Archbp. of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 13 I. E. R. 98. (R.)

3. Sequestrators being in possession, to enforce a decree, will not prevent the appointment of a receiver on petition of a prior judgment creditor. He cannot be paid out of rents to be received by continuing the sequestrators.—Reeves v. Cox, 13 I. E. R. 247. (C.)

4. Under a decree in 1817, in a suit by the grantee of an annuity, charged upon lands, against judgment creditors of the grantor, in possession by virtue of writs of elegit, an account was taken of what was due to the grantee; and a receiver was appointed over the lands.

The grantor of the annuity, not a party to that suit, died in 1842, without having impeached the accuracy of that account. The grantee having also died, his executor in 1848 (up to which time the receiver had continued in possession), filed a bill against the co-heiresses of the grantor, praying a revivor of the former suit, an account of what was due for arrears of the annuity, and that the sum found due should be declared a charge upon the lands. The defts. insisted that the account taken in the former suit, in the absence of the grantor, was not binding upon them. Held, that, in consequence of the acquiescence of the grantor during a period of twenty-five years, and the subsequent acquiescence of the defts. for six years, they were not entitled to have the account taken de novo, but that they should be at liberty to surcharge and falsify it.—L'Estrange v. White, 1 I. C. R. 15. (C.)

5. A receiver may be appointed or extended under the Sheriffs Act, though the I. E. Court has ordered a sale.—Corban v. Lord Mountcashell, 1 I. C. R. 234. (R.)

6. A suit for foreclosure and sale having been instituted in 1833, a judgment was in 1835 recovered against the owner of the equity of redemption in the lands, before any decree in the cause. In 1838, a decree to account was pronounced; and in 1842 a final decree for a sale of all the mortgaged estates was made. In 1844, the judgment creditor, who had not at any time been a party to the cause, obtained on petition a receiver on foot of his judgment over a part of the mortgaged estates. Held, reversing the decision at the Rolls, that the p^utf. in the cause was entitled on motion to have the receiver appointed in the petition matter extended to the cause, inasmuch as the judgment having been recovered pendente lite, gave the conuzee no right as against the mortgagee, the p^utf.—Trye v. Aldborough, 1 I. C. R. 666; 4 I. Jur. 53. (C.)

7. The Crown, though not bound by the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 55, s. 31, and the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 20, which gives to creditors by judgment or recognizance a right to have a receiver appointed on petition, may take advantage of those Acts, but is bound by the restrictions imposed on that right by the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 95, s. 10.

A judgment in sci fa., on a recognizance, being merely an award of execution, a receiver may be appointed on a recognizance (notwithstanding the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 95, s. 10), if it was enrolled more than a year before the petition is presented, though the judgment was entered within the year.

Petitions for receivers on tenants' and receivers' recognizances should be entitled in the name of the Queen; and the Attorney-General should be the petitioner.—The Queen v. Cruise, 2 I. C. R. 65. (C.)

8. The 2nd sec. of the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 95, applies to all judgments, whether recovered in an adverse action, or entered upon a warrant of attorney. The Court therefore refused to appoint a receiver on petition in a judgment in case, recovered in 1850, for £120, exclusive of costs.—McDonnell v. Malone, 2 I. C. R. 103; 4 I. Jur. 124. (R.)

9. This Court will not appoint a receiver in a foreclosure suit, or a suit to raise a charge affecting lands, unless a year's interest is due, or the property is in danger of being evicted (e. g., for non-payment of head rent), or there is reason to apprehend that it will be insufficient to pay the charges on it. An absolute order for a sale in the I. E. Court will not of itself induce the Court to vary the rule.

But where a judgment creditor, who had registered an affidavit of ownership, under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, on the same day filed a cause petition, which was referred to the Master, under the Ch. Reg. Act, 1850, s. 15; and the Master made a decretal order, appointing a receiver for the payment of the sum due on foot of the judgment; the Court, on appeal, it appearing by affidavit that the lands would be insufficient to pay the judgment, extended the receiver, who had been appointed in another matter, but reserved the question of costs until the produce of a sale which was pending in the I. E. Court should be ascertained.—Herbert v. Greene, 3 I. C. R. 270. (R.)

10. After a judgment debtor has become bankrupt, a receiver cannot be appointed on petition of the judgment creditor, though cause is shown only by a p^uisne mortgagee in possession.—Ryan v. Lefroy, 3 I. C. R. 351. (C.)

11. A judgment creditor, by arresting his debtor, forfeits the benefit, conferred by the

3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, of the charge on the debtor's lands. Without suing out an elegit, such a creditor cannot, in his debtor's lifetime, obtain in a plenary suit a decree to raise the amount of his judgment, by receiver or sale, out of the debtor's lands.—Saunders v. Norris, 7 I. C. R. 314; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 291. (R.)

LXXXVIII. 2. 1. In other Cases.

1. It is not the practice of this Court to entertain an application for a receiver upon the answer, when the bill is not filed by a creditor, and when no special case, as of irreparable mischief, is made out.—Gahway v. Barron, 2 Jon. 723. (E.E.)

2. A receiver appointed in a cause over a life estate, and not discharged upon the death of the tenant for life, extended to the matter of a petition upon a judgment obtained against the tenant in tail.—Vincent v. Going, 275. (R.)

3. The Court granted a receiver on a bill filed to raise arrears of an annuity devised in trust for a lady (who became a nun) during whatever time she remained unmarried.—Evans v. Cassidy, 11 I. E. R. 243. (R.)

4. A bill having been filed to recover a f.f. rent, the Court appointed a receiver, as the bill contained an averment that there was a confusion of boundaries.—Ogleby v. Campbell, 1 I. Jur. 106. (R.)

5. In an action by husband and wife for use and occupation of lands (the separate property of the wife), judgment, as in case of non-suit, was obtained. The Court refused to appoint a receiver over the separate estate of the wife, upon the application of the judgment creditor.—Cotes v. Hassard, 2 I. Jur. 20. (R.)

6. Bill to raise an annuity. Answer, by purchaser of the lands charged therewith, claiming to be exonerated from paying it. Affidavit on behalf of ptf., that, in order to obtain payment of the arrears, a receiver must be appointed over the purchased lands. Held, that a receiver should be appointed over so much of the lands as would suffice for payment of the annuity.—Bonyng v. Colgan, 2 I. Jur. 156. (R.)

7. By marriage settlement, the lands of A. were settled on B. for life, with power of appointment among the children of the marriage. By deed purporting to be in exercise of the power, a rentcharge was given to R., one of the children, which was immediately after assigned to the ptf. Bill filed to raise the rentcharge. Answer; that the assignment was invalid, as the consideration went to the father alone, and R. received no benefit. A receiver was appointed on motion, notwithstanding the impeachment of the transaction by the answer.

In order properly to raise the question as to the validity of the deed, a cross-bill is necessary.

Semble—That even if a cross-bill were filed, a receiver would be appointed to preserve the fund.—Kane v. Delany, 2 I. Jur. 165. (R.)

8. A receiver will be appointed over a compensation allowance.—Johnson v. Mason, 2 I. Jur. 170. (R.)

9. Bill filed to raise an annuity; receiver appointed. The arrears having been paid in 1844, the receiver was removed. In 1849, the annuity having again fallen into arrear, the Court refused to re-appoint the receiver without a new bill. The case of Allen v. Blessington, 2 Moll., considered.—M'Caul v. M'C., 2 I. Jur. 170. (R.)

10. A receiver cannot be appointed or extended over the tithe rentcharge, by petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, or 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105.—Lymberry v. Helsham, 1 I. C. R. 633. (R.)

11. Upon a consent entered into bona fide, by the parties in a cause, and by B., the receiver, and A., a person proposed to fill that office, the Court will order that A. be substituted for B. as receiver, and that certain persons be approved of as his sureties, and the security measured at a given sum, without reference, and that B. and his sureties be discharged from their recognizance, and that A. should pay to B. an advance previously made by him for the benefit of the property, and all his costs; and that A. should have credit in his accounts for such payment; and that a policy of insurance effected on B.'s life should be discontinued, and that the life of a third party, already insured by B., should be kept so by A. out of the rents, and that the proceeds of such insurance, when realised, should be applied by the latter in recouping his advances; and that he might, from the balance of the rents, also effect an insurance on his own life, as additional security for those advances.

Secus autem, where there appears to be an attempt to traffic in the office of receiver.—Farran v. Morris, 1 I. C. R. 680. (C.)

12. The Court will not appoint a receiver under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 21, over the rents and profits of an ecclesiastical benefice.—Vincent v. Helsham, 4 I. Jur. 213. (C.)

13. Under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 19, 21, 22, a judgment is a valid charge upon an ecclesiastical benefice, without issuing a sequestration. In a plenary suit the Court will appoint a receiver over the benefice.—Hale v. Carpendale, 5 I. Jur. 121. (C.)

14. A husband represented to his wife that, unless she signed a promissory note, he would be arrested, and she and their children left to starve. She signed it. Held, that there was not any such exercise of undue influence as prevented the amount of the note from being a charge on her separate estate, which however, being small, and a creditor already in possession, the Court refused to appoint a receiver; but directed the trustees to pay the amount out of the income as it reached their hands.—Boyce v. Johnston, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 401. (R.)

1. A debt, not interested in the real estate, moved for a receiver. Motion refused; but the ptf.'s nominee was appointed, the ptf. being interested.—M'Carthy v. Mathews, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 276. (P.)

LXXVIII. 3. Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of Receiver.

2. The Court will not direct the receiver what course he should pursue respecting taking defence to ejectments brought against the lands over which he is receiver; but will leave him to act on his own responsibility.—Anon., Hayes, 16. (E.E.)

3. A receiver need not apply to the Court for leave to set for six months, subject to redemption, lands recovered in an ejectment for non-payment of rent.—Vincent v. Gubbins, Hayes, 29. (E.E.)

4. The Court will not, on the receiver's motion, order that any arrears of rent be forgiven.—Woodward v. W., H. & J. 126. (E.E.)

5. A receiver under the Mortgage Act, 11 & 12 G. 3, c. 10, will be permitted to pay over money to a third person, upon consent of all parties.—Kelly v. O'Brien, Hay. & J. 377. (E.E.)

6. The Court will not, at the receiver's instance, order a remission of arrears, or a reduction of rents.—Robinson v. Shearer, H. & J. 799. (E.E.)

7. An application by the receiver to stay proceedings in an action brought against his bailiff, for ill-treating a distress, was refused with costs, there not being an affidavit or distinct admission by the receiver that he had authorised the bailiff to do the act complained of.

Semble—A receiver can authorise a bailiff to make a distress.—Birch v. Oldis, S. & Sc., 116. (R.)

8. On an affidavit by the receiver stating the facts fully, on notice to all the parties in the cause, and no objection raised, the receiver will be permitted to accept a surrender, &c., from an insolvent tenant, without putting the parties to the expense of a reference.—Davidson v. Armstrong, S. & Sc. 135. (R.)

9. A receiver in a mortgage cause will not be permitted to bring an ejectment on the title against a lessee of the mortgagor after mortgage executed, the lessee having been in possession for twenty years, and the consideration for the mortgage having been impeached, by a cross-bill, but no account taken between the parties.—Martin v. Walker, S. & Sc. 139. (R.)

10. Upon an affidavit by the receiver stating an application to the head landlord, and disclosing the other necessary facts, the Court will, without any reference, make an order for the receiver to obtain a renewal of a lease.—Mulhall v. O'Brien, S. & Sc. 150. (R.)

11. A reference, touching the propriety of abating the tenants' rents, and forgiving them their arrears, &c., was refused, when made at the receiver's instance only, but was afterwards granted on the concurrence of the parties.—Evans v. Taylor, S. & Sc. 681. (R.)

12. A receiver's duty is, to collect the rents, but not to assume the management of the cause.—Callaghan v. Reardon, S. & Sc., 682. (R.)—[See Callaghan v. Reardon, 1 Cr. & Dix, Notes of Cas. 231. (R.)]

13. A motion, on the receiver's part, for a reference, whether it would be for the benefit of all parties that proceedings to impeach certain leases should be taken, was refused; it being no part of the receiver's duty to bring forward such a motion.—Clarke v. Fisher, S. & Sc., 684. (R.)

14. An order, that certain tenants of a minor should have liberty to execute a surrender, was granted on the receiver's motion made by the Master's direction, it being plainly for the minor's benefit that a surrender should be accepted; but the concurrence of his guardian was required.—Davis v. Cotter, S. & Sc. 685. (R.)

15. The Court will not set up land to be let subject to the interests of the tenants resident thereon.—Anon., 2 Jones, 630. (E.E.)

16. A receiver, appointed in an annuity cause, was extended to the matter of a petition presented by a prior mortgagee under the Mortgage Act. Held, that the rents, received before the date of the conditional order to extend the receiver, and which were still in Court, belonged to the annuitant.—Davoren v. Collins, 2 Jon. 807. (E.E.)

17. The Court will not, upon a receiver's application, grant an injunction to restrain a contractor, under the 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 116, s. 162, from quarrying, on the lands over which the applicant is receiver, stones for the public works.—O'Kelly v. Gregg, Jon. & Car. 76. (E.E.)

18. Practice as to timber trees blown down on an estate over which a receiver had been appointed.—Crofts v. Poe, Jon. & Car. 193. (E.E.)

19. A motion by a receiver for a reference to enquire and report whether any and what sum is due on foot of a mortgage, and whether it would be advantageous to the parties that the receiver should make certain payments on account of any sum reported due, will be refused with costs; because the receiver should not thus interfere with the rights of the parties in the cause.—O'Connor v. Malone, 1 I. E. R. 20. (R.)

1. The receiver over a leasehold, or other derivative interest or estate, should pay the head rent regularly. If the landlord is obliged to apply for leave to proceed, the Court will make the receiver pay the costs of the application, if he had funds to pay the rent; otherwise, the landlord will get his costs against the funds in the cause.

Semble—In such a case, the landlord may proceed for his rent without asking the Court's leave.—Walsh v. W., 1 I. E. R. 209. (R.)

2. A receiver should not move that his balance may be invested. That is not properly his motion. As the petitioner may, under G. O. 11, of Feb. 1839, have the balance invested, without applying to the Court, the costs will not be allowed, unless the applicant shows satisfactorily why he had not the money invested under the Rule.—Cooper v. C., 2 I. E. R. 155. (R.)

3. Parties, being solvent, who rescued a distress made by a receiver, the Court granted a conditional order for an attachment against them, and intimated that the receiver should also proceed at Quarter Sessions.—Mahon v. M., Fl. & K. 18. (R.)

4. The order extending a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, does not attach, for the benefit of the extending creditor, the arrears of rent which accrued due before, but were received after the order.—Rule v. Henry, Fl. & K. 97. (R.)

5. A consent, that a receiver may be appointed, and that he need not account before the Master, will not be made a rule of Court.—Richey v. Gleeson, Fl & K. 99. (R.)

6. A purchase in trust for a receiver, of lands over which he had been appointed receiver, will not be permitted to stand, unless it has been had with the leave of the Court.

Neither can a receiver, without the special leave of the Court, become tenant of any part of the lands over which he has been appointed.—Alven v. Bond, Flan. & K. 196; 3 I. E. R. 365. (R.). White v. Tomney, cited Flan. & K. 224.

7. A motion to let lands in the actual occupation of the deft. or respondent in a cause or matter, should be made by the ptf. or petitioner, and not by the receiver in such cause or matter. If such motion be made by the receiver, and be unopposed, the Court will not make any order upon it; if opposed, it will be refused with costs.—Wrixon v. Vize, 5 I. E. R. 276. (R.)

8. The personal representative of a receiver having submitted to account for the rents received by the receiver in his lifetime, the Court has jurisdiction to order him to pay in the sum appearing to be due on foot of the account.

Form of the order in such case.—Magan v. Fullon, 5 I. E. R. 490. (E.E.)

9. A. demised to B. two acres of M. B., on the next day, re-demised to A. the two acres of M., together with six acres of S., at a gross rent. A. then mortgaged the lands of M. A receiver was appointed over the lands of M. in a suit to foreclose the mortgage. An arrear of the rent reserved in the lease from B. to A. having accrued, the receiver was ordered to pay to B. the sum in his hands, the produce of the two acres of M.; and it was referred to the Remembrancer to ascertain the sum in the receiver's hands, and the rent properly payable out of the two acres of M., having regard to the value of the whole of the lands comprised in the lease from B. to A., and the part included and not included in the mortgage; with liberty to B. to proceed at law, as he might be advised, in regard to any balance that might remain due to him, after payment by the receiver as aforesaid.—Peard v. Foulke, 5 I. E. R. 589. (E.E.)

10. It is the duty of a receiver to render the estate over which he is appointed as productive as he can; and it is the duty of the Court, whose officer he is, to take care that he does so. But, although in the present case the receiver might not be chargeable with any positive misfeasance or intentional omission of material matters in the preparation of the rental, yet this case showed what very serious mischief might follow if a receiver in the cause were permitted to be a purchaser under the decree, if he could have an interest in depreciating that estate, the value of which it was his duty to enhance. Such an interest might extend far beyond the preparation of the rental; it might be the operative principle during the whole term of the receivership. Therefore in no case would the Court sanction a sale to the receiver, unless it clearly appears that it would be for the benefit of the parties in the cause to hold him to his purchase.—Alven v. Bond, 3 I. E. R. 372. (R.)

11. The Court, upon a motion on behalf of a landlord, for liberty to proceed at law, notwithstanding the appointment of a receiver, will not enter into any question of equities between the landlord and tenant; but will, in a proper case, refer it to the Master to enquire and report whether any proceedings should be taken in defending the ejectment, or in relation thereto.—Cramer v. Griffith, 3 I. E. R. 230. (R.)

12. When the Remembrancer has allocated a sum to be paid by a receiver as the tithe rentcharge due out of the lands over which he has been appointed, and his certificate has been served upon the receiver, and a personal demand made for the amount of such rentcharge, upon non-payment of same, the party entitled will obtain an attachment against the receiver.—Brown v. B., 2 I. E. R. 409. (E.E.)

1. The order extending a receiver under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, does not attach, for the benefit of the extending creditor, the arrears of rent accrued due before, but received after the receiver has been extended.—Marquis of Sligo v. O'Malley, Fl. & K. 300; 3 I. E. R. 527. (R.)

2. In a motion to extend a receiver under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, it is not necessary to serve notice thereof upon the creditor who has appointed the receiver.

In a petition matter, under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, a motion to let lands in the possession of the respondent should be on behalf of the petitioner, and not of the receiver.—Cuffe v. Banin, Fl. & K. 403. (R.)

3. The receiver in a petition matter has no right to move for liberty to let lands in the possession of the respondent, such being properly the motion of the petitioner. It is otherwise as to the receiver in a cause.—Meares v. Bannon, 4 I. E. R. 168. (R.)

4. Semble—A receiver who has been ordered to pay money, to a party, and who has that sum in his hands when he is served with the order, but wilfully and improperly refuses to pay it, will be ordered to pay interest on it from the date of the service of the order on him; and also all costs to which the party has been necessarily put, by reason of his disobedience of the order.

Filing an account in the office is not cause against a conditional order for an attachment against a receiver for not accounting.—Fetnam v. Kirby, 4 I. E. R. 320. (E.E.)

5. A receiver applied for a reference touching the liability of a lunatic to renew the lease of the land over which he was receiver; but was ordered to pay the costs of the enquiry, since he had not previously applied to the lunatic's committee to make the application.—In re Doolan, 3 Dr. & War. 442; 2 Con. & L. 232. (C.)

6. A motion, to set aside a letting made in a cause or matter, should not be made by the receiver. If he makes it, the Court will refuse it, with costs.—Richards v. Gould, 7 I. E. R. 209. (R.)

7. The Court will not, on a receiver's application, sell civil-bill decrees obtained for arrears of rent.

Semble—The Court cannot sell arrears.—Ford v. Head, 8 I. E. R. 368. (R.)

8. It is contrary to the practice and policy of this Court to permit the receiver in the cause to bid at the sale of lands over which he had been appointed.—Anderson v. A., 9 I. E. R. 23. (R.)

9. Amendment in the title of an order to extend a receiver, by inserting the words "and another," it being admitted that the words had been left out by mistake, although the alteration deprived the ptf., in the suit in which the receiver was originally appointed, of the funds in the receiver's hands.—Corbet v. Mahon, 10 I. E. R. 201. (R.)

10. B. purchased, during A.'s life, the portion of one of A.'s younger children, which was not payable till A.'s death. It was charged on lands over which B. was receiver, but there was not any evidence of under-value. After thirteen years, the inheritor who had during that time been out of the jurisdiction filed a bill against B.'s personal representative. The Court set aside the purchase.—Kelly v. Bonyngs, 1 I. Jur. 3. (E.E.)

11. When an ejectment has been brought without leave of the Court, against lands over which a receiver has been appointed, the proceedings will be stayed; and, if the receiver have funds applicable to the payment of the rent, he may be liable to the costs.—Callaghan v. C., 1 I. Jur. 42. (R.)

12. Though a motion to set lands in the occupation of the deft. should not be made by a receiver, yet where a receiver, having advanced a sum to pay head rent, and save lands from eviction, had obtained an order to set lands in the possession of the deft., the Court refused to set it aside.—Phibbs v. Farrell, 1 I. Jur. 265. (R.)

13. A receiver will not be permitted to become tenant to the lands over which he is appointed, even upon consent of the parties to the cause.—Stannus v. French, 1 I. Jur. 299. (R.)

14. After execution by the head landlord of an habere in ejectment for non-payment of rent, the receiver passed his account, from which it appeared that, after the execution of the habere, he had received rents, and paid them away under orders of the Court. The head landlord applied that the receiver be directed to pay him the rent. Application refused.—Balfe v. Blake, 2 I. Jur. 236. (R.)—[But see the next case.]

15. The primary duty of a receiver over a leasehold is, out of the sub-rents, to discharge the head rent; this he is bound to do without an order of the Court for the purpose. A receiver had suffered the lease to be evicted by ejectment for non-payment of rent, and it appeared that, during the period intervening between the last payment of head rent and the execution of the habere, he had received rent from a sub-tenant considerably more than sufficient to pay the head rent, and had applied all that sub-rent in discharge of various demands, amongst which were the annual premiums upon policies of insurance in which, as a creditor of the estate, he was interested; and although he was directed to make those payments by an order of the Court, he was compelled by the Court to pay to the landlord the arrears of head rent.—Balfe v. Blake, 1 I. C. R. 365; 2 I. Jur. 257. (C.)

1. When one of a receiver's sureties dies, or goes abroad, and the receiver is unable to procure another surety, it is not the practice to charge him with the expense of his discharge, or of the appointment of a new receiver.—Lane v. Townsend, 2 I. C. R. 120. (R.)

2. A receiver is not entitled to the costs of taking out the order appointing him, it being the duty of the party at whose instance the receiver is appointed to do so.

Nor will he be allowed the costs of his solicitor attending the passing of a former receiver's account, unless the Master certifies that such attendance was proper.

Nor the costs of notice and service thereof on the sheriff, requiring him to pay rent due, before levying an execution on the goods of a tenant.

He will be allowed the costs of one draft and copy of a notice to quit, by way of precedent only, and not the costs of preparing a notice to quit served on the tenants, unless under special circumstances.

The costs of an attested copy of a memorial of a lease, and of a clerk to prove the same at the trial of an ejectment, will be allowed, on taxation, to the receiver, if necessarily incurred.—Woodroffe v. Green, 2 I. C. R. 330. (R.)

3. A receiver having been appointed over the estate of a tenant for life, for payment of tithe rentcharge, the Court after the death of the tenant for life, continued the receiver.—Held, that as against the remainderman the petitioner was entitled to one year's rentcharge only.—Labarte v. Constable, 2 I. C. R. 554. (R.)

4. Purchase by a receiver, of an annuity, at an undervalue—set aside in a suit by the vendor's personal representatives. Form of the order.—Eyre v. McDonnell, 15 I. C. R. 534. (C.)

5. Purchase by a receiver, of a jointure charged upon the lands over which he was receiver, declared a trust for the benefit of those entitled to the estate.

The receiver over the estates of L. purchased from L.'s widow a jointure charged on the estate. In a suit, instituted by an incumbrancer on the estate, to set aside this purchase, the widow declaring herself satisfied with the terms of the arrangement, the purchase was upheld as regarded her; but was declared a trust for those beneficially entitled to the estate. Form of decree.—Boddington v. Langford, 15 I. C. R. 558, note. (C.)

7. One, seized in fee, in 1820, demised the lands to A., the respondent, and died, having devised the reversion to A., with remainder to A.'s first and other sons in tail male. This suit was subsequently instituted by the petitioner to raise the amount of incumbrances, and the appellant was appointed, receiver. The Master let the lands to the appellant's father for seven years, pending the cause. Upon the death of appellant's father, the appellant entered into possession, with the Master's approval. Afterwards, A. conveyed to appellant his interest in the lease of 1820; and died. Thereupon, the appellant was discharged from his receivership, the suit having abated; and the M. R. ordered the appellant to deliver up possession of the lands to A.'s eldest son, because they had been assigned without leave of the Court. Against that order this appeal was brought. Held, that the order should be reversed, as a receiver over a reversioner's estate is not incapacitated from purchasing the interest in a lease of the same lands which the reversioner has in another right.—King v. O'Brien, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 141. (C.A.)

LXXVIII. 4. Receiver's Security: Rights and Liabilities of their Sureties.

8. The surety of a receiver need not qualify out of freehold estate.—Tottenham v. T., Hay. 575. (E.E.)

9. Even upon consent, a receiver will not be appointed without a recognizance.—Conolly v. Codd, H. & J. 624. (E.E.)

10. A receiver, when extended over additional lands, must perfect additional security, or be wholly removed from the receivership. If he is removed, and seeks the costs incident to his original appointment, he must make a special case for them.—Wise v. Ashe, 1 I. E. R. 210. (R.)

11. The Court of Ch. will not in any case appoint a receiver upon his own security only.—Baillie v. B., 1 I. E. R. 413. (R.)

12. When one of the sureties of a receiver died, not leaving any property, the Court directed a new surety to be appointed.—Averall v. Wade, Fl. & K. 341. (R.)

12. The Court will not vacate a receiver's recognizance at the same time that he is discharged, even upon the consent of all the parties in the cause.—Fitzgerald v. Hill, 2 I. E. R. 398. (E.E.)

13. A receiver passed his final account in 1829, when a small sum was due to him. It appeared further that the purchaser under the decree in the cause was put into possession in the same year, and that the receiver had not received any of the rents since his last account. The Court ordered his recognizance to be vacated, though he had not been formally discharged.

An injunction, to put the purchaser into possession, amounts to a discharge of the receiver.—Anon., 2 I. E. R. 416. (E.E.)

14. To a sci. fa. on a receiver's recognizance the sureties pleaded performance of the condition of the recognizance. Replication: that after the making of, and entering into the recognizance, the receiver was directed to account, and that on the passing of that account a balance was certified as being in his hands; that afterwards an order was made to lodge the balance; but that the receiver had wholly refused to do so. On demurrer—Held, that the record sufficiently alleged that the receiver had notice of the order.

Quere—Is an averment of notice necessary? The King v. Lidwell, 1 Dr. & Wal. 26. (C.)

1. The surety of a defaulting receiver, having paid the sum due, obtained leave to proceed against him on his recognizance for recovery thereof, and, having obtained judgment, presented a petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, and 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, for a receiver over his estate. The Court granted the prayer of the petition.—Henderson v. Skerrett, 5 I. E. R. 404. (R.)

2. A judgment having been entered on a bond executed by two sureties for a land agent—Held, that interest on the balance due by him could not be claimed under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 26.—Lord Templeton v. Murdock, 7 I. E. R. 470. (C.)

3. A receiver having been appointed by the Court of Ch. in England, over estates in Ireland, and the recognizance directed to be taken and enrolled in this Court, this Court refused to do so, having no jurisdiction without a bill filed here.—In re The Earl of Portarlington, 8 I. E. R. 369. (R.)

4. A receiver not having passed his account was attached, but discharged. A new receiver was appointed. Held, that the discharged receiver's sureties were liable, under the recognizance, to the costs of the attachment, and to all costs of discharging the defaulting receiver, and appointing his successor.—Maunsell v. Egan, 8 I. E. R. 372. (R.)

5. To vacate a recognizance as to one surety, it is necessary that the principal and the remaining sureties shall sign a consent that the recognizance shall continue binding on them, notwithstanding the vacate as to the other.—Callaghan v. C., 8 I. E. R. 572. (R.)

6. The sureties for a receiver are liable, under the recognizance, for the costs of an attachment against the receiver for not passing his account, and for all costs incurred in discharging him and appointing a new receiver.—Maunsell v. Egan, 9 I. E. R. 283; 3 Jon. & L. 251. (C.)

7. A tenant's recognizance was executed at the same time as his lease, but was not enrolled for four years after. The tenant in the meantime became insolvent, and incumbered his property. Held, that the neglect to enrol the recognizance, when the lease was executed, did not discharge the surety.

Quere—Whose duty is it to enrol the recognizance?—Jephson v. Maunsell, 10 I. E. R. 38. (R.)

8. The proceeding by sci. fa. on a receiver's recognizance is an award of execution, and not a judgment recovered, and does not bear interest under 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 26.—Feely v. Kilkenny, 10 I. E. R. 443. (C.)

9. A receiver's sureties are not liable beyond the amount of the recognizance. The sureties having paid the amount of the recognizance into Court—Held, that they were not liable to the costs of removing the receiver, who was in default, and of appointing a new receiver, nor to the costs of a sci. fa. against themselves or their principal.—Watters v. W., 11 I. E. R. 335. (R.)

10. The receiver being insane, the Court ordered that his surviving surety might pass the account; and that, on the balance being lodged, the recognizance should be vacated; and gave the surety costs of the motion, and of vacating the recognizance.—Webb v. Cashel, 11 I. E. R. 558. (R.)

11. When the rental is considerable, a receiver will be permitted to divide his security among several; the entire sum for which the sureties qualify need not exceed double the rental.—O'Connor v. Malone, 1 I. Jur. 177. (R.)—[See Scott v. Harmann, ibid, 267.]

12. The Court will not make an order allowing a receiver to give security by a guarantee society.—Campbell v. Brown, 1 I. Jur. 267. (R.)

13. When the amount of security to be given by a receiver is very large, he will be allowed to give it by recognizance by himself and three sureties, in different proportions.

In this case, the receiver bound himself in £7500; one surety in £10,000, and the other two sureties in £2500 each.—Scott v. Harmann, 1 I. Jur. 267. (R.)

14. The discharge of sureties who have entered into recognizance for a receiver must be by entering satisfaction on the roll, by order of the Court of Ch., not by motion at the Rolls, the proceedings being at the Petty-bag side of Chancery.—Martin v. Waldron, 2 I. Jur. 82. (C.)

15. The order, prohibiting a practising barrister to be security for a receiver, suspended.—Kelly v. K., 2 I. Jur. 140. (C.)

16. Motion by receiver for liberty to give security by the British Guarantee Association of London. Leave granted; the Master to fix the premium.—Hobhouse v. Hamilton, 2 I. Jur. 172. (R.)

17. Motion on behalf of a receiver that he be at liberty to enter into security, himself in the sum of £10,588, and three sureties, one in £3000, one in £1588, and a third in £1000; and that he be at liberty to enter into an additional security in the sum of £5000 by the British Guarantee Association of London, under the 9 & 10 Vic., c. 375 (L. & P.); the security to be approved by the Master if he found the society able to give a security available at law.—Curia adv. vult.

[No order was made in this case on that part which related to the British Guarantee Association, as the receiver obtained the security elsewhere.]—Wyse v. O'Grady, 2 I. Jur. 212. (R.)

1. Sci. fa. on a receiver's recognizance. Plea: Executio non—that the recognizance was acknowledged, subject to a condition that the receiver should account within fifteen calendar months, and from time to time thereafter, within the space of thirteen calendar months after the day of filing such account, and as often as he should be required by the Court. That the receiver duly accounted up to the 26th May 1846; that the time within which he was next bound to account expired on the 26th June 1847; that he was not required to account; and that, without the consent, leave or license of the debt., or notice to him, the receiver, by and with the consent of the ptf. in the cause, and the parties and creditors interested in his accounting, obtained a longer time for accounting, which was extended to the 25th Feb. 1848. Replication, averring breaches of the condition, in not investing moneys in the receiver's hands according to the condition. Rejoinder: that the time was extended without the consent of the debt. Held, upon demurrer, that such an agreement for the extension of time did not entitle the surety to plead it in bar to a sci. fa. on a recognizance of record.—Regina v. Notter, 2 I. Jur. 293. (C.)

2. When one surety of a receiver seeks to be discharged, a consent verified by affidavit, and signed by the receiver and remaining surety, must be lodged with the Registrar, stating that they consent that the surety shall be discharged, without prejudice to their liability as to the past and future acts of the receiver; and a declaration that they will not rely on the vacating of the recognizance, as to one of the parties, in any proceeding against them on the recognizance.—O'Keefe v. Armstrong, 2 I. C. R. 115. (R.)

3. An order was made in a minor matter, that a receiver, executor to the minors' father, should be at liberty, until March 1847, to manage lands and the stock thereon in the same manner as the minors' father was in the habit of managing them—the receiver undertaking to keep regular accounts of his receipts, and to furnish them to the Master every three months; and, after March 1847, the receiver was ordered to take proper steps for procuring tenants to the property. The receiver continued to manage the lands after March 1847, without a further order.

Semle—The receiver's surety was liable for the management by the receiver as such; but not for so much of the quarterly balances as was due by him as executor up to March 1847.

Quere—Whether the surety was liable to balances due after March 1847?

It is discretionary to charge a receiver's surety with interest on his balances; and the surety having paid the entire of the balances in this case, the Court refused to do so.

Judgment by default was entered up on a receiver's recognizance; a levari issued against the surety, and the sheriff returned goods on hands for want of buyers. An injunction was granted against the levari, on payment of the amount of it into Court. The surety applied to set aside the judgment by default; and an order was made that the judgment should stand, but that the surety might be at liberty to plead to the sci. fa. He did plead, and a demurrer taken to the rejoinder was allowed; and it was ordered that judgment be entered up for the ptf.; which was accordingly done. Held, that the latter judgment was irregular; and the first, not being a continuing judgment, and being determined by the death of the receiver, a levari could not be sued out on it.

The practice of the Petty-bag side of the Court, and of the three Law Courts, under those circumstances, certified to the M. R.—In re Herricks, 3 I. C. R. 183. (R.)

4. Under special circumstances, the Court discharged a defaulting receiver, who was in custody under an attachment for not accounting, his sureties having passed his account, and paid the balance due on foot thereof; and the receiver undertaking to pay the ptf. his costs of suing out the attachment, and of his own removal. The Court did not require payment of those costs before the receiver's discharge; but discharged him without prejudice to the liability of the sureties.—Johnson v. Tottenham, 5 I. Jur. 15. (R.)

5. When a receiver in a minor matter is ordered by the Court to manage grazing farms and the stock thereon, his sureties are liable for the correct performance of those duties, and not alone for the rents received by him.

If the duties were quite alien to the ordinary duties of a receiver, it might be otherwise.—The Queen v. Herrick, 5 I. Jur. 289. (C.)

6. A surety signed a receiver's recognizance, knowing it to be such. It recited that it had been duly acknowledged before a Commissioner of the Court, and was sealed. Held, that the surety could not, on a motion to show cause against an order nisi to put the recognizance in suit, rely on the defence that it was not acknowledged.—Driscoll v. Blake, 9 I. C. R. 356. (R.)—Kelly v. Lennox, 9 I. C. R. 363; 4 I. Jur. N. S. 147. (R.)

7. A receiver who has gone into receipt of the rents under the Court, will not be allowed to plead, to a sci. fa. upon his recognizance, that it was taken by an unauthorised person. Wellesley v. Mornington, 13 I. C. R. 559. (C.)

LXXVIII. 5. Accounts and Allowances to.

[See G. O. 1843—147 to 150; G. O. Jan. 3rd 1845, 4 & 5; G. O. May 1857—45, 46, 50, 51. See Gamble's Ch. O., p. 225.]

8. A judgment creditor filed a bill, stating that a receiver, appointed in a foreclosure suit instituted by A., had not perfected his recognizance, or accounted in the office, though he had been 30 years in receipt of the rents; that, having remitted all sums received to A., and having furnished accounts to him, he ought to be treated as A.'s private agent, and that A. ought to be treated as mortgagee in possession. The bill also prayed an account of all sums which had come to the receiver's hands. Held, that the Chief Baron's certificate, which was produced, to that effect, disproved the allegation that the receiver had not perfected his recognizance, and that there would be presumed to be an order of the Court directing the receiver to remit the rents, &c., to A.; that the receiver's never having filed accounts was justified by the practice of the Court, which only required a receiver to account when called on by its order; and that, after such a length of time, and under the circumstances, the receiver's executrix should not be required to account for the sums received by him; and that A. should not be treated as mortgagee in possession. — Armistage v. Forbes, Hay. 222. (E.E.)

1. A tenant held lands under an unstamped accepted proposal, which rendered him liable to pay tithe composition. On motion, the Court directed the receiver over the landlord's estate, who was a minor, to stamp the proposal, and that the expenses thereof should be allowed him when passing his account. — Langley v. L., 1 Dr. & Wal. 253. (C.)

2. When a receiver has not accounted within the proper time, his fees may, nevertheless, be allowed to him upon the consent of the parties, if they be competent to consent; but when some of them are minors, this cannot be done. — Dease v. O'Reilly, 2 Con. & L. 441; 4 Dr. & War. 284. (C.)

3. Pending the passing of a receiver's account, the Remembrancer ordered him to lodge £500 to the credit of the cause within a limited time. He did not. The account not being yet passed, and it not appearing that such sum was in his hands, the Court refused to act upon the order. — Langrish v. Cottenham, 2 Jo. 507. (E.E.)

4. When the receiver brings an ejectment under the order of the Court, he will be allowed against the estate, as between attorney and client, all costs and expenses necessarily incurred in bringing an effectual ejectment; ex. gr., the expenses incurred by procuring an additional stamp to be affixed to a lease; and it is not necessary to apply to the Court for the purpose. — Fitzgerald v. F., 5 I. E. R. 525. (E.E.)

5. A consent, the object of which is the allowance of a sum of money paid by a receiver on account of costs, will not be made a rule of Court, unless signed by the parties themselves as well as by their attorneys. — Coleman v. Mason, 2 I. E. R. 322. (E.E.)

6. The Statute of Limitations is not pleadable to sci. fa. on a receiver's recognizance.

A recognizance to the Crown is not within the 8 G. 1, c. 4.

The period from which the 20 years specified in that statute are to be reckoned, is the issuing of the writ, not the day upon which it bears teste. — Reg. v. Bayly, 4 I. E. R. 142; 1 Dr. & War. 213. (C.)

7. When a receiver has failed to pass his account within the time prescribed by the 148th G. O. the Court will not make a consent of all the parties to allow him his poundage and costs of accounting, a rule of Court. — Overend v. O., 6 I. E. R. 387. (R.)

8. A receiver, by leave of the Court, brought an ejectment. The deft. filed a bill in Equity to restrain the proceedings in that action. Held, that the receiver was not entitled to the costs of defending that suit, without obtaining leave of the Court to do so. — Conyers v. Crosbie, 6 I. E. R. 657. (E.E.)

9. When a receiver neglects to lodge the balance due on foot of his account within the time directed by the 147th G. O. the poundage which he is to be disallowed on passing his next account is to be the poundage on this last, and not on the preceding account, the balance of which he has neglected to lodge. — Maxwell v. Boate, 7 I. E. R. 281. (R.)

10. When a receiver, by delaying to pass his account for a short time beyond the year, was enabled to collect and bring into Court an additional gale of rent, the Court allowed him his poundage and costs. — Flood v. Aldborough, 8 I. E. R. 103. (R.)

11. A third person's application, that a receiver should pass his accounts, and that applicant have liberty to attend, refused. — Colburn v. Cooper, 8 I. E. R. 510. (E.E.)

12. If a receiver suffer costs to accrue, which ought to have been prevented, he will be made to pay them. — Cooke v. Sharman, 8 I. E. R. 515. (E.E.)

13. Application for receiver's costs of letting, being unnecessary, refused with costs. — Payne v. Lamb, 8 I. E. R. 517. (E.E.)

14. The rule that where a receiver is a party to a cause, he shall not have his poundage, applies only to the cases of trustees, executors, owners, and heirs-at-law. Except in those cases the receiver is entitled to poundage, unless the order of appointment provides that he shall not have it.

A deft. entitled to a reversionary interest, being appointed receiver without any such provision, is entitled to his poundage. — Bevan v. White, 8 I. E. R. 675. (R.)

15. Rents not received until after the extension of a receiver, though due before, belong to the prior creditor, whether the contest be between claimants under different causes, or between the parties to a suit and a judgment creditor who has proceeded by petition under the Judgment Acts, or between two judgment creditors one appointing and the other extending the receiver under these Acts.

Arrears of rent due at the time a receiver is appointed under the Judgment Acts, but received after, belong to the judgment creditor.—Abbott v. Stratton, 9 I. E. R. 233. (C.)

1. On appeals respecting receivers' accounts it is the practice in this country to entertain objections to the amount of the items, though the Master may have adopted no erroneous principle.—Beytagh v. Concannon, 10 I. E. R. 351. (C.)

2. When the receiver, at the instance of the parties and to save them expense, did not pass his account within the time limited by the 148th Order, the Court, on motion, allowed him poundage.—Purcell v. Woodley, 10 I. E. R. 422. (R.)

3. Rents received by a receiver after the gale day next succeeding the lodgment of the three-fourths of the purchase-money by a purchaser of lands under a decree, are applicable—first to the payment of solvent arrears, and then to the rent due to the purchaser, whether or not he has gone into possession, or the purchase deed has been executed.

Lee v. Moorhead, 2 Mol. 509, and Hargrave v. Holland, 5 I. E. R. 169, overruled.

Practice in framing objections to the Master's report allocating rents so received.—Doorley v. Power, 11 I. E. R. 577. (R.)

4. A mortgagee having obtained a conditional order for a receiver under the Mortgage Act, payments were made on account of interest, and a receiver was appointed by a judgment creditor. A petition being presented by the mortgagee, the conditional order was made absolute, and the receiver extended to the mortgage, in chamber. On an affidavit stating the intermediate payments, the order was set aside.

A judgment creditor having a receiver is not entitled to notice of a petition by a mortgagee to extend him to the mortgage.—Goldsmidt v. Lord Glengall, 11 I. E. R. 608. (C.)

5. A receiver's account was not passed within the time limited by the G. O. The Master therefore disallowed his fees and costs. Motion, upon consent, that the Master be at liberty to allow the receiver his fees and costs. Held, that the consent was irregular; and the Court refused to act upon it.

Their solicitors' neglect often causes receivers to lose their poundage. To check that course, this Court will uniformly disallow the costs, upon applications to allow the receiver his poundage, even when the Master, if permitted, allows the poundage.—Bessonnet v. Waller, 1 I. Jur. 150. (R.)

6. The Court will not make an order that the receiver be at liberty to account but once in each five years, for the purpose of avoiding expense; the property producing but £10 per annum.—Darley v. Hunter, 1 I. Jur. 194. (R.)

7. Motion to allow the receiver his poundage, his account not having been passed within the time limited by the 148th G. O. Poundage allowed; costs not given.—Lawson v. Griffin, 1 I. Jur. 225. (R.)

8. The conditional order for the appointment of a receiver in Chancery, is sufficient to render every party to the cause or matter, interfering with the rents, guilty of contempt.—Delacherols v. Wrixon, 2 I. Jur. 89. (C.)

9. A receiver claimed £49 over and above his fees, for money paid to a clerk. An order of reference was made to the Remembrancer, who allowed £5 of this sum. The Court, on motion, ordered that the receiver should be paid the costs of the reference, the costs of the motion on which it was founded, and the costs of the application.—The Queen v. Prim, 2 I. Jur. 252. (E.E.)

10. When a receiver allows an inheritor, to whom a surplus is payable, and who is tenant to a part of the lands, to retain his rent, without an order for so doing; is charged by the Master with the amount; and is subsequently discharged from the office of receiver; he may be allowed credit for this amount on passing his final account; and will be entitled to have notice of all payments by the new receiver.—Gibson v. Wills, 5 I. Jur. 163. (R.)

11. The notice of a distress made by a receiver did not contain all the particulars required by the statute. The tenants replevied. The Court, on payment to the tenants of all their costs, stayed the replevin proceedings. The receiver was given credit for this amount out of the estate, but had to abide his own costs of the motion.—Graves v. G., 5 I. Jur. 309. (R.)

12. A receiver appointed over a renewable leasehold, subject to a heavy head rent, and to the payment of tithe rentcharge, will be required to pay the rentcharge in priority to the head rent.—Madden v. Wilson, 6 I. Jur. 129. (R.)

13. If lands are let under the Court, and the tenant refuses to take them, and a conditional order for an attachment is granted against him, but before it is served or made absolute, the lands are re-let under the direction of the Master; the conditional order cannot be made absolute, nor can the tenant be directed to compensate the estate.

Lands were set up by the Court to be let. A. was declared tenant, but refused to execute the leases. The Lord Chancellor granted a conditional order against him on the 1st April, for an attachment for the contempt. He escaped to England, and it was not served until the 3rd May. The lands, by direction of the Master, had been re-let on the 27th May. The receiver presented a petition to the Chancellor, and obtained, on the 25th July, a conditional order for an attachment, or liberty to accept £20 and costs as compensation to the estate. A. then presented a petition to set aside the conditional order of the 25th July. Held, that the cause shown against the conditional order was good, and that it could not be made absolute; that A. could not be compelled to compensate the estate after the lands were re-let.

The receiver was declared entitled to costs of the conditional order, and proceedings thereunder. A., by consent, was directed to pay a sum on account of the receiver's costs.—In re Filgate a minor, 6 I. Jur. 131. (R.)

1. The Court will not grant an order on a receiver to pay the several parties appointing and extending him according to their priorities generally.

The proper course is, to have an affidavit and a schedule setting out the priorities of the parties, and then to move to pay according to the priorities therein stated.—Wilson v. Hoare, 6 I. Jur. 174. (R.)

LXXVIII. 6. Discharge and Removal of Receiver.

2. A prior creditor, who has obtained a receiver in a Ch. suit to which a puisne creditor is a party, is not entitled to remove a receiver appointed by this Court over the same lands in the suit of that puisne creditor, though the prior creditor be not a party to that suit; the receiver of this Court having served the tenants with the order to pay their rents before the receiver of the Court of Ch. did so.

Semble—At the prior creditor's desire, this Court will direct the puisne creditor to make him a party to the suit.

But, clearly, this Court will not remove its receiver under the before-mentioned circumstances, when it appears that the receiver of the Court of Ch. has been collusively appointed to obstruct the puisne creditor in asserting his rights.—Barry v. B., H. & J. 508. (E.E.)

3. The Court will not vacate a receiver's recognizance at the time of his discharge, even on consent of all parties.—Fitzgerald v. Hill, 2 I. E. R. 398. (E.E.)

4. A motion to vacate the recognizance, at the time when the receiver applies to be discharged, is premature.—D'Arcy v. Sherry & Callan, 2 I. E. R. 411. (E.E.)

5. The receiver passed his final account in 1829, when there was a small sum due to him. The purchaser under the decree in the cause was put into possession the same year. The receiver had not received any of the rents since his last account. The Court granted an order to vacate the receiver's recognizance, although the receiver had not been formally discharged. The injunction to put the purchaser into possession amounts to a discharge of the receiver.—Anon., 2 I. E. R. 416. (E.E.)

6. In 1828, a judgment on warrant of attorney was entered up against a trader. On 3rd

March 1841, a conditional order was obtained against him under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, which was made absolute on the 3rd April. On the 17th May, a commission of bankruptcy issued against respondent. Some of the simple contract creditors, who proved thereunder, had been such before the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, came into operation. The respondent's assignee moved to remove the receiver. Held, that the absolute order was that meant by the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, s. 37; and that, since petitioner came within the provisos in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, the receiver should be discharged.—Burt v. Bernard, 4 I. E. R. 328; Fl. & K. 414. (R.)—(Affd.: 5 I. E. R. 425; 3 Dr. & War. 464; 2 Con. & L. 261. (C.))

7. When the estate expires over which a receiver has been appointed, the reversioner or remainderman may enter, notwithstanding the continuance of the receiver, and is not to be considered as committing any contempt by so doing. If, under such circumstances, an application be made to remove a receiver, or for leave to enter into possession, the cost must fall on the applicant. On the other hand, if any attempt be made to attach the reversioner or remainderman for interfering with the possession of the receiver, the costs which he may thereby be put to will be awarded to him.—Britton v. M'Donnell, 5 I. E. R. 275. (R.)

8. Upon the death of A., a debtor, over whose freehold estate a receiver had been appointed on a judgment creditor's petition, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, his eldest son, J., alleging that by virtue of articles prior to the judgment, and subsequent settlement according to the articles, his father was only tenant for life, and that he was entitled as tenant in tail, applied for the removal of the receiver. The Court declined to make any rule upon the motion. Afterwards the judgment creditor, insisting that the estate liable to the judgments was not determined by A.'s death, applied, under the 32nd sec. of the Act, to continue the proceedings. That motion was refused with costs, having been resisted by J., of whose title (before stated) prima facie evidence was produced, and not rebutted.—Kenny v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 280. (R.)

9. A judgment creditor of a tenant for life presented a petition, and obtained an order to appoint a receiver. Subsequently the trustee of the settlement filed a bill in Ch. against the tenant for life, the infant tenant in tail, and the petitioner, alleging that there were incumbrances affecting the inheritance prior to the judgment of the petitioner, and that the rents were insufficient to keep down the interest on them, and prayed for the appointment of a receiver, and that he might be ordered to keep down the interest. A receiver having been appointed in that suit, the ptf. in it applied to have the receiver of this Court removed. Held, that the right, if it existed, to remove the receiver first appointed, was a right which belonged to a prior creditor; and that the ptf. was not in that situation.—Burke v. Browne, 6 I. E. R. 218. (E.E.)

1. When an ignorant person has been induced by the misrepresentations of the ptf. to consent to act as receiver, and been accordingly appointed, but afterwards, on discovering the nature of the office, refuses to enter into the recognizance, the Court will not make him pay the costs of his removal and of the new order of reference.—Hunter v. Pring, 8 I. E. R. 102. (R.)

2. When, by appointment of different receivers over distinct portions of deft.'s estates, the whole is extended, the Court will remove all the receivers except one, who will be retained for the benefit of all parties.—Kelly v. Rutledge, 8 I. E. R. 228. (R.)

3. A receiver, not having passed his account, was attached and subsequently discharged, and a new receiver appointed. Held, that the first receiver's sureties were liable under the recognizance, to the costs of the attachment, and to all costs of discharging the defaulting receiver, and appointing the new one.—Maunsell v. Egan, 8 I. E. R. 372. (R.)—[Affd.: 9 I. E. R. 283; 3 Jon. & L. 251. (C.)]

4. A motion to discharge a receiver over premises in which the respondent's interest had expired, must be on notice to the respondent.—Johnston v. Henderson, 8 I. E. R. 521. (E.E.)

5. A receiver who had passed his final account, and paid the balance found against him, and who had been acting for thirty years, discharged without paying the costs of his removal, or of the appointment of a new receiver.—Cox v. M'Namara, 11 I. E. R. 356. (R.)

6. A mortgagee having obtained a conditional order for a receiver under the Mortgage Act, payments were made on account of interest, and a receiver was appointed by a judgment creditor. A petition being presented by the mortgagee, the conditional order was made absolute; and the receiver extended to the mortgage, in chamber. On an affidavit stating the intermediate payments, the order was set aside.

A judgment creditor having a receiver is not entitled to notice of a petition by a mortgagee to extend him to the mortgage.—Goldsmidt v. Lord Glengall, 11 I. E. R. 608. (C.)

7. On the 5th Feb. the Court of Exch. referred it to the Remembrancer to appoint a receiver over lands. On the 30th June following, this Court ordered a receiver over the same lands to be appointed. Motion to discharge the receiver in this Court. Order for his appointment set aside, as the Court had not been informed of the order made by the Court of Exch.—Bryan v. Richardson, 1 I. Jur. 298. (R.)

8. A receiver who has acted meritoriously, and, from ill health, is no longer capable of discharging his duties, will be discharged without being compelled to pay the costs of his removal.—Constable v. C., 2 I. Jur. 141. (R.)

9. When a prior order of reference has been obtained in the Exchequer for appointment of a receiver, the Court will discharge such order, when in the meantime a receiver has been appointed by the Court of Ch., notwithstanding that the receiver of the Court of Ch. appears to have been appointed collusively.—Delmege v. Waller, 2 I. Jur. 229. (E.E.)

10. A receiver passed his final account, and, without having been discharged, moved to vacate the recognizances of himself and his sureties.

The purchaser had gone into possession.

The Court refused the motion, but discharged the receiver.—Fitzgerald v. Johnson, 2 I. Jur. 252. (E.E.)

11. The Court of Ch. will not discharge a receiver acting under its decree, upon the application of a purchaser claiming the lands over which the receiver has been appointed; but will send the parties to a Court of Law to determine the legal right under a conveyance from the I. E. Commissioners, which makes no mention of the receiver being in possession.

Semble—There is nothing in the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, to interfere with the jurisdiction of the Court of Ch. in considering any question affecting such conveyance, on the ground of fraud, or notice, or any other equitable ground of relief.—Locke v. Ashe, 4 I. Jur. 180. (R.)

12. The Court under special circumstances, discharged a defaulting receiver, who was in custody under an attachment for not accounting (when his sureties had passed his account, and paid the balance due on foot thereof), on the receiver's undertaking to pay the ptf. the costs incurred by him in suing out the attachment, and the costs of his own removal, the ptf. not requiring payment of those costs before the discharge of the receiver; but without prejudice to the liability of the sureties.—Johnson v. Tottenham, 5 I. Jur. 15. (R.)

13. A notice of motion to discharge a receiver for misconduct, should state the grounds on which his discharge is sought. If it concerns items in his account, the items objected to should be mentioned; if for any other particular acts, they should be stated in the notice. When this is not done, the party applying to discharge the receiver will not get the costs of his motion, though the receiver be discharged. The more direct mode is to get a certificate from the Master, stating the propriety of discharging him, as the M. R. always acts on such a certificate.—Gibson v. Wills, 5 I. Jur. 163. (R.)

14. When lands are let in Ch. for seven years pending the cause, and are sold in the I. E. Court, the tenancy does not determine till the receiver has been discharged by the side-bar order.

The gale days in the lease from the Court were the 1st of Feb. and the 1st of August; the sale was on the 6th of July, and the conveyance to the purchaser was made on the 26th of July. An agreement was then made between him and the tenant to commence a new tenancy from the 6th of July. The receiver was discharged on the 28th of July, but having previously received from the tenant the portion of the gale up to the 6th of July, he was directed to pay this amount over to the purchaser.—Wybrants v. W., 7 I. Jur. 327. (R.)

1. A consent that a receiver be discharged must be signed by the receiver's solicitor.—Moffett v. Rutledge, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 74. (R.)

2. Order to discharge a receiver who had compromised with his creditors in the Court of Bankruptcy.—Ellard v. Cooper, 17 I. C. R. 151. (R.)

LXXVIII. 7. Receiver ; as respects Rents, Lands, and Tenants under the Court.

[As to who are entitled to rents brought in by a receiver, see INTERMEDIATE PROFITS.]

- a. Generally: respecting Letting, Abatement to Tenants, &c.
- b. Attachment, Distress, &c.

LXXVIII. 7. a. Generally: respecting Letting, Abatement, &c., to Tenants.

[See G. O. of 1843, 145 to 150; G. O. of Jan. 1845; 3 & 4 G. O. Jan. 1850; G. O. of 1851, 45 to 51; G. O. of 1857, 30, 31, 35, 36, 42, 43, 44. See Gamble's Ch. O., pp. 200-220.]

3. A distraining order against tenants will not be granted after attachments have been found fruitless, except upon the terms that the costs shall not be a charge on the estate.—Ryder v. Dickson, Hayes, 36. (E.E.)

4. The motion for a conditional order for an attachment against tenants for non-payment of rent to a receiver is a side-bar rule; but the affidavit for the motion should state the time of the demand and refusal.—Locke v. Evans, Hay. & J. 301. (E.E.)

5. The Court will not order the receiver to pay the inheritor's attorney the expenses incurred by him, without the Court's authority, in legal proceedings respecting the lands.—Dudgeon v. Bowen, Hay & J. 717. (E.E.)

6. The Court will not set up lands to be let subject to the interests of the tenants resident thereon.—Anon., 2 Jon. 630. (E.E.)

7. A reference touching the propriety of abating the tenants' rents, and forgiving their arrears, &c., was refused when the application was made by the receiver alone; but was afterwards granted, upon the concurrence of the parties.—Evans v. Taylor, S. & Sc. 681. (R.)

8. A reference to determine whether a receiver over impropriate tithes should proceed against the defaulters by bill in equity or otherwise, was granted upon the receiver's motion; the ptf. concurring.

A receiver's duty is, to collect the rents, but not to assume the management of the cause.—Callaghan v. Reardon, S. & Sc. 682. (R.)—[See Callaghan v. Reardon, 1 Cr. & Dix, Notes of Cas. 231. (R.)]

9. A reference, whether any sum should be expended in repairing premises held under the Court, was refused; because prima facie a tenant is bound to repair the demised premises, and the motion was a voluntary application on the receiver's part.—Duke of Dorset v. Crosbie, S. & Sc. 683. (R.)

10. An order, that tenants of a minor should have liberty to execute a surrender, was granted upon the receiver's motion made by the Master's direction; it being plainly for the minor's benefit that a surrender should be accepted; but his guardian's concurrence was required.—Davis v. Cotter, S. & Sc. 685. (R.)

11. A motion by a tenant, holding at an exorbitant rent, for an abatement, was refused, with costs, though not opposed by the parties in the cause.—Maguire v. Richards, S. & Sc. 690. (R.)

12. A motion by a tenant under the Court for a sum towards building a new house on the demised lands was refused; the tenant being bound by his lease and recognizance to pay his rent, and keep the old house in repair.—Palmer v. Newport, S. & Sc. 691. (R.)

13. A motion by sureties of a tenant under the Court to reduce his rent was granted, under the circumstances, upon the terms of all arrears due being paid: the receiver and the interested parties consenting.—M'Evoy v. M'E., S. & Sc. 699. (R.)

14. Rents, accrued since bill filed, and received by the receiver in another cause, are not bygone rents; and, when the receiver is extended, they will be transferred to the credit of a suit by a prior incumbrancer, all parties being before the Court.—Bland v. Gould, 1 I. E. R. 5. (C.)

15. After the receiver's discharge, the Court will not retain a reference touching arrears of rent. But when, because of a dispute between the tenants and the receiver, the tenants obtained a reference to enquire and report what rent was due; and, pending the reference, ptf. and defts., by consent, obtained the receiver's discharge, which determined the reference; the Court ordered the ptf. and defts. to pay the tenants the costs of the order of reference, and of all proceedings had thereunder.—Hutchins v. H., 1 I. E. R. 378. (R.)

16. When the respondent, in a petition matter, under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 56, held under a lease containing a non-alienation clause, the Court directed the receiver to manage the lands himself.—Rogers v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 482. (R.)

1. When timber trees had been blown down upon a mortgaged estate, over which a receiver had been appointed in a foreclosure cause, the Court directed the receiver to sell them to the best advantage, and to keep a separate account of the produce of the sale; with liberty to the parties to apply at any future time as they should be advised.—Crofts v. Poe, Jones & C. 198. (E.E.)

2. The head landlord applied for liberty to bring an ejectment against a tenant over whose interest a receiver had been appointed. It was ordered that he should be at liberty to eject if the receiver did not pay him the head rent before a month elapsed. The costs of the motion to be paid by the receiver if he should pay the rent, without prejudice to his being disallowed them if the motion was made necessary by his misconduct in not paying the head rent.—Evans v. Norcott, Long. & T. 380. (E.E.)

3. A house and lands were let at an annual rent of £418, for seven years pending the cause, to A., upon whose motion they were set up again, without prejudice to the question of compensation; and re-let at £306. 16s. a-year. The Court referred it to the Master to ascertain what compensation A. should make. Upon the Master's report, assessing the compensation at £35 a-year, during the term, the Court ordered A. to enter into a recognizance in the sum of £150, to pay the receiver £35 per annum in half-yearly gales; and ordered A. to pay the costs.—Cox v. C., 2 I. E. R. 160, note. (R.)

4. The Court deals with its tenants as tenants at will. When a tenant has been let into possession under the Court for seven years, or pending the cause, the Court will not grant an injunction to dispossess him, without an affidavit as to the state of his crops.—O'Connell v. O'Callaghan, Long. & T. 157; 8 I. E. R. 199. (E.E.)

5. Where lands, let under the Court for seven years, pending the cause, are sold under the decree, and the tenancy is determined before the expiration of the term, the purchaser having notice of the tenancy at the time of the sale, and going into possession, is not entitled to the crops sown by the late tenant, and growing on the lands. The late tenant is entitled to emblements, and his right is not affected by the custom of the country as to the outgoing tenant's right after the expiration of his lease.—Creed v. C., 3 I. E. R. 207. (R.)

6. A tenant under a letting made by the Court for seven years pending the cause, who has been put out of possession, by the injunction of the purchaser, in the interval between two gale days, is bound to pay rent for the period he continued in occupation after the last gale day. It will be referred to the Remembrancer to ascertain what is the amount of such rent, having regard to the season of the year when the broken gale occurred, and the nature of the demised premises.—Jameson v. Farrer, 3 I. E. R. 518. (E.E.)

7. Lands were let under the Court for seven years, pending the matter of a judgment creditor's petition. Before the expiration of the seven years the lands were sold out of Court, with the consent of the petitioners, to pay their demands, and the tenant gave up possession to the purchaser. Held, that he was bound to pay rent for the time he continued in possession from the last gale day to the day when he gave up possession to the purchaser.—Jackson v. J., 5 I. E. R. 591. (E.E.)

8. It is not necessary to serve an inheritor with an order to furnish a rental, personally.—Watkins v. Lloyd, 5 I. E. R. 244. (E.E.)

9. The sureties of a tenant under the Court can have no greater claim to relief from a letting alleged to be at an over-value, than the tenant himself would have. Seem—If the tenant would be entitled to relief, so would the sureties.—In re Langfords, 6 I. E. R. 398. (C.)

10. When sequestrators seized, under the writ, the issues and profits of the lands before the second gale of rent became due to the head landlord, but the two gales were due before accounting—Held, that the landlord was entitled in the first instance to the two gales out of the funds.—Stafford v. S., 7 I. E. R. 197. (R.)

11. A motion to set aside a letting made in a cause or matter should not be made by the receiver, and the Court will refuse such motion by the receiver, with costs.—Richards v. Gould, 7 I. E. R. 209. (R.)

12. The declaration by the Master, of the tenant, at the bidding for lands, is not conclusive; the letting may be set aside by the Court.

It is the duty of the Master to declare the highest solvent bidder, unless he is objectionable on some grounds of disqualification or misconduct.

When the Master has declared as tenant the person who was not the highest bidder, the Court will entertain a motion to set the letting aside, if made by the inheritor or person interested in the estate; but not by the highest bidder, as no contract has been made with him, and he has no equity or right to enforce.—In re Costellus, 7 I. E. R. 491. (R.)

13. When lands (subject to a charge, to raise which the suit has been instituted) are set by the inheritor, pendente lite, the Court will consider the lands as in his possession; and under an order to let the lands in his possession, will permit them to be let discharged of the leases.—Kenny v. Jessop, 7 I. E. R. 494. (R.)

1. When the Master in Ch. refused to take a bidding, for the inheritor and a party in the cause, at the letting of the lands, on the ground that he had not obtained the previous permission of the Court, and declared as tenants bidders of a less rent; the Court, upon obtaining a certificate of their practice from the Masters, directed a new letting of the lands.—Sproule v. S., 7 I. E. R. 633. (R.)

2. When tenants have, without leave of the Court, replevied distresses for rent, made by the receiver, the Court will restrain them from proceeding in the replevin suits, and direct a reference as to the rent due.—In re Perse, 8 I. E. R. 111. (R.)

3. Under the 145th G. O. the Master has not jurisdiction to give allowance or compensation to a tenant for improvements.

A tenant for a term pending the cause will not be allowed for improvements made without sanction of the Court, on notice to all parties, although he may have been misled as to his tenure by the receiver.—Wildridge v. M'Kane, 8 I. E. R. 231. (R.)

4. The Court will not, on the application of the receiver, sell civil-bill decrees obtained for arrears of rent. Semble, the Court cannot sell arrears.—Ford v. Head, 8 I. E. R. 368. (R.)

5. Order for reference to enquire and report whether the rents payable by tenants under the Court should be abated, granted, upon consent of inheritor's solicitor given in open Court.—Morrow v. Sausse, 8 I. E. R. 519. (E.E.)

6. When the landlord insists on his right to have liberty to eject, unless all his rent be paid, he will not get the costs of the motion; but if he waive any of his rights he will be entitled to the costs.—Harris v. Shea, 8 I. E. R. 571. (R.)

7. The Master has no jurisdiction to direct a receiver to proceed by civil-bill for arrears of rent; the 146th G. O. not including such a case.—Hamilton v. Jackson, 8 I. E. R. 581. (R.)

8. The receiver in the cause having distrained for rent (due by a tenant who held in reality for the deft.), as it was alleged by the deft., on lands in the possession of the deft., and not those over which the receiver was appointed, the Court restrained an action of trespass brought by the deft.; and granted the usual reference to the Master; there being no good reason to suppose that the receiver acted maliciously or mala fide, or that any substantial damage was sustained by the deft.—Parr v. Bell, 9 I. E. R. 55. (R.)

9. A lessee for years having leased for his own term, reserving a profit rent, with a clause of re-entry on non-payment of it, subsequently mortgaged the lands. Held, that the rent reserved was not a rentcharge, but in the nature of rent upon a demise; and that the personal representative of the mortgagor could recover the lands by ejectment at Common Law, and would be a trustee for the mortgagee, and, therefore, that a receiver appointed over the lands under the Mortgage Act was justified in enforcing the rent.—Cremen v. Johnson, 9 I. E. R. 143. (R.)

10. In a petition matter under the Mortgage Act, the Court will not decide equities between owners of different parts of the mortgaged premises. When a receiver had received all the rents out of the portion of A., who had a right to be indemnified out of the portion of B., who had been required to pay nothing to the receiver for some years; the Court refused to charge the receiver as for default, at the instance of A.; the mortgagee having been paid all his interest.—Lane v. Lynch, 9 I. E. R. 501. (C.)

11. A judgment creditor, having procured the appointment of a person in his own employment as receiver over his debtor's land, brought forward a person of the same name as the respondent to bid at the letting, in trust for himself, who was declared the tenant at an under-value, under the supposition that he was bidding for the respondent. The Court set aside the letting as fraudulent, though three years had elapsed, and the petitioner had laid out money in improvements; but refused to make him accountable as for wilful default, on motion.

A petitioner in a matter cannot bid without leave of the Court.—Malcolmson v. Eagar, 10 I. E. R. 1. (R.)

12. Practice as to costs on a motion by a landlord for leave to proceed for non-payment of rent.—Clendinning v. Knox, 12 I. E. R. 309. (R.)

13. A judgment for poor-rate against the immediate lessor, under the 6 & 7 Vic., c. 92, s. 2, does not deprive the poor-law guardians of their remedy against the occupiers, under s. 3 of the same Act.

Therefore, the Court directed the receiver to pay a rate struck before his appointment, and the costs of a judgment obtained for it against the immediate lessor.—De Montmorency v. Pratt, 12 I. E. R. 411. (R.)

14. Upon an order for a receiver under the Mortgage Act (10 & 11 G. 3, c. 10), it is the absolute and not the conditional order which attaches the rents.—Cully v. Lucas, 1 I. Jur. 344. (R.)

15. A receiver had been appointed over lands, a portion of which were subsequently sold under a decree of the Court of Ch. The Court would not give a creditor permission to proceed against the tenants of that estate, to recover their arrears.—Armstrong v. Southwell, 2 I. Jur. 115. (E.E.)

16. When the contents of a farm let under the Court were mis-stated in the advertisement, and the tenant asserted by affidavit that he had been misled, the Court directed a survey of the lands by the tenant and the receiver, and a reference to ascertain what reduction ought to be made in the rent.—Ball v. West, 2 I. Jur. 142. (E.E.)

1. Upon consent of the parties in a cause claiming substantial interests in the lands in litigation, the receiver over those lands was permitted to become a tenant of part of them, the adoption of such a course appearing to be for the benefit of the estate.—Stannus v. French, 13 I. E. R. 161. (C.)

2. When tenants hold under leases of a date prior to that of the appointment of a receiver in a foreclosure suit over the lands which they hold, the Court has not jurisdiction either to remit arrears or to grant a prospective abatement of the rents, which by their leases the tenants are bound to pay, unless the owner of the lands and the ptf., and other parties interested in the rents, consent to such remission or abatement. Secus autem in the case of the estate of an infant or lunatic under the control of the Court.—Hamilton v. Nagle, 1 I. C. R. 513; 3 I. Jur. 366. (C.)

3. Objections and exceptions to reports should state the exact proposition which the Court is called on to decide.

When a receiver is appointed over tithe rentcharge, the funds realised by him are applicable in the first instance to the repairs of the church.—Cullen v. The Dean and Chapter of Killaloe, 2 I. C. R. 133. (R.)

4. An order of reference, to appoint a receiver, was made on the 10th of July 1851, over mines which had been demised by the principal deft. by a lease, reserving one-twelfth of the ore, to be weighed and delivered at the pfts., and containing a covenant by the lessee to weigh and deliver it. A portion of the ore was weighed and removed before the 10th of July 1851, by the lessee, who, as he usually did, sent it with his own ore to be sold, and gave bills for the amount to the deft. after that date. Held, that the deft. was bound to bring in the amount of the bills of exchange, as the ore had not been delivered, and the covenant in the lease had not therefore been performed when the order of reference for the appointment of the receiver was made.

A receiver is entitled to all arrears of rent unpaid, when the order of reference to appoint a receiver is made; and, although the tenants are only responsible from the time when the order to pay their rents to the receiver is served on them, yet the person entitled to receive such rent and arrears is bound from the date of the order of reference to appoint a receiver, when he has notice of such order.—Hollier v. Hedges, 2 I. C. R. 370. (R.)

5. A receiver was appointed on the 23rd of June 1852. On the 22nd of April 1852, the respondent's agent took I. O. Us. and promissory notes from the tenants for the previous November rents, which the Court ordered to be brought in.—Russell v. R., 2 I. C. R. 574. (R.)

6. Except in lunacy and minor matters, the Court of Ch. has not jurisdiction to abate the arrears of rent of a tenant by lease made before the appointment of the receiver, if the respondent or inheritor object.—Byrne v. Kelly, 3 I. Jur. 177. (C.)

7. A receiver had been appointed over the estate of H., and extended to several causes and matters. The different incumbrancers on the estate came to an arrangement between themselves that the funds collected by the receiver should be applied to keep down the accruing interest and gales of annuities. H. objected to this arrangement. Held, reversing the order at the Rolls, 1 I. C. R. 146, that H. had a right to insist that the whole of the principal, interest, and costs of the prior demands should be paid before any portion of the fund was applied to liquidate the puisne charges.—Hutchins v. H., 4 I. C. R. 224. (C.)

8. If lands are let under the Court, and the tenant refuses to take them, and a conditional order for an attachment is granted against him, but, before it is served or made absolute, the lands are re-let under the direction of the Master, the conditional order cannot then be made absolute; nor can the tenant be directed to compensate the estate.

Lands were set up by the Court to be let. A. was declared tenant, but refused to execute the leases. The Lord Chancellor granted a conditional order against him on the 1st April for an attachment for the contempt. He escaped to England, and it was not served until the 3rd May. The lands, by direction of the Master, were re-let on the 27th May. The receiver presented a petition to the Chancellor, and obtained, on the 25th July, a conditional order for an attachment, or liberty to accept £20, and costs, as compensation to the estate. A. then presented a petition to set aside the conditional order of the 25th July. Held, that the cause shown against the conditional order was good, and that it could not be made absolute; that A. could not be compelled to compensate the estate after the lands were re-let.

9. Lands were let under the Court for seven years pending the suit. The tenant paid a year's rent in advance on getting possession; entered and expended money on the lands; and the suit was compromised before the end of the first half year.

Cause shown against an injunction to put the owner in possession was allowed, with costs; and the issuing of the injunction was stayed until the end of the year of the tenancy created by the Court.

Practice of taking rent in advance from tenants under the Court disapproved of.—Lalor v. Netterville, 6 I. Jur. 261. (R.)

[N.B.—This case was not a decision under the Emblements Act (14 & 15 Vic., c. 25), though the report, having been altered by the Editor, after it had left the Reporter's hands, is made to appear as if it was. It was merely a decision as to what was fair to the tenants, under the circumstances of the case.—R. W. G.]

1. A. had an equitable mortgage of premises granted in 1843, and obtained a judgment at law, in 1846, for the amount of his debt. In May 1847, A. appointed a receiver, under the Judgment Acts, over the premises in the mortgage, and over other premises of the debtor. B. had a mortgage of 1844 (with judgment collateral) over these last premises and others not in A.'s mortgage. In March 1847, B. filed his bill to foreclose his mortgage, praying a sale of the premises comprised in his mortgage, and a receiver over them, and making A. a notice party, as a judgment creditor. In 1848, the receiver, who had been appointed by A., was extended to B.'s cause, and was appointed over the further premises in B.'s mortgage. A considerable amount of the rents received generally by the receiver was paid under orders of the Court to B. Held, that the payments to B. should have been made out of the rents of those premises only which were comprised in his mortgage; and that the extension of the receiver could not affect the rents received out of the premises not comprised therein.

That although B.'s collateral judgment might have been made a charge on all the lands, yet as no specific relief was sought on foot of it in the foreclosure suit, the rents of the premises not in B.'s mortgage were not attached, nor the rights of the parties to the fund in Court altered.

A reference was made to the Master to allocate the funds, and report the rights of the parties, without having regard to any previous orders of the Court respecting payment out of the rents received.

If a person who could not be made a notice party under the Rules, is only made a notice party, he will not be bound by the proceedings.

The petitioner and ptf. were each declared entitled to the costs of the motion.—Bristow v. Millar, 6 I. Jur. 285. (R.)

2. When lands are to be let under the Court, the owner in occupation of the mansion-house and lands attached is not entitled as of right to be declared the tenant at an occupation rent. This is an indulgence given by the Court, and if the owner has it in his power to make a fair settlement for the creditors and does not do so, the indulgence will not be granted.

When the owner had only a life estate, and was himself old, and his eldest son, who had the first charge thereon, refused to have the owner's life insured for the benefit of another creditor on the life estate, the Court refused a motion to have the owner declared tenant at an occupation rent, and with costs.—Averal v. Wade, 7 I. Jur. 219. (R.)

3. When a receiver has been appointed over a minor's estate, and a lease made by the Master of a part of the estate, the Court cannot, without the consent of the creditors, direct a surrender of such lease to be accepted on behalf of the minor.—Massey v. O'Dell, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 6. (R.)

4. When lands have been sold and the purchase-money is not sufficient to pay off the incumbrances, and none of the parties interested object, the arrears of rent due out of the lands up to the gale day preceding the sale, may be set up and sold, if such sale would be for the benefit of those interested in the estate.—Clayton v. Chichester, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 170. (R.)

5. When abatements are given in bad times to tenants under the Court, holding under leases with the consent of the inheritor, they will be withdrawn when times improve, and the inheritor refuses his consent.—Butler v. Collins, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 272. (R.)

6. A tenant seeking a f.-f. grant, there being a receiver over the owner's interest, should, before proceeding, require the receiver to take the proper proceedings to have the f.-f. grant made.

Semble—If the receiver refuses, the tenant should proceed by motion in the cause, and not by petition under the Ren. Lease. Conv. Act.—Ex parte Hanks, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 199. (R.)

7. Before decree, a deft. in an incumbrancer's suit is not in privy with the rents received by the receiver, though he files an answer claiming a charge on the lands.—Foss v. F., 15 I. C. R. 215. (R.)

8. Although the petitioner does not dispute the respondent's right to one moiety of the rents of the property, the subject of the suit, yet the Court, when directing the appointment of a receiver pending the suit, will not direct any part of them to be paid to the respondent.—Sweetman v. S., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 143. (R.)

[See G. O. of April 5, 1847, 2; G. O. of May 1857, 43: Gam. Ch. O., pp. 218, 221, &c.]

9. A distraining order will not be granted against tenants after attachments have been found fruitless, unless upon terms that the costs shall not be a charge on the estate.—Ryder v. Dickson, Hayes, 36. (E.E.)

10. A receiver will not be permitted to proceed by ejectment and attachment for non-payment of the same rent.

The G. O. to pay rent to the receiver need not be personally served.—Pope v. P., Hayes, 481. (E.E.)

11. The Court will not on the receiver's motion order that any arrears of rent be forgiven.—Woodward v. W., H. & J. 126. (E.E.)

12. When the premises are of small value, the receiver will be permitted to let, and to distrain from time to time as may be necessary.—Dean v. Donovan, Hayes & J. 218. (E. E.)

1. The Court will not, at the receiver's instance, order a remission of arrears, or a reduction of rents.—Robinson v. Shearer, H. & J. 799. (E.E.)

2. When premises had been sold, and the purchaser was about to get into possession, the receiver, on swearing that one half year's rent was due, and that the rents would be lost unless he distrained, was allowed to distrain.—Anon., 1 Jones, 613. (E.E.)

3. A tenant, who was not served with the order to pay his rent until after the expiration of the interest over which the receiver had been appointed, will not be attached for non-payment of an arrear which accrued due before the expiration of that interest, even though he had previously paid rent to the receiver.—Anon., 2 Jones, 280. (E.E.)—[See ibid., 348.]

4. Goods of a defaulting tenant had been seized by a third person under a civil-bill decree, and sold notwithstanding a notice given by the receiver of the claim for rent due. The receiver was permitted to take proceedings to recover the produce of the sale, the Court considering that an action would lie under the 9 Anne, c. 8 (Ir.)

The receiver was not permitted to oppose the discharge of the tenant as an insolvent, in order to induce the Insolvent Court to compel a surrender of the tenant's lease: the Court considering that the Insolvent Court has not any jurisdiction to enforce such surrender.—Hawkes v. Smith, S. & Sc. 712. (R.)

5. The letting of land in con-acre is but a mode of farming it.

Therefore the Court will not attach the inheritor for receiving rent from his con-acre tenants, though they have been served with the order to pay their rents to the receiver.—Close v. Brady, Jon. & Ca. 186. (E.E.)

6. It is necessary to apply to the Court for an attachment against a tenant for non-payment of rent, when he has not been served with the G. O. to pay rent to the receiver.—Armstrong v. Southwell, 1 I. E. R. 32. (E.E.)

7. Parties who rescued a distress made by a receiver were solvent. The Court granted a conditional order to attach them, intimating that the receiver should also proceed at Q. Sessions to punish them for the rescue.—Mahon v. M., Fl. & K. 18. (R.)

8. The Court will, upon motion by the receiver, grant a conditional order to restrain tenants under the Court from committing waste, without a bill being filed for the purpose.—Cronin M'Carthy, Fl. & K. 49. (R.)

9 A receiver was appointed over premises held under a lease containing a covenant declaring the lease void in certain events. A tenant held under a sub-lease containing a similar covenant. The Court, upon motion by the receiver, restrained the sub-tenant from doing an act whereby the title of the mesne tenant, over whose interest the receiver had been appointed, might be forfeited.—Mason v. M., Fl. & K. 429. (R.)

10. When a respondent interferes with rents over which a receiver has been appointed, the Court will, upon notice to the party, grant in the first instance an absolute order for an attachment.—Thomas v. T., Fl. & K. 621. (R.)

11. On the receiver's application, the Court granted an injunction to restrain one tenant of the estate from quarrying on a private road, part of the premises, which was common to all the tenants.—Dorman v. D., 3 I. E. R. 385. (E. E.)

12. A distraining order will not be granted unless it appear by affidavit that the receiver personally demanded the rent to be distrained for, from the tenants. It is not necessary that the affidavit should state in terms, that he personally demanded the rent, if it state facts from which it appears to the Court that the demand was personally made.—Langley v. Aylmer, 3 I. E. R. 492. (E.E.)

13. On the 14th May 1838, the purchaser of lands sold under a decree, and over which a receiver had been appointed, went into possession. The receiver died. In May 1842, the inheritor, who was beneficially entitled to the arrears of rent due on the 1st Nov. 1837, applied for attachments against the under-tenants for non-payment of the arrears.

After such a lapse of time the Court refused the aid of its process.—D'Arcy v. Sherry, 4 I. E. R. 690. (E.E.)

14. A writ of assistance will not be granted to aid the sheriff in executing an attachment directed to him, which issued against a tenant under the Court, for non-payment of his rent.—Meagher v. M., 1 Jon. & L. 31. (C.)

15. When an attachment, issued against a tenant under the Court, cannot be executed by reason of his being out of the jurisdiction, the Court will grant a sequestration against the tenant having other lands in this country.—Withington v. Blake, 8 I. E. R. 32. (R.)

16. When the rental furnished by the deft., pursuant to the side-bar order is defective, the Court will direct an amended rental to be furnished in order to grant an attachment in case of non-compliance.—Young v. Avrell, 8 I. E. R. 159. (R.)

17. The Court will not attach tenants who have rescued distresses for rent, but will leave the receiver to his remedy at law.—Ford v. Head, 8 I. E. R. 371. (R.)

18. When tenants under the Court, having, by consent, agreed to accept leases at rents to be fixed by valuers, afterwards refused to keep their agreement; leave was given to the receiver to proceed as he might be advised.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 8 I. E. R. 518. (E.E.)

1. A., having become tenant under the Court in trust for B., afterwards denied the trust. Motion for an injunction to put the c. q. t. into possession refused.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 8 I. E. R. 519. (E.E.)

2. The receiver in the cause is the proper person to present the petition, and to make the verifying affidavit, for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, upon a tenant's recognition.—Daly v. Lynch, 9 I. E. R. 2. (R.)

3. When a receiver has been appointed, an attachment will be granted against a party, who, before service of the order upon the tenants, interferes with the rents—he having had notice of the receiver's appointment.—McAlpine v. St. George, 1 I. Jur. 129. (R.)

4. When the order to pay rent has been served on all tenants of the lands, and A. succeeds one of them in possession, it is not necessary to serve A. with the order to pay, in order to obtain an attachment against him for non-payment of rent.—Roche v. Collins, 1 I. Jur. 282. (R.)

5. When a tenant of the Court replevied a distress made by the receiver, and the receiver entered a rule to declare in the replevin suit, but subsequently offered the tenant the costs of the rule, which the latter declined to receive, the Court ordered the proceedings in the replevin suit to be stayed, and directed a reference to the Remembrancer to report what sum was due by the tenant; the order to be without prejudice to any question as to the liabilities of the sureties in the replevin suit, or the costs of that suit or of the motion.—Whitelaw v. Sundys, 12 I. E. R. 396. (E.E.)

6. A., tenant of lands in the pleadings mentioned, died in May 1847, having bequeathed her interest in the lease to B. B. continued in possession till Nov. 1849, and, during that period paid two years' rent. At the Summer Assizes, 1849, there was a verdict in an ejectment on the title found against B. He delivered up possession before notice of this motion. At A.'s death two years' rent was due; and it was alleged that B. had wrongfully possessed himself of her effects, sufficient to pay the arrears due at A.'s death. The receiver filed a statement of facts to ground an attachment against B., in March 1849. In May 1849, he received a year's rent from B., and, in July following, obtained a conditional order for an attachment for the sum set forth in the statement of facts. Held, that this was not a case for an attachment, and that the proceedings were altogether irregular.

The Court will not grant an attachment against the personal representative of a tenant for arrears of rent accrued in his life.—Todd v. Chichester, 2 I. Jur. 65. (R.)

7. The interest in the lease of lands, over which a receiver had been appointed, was evicted by the head landlord, for non-payment of rent. Afterwards the lands were redeemed by a mortgagee, and the receiver restored. The Court refused to grant an attachment against sub-tenants for non-payment of rent during the period of the broken gales; one before the eviction, and the other after.—Barrett v. Connellan, 2 I. Jur. 66. (R.)

8. An absolute order for sale having been pronounced, and timber afterwards felled upon the lands, an injunction was issued against the owner, and everybody else, to restrain them from committing waste and felling timber, or carrying away the trees already felled.

Such trees having been seized and sold by the poor-rate collector, an application made to the Court for leave to remove them should be supported by an affidavit showing that there was not on the lands any other property capable of being distrained.

The sale will be set aside if collusion existed between the poor-rate collector and the purchaser.—In re Gould's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 181. (I.E.C.)

9. When a receiver is in actual occupation and managing under the direction of the Master, a county rate-collector, seizing, without leave of the Court, cattle grazing on the land, is liable to be attached for contempt.

Quære—If the lands be in the possession of a tenant?—Harvey v. Wallis, 3 I. Jur. 409. (C.)

10. A rentcharge of £100 was granted out of lands, part of which were let to two tenants whose rents amounted to £155, and who by the same deed attorned to the grantee. A receiver having been appointed over the rentcharge, on petition under the Judgment Acts, the grantor distrained the tenants for £55, the balance of their rent over the rentcharge. Held, that the Court, by appointing the receiver, had attached the whole rent payable by the tenants, and an attachment was awarded in the petition matter.—Hayden v. Shearman, 2 I. C. R. 137. (R.)

11. A sequestration on a final decree abates with the suit. A deft. was arrested for contempt in not furnishing a rental to sequestrators, under an attachment sued out pending abatement by the death of a sole ptf. He was discharged by the Court.—Brennan v. Kenny, 2 I. C. R. 579; 4 I. Jur. 112. (R.)

12. A sum was received by a respondent from the tenants subsequently to the appointment of a receiver by a puisne creditor. The receiver, in his account, was charged with the sum as received by him, and a conditional order for an attachment was obtained against the respondent, before the extension of the receiver, by a prior creditor. Held, that as the tenants paid the sum before the extending order, it was to be considered as paid by them for the receiver, and that the petitioner in the first matter was entitled to it.—O'Callaghan v. O'C., 3 I. C. R. 376. (R.)

1. A tenant held premises under the Court on a six months' lease, ending March 1850, at £45 rent; when applied to by the receiver at the end of the term, she refused possession, and in May 1851, when the rent was demanded, she, by letter, denied tenancy except for six months; she still continued in possession, and, in March 1852, the receiver's clerk filed for her a proposal for the premises at £50 per annum; which proposal was sent in, but there was no new letting. In Jan. 1853, the receiver distrained for two and a half years' rent, at £90 per annum, and the tenant replevied. On application of the receiver, the proceedings were directed to be stayed, and a reference was given to the Master to fix what rent should be paid from the end of the six months, and to allow credit thereout for the damages by distress, and for the costs at law. Each party was directed to abide his own costs of this motion, and the order to be without prejudice to the liability of the receiver for his neglect in not having let the lands in 1850.—Barron v. O'Brien, 6 I. Jur. 250. (R.)

2. According to the practice of the I. E. Court, the purchaser is entitled to the rents from the last gale day before the purchase; as the Commissioners charge the purchaser interest at £5 per cent. from the expiration of fourteen days from the day of purchase or confirmation of the sale. The sale took place on the 21st of July. The purchaser was declared entitled to the gale due on the 29th of Sept. following, although he did not lodge his purchase-money until the 21st of October.

After a receiver has been discharged and the purchaser has gone into possession, the Court will not make an order that the tenants shall pay to the purchaser the rent which fell due before the discharge of the receiver; the receiver is to receive the arrear due before his discharge, although the purchaser may be entitled to a portion of such arrear. The Court of Ch. does not order the tenant to pay such arrears to the purchaser.

The practice of the Court of Exchequer, as stated in Jackson v. J. (5 I. E. R. 591), and Jameson v. Farrer (3 I. E. R. 846) is not the practice of this Court.

Form of order in such case.

The Side-bar Rule, discharging a receiver, on the certificate of a sale in the I. E. Court, does not operate as an absolute discharge. Although he cannot proceed against the lands for arrears of rent, he may proceed against the tenant by attachment or sequestration on the Master's certificate, or by an action in the name of the Master, when the tenant holds by lease under the Court, for the arrears due when the receiver was discharged.—Walcott v. Condon, 3 I. C. R. 431; 6 I. Jur. 381. (R.)

3. A. owned a life estate in lands over which a receiver had been appointed.

B., a judgment creditor, had the receiver extended, in Nov. 1849, to pay his judgment.

C., D., and E., owners of a mortgage, the first charge on the life estate, had the receiver extended in Dec. 1849, to pay them. In Jan. 1854, an order permitted A., the owner, to remain in possession of the lands at an occupation rent to be fixed by the Master, otherwise the Master was to let the lands. A. at first agreed, but subsequently refused to give the usual security for the rent.

The Master then posted the lands for letting; but C. who appeared to act in collusion with A., issued an execution upon a judgment of 1843, and seized the growing crops, and, by giving public notice thereof, prevented the lands being let. Under these circumstances, B. obtained an order for an injunction to the sheriff to put the receiver in possession of the house and lands, which the Master was then directed to let; and an attachment was awarded against C. for contempt in seizing the crops; and that B. should be paid the costs of the order of Jan. 1854, and of this motion.—Reeves v. Cox, 6 I. Jur. 403. (R.)

4. The appointment, in a suit in the Court of Ch. in England, of a receiver over lands in Ireland, operates only as against the parties in that suit, but does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court of Ch. in Ireland to appoint a receiver over the same lands, and to punish by attachment any interference with him in the exercise of his duties. An attachment was accordingly awarded against the bailiff of a receiver appointed by the Court of Ch. in England, over lands in the county Cork, for interfering with the collection of rent by a receiver subsequently appointed by the Court of Ch. in Ireland.—Ferguson v. Coote, 7 I. Jur. 175. (M. O.)

5. If the tenancy of lands, over which a receiver has been appointed, is disputed, the Court will not issue an attachment for non-payment of rent.

Semble—A stamped copy of a lost unstamped document, requiring a stamp, is admissible in evidence.

Connor v. Cronin, 7 I. C. L. R. 480, doubted.—Herbert v. Rae, 13 I. C. R. 25. (R.)

6. When only six months' rent is in arrear, an attachment will not be granted against tenants for non-payment of rent to a receiver; nor will any order to proceed by civil-bill, or otherwise, be made.—McCarthy v. Mathews, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 97. (P.)

LXXVIII.* REGISTRAR. See PRACTICE, OFFICERS OF COURT.

LXXIX. RE-HEARING. See PRACTICE, HEARING, &C.—PRACTICE, APPEAL—PRACTICE, EVIDENCE.

[See G. O. (1867), 164.]

1. A cause will not be re-heard for costs alone. A re-hearing having been granted on certain points, the cause is open generally to the respondents. The petitioner, however, must confine himself, as against each respondent, to the points stated in his petition.—Blackwood v. Gregg, Hay. & J. 310. (E.E.)

2. Even after enrolment of a decree, on a minor deft.'s application, who had attained age after the enrolment, the Court will re-hear the cause respecting a particular matter appearing on the face of the Master's report.—Jackson v. Welsh, 1 Dr. & Wal. 255. (C.)

3. It is not necessary, by the practice of this Court, that a petition for re-hearing should be presented within six months from the time of pronouncing the decree. Such a petition must be signed by two counsel who were present at the hearing; but neither need be leading counsel in the cause.—Faussett v. Ormsby, 1 I. E. R. 388. (E.E.)

4. A creditor, deft. in an administration suit, will not, on a re-hearing, be entitled to rely upon matters whereof he might have had the benefit by taking exceptions and objections to the Master's report.—Brownlow v. Earl of Meath, 2 I. E. R. 383; 2 Dr. & Wal. 674. (C.)

4. The enrolment of a decree vacated on the ground of surprise.—Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 4 I. E. R. 276; 1 Dr. & War. 72. (C.)

5. The Court will not re-hear a cause in which the decree is not made up, but remains in minutes.—The Commrs. of Char. Don. & Beg. v. Hunter, 1 Dr. & War. 544. (C.)

6. When counsel has relied upon some only of several grounds of defence, that selection does not amount to a waiver of the rest. In such a case, an appeal having been taken to the H. L., a petition was allowed for a re-hearing, to amend the notes of the decree, without withdrawing the appeal.—Galway v. Barron, Long. & T. 76. (E.E.)

7. On a re-hearing, if deft. does not appear, ptf. must take a decree, such as he can abide by.—McCann v. O'Connor, 2 Dr. & War. 42. (C.)

8. A petition for a re-hearing may be dismissed with costs, though some relief be given to the petitioners.—Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dr. & War. 184; 1 Con. & L. 291. (C.)

9. It is not necessary that counsel who certify for a re-hearing should have been previously engaged in the case.

When, at the original hearing, counsel abandon an objection as to parties, or as to proof of a document, that objection cannot be made on a re-hearing.

On a re-hearing, petitioners cannot rely on any point not specified in the petition.

It is a matter of course to dismiss with costs a petition of re-hearing presented while the decree is still in minutes.—Malone v. Geraghty, 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 252; 2 Con. & L. 235. (C.)

10. On a bill to carry into execution a former decree, grounded on a question of construction then discussed, the Court will not re-open the question, though of opinion that the decision was wrong. The original cause must be re-heard.—Persse v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 508. (C.)

11. In a renewal suit against the deft., tenant for life, and his eldest son, the question was, whether denomination X. was included in the lease, or was part of an adjoining farm held by the ptf. for a determinable interest. A decree for a renewal referred it to the Master to enquire and ascertain the boundaries. The interest in the farm having expired, the deft. brought an ejectment for X., which the ptf. defended. He obtained a verdict. Deft.'s son having died, and his second son, a minor, become tenant in tail, a new bill was filed against the deft., and this son, which stated the ejectment, and that the question tried in it was identical with that involved in the reference; but the decree, made in 1844, which accorded with the prayer, only directed the former decree to be carried out between the parties. In 1845, the son, being of age, barred the entail, and conveyed the fee to the deft. A bill was then filed, relying on the ejectment, and praying a declaration that it was unnecessary to carry on the reference, and that the former decrees might be in other respects carried out. Held, that such relief was a variation of the decree of 1844, which could not be given without re-hearing the cause.

Semle—This was a bill of review, which should not have been filed without leave of the Court.—Chute v. M'Gillicuddy, 11 I. E. R. 312. (C.)

12. The rule against re-hearing an appeal motion is not inflexible. It is a sufficient ground for refusing it that the case has been already anxiously considered.—Lady Langford v. Mahony, 11 I. E. R. 319. (C.)

13. After a decree to account, a minor deft. attained age. On a re-hearing, at his application, new enquiries were directed, though no new answer was filed, and although the minor had, after attaining age, contested the case under the former decree.—Purcell v. Ruckley, 12 I. E. R. 55. (C.)

14. An order to re-hear a cause petition will be granted on a motion of course, founded upon the certificate of counsel that the case is a proper one for re-hearing.—Blount v. Gt. S. & W. Railway Co., 1 I. C. R. 590. (C.)

1. Under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, s. 85, this Court has not jurisdiction to order that an insolvent be re-heard before an Assistant-Barrister, who has already adjudicated upon the case, but has made a mistake.

A re-hearing before an Asst.-Bar. can be directed only when the previous adjudication has been obtained by perjury, fraud, or other like acts, done by the parties.

Semble—The application for an order to re-hear should be made at the earliest opportunity.—In re G., 2 I. C. R. 361; 3 I. Jur. 136, 279. (I.)

2. When a person not a party to a cause, but who has proved a demand in the office, is aggrieved by an omission in the final decree to provide for his rights, the Court will, notwithstanding some delay, give leave to present a petition of re-hearing, when he would have been entitled to a re-hearing as of right, if he had been a party to the cause.—Guinness v. Darley, 5 I. C. R. 227. (C.)

3. On a re-hearing documentary evidence, not offered at the original hearing, may be received; but depositions cannot be given for any purpose beyond identifying such documentary evidence.—Johnson v. Mid. Gt. W. of Ir. Ry. Co., 5 I. C. R. 264. (C.)—[See s. c., 6 H. L. Cas. 798; 4 Jur. N. S. 643.]

4. A respondent, who has had a petition dismissed with costs as against him, cannot, upon a subsequent change of circumstances, have the cause re-heard.—Folliott v. Evanson, 6 I. Jur. 51. (C.)

5. The M. R., on motion, before the passing of the C. A. Court (Ir.) Act 1856 (19 & 20 Vic., c. 92), made an order, which was reversed by the Lord Chancellor, from whose decision a motion, by way of appeal, was brought to the Court of C. A. Held, that the motion was in the nature of a second re-hearing, and should not be heard, since there were not any special grounds.—Dobbyn v. Adams, 6 I. C. R. 170; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 217. (C.A.)

6. The I. E. Court refused to grant a re-hearing pro forma, to enable an appeal to be brought to the Court of C. A., the intending appellant having permitted the month (allowed by the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77) to elapse, under a mistaken idea that the time, within which he might appeal, had been extended by the 19 & 20 Vic., c. 92, to three months.—In re Ashe's Estate, 6 I. C. R. 33. (I.E.C.)—[Affid.: 6 I. C. R. 177; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 217. (C.A.)]

7. On re-hearing, the petitioner applied for permission to examine the witnesses to the will. The application was refused.—French v. Copinger, 6 I. C. R. 568; 3 I. Jur. 21. (C.)

of the proceedings. His name did not appear in the docket for setting down the petition for hearing, and a decree having been made in the cause by consent, his name did not appear in the decree. Upon an application by him for a re-hearing of the cause—Held, that he was not entitled to have the cause re-heard, not being a party to the proceedings.—Handcock v. Delacour, 7 I. Jur. 252. (C.)

9. A petition was filed under the Ren. Lease. Conv. Act, in which the petitioner alleged that no demand had been made on him under the Tenantry Act. The respondent, though served with notice, neglected to appear on the hearing. An order for a f.f. grant was made. The Court allowed the petition to be re-heard, and varied its order, on an affidavit by the respondent, showing that the petitioner had suppressed a letter addressed to him by the respondent several years before, which might be held to be a demand under the Tenantry Act.

Waiver of a demand, if intended to be relied on by a petitioner, should be put in issue by the petition, and not by an affidavit in reply.—Ex parte Bull, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 332. (R.)

10. Cases decided in the Court of Appeal in Chancery are not to be re-heard.—Falkiner v. Hornidge, 9 I. C. R. 168. (C.A.)

11. A Judge of the L. E. Court disallowed E.'s claim on the schedule of incumbrances, and placed M.'s claim before W.'s. E. on appeal, abandoned all question of the validity of M.'s claim, and obtained a decree establishing his own claim on the schedule. W. withdrew his appeal. E., finding that the validity of M.'s claim would not be disputed, as he expected it would be in W.'s appeal, sought to have his original appeal re-heard, so far as it related to the validity of M.'s claim. Held, that the whole appeal must be re-heard.—Eyre v. McDowell, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 50. (C.A.)

12. The 98th G. O., 1843, limiting the time for applying to amend a decree to six days after the decree has been pronounced, will be construed strictly; the only remedy is by petition to re-hear.—O'Neill v. Immes, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 208. (C.)

13. A motion to re-hear an order or decision must be made within three months, and liberty must be obtained before notice of the re-hearing is served. The application for liberty to re-hear may be made ex parte.—In re Johnstone's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 36. (L.E.C.)

14. The Masters have jurisdiction to re-hear causes referred to them under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act; but have only the same power and authority, and are bound in the same manner as the Court, in respect to the period within which causes may be re-heard. After the time limited by the 30th sec. of the Act, the Masters have jurisdiction to give leave to re-hear a cause, only upon being satisfied that 'substantial grounds probably exist for such re-hearing, and for the delay in bringing the same.

A decree was made in June 1855 in an administration suit. In July 1858 the petitioner was informed of the necessity of rectifying it. In 1859 he obtained leave to file a supplemental petition in the nature of a bill of review, which was dismissed without prejudice in Feb. 1860. In May 1860 he obtained leave to re-hear the original cause. Held, that the Master had not jurisdiction to make the order, having regard to the unaccounted for delay which had taken place.

Observations on the practice in the Master's office in administration suits.—Nason v. Peard, 12 I. C. R. 30. (R.)—[Overruled: Sloan v. M'Callin, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 201. (C.A.)]

1. The M. R. has jurisdiction to re-hear cause petitions heard before himself, within the limits and restrictions contained in the 30th sec. of the Ch. (Ir.) Reg. Act.

A petition was filed for an injunction and an account of the profits of a coal mine. On the 27th of May a decree granted the injunction, but not the account. On the 21st of June an action at law was brought for the profits, but stayed by injunction on the 4th of July. An order for a re-hearing was granted on a motion made early in Nov.—Sloan v. M'Callen, 13 I. C. R. 357. (R.)

2. Semble—When a cause has been sent by the Lord Chancellor to the Rolls Court, and has been heard before his Honor, no practice exists by which he can re-hear it.—Sloan v. M'Callin, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 201. (C.A.)

3. The Masters have not jurisdiction to re-hear causes referred to them under the 15th section.

Nason v. Peard, 12 I. C. R. 30 (R.), is overruled by Sloan v. M'Callin, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 201 (C.A.); Cooke v. Franklin, 16 I. C. R. 469. (R.)

LXXX. REJOINDER.

[See G. O. (1867), 83.]

4. In a suit to appoint new trustees, the Court permitted the replication and rejoinder to be withdrawn, and the bill amended, by making the infant child of the ptf.s, born after issue joined, a deft.—Gavacan v. Brophy, 2 Jo. 629. (E.E.)

5. A rejoinder falsely traversing matter of inducement, contained in a replication to a plea to a sci. fa. upon a receiver's recognizance, taken off the file, with costs.—The Queen v. Foot, 1 I. C. R. 9. (C.)

LXXX.* REPLEVIN.

6. To warrant a party in issuing a writ of replevin, he should have been in clear and unequivocal possession of the thing replevied, when it was taken. A party, issuing the writ under improper circumstances, will be attached for contempt; the writ will be quashed; and the goods ordered to be restored.—Comerford v. Blake, 2 I. E. R. 176. (C.)

LXXXI. REPLICATION.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 68, 85: G. O. (1867), 82, 83, 123, 138, 256.]

7. After replication, a cause cannot be set down without giving deft. an opportunity to examine witnesses.—O'Reilly v. Patterson, Hay. & J. 210. (E.E.)

8. If the bill be amended, and notice given that the ptf. does not require an answer to the amendments, the deft., if he desires to answer them, must do so within the time allowed for answering when an answer is required. In such a case the ptf. acts irregularly in filing a replication before he has returned to the deft. his copy of the bill, amended. An answer filed after such a replication is irregular.—Cathcart v. Hewson, H. & J. 540. (E.E.)

9. There having been a decree to sell the whole lands, a reference to settle conditions of sale of a moiety was refused; because when a good title can be made to one moiety only, the Court cannot, on motion, direct that moiety only to be sold. The proper course is, to set down the cause for further directions.—Piers v. P., S. & Sc. 414. (R.)

10. The name of a deft., a femme covert, having been omitted by mistake from a replication, the ptf.s. were permitted to amend it by inserting her name; but a motion for liberty to insert it nunc pro tunc, so as to speed the cause, was refused with costs.—Moore v. Creed, S. & Sc. 672. (R.)

11. All such notices and documents, as formerly should have been served through the Six Clerks, must now be served through the notice office. The copy of a replication served by ptf.'s solicitor on deft.'s solicitor is insufficient.—Cremm v. Howroyd, 1 I. E. R. 373. (R.)

12. An irregular replication, affecting to join issue with, amongst others, a deft. who had appeared, but had not answered, though he was only a formal party, is not a proceeding in the cause to save ptf.'s bill from being dismissed for want of prosecution.—M'Loughlin v. Reilly, 4 I. E. R. 175. (R.)

13. The replication should be filed against persons against whom process is prayed, only when they come within the jurisdiction.—Stephens v. O'Shaughnessy, 11 I. E. R. 279. (R.)

14. The Court will amend a replication, by altering the name, when issue has been joined with a person not a party to the record.—Rowland v. M'Donnell, 1 I. Jur. 195. (R.)

15. A rejoinder falsely traversing matter of inducement contained in a replication to a plea to a sci. fit. upon a receiver's recognition, taken off the file, with costs.—The Queen v. Foot, 1 I. C. R. 9. (C.)

1. It is not an objection to a replication in sci. fit., that it purports to be pleaded by the Queen, not by the Att.-Gen.—Reg. v. Bowen, 1 I. C. R. 241. (C.)

2. Whenever a plea alleges a will, the ptf. must file a replication.—In re Martin, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 214. (P.)

3. To a plea, denying that A. had died intestate, and propounding a will; the ptf., without serving notice, moved for leave to file special replications. Held, that the deft. should be served with two clear days' notice of the motion.—Meek v. M., 5 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (P.)

4. When a plea alleged that the will propounded in the declaration had been revoked by a later will, the date of which was not known, the provisions of which were inconsistent with those in the will alleged, and which had been given by the deceased to the ptf., the Court required a replication to be filed by the ptf.—Greer v. Waterson, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 418. (P.)

LXXXII. 1. Sale Judicial; when Directed; on what Terms; where to take place.

7. The Court will in proper cases refer it to the Remembrancer to settle conditions of sale.—Bennett v. Beamish, Jon. & Car. 178. (E.E.)

9. The Court will not set up a title, knowing it to be bad. When, therefore, the Court is apprised of a defect of such a nature, that, if it is of any importance, it must make the title not merely defective, but absolutely bad, the Court, though it may not deem the defect important, will not, by a condition of sale, preclude objection thereto.—Bennett v. Wheeler, 1 I. E. R. 18. (R.)

10. Though, in general, the Court will not give a decree to sell an equitable estate in lands, yet, if ptf. is not entitled to call for a conveyance of the legal estate, the Court will make such a decree.—Tremble v. Simpson, 6 I. E. R. 98. (E.E.)

11. Hearing for further directions; decree for a sale pronounced.—Simpson v. O'Sullivan, Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 89. (C.)

12. A mortgagor having been convicted of felony, the mortgaged premises were set up for sale under the decree; but subject to the conditions that the purchaser should not require the deed to be executed by the Att.-Gen.; nor the record of the conviction to be made up.—Anon., 4 I. E. R. 701. (E.E.)

13. The heir-at-law being an infant, the Court, in a suit by a simple contract creditor of the ancestor, in order to protect the infant's interests, abstained from giving the usual directions for a sale, until the cause came back for further directions; but such is not the regular course.—Lynch v. Joyce, 3 Dr. & War. 349. (C.)

1. The decree declared ptf.'s demand a charge on the lands. Liberty was given to all parties to apply as occasion might require. Afterwards, on motion, the Court directed a sale.—Watson v. Pim, Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 90. (C.)

2. The mortgagor having been convicted of felony, the mortgaged premises were set up to be sold under the decree, subject to the conditions that the purchaser should not require the deed to be executed by the Att.-Gen.; nor the record of conviction to be made up.—Anon., 4 I. E. R. 700. (E.E.)

3. An estate was set up for sale in two lots. One was sold; but no bidder appearing for the other, its sale was adjourned. The Court approved of the following condition of sale for it:—That the purchaser should not require original searches for judgments against any person against whom such searches had been already made at the instance of the purchaser of the lot already sold, but should be satisfied with compared and certified copies of such searches.—Fitzgerald v. Lane, 2 I. E. R. 447. (R.)

4. By settlement of 1812, lands were limited to J. for life; remainder to T. for life; remainder to children of T., as he should appoint; in default of appointment, equally. The lands were subject to a rentcharge in fee, vested in H., the daughter of J., which was to commence on his decease. On the marriage of H. with W., J. charged his life estate with an annuity of £50. It, together with the perpetual rentcharge, was settled to the uses of W. and H., and their issue. J. and T. subsequently granted to D. a rentcharge, issuing out of the lands, for the term of twenty years; and demised the lands to a trustee for a like term, to secure its payment. J. died. After his decease W. filed a bill against T., his wife, and their children (who were minors), for an account of the sum due to him on foot of the annuities, and for a receiver; and obtained a decree declaring that the arrears of the annuity of £50 were a charge on the lands. D. also filed a bill against the proper parties, for an account of the sum due to him on foot of his annuity, and for a sale of the term. A decree having been pronounced in that suit to take an account of prior incumbrances, W. proved under it his demand in his own cause. In 1829 a decree was pronounced in D.'s cause, for a sale of the inheritance, and for payment thereof of the sum due to W., on foot of the annuity of £50; and a day to show cause was given to the minors. W. purchased the lands sold under that decree. Upon a bill of review by the children of T. charging that the decree of 1829 was erroneous, and that it, and the sale thereunder, had been concerted by fraud, which was not proved Held, that the decree was erroneous, as it directed the inheritance to be sold for payment of a sum which only affected the life estate of J., and the sale was declared to be a sale of the life estate of T. only.

Costs of a bill of review and reversal given to the ptf., who succeeded in the suit.—Talbot v. Minnett, 6 I. E. R. 83. (E.E.)

5. A condition of sale—that the purchaser shall not be at liberty to investigate the right of the lessor in a lease for lives renewable for ever, which was decreed to be sold, to grant the same—will not be granted. But the Court will refer it to the Remembrancer to settle a condition of sale, that the purchaser shall not require the production by the vendors of the title of the lessor.—Lahey v. Bell, 6 I. E. R. 122. (E.E.)

6. When the agreement of the parties to a loan is, that the money shall be repaid by the creditor retaining the rents of certain lands of which he is tenant to the debtor, a sale of those lands will not be decreed.—Maguire v. O'Reilly, 9 I. E. R. 335; 3 Jon. & L. 224. (C.)

7. When a second incumbrancer's demand would exhaust the entire fund in a creditor's suit, the Court refused to allow him to pay off the first incumbrance and take a conveyance without the expense of a sale; but, all parties consenting, referred it to the Master to ascertain the value of the debt and estate, and if it would not be beneficial to have a sale, directed the conveyance to be made as asked.—Lynch v. Kelly, 9 I. E. R. 342; 3 Jon. & L. 628. (C.)

8. In proceeding under the 138th G. Rule of 1843, the practice is to require common, and not negative, searches to be taken out for the purpose of being laid before counsel, with the abstract of title, before it is laid before and approved of by the Master.

Costs of negative searches for that purpose will be disallowed in taxation.

The ptf.'s solicitor will not in the first instance, i. e., prior to the sale, be allowed to charge for copies of deeds, &c., appearing in the abstract.—Hutton v. Foster, 2 I. C. R. 340. (R.)

9. A creditor who has obtained a receiver under the Judgment Act is a necessary answering party in a cause seeking a sale of the lands. The receiver cannot be extended from the matter to the cause, unless the creditor has filed his answer, and has had notice of the motion to extend.

But when it is sought to extend a receiver from one matter to another, or from a matter to a cause, in which a receiver only is prayed for, the debtor only, and not the creditor who has obtained the receiver, should be served with notice of the motion.—[Walsh v. W., 11 I. E. R. 603, observed on.]—Le Grand v. O'Neill, 2 I. C. R. 569. (R.)

10. When the validity of an instrument under which the petitioners have obtained an order for sale is questioned, the Court will not consider that question; but will stay the proceedings, imposing terms upon the party to proceed elsewhere.—In re Gerrard's Trusts, 6 I. Jur. 19. (I.E.C.)

LXXXII. 1. a. Sale Judicial, ordered by the Court of Chancery.

1. When a ptf. obtains liberty to bid, the management of the sale will be taken from his solicitor.—Drought v. Jones, Fl. & K. 316. (R.)

2. The saving in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, of the rights of incumbrancers prior to the 1st of Nov. 1840, is solely for their protection. Therefore, in a suit by a judgment creditor to sell the conuzor's lands in his lifetime, he cannot rely on the existence of such incumbrances if the owners of them do not object to the sale.

Semble—This Court will sell an estate subject to incumbrances.—Kieran v. Corr, 11 I. E. R. 514. (C.)

3. A purchaser under the Bankrupt Court is bound by the abstract of title posted in the Court; by the particular or contract of sale; and by the advertisement thereof—all three combined; and will not be discharged because of unwritten or casual misrepresentations made out of Court. Notice of lease is notice of covenants. Purchases under bankruptcy materially differ from purchases under a decree in Ch., where there is no abstract of title posted.—In re Kidd; ex parte Kirk, 3 I. Jur. 354.

4. The Court will, on petition, grant an order for the sale of lands charged with poor-rates when civil-bill decrees for payment have been made against the respondent.—The Guardians of Fermoey Union v. King, 5 I. Jur. 74. (C.)

5. The Court of Ch. will not sell the arrears of rent due to the receiver by the tenants of lands in the possession of the Court, after those lands have been conveyed to a purchaser, if any of the parties object.

Semble—That the Court has full jurisdiction to make the sale, if such a course of proceeding be expedient, and all parties consent.—Hoops v. The Earl of Kingston, 5 I. Jur. 333. (C.)

6. Order made that the Master should let certain lands unless the parties in possession showed good cause to the contrary; and that on showing such cause they should state how they held the lands.—Peile v. Bermingham, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 274. (R.)

LXXXII. 1. b. Sale Judicial ordered by the I. E. Court, or L. E. Court.

7. Form of order for the sale of lands under the I. E. Act, at the petition of an owner, tenant for life, subject to incumbrances, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, remainder to himself in fee; there being no issue, and notice having been served on the surviving trustee to preserve contingent remainders.—Ex parte Lord Blayney, 11 I. E. R. 183. (R.)

8. Cause was shown against a conditional order being made absolute; but in consequence of the deeds being in the possession of the petitioner, the party showing cause was not in a condition to prove his rights. The Commissioners would not order the deeds to be lodged in Court; but made the conditional order absolute in the first instance, upon which the petitioner would be compelled to lodge them.—In re Orpen, 3 I. Jur. 208. (I.E.C.)

9. The power given to the L. E. Court, under the 21 & 22 Vic., c. 72, s. 72, is discretionary, and exists both in the case of an incumbered and an unincumbered estate.

The consent of the landlord is not necessary; but the Court requires it to be clearly shown that his interest is not in any appreciable degree made less secure, less enjoyable, or less marketable than before. If there is any reason to believe that the petition has been presented, not for a bona fide sale, but to obtain an apportionment, the Court will make such an order as will apportion the rent only if the proceeding be duly prosecuted, and the sale duly had.—In re Conyn's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 330. (L.E.C.)

LXXXII. 2. Who may Purchase at Sales Judicial.

10. A receiver cannot, without special leave from the Court, buy the lands over which he is receiver.—Aken v. Bond, 3 I. E. R. 365; Fl. & K. 196. (R.)

11. It is irregular for a party in the cause to bid at the sale of lands set up under the decree, without having previously obtained the permission of the Court so to do. And the Court will not, in such case, on a certificate of his being the highest and best bidder, declare him the purchaser, unless special circumstances excuse his irregularity.—Byrne v. Lafferty, 8 I. E. R. 47. (R.)

12. An application that a party in the suit may bid at the sale must be on notice.—Clarke v. Dobbin, 8 I. E. R. 111. (R.)

13. It is contrary to the practice and policy of this Court to permit the receiver in the cause to bid at the sale of the lands over which he had been appointed.—Anderson v. A., 9 I. E. R. 23. (R.)

14. Quære—Whether a deft., who has not the carriage of a decree, may bid at the sale in the Master's office without an order permitting him to do so?—Munns v. Feris, 11 I. E. R. 253. (R.)

15. Leave given to the ptf. to bid at the sale, without taking from him the carriage of the decree, when he was the first incumbrancer, and the property clearly insufficient to pay his demand.—Steele v. Devonport, 11 I. E. R. 339. (R.)

1. The ptf. was allowed to bid, and at the same time to retain the carriage of the proceedings; the only other solicitor in the cause having, on a previous sale, raised objections to the title, and obtained the discharge of a purchaser.—Bridge v. Egan, 1 I. Jur. 43. (R.)

2. The Court will not permit a solicitor who has acted in a cause to bid, though he discharge himself.—Keogh v. K., 1 I. Jur. 226. (R.)

3. The solicitor for X., ptf. in a suit to raise a charge on lands, purchased, in the name of a trustee, the lands, at a sale under the decree, which was conducted by him in a manner that showed either great negligence or a design to depreciate the property, and the proceeds of which were insufficient to discharge his demands for costs, without paying anything to X. The sale was declared void, on a bill filed by X. sixteen years afterwards, without any proof of its being at an under-value.

Semble—A solicitor having the conduct of a sale under a decree, is under an absolute incapacity to purchase at it.

Relief in such cases is given after a great lapse of time, and when there is a deception on the Court. Semble—There is no fixed period of limitation to bar relief.—Atkins v. Delmege, 12 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

4. Leave will be given to a creditor having carriage of the proceedings for sale of an estate, to bid at the sale; but he must first transfer the carriage of the proceedings to some other creditor, whom the Master shall direct.

On a motion by a creditor for leave to bid at a sale, if another creditor appear, and apply for the carriage of the proceedings, he will be entitled to his costs of appearing on such motion, if the Master afterwards give him the carriage of the proceedings.—Molony v. Scollard, 5 I. Jur. 204. (R.)

5. A., a solicitor, having a charge on real estate, caused a bill to be filed, in his partner's name, to raise the charge. A sale having been decreed, A., without the leave of the Court, purchased the lands in the name of B., to whom the conveyance was made.

The fact that A. was the real purchaser was never disclosed to the Master or the parties in the cause; and several orders were made on applications, in the name of B., calculated to lead the Court to believe that he was the real purchaser, though the whole of the purchase-money was paid by A. The Court, after the expiration of nineteen years, and after the death of A. and his partner, set aside the sale, although it was not proved to have been fraudulent or at an under-value.

It is a settled rule of the Court that the ptf. or his solicitor cannot bid at the sale under the decree without the leave of the Court. Non-compliance with that rule will vitiate the sale.

If a solicitor or trustee secretly purchase in the name of another, at a sale under the Court, the sale is void.

When there has been concealment, a violation of the rule of the Court, or the sale was void, laches or lapse of time will not preclude relief.

Form of decree setting aside a purchase by a solicitor, and directing accounts, when no fraud or under-value was proved.—Popham v. Exham, 10 I. C. R. 440. (R.)

LXXXII. 3. Vendor's Duties and Liabilities.

6. In sales under decrees, as in private sales, ptf. or vendor is not bound to furnish the purchaser with a fee for counsel, with the abstract of title, unless by special condition. The purchaser, if he requires the opinion of counsel, must take it at his own expense; but he will have only a qualified property in the opinion until the sale is complete.—Alexander v. Crosbie, 2 I. E. R. 141. (R.)

7. When a purchaser has been discharged on a report of bad title, it is the inheritor's right to have the estate again set up for sale. Therefore, the Court will not, against his desire, substitute, in place of the discharged purchaser a person who offers to take the estate at the same price, without objecting to the title.—O'Connor v. Bernard, 3 I. E. R. 496. (E.E.)

LXXXII. 4. Purchaser's Rights, Liabilities, and Duties; Respecting the Title.

[G. O. of 1843-138, 139.]

8. A decree to sell lands did not direct that they should be sold subject to dower which one deft. had recovered at law; but the Remembrancer himself set them up subject thereto. Held, that the sale was not irregular; that the Remembrancer has a right to ascertain if a bidding be bona fide, and to refuse to accept a bidding which he considers not bona fide.—Eyre v. Lynch, Hay & J. 505. (E.E.)

9. A purchaser under a decree, who has gone into possession, cannot prevent the purchase-money being paid out, by alleging that the landlord claims title to the premises because of a forfeiture, and threatens to bring an ejectment for them; the Court having previously overruled an exception, taken by the purchaser to the report of good title, founded upon that defect in the title.—Sparrow v. Cooper, 1 Jo. 72. (E.E.)

10. A purchaser under a decree is entitled to the rents of lands purchased from the gale day next preceding the payment of the purchase-money into the bank; and to have all the outgoings of the estate cleared off up to that time.—Montgomery v. Coslett, 2 Jo. 174. (E.E.)

1. The Court does not insure to a purchaser of lands sold under its decree the rents which accrued due between the lodgment of the purchase-money in Court and the execution of the injunction to put him into possession, except when the lands are in the possession of a receiver of the Court. An application, to have the rents paid out of the purchase-money, refused with costs.—Nunn v. Mahon, 2 Jo. 181. (E.E.)

2. A purchaser under a decree will not be held to his purchase, unless all parties having judgments, &c., appearing on record against the vendor, whether prior or subsequent to the claim to raise which the bill was filed, are brought before the Court so as to bind their rights.—Piers v. P., 1 Dr. & Wal. 265. (C.)—[Affg. S & Sc. 379. (R.)]

3. A purchaser under a decree, under colour of an injunction to put him into possession, dispossessed persons who claimed adversely to the title of the parties to the cause. The Court granted a writ of restitution to restore them to the possession; and a reference to the officer to ascertain the amount of damages sustained by them in consequence of the ouster. The purchaser was ordered to pay those damages, with full costs; the applicants undertaking not to bring an action.—Anderson v. Barry, 2 Jon. 631. (E.E.)

4. The decree in a suit, to raise charges created by will, directed the sale of lands, the legal estate in which was vested in an adult trustee in trust for minors. The trustee and c. q. trusts were parties to the suit. A day to show cause was given to the latter. A purchaser under the decree was compelled to take the title.—Kirby v. O'Hea, 2 Jon. 635. (E.E.)

5. The gale days being 1st May, and 1st Nov., and the purchaser having lodged one-fourth of the purchase-money on the 28th April, and the remaining three-fourths on the 1st May, though the sale was not confirmed until afterwards—Held, that he was entitled to the rents due on the 1st May.—Scott v. Rothe, 1 I. E. R. 105. (R.)

6. When a promissory note, payable with interest generally, has been lodged in Court, in part payment of the purchase-money, that will be regarded as a contract between the parties out of Court; and the word "interest" means legal interest, not the Court rate of interest, according to G. O. 204.—Gibbons v. Berry, S. & Sc. 158. (R.)

7. When a purchaser moves on consent to lodge a promissory note in part payment of his purchase-money, the consent and note should both specify the rate of interest payable on the note.—O'Connor v. Richards, S. & Sc. 160. (R.)

8. If lands be leased by the inheritor after a decree to account has been pronounced against him, they will be set up, in the first instance, subject to the lease; and if they do not produce sufficient to pay the incumbrances decreed, with costs, they will then be set up discharged of the lease.—Barrett v. Birmingham, S. & Sc. 678. (R.)

9. A tenant under the Court for seven years pending a cause, whom the purchaser's injunction has dispossessed in the interval between two gale days, is bound to pay rent for the period during which he occupied after the last gale day.

It will be referred to the Remembrancer to ascertain the amount of such rent, having regard to the season of the year when the broken gale occurred; and to the nature of the demised premises.—Jameson v. Farrer, 2 I. E. R. 513. (E.E.)

10. A purchaser who, having lodged only one-fourth of his purchase-money, was discharged upon a report of bad title—Held, entitled to the costs incurred by him in investigating the title, but not to interest on the one-fourth.—Feely v. Kilkenny, Fl. & K. 456. (R.)

11. A purchaser, discharged upon a re-sale under an order opening the biddings, is not entitled, against ptf. or his solicitor, to the costs which he may have incurred in investigating the title, there not having been any reference to the Master to report touching good title.—Sullivan v. Bayley, Fl. & K. 460. (R.)

12. The omission from a rental, of a reservation of mines, minerals, and of a right of entry to search for them, is a valid objection to the title.—Barton v. Lord Downes, Fl. & K. 505. (R.)

13. When an estate for life was sold under a decree, and the tenant for life died after lodgment of one-fourth of the purchase-money and obtaining the rule nisi, but before the sale was confirmed—Held, that the purchaser was bound to complete his purchase.—Vesey v. Elwood, Fl. & K. 667. (R.)

14. When, in consequence of a defect in the title to lands sold under a decree, the purchaser is discharged, he is entitled to the full amount of his purchase-money, interest, and taxed costs, without deduction. Therefore, when the interest and costs are to be paid out of a fund consisting of rents of the lands, the discharged purchaser is entitled to an order, including the amount of the usher's poundage payable in respect of the sum which he is entitled to receive out of the fund.—Johnson v. Reardon, 3 I. E. R. 200. (R.)

15. If a good title cannot be given to the purchaser under the decree, without the aid of a supplemental suit, he will, if so desiring it, be discharged, as in case of a title absolutely bad.—Plumptre v. O'Dell, 4 I. E. R. 602. (R.)

16. Semble—That when the estate bargained for has been in its creation voidable, it lies upon the purchaser, objecting to the title upon that ground, to show that it has been avoided.

When the validity of the title depends upon the operation of deeds and acts of the parties upon legal estates, the purchaser is entitled to have the opinion of a Court of Law, before the title can be forced upon him.—Massey v. Batwell, 2 Con. & L. 413; 4 Dr. & War. 56. (C.)

1. By deed of 1709, the lands of S., together with twelve other denominations, were conveyed to J., subject to a rent of £126, which was to cease upon payment of £1800. In the will of J., dated 1717, and in family settlements executed in 1756 and 1778, no notice was taken of the existence of this rent. In 1841, S. was sold under a decree in a foreclosure suit. In the rental and abstract the lands were described as fee-simple, and in a declaration made by the deft., under 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 62, he stated, that no part of the rent had ever been paid by him or any of his ancestors out of S. There was no evidence to show that the rent had not been paid out of the other denominations. Held, that there were not sufficient grounds to presume that the rent was either released or extinguished, and that it was a valid objection to the title.—Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 448. (R.)

2. The omission in a rental, of a reservation of mines, minerals, and of a right of entry to search for them, is a valid objection to the title.—Barton v. Lord Downes, Fl. & K. 505. (R.)

3. When a party objects to a Master's report as to title, his proper course is to file exceptions, and to set them down in the cause list for hearing.

A ptf. cannot, after proceeding before the Master on a reference as to title, rely on previous acts of the purchaser, as binding him to his purchase, notwithstanding a report of bad title.

A purchaser is not bound to abide by the opinion of his counsel.—Harewood v. Bland, Fl. & K. 540. (R.)

4. A ptf.'s solicitor was held personally liable for the costs of a reference to the Master to enquire and report whether a purchaser was entitled to any and what compensation by reason of a misdescription in the rental, caused by his neglect in not examining the tenants' leases lodged in the Master's office.—Taylor v. Gorman, Fl. & K. 567. (R.)

5. By a lease dated in 1777, lands were demised for three lives therein named, "or the longest lives of them, or whatever life or lives shall for ever or hereafter be nominated or appointed, added or inserted, on the back of this indenture." There was no express covenant for perpetual renewal. The lessee's interest was sold to a purchaser under a decree, as one held under a lease renewable for ever. Upon exceptions to report of bad title—Held, that the title was not such a one as the Court would compel a purchaser to take.—Sheppard v. Doolan, Fl. & K. 598. (R.); on appeal, 5 I. E. R. 6. (C.)

6. A purchaser, discharged by reason of bad title, is entitled to the costs of counsel's opinion upon the title, and of the preparation of the case for counsel.—Barton v. Lord Downes, Fl. & K. 633. (R.)

7. The ptf.'s attorney will be permitted to make copies of deeds lodged in the office, for the purpose of making out title, and will not be obliged to take out office copies thereof.

Semble—That an order of the Court is necessary for the purpose.—Bradshaw v. Short, 3 I. E. R. 198. (E.E.)

8. A purchaser under the decree of the Court took several objections to the title, in some of which he failed, and succeeded in others. Held, that he was entitled to the costs properly and necessarily incurred by him in investigating the title, after deducting thereout the costs occasioned by the objections in which he failed.—Brown v. Lynch, 4 I. E. R. 59. (E.E.)

9. A party quarrelling with the report of bad title, should move to set it aside, not to send it back to the officer to be reviewed; and the notice of motion ought to state the grounds upon which the party seeks to set aside the report.—Vincent v. Thwaites, 4 I. E. R. 689. (E.E.)

10. In the published rental of premises advertised to be sold under decree, one portion was described as subject to "a lease for sixty-eight years from the year 1778," at the yearly rent of £9. 13s. 10d., which was very inadequate. The sale took place in Nov. 1840, the purchaser went into possession in Nov. 1841. In Jan. 1842, he heard that the lease in question was misdescribed in the rental, but took no step. On the 12th of March 1842, the lease in question, with the title-deeds (which had been lodged in the Master's office for the purposes of the sale, &c.), were handed over to him, and the lease turned out to be for sixty-eight years from 1796, and a further term of seven years added by endorsement. He now (3rd May 1842) moved for a reference to the Master to enquire and report whether he was entitled to any and what compensation by reason of the misdescription? Held, that he was entitled to compensation, notwithstanding the lateness of his application; and that the ptf.'s solicitor should pay the costs of the reference, and of this motion.—Taylor v. Gorman, 4 I. E. R. 550. (R.)

11. In cases of specific performance, the Court will, for the future, add to the reference as to whether a good title can be made, a direction to the Master to enquire and report at what time a good title could have been shown; as interest on the purchase-money will be payable from that date.—Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 2 Dr. & War. 43; 1 Con. & L. 181. (C.)

12. Lands were let under the Court for seven years, pending a judgment creditor's petition.

Before the term expired, the lands were sold out of Court, with the petitioner's consent, to pay their demands. The tenant gave possession to the purchaser. Held, that the tenant was bound to pay rent for the interval during which he continued in possession, from the last gale day to that on which he gave possession to the purchaser.—Jackson v. J., 5 I. E. R. 591. (E.E.)

1. A., tenant in tail, executed a settlement in 1809, on the marriage of his eldest son, B., with C., and thereby conveyed his estates to trustees for 100 years, to secure C.'s jointure, on a contingency then mentioned, and to secure an annuity for A.'s wife; subject thereto, the lands to A. for life, remainder to trustees for 200 years, to secure a sum of £3000 for A.'s two remaining children, T. and J.; subject thereto to B. for life, remainder to trustees for a term, to secure portions for his children; subject thereto to his first and other sons successively in tail. B. was a party to this settlement, and entered on A.'s death. In 1811, on the marriage of J., his share was, by a settlement to which A. and B. were parties, partly settled for her benefit, and partly assigned to her intended husband's father, who subsequently assigned his interest over; and in 1823, those assignees filed a bill to raise this charge. In 1834, a receiver was appointed, who continued in receipt of the rents from that time. In 1837, a decree on sequestration was obtained against B. and C. and their eldest son, D.; and in 1839 there was a decree for a sale of the 200 years' term, and all proper parties were directed to join in the conveyance. In 1839, D., without the concurrence of B., executed a disentailing deed. B. died in 1840, and D. conveyed the lands, subject to the term, to R. and his heirs, who conveyed the lands for value to the widow of B. Held, that a purchaser, under the decree, of the term, declining to take a case to a Court of Law, was bound to accept the title; the settlement of 1809 having been only voidable, but not void, and being binding on B., who derived benefits thereunder; and having been sufficiently confirmed by D.; and that judgments entered up against B. and D., since 1823, did not bind the term; and that B.'s widow, having purchased pendente lite, was bound by the decree of 1839.—Massey v. Batwell, 2 Con. & L. 413; 3 Dr. & War. 56. (C.)

2. When the purchaser of an interest sold under a decree of the Court, acquires by that means a knowledge of a defect in the title to that interest, and afterwards buys up the estate of the person interested in taking advantage of that defect, the Court will not allow him to rely on the doctrine that a purchaser is not obliged to take a doubtful title, in support of an objection to the title founded on that defect.

Quare—Whether, if the objection were valid, the Court will allow him to rely on it?—Sheppard v. Doolan, 5 I. E. R. 6; 3 Dr. & War. 1. (C.)—[See 4 I. E. R. 654; Fl. & K. 598. (R.)]

3. Lands held under a lease for lives renewable for ever, were, by marriage settlement, conveyed to trustees to the use of G., the husband, for life; remainder (subject to jointure and portions for younger children) to the first and other sons of the marriage in quasi tail. After the death of G., the younger children filed a bill to raise their portions. In 1838 there was a final decree for a sale, under which, in 1843, the lands were sold. In 1842, a renewal of the lease was executed to the deft., the quasi tenant in tail, against whom, pending the suit, several judgments had been obtained, of which no notice had been taken. The purchaser objected to the title because of those judgments. Held, on exception to the Master's report of good title, that the renewal of 1842 ought to have been to the trustees of the settlement; that its having been to the deft. made him a mere trustee of the legal estate upon the trusts of the settlement; and that the judgments in question did not constitute a valid objection to the title.—Leake v. L., 5 I. E. R. 361. (R.)

4. Before a purchaser under decree was put into possession, rents to which he was entitled became due, and payments were made by the tenants to the receiver. Held, that the payments made after the rents to which the purchaser was entitled had become payable, should be applied in payment of those rents, and not of the arrears of rent previously due.—Hargrave v. Holland, 5 I. E. R. 169. (R.)—[Overruled: Doorley v. Power, 11 I. E. R. 577.]

5. A life estate was sold by the Court, and the life dropped before the sale could have been confirmed. Held, that the purchaser was bound by his bidding in the Master's office, and should complete his purchase.—Vesey v. Etwood, 5 I. E. R. 184. (C.)

6. In England the money is not required to be lodged until the title is approved of, and there are frequent applications made to the Court there for liberty to bring in the purchase-money, so that the purchaser may be entitled to the rents from the date of the lodgment. The question, whether the purchaser is entitled to interest on his purchase-money, is also frequently debated there.—Vincent v. Thwaites, 5 I. E. R. 528. (E.E.)

7. Lands were sold under a decree of the 30th of April 1840, one-fourth of the purchase-money deposited, a conditional order to confirm the sale, and subsequently the remaining three-fourths lodged in bank to the credit of the cause; all upon the following day. Order to confirm the sale made absolute on the 12th of May. Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to the rents from the 1st of Nov., the gale-day next preceding the day of sale.—Vincent v. Thwaites, 2 I. E. R. 426. (E.E.)

8. It appeared that the receiver had passed his final account in 1829, when there was a small sum due to him; that the purchaser under the decree in the cause was put into possession the same year; and that the receiver had not received any of the rents since his last account. The Court granted an order to vacate the receiver's recognizance, although he had not been formally discharged. The injunction to put the purchaser into possession amounts to a discharge of the receiver.—Anon., 2 I. E. R. 416. (E.E.)

1. A motion to invest the one-fourth of the purchase-money in $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. stock, must be upon notice.—Lee v. Poole, 2 I. E. R. 419. (E.E.)

2. The purchaser of lands sold under a decree is entitled to a map and survey of them, prepared during the progress, and for the purposes of the cause.—Jephson v. Minton, Flan. & K. 95. (R.)

3. When a purchaser, having lodged the one-fourth of his purchase-money, refused to lodge the three-fourths, unless the abstract of title were first delivered to him, and no report of good title had been obtained—Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to the abstract until the confirmation of the sale.

The deposit of one-fourth of the purchase-money made by the purchaser, who afterwards refuses to complete the purchase, can in no case be forfeited, until the Master has made his report of good title; and even then it will require a strong case to induce the Court to declare it forfeited. The more proper course is, for the ptf. to move for a re-sale, and that the deposit be retained to indemnify the estate the costs and consequences of such re-sale.—Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 189. (R.)

4. A purchaser of an estate sold under a decree of the Court of Ch., who confirmed his sale on the 28th April, but whose purchase-deed was not executed until the Dec. following, is liable for the tithe composition which accrued due in Nov., the lands being in the occupation of tenants from year to year.

A person who has been declared the purchaser on a sale under the Court of Ch., has, in the contemplation of a Court of Equity, after the confirmation of the report, an estate in the lands.

A purchaser of an estate buys it subject to the outgoing incidents to it.—Stewart v. Alexander, 2 Jo. 530. (E.E.)

5. The purchaser of a reversionary interest under the decree of the Court, is bound to pay interest at the rate of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the three-fourths of his purchase-money, from the date of the report of good title, he not having been guilty of any laches up to that period, to the date of the lodgment.

The rule is the same if the property be in its nature reversionary, though there be a small present profit arising from it.

Upon obtaining the report of good title it is the duty of the purchaser to bring in the remainder of his purchase-money; and if he is afterwards discharged on account of defect of title, he will be entitled to interest thereupon; he is therefore properly chargeable with interest from that time.—Hutchinson v. Cathcart, 1 I. E. R. 452; Jon. & C. 260. (E.E.)

6. A purchaser of lands sold under the decree of the Court, pursuant to a rental which stated that they were demised for a term therein mentioned, is entitled to confirmation, if it should appear that they are demised for a longer term; but he may, by his acts, waive his title thereto.—Horner v. Williams, Jon. & Ca. 274. (E.E.)

7. When lands, let under the Court for seven years pending the cause, are sold under the decree, and the tenancy is determined before the expiration of the term, the purchaser having notice of the tenancy at the time of the sale, and going into possession, is not entitled to the crops sown by the late tenant, and growing on the lands. The late tenant is entitled to emblements, and is not affected by the custom of the country as to the outgoing tenant's right after the expiration of his lease.

Semble—In such a case, if the purchaser insist on retaining the crops, the Court will direct a reference, at his expense, as to the value of the crop, and the damage sustained by the late tenant in relation thereto.—Creed v. C., 3 I. E. R. 207. (R.)

8. In a purchase of a life interest under the Court, when the life dropped after the rule nisi to confirm the report of the sale had been obtained, and before it could be made absolute—Held, that the purchaser was bound to pay the purchase-money.

In sales under the Court the title of the purchaser has relation back to the time of bidding, as in sales out of the Court it has to the date of the contract.—Vesey v. Elwood, 2 Con. & L. 47; 3 Dr. & War. 74. (C.)

9. A purchaser cannot be attached for not completing his purchase until after a report of good title has been obtained.

The purchaser of a life estate under a decree, having lodged one-fourth of the purchase-money, served the rule nisi to confirm the sale on the 22nd of Jan. The eight days limited by the rule expired on the 3rd of Feb., and no cause was shown. The tenant for life died on the 12th of Feb., and before the sale had been absolutely confirmed, or the remainder of the purchase-money had been paid in, the purchaser refused to proceed, the estate having determined. Held, that as the sale might have been confirmed, the purchaser, although, not guilty of any unreasonable delay, was bound and liable to the risks and losses of the estate, provided a good title could have been made. The Court, therefore, refused his application for the one-fourth of the purchase-money lodged by him; and ordered, on the ptf.'s motion, that it should be referred to the Master to enquire, &c., whether a good title could have been made at the time of the sale, or at any and what time previous to the death of the tenant for life.—Vincent v. Going, 3 I. E. R. 480. (R.)

This order was reversed by Lord Plunket, on appeal.—Ibid, 489, n.

1. When the purchaser has been discharged upon a report of bad title, it is the right of the inheritor to have the estate again set up to be sold. Therefore, the Court will not, against his desire, substitute in the place of the discharged purchaser a person who offers to take the estate at the same price, and not object to the title.—O'Connor v. Bernard, 3 I. E. R. 496. (E.E.)

2. A purchaser under the decree of the Court was discharged upon a report of bad title, and it was ordered that his deposit be paid back to him, without prejudice to his applying for the interest thereon, and his costs, when there should be a fund in Court. He died before either the costs were taxed, or a fund for their payment was realised. Held, that on a fund being afterwards realised, his personal representative was entitled to be paid thereout the interest and costs.

An order, awarding an attachment against the purchaser for not completing his purchase had been made. Thereupon he obtained an order of reference as to the title. Held, that he was not entitled to interest for the period intervening between the date of the lodgment of the deposit and the date of the order of reference, or to the costs incurred by him during that interval; and that the costs of the order for the attachment should be set off against the interest and costs due to him.—Mackay v. Orr, 3 I. E. R. 499. (E.E.)

3. When lands are sold under a decree, the purchaser is entitled to have all judgments paid out of the purchase-money satisfied upon record.

But when a judgment creditor filed a charge under the decree, to which the ptf. filed a discharge, relying on the Statute of Limitations, and nothing further having been done upon the charge, the Master's report did not find anything due on foot of the judgment.—Held, that notwithstanding the death of the judgment creditor, the purchaser under the decree was not entitled to have such judgment satisfied, nor the lands released from it by deed, as the filing of the charge made the creditor a quasi party, and bound him and his representatives by the decree.

When a judgment creditor comes in under a consent order after the final decree, and the Master finds against the judgment, as being barred by the Statute of Limitations, the Master's report must be made up and confirmed; otherwise the purchaser will have a right to have the judgment satisfied, or a release executed.—Fitzgerald v. Lane, 3 I. E. R. 339. (R.)

4. A purchaser under decree is not entitled to require, at the cost of the estate, a further opinion of counsel in favour of the title, besides that which he gets with the abstract under Lord Redesdale's rule. He may, if he pleases, take a further opinion; and, if afterwards discharged from the purchase by reason of defects of title discovered by such further opinion, he will be entitled to be repaid the reasonable costs incurred in obtaining it.—Barton v. Lord Downes, 4 I. E. R. 607; Fl. & K. 633. (R.)

5. A purchaser under a decree of the Court took several objections to the title, in some of which he failed, and succeeded in others.—Held, that he was entitled to the costs properly and necessarily incurred by him in investigating the title, after deducting thereout the costs occasioned by the objections in which he failed.—Brown v. Lynch, 4 I. E. R. 59. (E.E.)

6. A purchaser of lands sold under a decree is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money.—Blake v. B., 5 I. E. R. 596. (E.E.)

7. If the ptf., or a person standing in the situation of a ptf., purchases under the decree, the transaction is to be examined with the utmost strictness, and if the decree be reversed for error, the sale cannot be upheld. Talbott v. Minnett, 6 I. E. R. 83. (E.E.)

8. A purchaser under the decree of a Court of Equity, obtaining a conveyance of the legal estate, is not entitled to have, at the expense of the funds in the cause, a release from equitable incumbrancers, who were parties to, and paid under the decree.

Upon the sale of an estate, if there be an outstanding trust term, the vendor must (if required) have such term surrendered at his own expense; or, if the term be so circumstanced that, although the trusts have been fulfilled, it has never been assigned to attend the inheritance, the vendor must, if required, have it so assigned at his own expense; but if the term have been already assigned to attend, and the purchaser requires it to be further assigned to a trustee nominated by himself, such further assignment must be at the purchaser's expense.

The lands of B. and D. being subject to a jointure secured thereon by a trust term, by condition of sale it was stipulated that, without prejudice to the rights of the jointress, B. should be sold as if exclusively liable to the jointure, and D. as if exonerated therefrom; and that, to this end, the purchaser of D. should have from the purchaser of B. a deed of indemnity. The costs of the preparation of such deed must be borne by the vendor, the condition being silent on the subject.—Keatinge v. K., 6 I. E. R. 43. (R.)

9. Purchasers of an estate sold in several lots under decree, requiring to compare with the original deeds lodged in the Master's office, for the purposes of the sale, the copies furnished to them with the abstract of title, the Court ordered that the deeds should be handed over to the ptf.'s solicitor, he undertaking to re-lodge them after the comparison should be made; and that the ptf.'s solicitor should produce them in his office to the solicitors for the several purchasers, and permit them to compare the deeds with the copies furnished, or to be furnished, to them.—Reynolds v. R., 6 I. E. R. 75. (R.)

1. The tenants of the lands sold under the decree, refusing to give copies of the leases under which they claimed to hold the lands, the Court ordered them to produce their leases to the attorney for the ptf., to enable him to take compared copies thereof. Some of them having disobeyed that order, the Court, upon the parties in the cause and the purchaser undertaking to confirm the leases, ordered an attachment to issue against the tenants so refusing; same not to issue if the tenants produced their leases, and permitted copies thereof to be taken.—Scott v. Miller, 6 I. E. R. 120. (E.E.)

2. Form of order to the Master to deliver title deeds and documents to the ptf.'s solicitor to be deposited in the Bank of Ireland for the benefit of the several purchasers under the decree; and allowing the purchaser to compare copies with the original deeds.—Cunningham v. Hume, 6 I. E. R. 76, note. (R.)

3. Judgments entered pending a suit for the sale of an estate constitute no valid objection to the title.—Massey v. Batwell, 5 I. E. R. 382. (C.)

4. A., by will, after appointing lands to his eldest son, G., gave all the residue of his real estate among his six younger sons, subject to his debts and some charges. Shortly afterwards he obtained a conveyance of freehold property, and died without having altered or republished his will, leaving his eldest son of full age. Upon A.'s death in 1791, the six younger sons entered into possession of, inter alia, the after-acquired property, and so continued until the present time. G. died in 1819, leaving an infant heir. It did not appear that any claim was ever made on the part of G. during his life, or after his death by his heir-at-law, and the younger sons continued during the entire of such period in the undisturbed enjoyment of the property. In 1839 the premises were sold under a decree of the Court in a suit instituted by a judgment creditor of A., in which the infant heir was a deft. After this sale the heir died, and the suit was not revived against the next heir. The abstract of title stated all the above matters, and was verified by two affidavits, deposing as to the fact of the possession, and the receipt of rent by the younger sons. Held, upon objections to the title by the purchaser, that by the operation of 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, such a title had been created as the purchaser was bound to take.—Scott v. Nizon, 3 Dr. & War. 388; 6 I. E. R. 8. (C.)

5. A purchaser under a decree for a sale for the payment of equitable incumbrances, has not a right to have the estate released therefrom, the effect of the decree being to extinguish them as to the estate sold. He must have a conveyance of the legal estate discharged of all incumbrances, legal and equitable; but he is not entitled to any other evidence of the exoneration of the estate from equitable incumbrances extinguished by the decree, than such as the decree itself, and the proceedings under it, afford him.—Webber v. Jones, 6 I. E. R. 142. (R.)

6. A purchaser under the decree of this Court is not entitled to have his objections to the title disposed of before he brings in the whole of the purchase-money, and has the sale absolutely confirmed. If, after lodging one-fourth of the purchase-money, he delays to complete his purchase, the party having the carriage of the decree may obtain an order that he bring in the remaining three-fourths within a limited time, or, in default of so doing, that his one-fourth be forfeited, and that there be a re-sale. It is no objection to the application for such order, that there has not been any report upon, or reference as to, the title.

The purchaser under a decree in a creditor's suit, objected to the title, on the ground that there were outstanding judgments confessed by the deft. before the filing of the bill, which afterwards, pending the cause, were revived and redocketed under Moore's Act, and that they were not bound by the decree. The Master overruled the objection, being of opinion that the judgments in sci. fa. were to be considered as new and original judgments; that the first were gone, and that the others, having been obtained pendente lite, did not affect the title to be conveyed to the purchaser. Upon exceptions to the report of good title—Held, that they should be allowed; that the judgments in sci. fa. were not to be considered as creating new rights, but merely as revivals of rights under the original judgments; and that the purchaser's objection to the title should therefore be allowed.—Newman v. Fitzgerald, 6 I. E. R. 258. (R.)—[See Hawkes v. Swiney, ibid, 259, note.]

7. J. conveyed his real estate to trustees, to whom he was indebted, in trust to sell and pay themselves; to pay the surplus arising from the sale to J.; and to convey to him the residue of the lands (if any remained unsold); the receipt of the trustees to be sufficient discharge to a purchaser. The deed contained covenants for repayment of the money by a certain day, for good title, and quiet enjoyment. On a sale of the estate, under a decree to execute the trusts of the deed—Held, that judgments confessed by J., after the execution of the deed, and still outstanding, were not objections to the title.—Alexander v. Crosbie, 6 I. E. R. 518. (R.)

8. Though the Court will not, in general, give a decree for a sale of an equitable estate in lands, yet, if the ptf. is not entitled to call for a conveyance of the legal estate, it will make such decree.—Tremble v. Simpson, 6 I. E. R. 98. (E.E.)

9. The purchaser under a decree having objected to the title for want of parties to the suit, an application on behalf of the ptf., that the purchaser might be discharged from his purchase was refused.

Leave given to file an exception to the officer's report (of bad title). nunc pro tunc.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 7 I. E. R. 300. (E.E.)

1. Four tenants in common, being entitled to the first estate tail in X. under a deed, were before the Court in a suit instituted to establish a will devising Y., the validity of which depended on the deed. In a cross-cause impeaching the deed, only two of them were made parties. Both causes having been heard together, a decree was made on a compromise setting aside the deed as to X., and directing a reconveyance by all proper parties. A person who would have been entitled to a prior estate tail in X. under the deed was born. A conveyance was afterwards executed in pursuance of the decree, in which the four tenants in common joined. Held, that the inheritance having been imperfectly represented in the cross-cause, a good title could not be derived through the decree.—Pasley v. Lord Clanmorris, 7 I. E. R. 442. (C.)

2. Under a deed in the nature of a mortgage, containing a trust for sale, the trustees and mortgagee can make a good title to a purchaser without the concurrence of judgment creditors of the mortgagor, whose judgments are subsequent to the deed; and it makes no difference that the sale is bad in a suit founded on the deed.

Though a purchaser is not bound by the opinion of his counsel on the abstract of title waiving an objection, yet if the objection does not go to the root of the title (ex. gr., if it be for the non-production of an old deed), if the purchaser continues to treat, and leads the seller to further expense for some time after the first waiver, he cannot afterwards rely on it.—Alexander v. Crosbie, 6 I. E. R. 513, affirmed on appeal.—Alexander v. Crosbie, 7 I. E. R. 445; 1 Jon. & L. 656. (C.)

3. When lands sold under a decree contain a quantity less than that stated in the rental, the ptf. cannot, the purchaser not having made any objection, set aside the sale, or insist that the purchaser shall not have compensation if he choose to hold his bargain.—Magawley v. Brady, 7 I. E. R. 557. (R.)

4. A purchaser who has been discharged from his purchase on report of bad title, is entitled to interest on his one-fourth of the purchase-money from the date of its lodgment, up to the lodgment of the residue.—Linehan v. Cotter, 8 I. E. R. 104. (R.)

5. The purchaser lodged his promissory note for £1500, the amount of the purchase-money, but was afterwards allowed £288. 2s. 4d., compensation for a rentcharge to which the estate was found to be liable. Held, he was chargeable for interest on his note for the difference only.—Wilson v. Poe, 8 I. E. R. 139. (R.)

6. Part of the lands sold under the decree was liable to quit-rent and tithe rentcharge, though not so stated in the rental. Another part was stated in the rental to be held from year to year, by C., at a rent payable on 1st May and 1st Nov.; but the purchaser found, after he lodged his one-fourth of the purchase-money, that it was held for a term, with power to the tenant to surrender on any 25th of March or 29th of Sept., giving six months' previous notice; and it was surrendered on the 25th of March then next. The tenure by which other parts were held was not stated in the rental; but the purchaser, on going into possession, found they were held for lives still subsisting. Held, that the purchaser was entitled to compensation for the quit-rent, but not for the tithe rentcharge. That C. was, at the time of sale, a tenant, not from year to year, but for a term to end on the 25th of March then next; and the purchaser was entitled to compensation therefor; and that he was not entitled to compensation in respect of the premises of which the tenure was not stated, as he should have ascertained how they were held.—Martin v. Cotter, 8 I. E. R. 147. (R.)

7. The Court will require that the promissory note lodged by the purchaser for his purchase-money shall bear interest at £6 per cent.—Anon., 8 I. E. R. 158. (R.)

8. Lands were decreed to be sold subject to a charge. An application, on consent, to lodge the money in Court, refused. — v. —, 8 I. E. R. 514. (E.E.)

9. When a creditor to the estate is declared the purchaser, at a sum less than his demand, he must lodge his promissory note in lieu of the purchase-money, in order that the Side-bar Rule to confirm the sale may be entered.—Edwards v. Backas, 8 I. E. R. 585. (R.)

10. The lands of M., part of the manor of C., were conveyed in 1823 to A. and his heirs, "saving and excepting thereout the manorial rights belonging to the manor of C., and the tolls and duties of the fairs and markets thereof, and also any liberty of turbary or limestone heretofore granted therein or thereout by B. or his ancestors, to any of the tenants of the said manor, as expressed in their leases respectively." There was no limestone or turbary on M., nor had any manorial rights been exercised for more than twenty years, nor any fair or markets ever held. In 1845, M. was set up and sold as held by a clear indefeasible title in fee-simple. Upon objection to the title, the Master in Ch. reported the title bad. Held, upon exceptions to the report, that, under the circumstances, the saving in the deed did not form any ground for the report of bad title.

In the rental under which the lands were sold a part was thus described:—"Term for which demised; under an article of agreement for lease for four lives, bearing date 1804, and one year." The sale took place in Jan. 1845; and on the 9th of April the purchaser's solicitor received a copy of the article, and then first discovered that the agreement was for a lease to commence after the expiration of a then subsisting lease which did not expire until 1843. On the 24th of Oct. he lodged objections to the title, and subsequently swore that he was misled by the statement in the rental. Held, affirming the report, that the mis-statement was ground for discharging the purchaser, not for compensation. That the delay in lodging the objection disentitled the purchaser to his costs.—Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 44. (R.)

1. When lands decreed to be sold to pay the ptf.'s demand were of insufficient value, and no bona fide bidders could be procured, the Court permitted the ptf. to bid, without taking from him the carriage of the decree.—Spaight v. Paterson, 9 I. E. R. 149. (R.)

2. Lands were set up as held under a clear and indefeasible title in fee-simple, and in the rental it appeared that they had been conveyed forty years before, reserving a right to cut turf and quarry limestone to tenants of another estate, although the right had never been since exercised, and there were no turf bogs worked or quarries open on the estate; but it did not appear that there might not be turf; and there was no proof that there was not limestone. Held, a good objection to the title, and the purchaser discharged.

The rental at the sale contained an obscure statement, leaving it doubtful whether a tenant held for lives named in 1804 or 1843; it proved to be the latter; and the purchaser swore he had been misled. Held, a sufficient ground for discharging the purchaser.

A delay of seven months held no waiver of an objection to the title, which turned upon a question of fact.

Observations on clearing a title, by showing the non-existence of rights under a reservation or onerous covenant not stated; and on the duty of being careful and explicit in preparing for a sale.—Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 351; 3 Jon. & L. 495. (C.)

3. By deed of 1809, between A. and B., Deputy Barrack-master General, reciting that part of A.'s estate had been fixed on for the site of barracks, and that it was necessary that a liberty or privilege for the troops for exercising should be granted on another part; A. conveyed nine acres for ever for the site of the barrack, and also granted, let, and demised unto B. 100 acres, to hold to him and his successors for ever, for the purpose only of exercising thereon, in trust for his Majesty, his heirs and successors, reserving a rent of £150. There was a covenant for the payment of the rent, and a power to the lessor to resume the 100 acres, upon giving another piece of ground in lieu of it. After the signatures, it was declared in the attestation clause that nothing in the deed should be construed to deprive A. or his heirs of the fee and inheritance of the full and free enjoyment and possession of the 100 acres, "the liberty of exercising thereon being only intended to be granted." A., in 1818, demised the 100 acres to C., for lives renewable for ever, subject to the perpetual right of exercising thereon, &c. In 1823, C., being a trader, upon his marriage covenanted that whatever estate or property, real or personal, he died possessed of, should be charged with an annuity for his wife, in the event of her surviving. C. died in 1842, leaving his widow still surviving. C.'s interest in the lease was sold under the decree; and the rental stated "the lands were subject to a perpetual right to be used by the military as an exercise ground." Held, confirming the Master's report of bad title, that the deed of 1809 was not a mere grant of an easement in the 100 acres, but was an absolute conveyance of the land, the fee of which was, by the 7 G. 3, c. 6, vested in the Crown, without livery of seisin.

Though a conveyance to one and his successors gives but a life estate, and in conveyances operating under the Statute of Uses, the seisin must be commensurate with the use, yet Semble, this does not apply to a case of trust.

Held also, that it being doubtful whether, upon the true construction of the covenant in the deed of 1823, the lands were bound thereby, the Court would not compel the purchaser to take a title subject to so serious a question.—White v. Baylor, 10 I. E. R. 43. (R.)

4. Lands were sold as fee-simple, but the purchaser, after the sale, for the first time found that, though held in fee-simple, the owner was bound to raise and maintain the fences, and keep the drains and watercourses clear, &c. Held, that the purchaser could not be compelled to accept a title when the enjoyment of the estate was subject to such qualifications.—Larkin v. Lord Rosse, 10 I. E. R. 70. (R.)

5. The purchaser of lands sold under the decree of the Court is not entitled, before the title has been accepted by him, to see the opinion of counsel on the statement of title, given pursuant to the 138th G. O.—Stack v. Baxter, 10 I. E. R. 102. (R.)

6. The Court refused to allow a purchaser to lodge his promissory note in lieu of the three-fourths of his purchase-money, upon the allegation that there would be a large surplus, and the inheritor consenting, notice not having been given to all the creditors.—Gardiner v. Blesinton, 11 I. E. R. 357. (R.)

7. A sum not exceeding the interest of the purchase-money, or the rents of the estate, paid to the purchaser when the money had been lodged three years, but the title was not yet completed.—Piers v. P., 11 I. E. R. 358. (R.)

8. When a property was set up for sale by an auctioneer in the country, first in lots, then part of it in batches of some lots together, then the whole together, the auctioneer having stated that he would receive biddings, and that the Master would declare the purchaser, a person who was the highest bidder for a batch of some lots, and afterwards for the whole, was held to his bidding for the lots, though he was misled by the mode of selling, and intended to bid for the whole.

When a sale is had in the country, under the 139th Order, the bidders are not entitled to have notice of the confirmation of it by the Master.—O'Grady v. Brady, 11 I. E. R. 400. (C.)

1. Rents, received by the receiver after the gale day next succeeding the lodgment of three-fourths of the purchase-money by a purchaser of lands under a decree, are applicable:—first, to pay solvent arrears; then to pay rent due to the purchaser, whether he has or has not gone into possession, and whether the purchase-deed has or has not been executed.—Lee v. Moorhead, 2 Moll. 509; Hargrave v. Holland, 5 I. E. R. 169, overruled.—Doorley v. Pover, 11 I. E. R. 577. (R.)

2. Lands were, by settlement, subject to £800 secured by a term of 100 years, and by a subsequent will to £4200, secured by another term of 99 years, as portions for younger children, of whom the ptf. and A. were two. By will the lands were devised, subject to the two terms, after prior limitations, to A. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. A. being in possession, a bill was filed to raise the two sums, to which a minor tenant in tail, born afterwards, was made a party by supplemental bill. The Master reported interest accrued on the two charges during the possession of A. The final decree confirmed the report, and declared the sums reported charges on the terms; and in default of payment thereof, directed the Master to sell the several lands and premises comprised in the respective terms, to pay the respective demands decreed charges thereon. The lands were set up and sold for the residue of the two terms. Held, on exceptions to the Master's report of good title, that as the minor tenant in tail was a party in the cause, the decree was not erroneous, though it directed a sale for the payment of interest accrued during the possession of A.; nor because it omitted to set off the interest which ought to have been paid by A. against his share of the portion, and a sum which was reported to A. charged on other lands directed to be sold by the decree. But the Court directed the Master to allocate to the minor, out of the sum so reported to A., the amount of interest which he was liable to pay.

That although the two charges affected the terms separately, and were not distinguished in the report or decree, as it was clearly for the benefit of the minor that the terms should be sold together, the title was not objectionable on that ground.

That as the minor's estate was puiſne to the terms, the omission to give him a day to show cause would not affect the purchaser.—Edgeworth v. E., 12 I. E. R. 81. (R.)

3. A purchaser relied on the memorial of a deed as creating an objection to the title, and succeeded on an exception founded upon it. Held, that he could not afterwards object that the deed itself was not produced, although there was not a condition of sale dispensing with its production.—Stewart v. Marquis of Conyngham, 1 I. C. R. 534. (R.)

4. The petitioner's title was questioned. It was stated in an affidavit that he was abroad, and that his residence was not known. The Court settled interrogatories, and directed them to be left with his solicitor; and that they should be returned, answered, within fourteen days.—In re Hamilton's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 121. (I.E.C.)

5. An estate was so situated that its value would be considerably increased or deteriorated by the deaths of certain parties. The rental stated that twelve acres, part of the demesne, were not part of the property to be sold under this Court; but were held under a lease which terminated with the present sale. It afterwards appeared that these twelve acres included the front lodge, and principal, if not only practicable means of entry to the demesne. P. purchased in August last. On an application by him to be discharged from the sale—Held, that his delay in paying the purchase-money, and in making the present application, had disqualified him from the indulgence sought.

Scmble—A conditional order for an attachment against the purchaser, for non-payment of the purchase-money, having been obtained upon a former day, was now made absolute.—In re Jessop, 3 I. Jur. 223. (I.E.C.)—Ibid. 385. (C.)

6. Lands sold under the Court were purchased by M'K., who immediately sold them to A. for £50 more than he had paid; received his I. O. U. for the amount; and with his consent entered a declaration of trust in his favour in the Commissioner's books. A. refused to complete the purchase. Held, on an application to compel him to do so, that the Court could not recognise the sub-sale.

The practice of the Court is only to recognise the person who bids for the property, when he bids in his own name; when he bids with consent for another person, to hold both accountable, unless he shall have previously declared to the Court that he is only bidding as a trustee.

Where a sub-sale takes place, or for any other cause it is the desire of the purchaser on record that some other party should be placed in his stead, so as to release him from responsibility, his proper course is, to make an application to that effect to the Court.—In re Stirling's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 229. (I.E.C.)

7. Vendors contracted to give the purchaser a perpetuity of lands held on lease for lives renewable for ever. The purchaser paid his purchase-money the day after the sale, and called for the perpetuity, which had not been then (nor even at the date of this motion) procured. A few days after, the premises were accidentally destroyed by fire. On an application by the purchaser to be discharged from his purchase—Held, that the vendors, not having given what they had professed to sell—a perpetuity—the contract was not fully completed; and, that the purchaser should be discharged.—In re Carew, 3 I. Jur. 233. (I.E. C.)

1. When the rental contains misdescriptions of facts, which do not interfere with the enjoyment of the estate, the Court will not release a purchaser; but will refer it to the Commissioner, in chamber, to enquire, and award adequate compensation.—In re Clare's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 367. (I.E.C.)

2. A discharged purchaser is prima facie entitled to all the costs incurred by him in investigating the title. The Court therefore refused to give a special direction to the Taxing-Master to disallow costs incurred in consequence of the purchaser not objecting earlier to the title.—Weir v. Chamley, 2 I. C. R. 566. (R.)

3. Premises having been sold, the ptf., the first incumbrancer, was declared the purchaser. The incumbrance being for a larger amount than the purchase-money, she was allowed to lodge her promissory note for one-fourth of the purchase-money; the sale to be thereupon confirmed, nisi, and when the time should expire, she should lodge her promissory note for the remainder of the purchase-money.—Hammond v. Mitchell, 6 I. Jur. 249. (R.)

4. The question, on a reference to enquire whether timber be essential to the possession and enjoyment of an estate, is one partly of fact and partly of opinion and taste; the end of the enquiry being, to ascertain whether, though in respect of its intrinsic value, it may admit of pecuniary compensation, its adventitious value as an ornament to the estate be not so material as that it may reasonably be supposed that, without it, the purchaser would not have entered into the contract.

When the timber, the subject of the enquiry, grew on a comparatively small portion of the estate, detached from the demesne, and not in view of the mansion-house, pleasure grounds, or avenues, and the Master reported that it was not essential to the possession and enjoyment of the estate, though there were conflicting affidavits as to whether it was ornamental or not, the Court (reversing the order of the M. R.) refused to send back the report to be reconsidered on further evidence.

A motion to vary a Master's report was directed to stand over for further affidavits. Held, that a party who had filed an affidavit could not, on appeal from the order made on the further affidavits, object to the admission of them as irregular and contrary to the practice of the Court.—Stewart v. Conyngham, 3 I. C. R. 104. (C.)

interest at £5 per cent. from the expiration of fourteen days from the day of purchase or confirmation of the sale. The sale took place on the 21st of July; the purchaser was declared entitled to the gale due on the 29th of Sept. following, although he did not lodge his purchase-money until the 21st of Oct.

After a receiver has been discharged, and the purchaser has gone into possession, the Court will not make an order that the tenants shall pay to the purchaser the rent which fell due prior to the discharge of the receiver; the receiver is to receive the arrear due prior to his being discharged, although the purchaser may be entitled to a portion of such arrear. The Court of Ch. does not order the tenant to pay such arrears to the purchaser.

The practice of the Court of Exchequer, as stated in Jackson v. J. (5 I. E. R. 591) and Jameson v. Farrer (3 I. E. R. 346) is not the practice of this Court.

Form of order in such case.

The Side-bar Rule, discharging a receiver, on the certificate of a sale in the I. E. Court, does not operate as an absolute discharge. Although he cannot proceed against the lands for arrears of rent, he may proceed against the tenant by attachment or sequestration, on the Master's certificate, or by action in the name of the Master, when the tenant holds by lease under the Court, for the arrears due when the receiver was discharged.—Walcott v. Condon, 3 I. C. R. 431; 6 I. Jur. 381. (R.)

6. The conditional order to confirm a sale must be served on the inheritor, even if he have not appeared in the cause.

Although, as a general rule, the time for showing cause against a conditional order does not run when the Rolls Court is not sitting, the Lord Chancellor will, under particular circumstances, direct the officer to issue the Side-bar Rule to lodge the remaining three-fourths of purchase-money, though the conditional order to confirm the sale had not been served until after the Rolls Court had risen for the Vacation.—Copeland v. Conway, 3 I. C. R. 486. (C.)

7. In the cause of C. v. C. lands were sold, and the ptf.'s demand paid out of the purchase-money. The purchaser obtained a conveyance, and went into possession of the lands. He was afterwards evicted by title paramount, from a very small portion of his purchase. Held, that he was not driven to seek a remedy under the covenants in his conveyance, but was entitled to compensation from any fund in Court which might be applicable to pay compensation to him.

The cause of C. v. C. was instituted by the holder of an incumbrance paisne to that of the ptf. in C. v. C., and sought a sale of lands which had been subject to the charge of the ptf. in the first suit. The whole of the purchase-money in C. v. C. had been distributed, but a fund arising from lands subject to the demand of the ptf. in that suit had been transferred to E. v. C. Held, that this fund might be applied to compensate the purchaser for the loss sustained by his eviction.

A purchaser under the Court may, in some circumstances, insist on compensation, even after conveyance executed and possession taken.

A purchaser under the Court is not confined to his own purchase-money as security for any compensation to which he may be entitled, but may obtain it from a fund produced by other lands, which had been subject to a demand discharged out of his purchase-money.—Cooper v. C., 4 I. C. R. 75; 7 I. Jur. 49. (C.)

1. A purchaser of lands by public auction agreed to pay the purchase-money in March 1852, and fulfil the conditions of sale, one of which was, that the purchaser should be entitled to the rents and profits from the 1st Nov. 1851; and if the completion of the purchase should be delayed "from any cause whatsoever" beyond March 1852, that he should pay interest on the purchase-money from Nov. 1851. The vendor agreed to furnish an abstract of title within four days, but it was not sent within the specified time, and the title was not completed until Jan. 1854. The purchaser had, before March 1852, drawn the amount of the purchase-money out of the funds, and lodged it in bank ready for payment, but received little or no interest upon it. In the beginning of the latter month, he sent an agent to the vendor, offering the money, and declining to pay interest upon it after that date. The vendor refused to receive the principal until the title should be completed. In the latter end of the same month the purchaser wrote to the vendor stating that, if the abstract of title should be furnished within one week, he was ready to complete the contract, provided that his right to the rents and profits should not be interfered with, and that he should not be asked for interest upon the purchase-money. No direct reply was given, but negotiations were continued. A petition having been filed by the vendor to compel the purchaser to complete the purchase, and pay interest upon the purchase-money—Held, that the purchaser was not liable for interest upon the purchase-money, the vendor having been in default.

That the purchaser was entitled to the rents and profits of the lands.—Kellett v. Farrelly, 7 I. Jur. 184. (C.)

3. A solicitor bidding at a sale in the I. E. Court, and signing his name in the book "in trust," without disclosing the name of his c. q. t. was held personally liable for the deficiency which arose on a re-sale of the lands.—In re Scott's Estate, 7 I. Jur. 329. (I.E.C.)

4. The rental of lands sold in the I. E. Court stated that the property was held under two leases, for three young lives, with a concurrent term, at a rent, and that the lease contained covenants by the lessee to expend £300 in building a dwelling-house and for planting and registering trees. One lease contained a covenant to expend £300 in building a house; but there were blanks for the names of the covenantor and covenantee, and for the years within which the covenant was to be performed. The other lease contained a covenant merely to improve a dwelling-house; and each lease contained a covenant to plant timber trees every year. Held, that the observations in the rental were not so specific as to amount to misrepresentation, such as would entitle the purchaser to be discharged from his purchase.

That the purchaser had constructive notice of the covenants in the leases.

That the purchaser was entitled to compensation, by reason of the covenant to build being limited in point of time.—In re Irwin, 5 I. C. R. 290. (P.C.)

5. The L. E. Court, even in the absence of an express condition of sale to that effect, does not guarantee the particulars of tithe rentcharge, the amount and apportionment of which are settled by Act of Parliament.

The rental incorrectly stated the names of the parties liable to the tithe rentcharge, but the same amount was in fact paid by other parties. A motion by a purchaser, to be discharged was refused; but compensation was given, at the rate of the purchase, for any substantial error of detail.—In re Moorhead's Estate, 12 I. C. R. 371; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 319. (L.E.C.)

6. Upon a claim for compensation by a purchaser in the L. E. Court, upon the ground of discrepancy in the acreage of a lot—Held, that when, after the discovery of an error in the rental, the solicitor having the carriage of the sale took every possible means of publishing the true acreage, and the estate was sold from an amended rental, after an announcement by the Judge, of the mistake, the purchaser was not entitled to compensation; and that the Judge of the L. E. Court was a competent witness of the state of the facts.—In re Browne's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 828. (C.A.)—[Affirming decision: ibid, 142. (L.E.C.)]

7. In 1851, an order for the sale of the estate of O., a tenant for life, was, upon the petition of a mortgagee, made by the I. E. Court; of the estate, lot 14 was sold by private sale, and in 1855, conveyed by the Commissioners, to the purchaser. It was described in the rental as containing, amongst other denominations, "Coolacarra mountain, in common to tenants, 363a. 2r." A map, approved of by the Master of the Court, was annexed to the conveyance, which contained no reference to the rental. The denominations and quantities in both were the same.

A portion of O.'s estate, sufficient to pay all incumbrances thereon, having been sold by the I. E. Court, an order was made, on the application of the petitioner, dismissing the order for sale as to the unsold portions; O. undertaking to pay petitioner's post costs and a balance of interest due; and also to abide any further order to be made by the Commissioners in the matter.

The purchaser was put by the sheriff into possession of lot 14, including the 363 acres, called "Coolacarra" in the map and rental.

In 1859, H., having disputed the purchaser's title to a portion of Coolacarra, containing 270 acres, the purchaser brought an action of trespass against H., and obtained a verdict.

That verdict was set aside. On a second trial, the jury found that the 270 acres had never been known as Coolacarra, and were the property of H. The purchaser applied to a Judge of the L. E. Court, that the order dismissing the order for sale, as to the unsold portion of O.'s estate, should be varied, and further portions sold, sufficient to pay him compensation for the loss of the 270 acres, and also the costs incurred in the two trials. The Judge ruled that the purchaser was entitled to compensation for the value of the 270 acres, and that O. in accordance with his undertaking was bound to pay it; but refused to grant any compensation for the costs incurred in the trials. O. having appealed from the whole order, and the purchaser having appealed from the latter portion—Held, that the decisions as to compensation in cases of sales in the Court of Ch. do not apply to sales in the I. E. Court, in which the conveyance contains no covenants, and the purchaser had no opportunity of investigating the title.

That O. was not responsible for the compensation, by reason of the undertaking given by him, when the order for sale was dismissed as to the unsold portions of the estate; as the true construction of that undertaking was, that he would abide any further order which the Court might make in the matter as it then stood.

That there being no fund upon which the Court could act, and the Court having no jurisdiction to sell any further portion of the estate, the purchaser could not obtain any compensation whatever.—In re Otway's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 222; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 189. (C.A.)

1. A. and B., petitioners in the I. E. C., for sale of lands, purchase them. The map to the I. E. C. conveyance included a plot of land alleged to have belonged to X., an adjoining owner. On application to the Court, to compel A. and B. to re-convey to X., Held, that as the circumstances of the case negated the presumption of misconduct on the part of A. and B., or their solicitor, arising from the mistake, the Court had not jurisdiction to direct a re-conveyance.

Semle—That the principle which guides the Court is, that if, by any fraud, negligence or other misconduct of the party having the carriage of the sale, he procures the Court to sell and convey to him property which ought not to have been sold or conveyed, the Court has jurisdiction to compel him to re-convey, if the property remains in his hands, and to make good the loss, by pecuniary compensation, if it has passed from him into the hands of a purchaser for value.

From a clear mistake, the Court will 'presume misconduct, unless and until the contrary is proved. A substantial loss must have been suffered by the applicant.—In re Collis's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 511; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 177. (L.E.C.)

LXXXII. 5. Sale, when completed: putting Purchaser into Possession.

2. The receiver passed his final account in 1829, when a small sum was due to him. The purchaser under the decree in the cause was put into possession in that year; and the receiver had not, since his last account, received any rents. The Court granted an order to vacate the receiver's recognizance, although he had not been formally discharged.

The injunction to put the purchaser into possession amounts to a discharge of the receiver.—Anon., 2 I. E. R. 416. (E.E.)

3. In the Exchequer the three-fourths of the purchase-money cannot be paid in until the sale is confirmed. Secus in Ch.—Vincent v. Thwaites, 2 I. E. R. 427. (E.E.)

4. When a life estate was sold under a decree, and the tenant for life died after the lodgment of one-fourth of the purchase-money, and the obtaining of the rule nisi, but prior to the confirmation of the sale—Held, that the contract was not complete until the sale was confirmed by order of the Court; and that the purchaser was discharged from his contract. [Reversing the decision of the M. R., 1 Fl. & K. 250.]—Vincent v. Going, 3 Dr. & War. 75, note. (C.)

5. That the Master in the cause has executed the deed of conveyance for the principal debt, does not preclude his giving the usual certificate to enable the purchaser to obtain an injunction to be put into possession.—Lawler v. Drew, 7 I. E. R. 637. (R.)

6. When the conveyance to a purchaser states that a tenant is under terms to surrender to the landlord upon a particular day, the Court will not, if he fails to do so, issue an attachment against him.

[Per Longfield, C.:—The words "under terms" only express the terms of his tenancy.]

If such a tenant refuses to attorn as tenant at sufferance to the landlord, the Court will issue to the sheriff an injunction to put the landlord into possession.

The document, stamped with the stamp of the Notice-office, is prima facie evidence of all it contains; and an attachment will be issued against a solicitor who alters it.

Quare—Does every interest, saved by the Court, become a legal interest?—In re Fitzpatrick, 3 I. Jur. 54. (I.E.C.)

LXXXII. 6. Discharge of first Purchaser; Substitution of another.

7. A person who opens a sale under the decree of the Court, undertaking to pay the former purchaser his costs and interest, will not be released from his undertaking, though the estate be sold to another person at a great advance of price.—O'Beirne v. Macmahon, 2 Jones, 589. (E.E.)

8. A purchaser of two lots, as to one of which the biddings were opened, was released from his bidding for the other, upon undertaking to pay the costs of the re-sale.—Gregg v. Glover, 1 I. E. R. 211. (R.)

1. The Court will not set up for sale lands the title to which it knows is bad.

Semble—If the owners, and the creditors interested in the produce, do not object, the Court will allow a party to apply to stand in the place of a purchaser discharged because of bad title.—Piers v. P., S. & Sc. 414. (R.)

2. A solvent person, who had directed his agent to bid £1 more than any other bidder at a letting under the Court, would not be discharged from his bidding, though it was much higher than the real value. He was given the option of having the lands set up again, without discharging him from his bidding, and subject to his making compensation for any difference between the two lettings.

Semble—If he could have shown that the opposing bidder was employed merely to raise the rent, or had any ill-will against him, or was in collusion with any of the parties, the application to be discharged might have been granted.

After enquiry by the inheritor's solicitor, the inheritor being a minor, the rent was reduced, by consent, from £261 to £200 per annum.—Coote v. C., 2 I. E. R. 159; S. & Sc. 693. (R.)

3. A solvent person, who has been declared tenant to lands let under the Court, will not be discharged from his bidding, because he had bid beyond the real value, and his life had been threatened if he should take possession; but will be permitted to have the lands re-let, upon undertaking to abide the Court's order consequent upon such re-letting.

The lands having, upon the re-letting, produced a less rent, a reference was granted to ascertain the amount of compensation. The applicant was ordered to enter into a recognizance to pay it by half-yearly payments during the term of the original letting.—Cor v. C., S. & Sc. 697. (R.)

4. Upon motion to substitute one purchaser for another, there must be an affidavit that no money has been paid for the substitution.—Vincent v. Going, Fl. & K. 428. (R.)

5. A purchaser, having lodged one-fourth only of his purchase-money, was discharged upon a report of bad title. Held, that he was entitled to the costs incurred by him in investigating the title, but not to interest on the one-fourth.—Feely v. Kilkenny, Fl. & K. 456. (R.)

6. If a good title cannot be given to the purchaser under a decree, without the aid of a supplemental suit, he will, if he desires it, be discharged as in case of a title absolutely bad.

When a necessary party is not before the Court, a report of good title, "the ptf. undertaking to file a supplemental bill, and obtain a decree against such party," is irregular.—Plumtree v. O'Dell, 4 I. E. R. 602, n. (R.)

7. The costs of a discharged purchaser will not be given against the ptf., but will be paid out of the fund in Court. If there be no fund, or an insufficient one, a receiver will be appointed over the lands to pay them.—Cuffe v. Young, 10 I. E. R. 233. (R.)

8. The purchaser of a leasehold interest under a decree is bound by notice of all the covenants contained in the lease under which the property is held.

The omission to state, in the rental of a leasehold sold under a decree, a covenant in the lease against the exercise of particular trades, is not misdescription, although the value of the premises may be lessened by the covenant. But when the rental described the premises as held for the residue of a term at a yearly rent, though by the breach of a covenant the term had been forfeited, or an additional rent incurred, at the election of the lessor, the Court held it misdescription, and discharged the purchaser.

The rental described premises as let by one lease at one rent, whereas they were let by two leases at two separate rents, together equal to that stated in the rental. Held, that although there was misdescription, it was not such as affected the title.

A., having a term for 150 years, assigned it by mortgage in 1794, and in 1806 took a new lease for 130 years of the same premises, his interest in which was sold under a decree in 1846. No evidence was given to show that the mortgage was paid, or when interest had last been paid on it. Held, that the fact of the mortgage being dated in 1794 was not of itself evidence against a purchaser that the mortgage was paid off or barred by the Statute of Limitations.

The cases of Pope v. Garland, 4 Y. & Col.; Jones v. Edney, 3 Camp.; Flight v. Booth, 1 Bing. N. C.; Barton v. Lord Downes, Fl. & K.; Flight v. Barton, 3 M. & K., reviewed and considered.—Spunner v. Walsh, 10 I. E. R. 386. (R.)

9. A purchaser of a leasehold under a decree is affected with notice of all clauses in the lease; but he has a right to assume that the premises are lawfully in the condition in which they are sold. Therefore, when a lease contained a clause of forfeiture for the exercise of a trade, which was that carried on on a part of the premises of comparatively little value for any other business—Held, a ground for discharging the purchaser, though he had been some time in possession, and there was a waiver by the landlord for the time past.

A purchaser under a decree is not bound to make his objections to the title in any particular order.—Spunner v. Walsh, 11 I. E. R. 597. (C.)

10. The rental of lands sold under a decree stated the date, tenure, and rent of a tenant's lease, but not a clause in it giving the tenant power, under restrictions, to fell and dispose of the timber, which was very valuable. Held, that the purchaser, having notice of the lease, was bound by constructive notice of the clause relating to the timber.

The rental described lands as held by lease for three lives and 31 years, the lease being for three lives and the life of the survivor; and if all the lives should die before the expiration of 31 years, for so much of such term of 31 years from that period as should be to come upon the decease of the survivor. Held, that the rental being substantially correct, there was no misrepresentation which would entitle the purchaser to be discharged from the purchase. — Vignolles v. Bowen, 12 I. E. R. 194. (R.)

1. Lands held under a bishop's lease for 21 years were sold under a decree. The rental stated the date of the lease, and that the lands were subject to a rentcharge which appeared to be a permanent charge on them. Held, that the purchaser was bound by constructive notice of a non-alienation clause and other unusual covenants in the lease.

That he was bound by notice of the deed granting the rentcharge, and all its contents, and could not therefore object to the purchase because the rentcharge was secured by a term short by six months of the twenty-one years, with a t. q. covenant for renewal. — Vaughan v. Magill, 12 I. E. R. 200. (R.)

2. A party purchased an estate, but (owing to fortuitous circumstances) was unable to lodge the purchase-money. He stated all the facts fairly to the Court within a reasonable time, and applied to be released from the purchase; or to assign the lots to the parties interested, which was refused. Subsequently, having agreed to assign the lands to a third party, the Court permitted him to declare a trust in favour of such party. — In re Hemworth, 3 I. Jur. 402. (I.E.C.)

3. After lands have been sold under a decree, the Court may direct a sole ptf. to be substituted as purchaser for another party who had bid at the sale, and had been declared the purchaser, he consenting thereto. — Moorhead v. M., 7 I. Jur. 16. (R.)

4. A purchaser, discharged from his purchase on account of the title being bad, is entitled to be paid interest at £5 per cent. on his purchase-money, from the time of lodgment, and to be paid his costs thereby incurred. If there be no fund in Court, he is entitled to an order for payment thereof, and of his costs of the motion against the ptf. in the suit; with liberty to the ptf. to apply to be repaid out of any funds to be realised out of the estate.

The ptf.'s costs of the motion made costs in the cause. — Murphy v. Lynde, 7 I. Jur. 305. (R.)

LXXXII. 7. Opening Biddings.

- a. Generally.
- b. Deposit on.
- c. Re-sale.

LXXXII. 7. a. Opening Biddings generally.

5. An advance of £300 on £6700 is not sufficient to open biddings, though the fund is deficient.

Semble—When the applicant has been present at the former sale, a larger advance would be expected from him. — Graham v. Gledstones, 1 Jon. 436. (E.E.)

6. An estate having been sold under the Court for £5050, the sale was opened upon an advance of £300, though the applicant had bid at the sale. — Biggs v. Rowe, S. & Sc. 152. (R.)

7. Biddings opened on an advance of £250 on a sale of £3500, by one who was present, and bid at the former sale. — Gorman v. Browne, S. & Sc. 154, n. (R.)

8. Biddings opened on an advance of £400 on a sum of £6200, by one who had bid at the former sale. — Langford v. Carroll, S. & Sc. 155, n. (E.E.)

9. Biddings opened on an advance of £1000, on a sum of £35,000. — M'Clintock v. Knox, S. & Sc. 155, n. (R.)

10. Biddings opened on an advance of £300 upon a sum of £5500. — Moloney v. Bernard, S. & Sc. 156, n. (R.)

11. Biddings opened after confirmation of a sale under a decree, ptf. being the purchaser. It will always be a question, with reference to the circumstances of each particular case, whether the jurisdiction to open the sale should be exercised? — O'Connor v. Richards, S. & Sc. 246. (R.)

12. Biddings opened on an advance of £75 on £1050. In Ireland there is not a fixed rule regulating the quantum of advance. The Court will always open the biddings, when doing so will benefit the estate. — Digby v. Browne, 1 I. E. R. 377. (R.)

13. In opening biddings, this Court does not tie itself down to any precise rule as to the amount of the sum to be advanced, but looks substantially to that which is for the benefit of the parties, and to the circumstances of the particular case before it. — Power v. P., 3 I. E. R. 511. (E.E.)

14. The biddings having been opened upon an advance of £150 on £2500, the Court refused the application of the first purchaser to open the second biddings upon an advance of £150, it appearing that he had been present at, and had bid at the second sale. — Jackson v. Lord Granard, 3 I. E. R. 513. (E.E.)

15. After confirmation of the sale, the biddings will not be opened upon a mere advance of price. — Vincent v. Thwaites, 5 I. E. R. 526. (E.E.)

16. Biddings opened under the circumstances of the case, on an advance of £20 on £165, upon the application of a person who had bid at the former sale.—Whether the biddings will be opened or not is a question to be determined by the particular circumstances of each case.—Mayne v. Macartney, 2 I. E. R. 324. (E.E.)

1. An estate was sold in the country, subject to a life annuity equal to the rent. After sale, but before the purchaser was declared by the Master, the annuity determined. The Court opened the sale on an advance.—O'Hara v. Chaine, 8 I. E. R. 365. (R.)

2. A person who opened a sale with the assent of the parties, for the purpose of preventing a sacrifice of the property, but, being outbid, was not the purchaser, allowed the costs of opening the sale, on the ground of having benefited the estate.—Cuffe v. Young, 9 I. E. R. 475. (R.)

3. The Court refused to open the biddings on an advance of £20, the property having been sold for £430.—Gardiner v. Blesinton, 10 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

LXXXII. 7. b. Deposit on.

LXXXII. 7. c. Opening Biddings: Re-sale.

5. When, upon a re-sale, the former purchaser has been overbid, the Court will not pay him his one-fourth until after the new purchaser has paid in his deposit.—Anon., H. & J. 719. (E.E.)

6. A purchaser, discharged upon a re-sale under an order opening the biddings, is not entitled, as against the ptf. or his solicitor, to the costs which he may have incurred in investigating the title; there not having been any reference to the Master to report as to title.—Sullivan v. Bayley, Fl. & K. 460. (R.)

7. A purchaser, having lodged one-fourth of his purchase-money, refused to lodge the remaining three-fourths, unless the abstract of title was first delivered to him. No report of good title had been obtained. The ptf. moved that the lands be re-sold, and the one-fourth forfeited. Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to the abstract; and that the one-fourth could not be forfeited, no report of good title having been obtained.

Semble—If that report had been obtained, the proper motion would have been, that the lands be re-sold, the one-fourth to remain as a security to indemnify the estate from all loss and costs attending the re-sale.—Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 189. (R.)

8. When, upon a report of bad title, a purchaser has been discharged, the inheritor's right is, to have the estate again set up to be sold. Therefore the Court will not, against his desire, substitute, in the discharged purchaser's place, one who offers to take the estate at the same price, but not to object to the title.—O'Connor v. Bernard, 3 I. E. R. 496. (E.E.)

9. The owner employed an improper person to bid for him, who failed, on being required by the Court, to lodge a sum of money as earnest; and another party was declared the purchaser. On application by the owner, and on his satisfying the Court that the agent had been bona fide instructed to bid, the Court directed the property to be re-sold, upon the terms that the owner should lodge £1000 within one week, and undertake to bid £9000, and to pay all the costs and expenses incurred by the present purchaser.—In re Waller, 4 I. Jur. 15. (I. E. C.)

LXXXII. 8. Of the Conveyance.

10. A motion, by one who, in consequence of a direction to his agent to bid one pound beyond any other bidder, had been declared tenant at a very high rent, to be discharged from his bidding, was refused with costs.—Mahon v. Hammond, S. & Sc. 689. (R.)

11. When a decree for a sale contains the usual direction that all proper and necessary parties shall join in conveying to the purchaser, if any of such parties, bound by the decree, and within the jurisdiction, refuses to execute the conveyance, he will be attached in the first instance. The Court will not order the Master to execute, in his name, under the statute, until it appears that an attachment cannot induce him to execute propria manu.—Usher v. Scanlan, 3 I. E. R. 474. (R.)

12. A deft. will not be compelled to convey an estate to the ptf. pursuant to a decree, when there is a bona fide intention to prosecute an appeal against that decree.—Patten v. Wallace, 5 I. E. R. 309. (E.E.)

13. In this Court, the decree for a sale does not direct the Remembrancer to settle the draft of the deed of conveyance to the purchaser; and a special application for that purpose is necessary.—Hogg v. Waldron, 6 I. E. R. 218. (E.E.)

14. Upon a sale of lands under a decree in a cause, when judgment creditors prior to the ptf. had not been made parties to the original suit, and a supplemental bill had been filed making them then parties, but no decree had been obtained in the supplemental suit, the Remembrancer was ordered to execute the deed of the sale, upon the consent of the parties in the supplemental suit.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 7 I. E. R. 338. (E.E.)

15. Statute 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 12 (authorizing the conveyance of estates devised in settlement by tenants for life, &c., under decrees), extends to a decree for a mortgage as well as for an absolute sale.—Holmes v. H., 7 I. E. R. 390. (C.)

16. R. was entitled to a rentcharge for life, and to a legal estate for life in remainder in lands decreed to be sold to pay paramount incumbrances. After decree he became lunatic, but no commission issued. A conveyance by him to a purchaser was ordered under the Trustee Act, s. 5.—Blake v. B., 9 I. E. R. 592. (C.)

1. The heir-at-law of a mortgagee who had never been in possession, was out of the jurisdiction, and the produce of the sale of the mortgaged lands under a decree was insufficient to pay off the mortgage, by reason of prior incumbrances. Held, that the Court had not jurisdiction to make an order for the conveyance of the legal estate to the purchaser, either under 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 8, or 1 Vic., c. 69, s. 1.—[In re Thompson, 12 Sim. 392, disapproved of.]—Spunner v. Walsh, 10 I. E. R. 214. (R.)

2. The Court has not power under the 28 G. 3, c. 35, to direct the Master to execute a conveyance in the name of an infant resident out of the jurisdiction.

An application to the Court for that purpose, under the 1 W. 4, c. 47, or 1 W. 4, c. 60, must be made by petition, unless the minor is ordered at the hearing of the cause to convey.—McGeehan v. Rankin, 12 I. E. R. 182. (R.)

3. The Court has not power under the 28 G. 3, c. 35, to order the Master to execute a conveyance in the name of a femme coverte who is out of the jurisdiction.—Nugent v. Piers, 12 I. E. R. 188. (R.)

4. When an order that the Master, or any other person appointed by the Court, should convey in the name of a deft., under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 8, cannot be made contemporaneously with the decree at the hearing of the cause, in consequence of the party to whom the conveyance is to be made not being then ascertained (e. g., where lands are by the decree directed to be sold), an application under that statute, that the Master should execute a conveyance in the name of such deft. must be made by petition.—Newman v. Fitzgerald, 13 I. E. R. 65. (R.)

5. Lands were sold in Ch. in the cause of C. v. C. They were purchased by A., to whom was executed a conveyance describing the lands by reference to a map on the margin. A. was evicted by title paramount from a portion of the lands as marked out on the map. A bill was filed by E. against the deft. C., to recover the amount of claims for which she was liable as a trustee, praying that she might have the benefit of the proceedings in the cause of C. v. C.; and by an order, the funds in C. v. C. were transferred to the cause of E. v. C. Held, that the map on the conveyance was conclusive evidence that everything so marked out on it was intended to be conveyed to the purchaser; that he was entitled to compensation for the portion of the lands from which he was evicted; and that if any of the purchase-money so transferred to the cause of E. v. C. remained in Court, such compensation should be paid thereout; but that a motion seeking compensation out of the funds generally in Court to the credit of the cause of E. v. C. should be refused with costs, whatever the rights of the parties might be in a plenary suit.

Semble—That the purchaser when he was served with the ejectment should have served notice on the parties in the cause of C. v. C., that he, if evicted, would seek compensation; and they would then have been bound by the proceedings.—Cooper v. C., 6 I. Jur. 404. (R.)

6. The lands sold in this matter comprised a field held by the principal officers of her Majesty's Ordnance from G., under an instrument dated 24th Dec. 1844, for one year, at the rent of £31. 10s. By the same instrument the said G. agreed that the principal officers of Ordnance should be at liberty to hold the field after the expiration of said year, if they should have occasion for it, for such further time as they should so require it, paying the like rent for so long as they should so hold it. The principal officers of Ordnance had held the field at the same rent as exercise ground for the troops at P. Barracks, and still hold it for that purpose; and they were stated in the rental, under which the sale was made as tenants from year to year, determinable on the 24th Dec. in each year. Under the head "Observations" in the rental it was stated that this tenancy was created under an agreement dated the 24th Dec. 1844, by which G. agreed, &c. It set out in terms the agreement. After the sale the purchaser discovered a document dated 9th Dec. 1854, by which one D., who was a receiver over the lands under the Court of Ch., offered to let the field for exercise ground for one year ending the 22nd Dec. 1855, at the rent of £31. 10s.; and the officers in command at P. Barracks, and the Commander of the Forces, recommended that it should be taken for that purpose. The purchaser informed the solicitor, who had the carriage of the sale, of this document, and demanded to have the conveyance made to him discharged of any title of the Ordnance department after the 22nd Dec. 1855, and then went before the Commissioner who had to settle the deed, and showed him the proposal. The draft deed omitted the observations in the rental, and did not contain any allusion to the article of 24th of Dec. 1844; and the Commissioner altered the deed by stating that the tenancy of the Ordnance department was for one year, which would determine on the 22nd Dec. 1855. On motion on behalf of the Sec. at War, in whom the Ordnance property is vested, that the purchaser should bring in his deed to have it amended, by stating the agreement under which the Ordnance department held the lands, as set out in the rental—Held, that this Court had full power to recal the deed for the purpose of correcting any error in it occasioned by mistake or fraud on the Court; but that the principal officers of Ordnance not having, at the expiration of the year ending 24th Dec., 1844, or at any time since, required any further lease or term, but having occupied under the proposal made by D. for one year, and paid rent therefor, that department had no right to any further term in the field.—Ex parte Truell, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 66. (I.E.C.)

1. By two conveyances of equal date, executed by Commissioners of the I. E. C., premises were granted in severalty to A. and B.; and mountain lands were thereby granted to A. and B. in undivided shares proportioned to the rights of commonage thereon previously enjoyed by A. and B. respectively under leases. The premises granted in severalty were described as being in the occupation of the grantees, as containing a certain number of acres, and as being represented in maps annexed to the several conveyances. They were to be held subject to the leases. Those leases, also of equal date, described the premises as containing a certain number of acres, and as being in the possession of the respective lessees. The acreage in the conveyances and in the leases was substantially the same. A reclaimed piece of the mountain land was in the possession and occupation of A. at the dates of the leases and of the conveyances; but it would, if included in the lands demised, and granted to him in severalty, render the acreage inaccurate. Moreover, the maps annexed to the conveyances represented it as a portion of the mountain lands. Held, that as to the leases, it should be considered as a portion of the lands demised; but that, as to the conveyances, it should be considered portion of the mountain lands.

Quære—As to the principle upon which the partition of the mountain lands should be carried out.—In re Clements's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 505. (L.E.C.)

XXXXII. 9. Setting aside the Sale.

2. A purchaser was discharged from his purchase, on the ground of misrepresentation, lands having been set up to be sold as held under written agreements for leases from 1827, which, upon enquiry after the sale, appeared to be mere parol agreements.

A purchaser, seeking to be discharged from his purchase under the Court on the ground of misrepresentation, must swear distinctly to his having been deceived by the representations made to him; but, the case not being perfectly clear, and some time having elapsed before the application was made, the purchaser was refused his costs.—Bessonnet v. Robins, S. & Sc. 142. (R.)

3. The Court has, in every case, the jurisdiction of setting aside the sale, although confirmed, upon a proper case being made.

When the purchase has been made in trust for the receiver (without the special leave of the Court first had), the sale will be set aside.—Alven v. Bond, Fl. & K. 210. (R.)

4. A sale under a decree set aside after confirmation, on the ground that the purchase was made, in trust, as to one-third for the receiver in the cause, and as to another one-third for the father of the receiver. The purchaser was disallowed interest on the purchase-money lodged by him, and all costs incurred by him in investigating the title, and in relation to the sale.—Alven v. Bond, 3 I. E. R. 365; Fl. & K. 196. (R.)

5. An irregular and fraudulent sale was had in 1808, and the purchaser went into possession. A bill was filed to set it aside in 1822, and no further proceedings were had until 1839, when a bill of revivor and supplement was filed. Held, that the lapse of time was not a bar to the relief sought.

When a purchaser has fraudulently procured an improper conveyance to be made under a decree for sale; Semble—His title to the lands thereby conveyed is not protected by the decree.—Thornhill v. Glover, 3 Dr. & War. 195. (C.)

6. Several estates, among them K. and B., were devised to trustees to the use of H. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; remainder to R. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; with a power to the trustees to raise, by sale or mortgage of the lands, or a competent part thereof, sums sufficient to pay the testator's debts and legacies, which were thereby charged on his real estate. The testator died in 1788, and immediately after, H., the tenant for life, advertised the lands, and agreed to sell the estate of K. to G. for what was then sufficient value. No regular contract was entered into; but G. treated himself as the purchaser, and from time to time paid off incumbrances to an amount exceeding the purchase-money, taking assignments of the securities to himself or to a trustee for him. The trustees of the will having declined to act, a bill was filed in the Exchequer in 1789, by a judgment creditor, for a sale, and the appointment of new trustees. In this suit, which was amicable, there were irregularities; answers were put in for parties whose names were affixed to them, but who did not sign them; the brother of the ptf.'s attorney was concerned for the defts.; the ptf. died after the final decree, and the suit was not revived, but an order was made in it entitled in the executor's name, and tenants in tail, coming in esse during the suit, were not brought before the Court. There were also alleged miscarriages in the report under the decree to account. The final decree was in 1794. At the sale under it K. was bought for G. by the attorney for the ptf., at the price agreed on in 1788, there being only two other bidders, for form's sake. In 1802 the personal representative of the ptf. assigned his rights to a trustee for G., who afterwards was declared the purchaser of B. In 1810 an arrangement, to which some unpaid creditors were parties, was made, by which the payments made by G. were so appropriated as to cover the purchase of K., leaving an unsettled account respecting B. An order of Court was obtained, and a regular conveyance of K. executed. The tenant for life had been allowed to remain in receipt of the rents, and all interest on the incumbrances paid off by G. was permitted to remain in arrear with his consent, G. being allowed compound interest; and the entire amount of interest was allowed in the purchase-money. The tenant for life died in 1837; and the bill was filed by the remainderman in 1843, to set aside the sale. Held, that although the sale was the result of a pre-arrangement, and the suit was irregular in the above respects, yet as, in the opinion of the Court, it was not fraudulent, and the purchaser intended no fraud, and the purchase was made at full value, the sale could not be set aside, especially after so long a time.

That as the purchaser had lent himself to the transaction, whereby the arrear of interest was thrown on the inheritance, he should be made responsible for that amount; and an account accordingly was directed.

The sale of the lands of B. took place in a suit behind the back of the Court, but no conveyance of them was ever executed, and no final settlement of the accounts on foot of this purchase was ever made. Held, that the sale of B., being still in fieri, should be set aside; and an account directed on foot of the sums paid towards the purchase, and of the rents received.

On the 15th of Dec. 1795, G. (the purchaser), on the marriage of his brother, granted a rentcharge of £300 a-year, for 1000 years, out of K., which was settled on the issue of the marriage. The Court dismissed the bill with costs against the parties claiming under this settlement, but refused to give them any relief.

Principles upon which the Court acts as to what shall, and what shall not, impeach a sale under a decree.—Boven v. Evans, 6 I. E. R. 569; 1 Jon. & L. 171. (C.)—[See 2 H. L. Cas. 257.]

1. An estate having been sold under a decree to pay incumbrances, part of the purchase-money was applied in payment of interest accrued due during the possession of a tenant for life. There had been an agreement respecting the sale, with the tenant for life, and he also obtained a lease of part of the property. On a bill filed by the next remainderman in tail, the Court refused to set aside the sale, but referred it to the Master to enquire if the sale was at an under-value; and if so, that the purchaser's representatives should pay the difference into Court; and that the tenant for life should pay into Court so much of the produce of the sale as the Master should find had been applied in discharge of interest accrued during the possession of the tenant for life.—Townsend v. Warren, 6 I. E. R. 620; 1 Jon. & L. 221, n. (C.)

2. Under articles of 1760, estates were covenanted to be settled on A. for life; remainder to B. for life; remainder to the heirs of his body. The estates were subject to prior incumbrances. A. executed a trust deed to pay creditors; and a bill was filed by one of the creditors, by judgment against A., pursuant to the articles of 1760, and under the direction of A. By an arrangement made in the course of the suit, but in pursuance of a private agreement, and without the sanction of the Court, the lands were conveyed in f.-f. by A. and B. to X., who had notice of the articles, the rent being reserved to B., the purchase-money being applied partly to discharge incumbrances prior to 1760. In a sale in the suit, X. afterwards purchased the f.-f. rent. The proceeds of the sale were paid to B., and otherwise, without regard to the rights of his children; all parties apparently acting under a mistake as to the effect of the articles. A bill afterwards filed by A. and B. against X., and impeaching the sale for fraud, was dismissed. Held, on a bill by the son of B. claiming as remainderman in tail under the articles, that the f.-f. grant should be treated as a private sale and set aside, but that the purchase under the decree should be upheld.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadleir, 9 I. E. R. 595. (C.)

3. A receiver purchased a younger child's portion during the life of the child's father, and not payable till his death, but charged on the lands over which the receiver had been appointed. There was no evidence of under-value. On bill filed by the inheritor after thirteen years, and who had been during the interval out of the jurisdiction, against the personal representative of the receiver, the Court set aside the purchase.—Kelly v. Bonynges, 1 I. Jur. 3. (E.E.)

4. When the true circumstances of the case can be collected from the description in the rental, or when they are sufficient to provoke enquiry, the purchase will not be set aside for misdescription of the premises.—In re Kirwan, assignee of Browne, 3 I. Jur. 66. (I.E.C.)

5. A petitioner, knowing that a large fine had been paid upon the execution of an existing lease, suppressed that fact from the Court. On application by a puisne Incumbrancer, the sale was set aside, and he was permitted to serve a notice under the 13th G. O. to impeach the lease. The carriage of those proceedings was given to him.—In re the Assignee of Roberts, 3 I. Jur. 142. (I.E.C.)

6. Errors in framing the petition and schedules are not sufficient causes for setting aside a sale on the application of an incumbrancer.

The proper time to apply to rectify an incorrect statement of the amount or priority of an incumbrance is, upon the settling of the schedule of incumbrances.—In re Hayes's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 192. (I.E.C.)

7. The owner of an estate, advertised to be sold in the I. E. Court, signed an agreement out of Court, that M. should be declared the purchaser for the amount of the incumbrances, provided they did not exceed £37,000; if they were under that sum, the purchaser was to pay the balance to the owner; and if they exceeded that sum, the purchaser was to be paid the excess by the owner, who was to get a lease of a portion of the lands, and the arrears of rent. The Commissioners, on the day of sale, refused to adopt the agreement. Thereupon this agreement (which the owner impeached as obtained by force and fraud) was signed; that the owner should have no claim against M. save for the sum mentioned in the first agreement, and that M. should not be bound to lodge in Court any sum save such as would cover the charges and costs to which the estate was liable; and that if he was obliged to lodge more than the £37,000 the surplus should be drawn out by him. The estate was immediately afterwards set up to auction, and sold to M. for £41,775. Held, reversing the decision below, that the Court could not recognise the agreement as it was a fraud on bona fide bidders, and therefore M. was bound to bring in the surplus, without prejudice to his establishing his right to it by an independent proceeding.—In re Ashe, 4 L. C. R. 594. (P.C.)

1. The L. E. Court will set aside the sale of a charge at an under-value, made to the party having the carriage, on the application of the party making the assignment, who has even a better equity to set aside the sale than the owner or puisne creditors have to have it declared a trust for them.—In re Ronayne's Estate, 18 I. C. R. 444. (L.E.C.)

2. An estate, to which equities were attached, having been sold discharged therefrom in the I. E. Court, Judge Dobbs refused, with costs, an application to set aside the sale, though no conveyance had been made. Held, that the application should have been granted.—In re Devereux's Estate, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 101. (C.A.)

LXXXII. 10. In other cases.

3. The Court will not make it a condition of sale of an interest under a lease, that the purchaser shall not be at liberty to object to the lessor's title to make the lease, but will direct that a purchaser shall not require the ptf. to show that the lessor had such power, leaving the purchaser free to object aliunde.—Willis v. Latham, 8. & Sc. 441. (R.)

4. If lands be leased by the inheritor after a decree to account has been pronounced against him, they will be set up in the first instance subject to the lease. If they do not produce sufficient to pay, with costs, the incumbrances decreed, they will then be set up discharged of the lease.—Barrett v. Birmingham, 8. & Sc. 678. (R.)

5. A purchaser, having lodged the one-fourth of his purchase-money, refused to lodge the rest unless the abstract of title was first delivered to him. No report of good title had been obtained. Ptf. moved that the lands should be re-sold, and the one-fourth forfeited. Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to the abstract; that, no report of good title having been obtained, the one-fourth could not be forfeited.

Semble—If a report of good title had been obtained, the proper motion would have been that the lands be re-sold; the one-fourth to remain as a security to indemnify the estate against all loss and costs attending the re-sale.—Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 189. (R.)

6. When a ptf. obtains liberty to bid, the management of the sale will be taken from his solicitor.—Drought v. Jones, Fl. & K. 316. (R.) Ennis v. Casey, ibid, 319, a.

7. In a question as to the carriage of a decree for sale, in two suits, when the solicitor in the first had taken an assignment of a charge, prior to the ptf., and it was in that cause reported at £1800, but in the second cause at £900 (explained by a difference in the accounts decreed)—Held, that the solicitor in the first cause having, by the assignment, an interest different from the ptf., the carriage of the decree should be given to the ptf. in the second suit.—Keons v. Magawly, 7 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

8. After lands had been sold and the purchase deed approved, though not signed, by the Master's counsel, the purchaser was put into possession by injunction, in consequence of the deft. having entered on the lands and committed waste.—Gray v. Stamford, 8 I. E. R. 678. (R.)

9. When a property has been sold, the Master, at the instance of the inheritor and incumbrancers (no person being under disability), has jurisdiction to, and will sell arrears of rent.—Carroll v. D'Arcy, 3 I. Jur. 322. (C.)

10. Permission, to execute a sequestration for non-payment of costs in a cause, will be given only when it appears that the party cannot be arrested.—Mellifont v. Whitney, Hay. & J. 219. (E.E.)

11. There cannot be separate sequestrations for debt and costs. Ptf. was, therefore, permitted to execute a sequestration for the costs only, on the terms of his waiving any further proceeding against deft. for the sum reported and decreed due.—Graves v. Fennell, 1 I. E. R. 28. (E.E.)

1. If the deft. have not appeared in the cause, it is not necessary to give him notice of a motion for liberty to execute a sequestration on the decree against the real estate of the deft. The motion will not be granted if the annual value of the real estate be not stated in the affidavit.—Edwards v. Plunkett, 3 I. E. R. 502. (E.E.)

2. It is a common exercise of the undoubted jurisdiction of this Court to appoint sequestrators and receivers of personal estate, although such personal estate may consist of debts founded upon contract; and there may be a dispute as to the person entitled to them.—Acheson v. Hodges, 3 I. E. R. 522. (R.)

3. Notice of a motion for liberty to execute a sequestration upon a decree is necessary, where it is sought to execute it against lands.—Welsh v. W., 2 I. E. R. 360. (E.E.)

4. Upon an application for liberty to issue a sequestration for the costs of dismissing a bill, if the party be going against personal property, notice of the motion must not be given. Secus where the party is going against real property.—O'Brien v. Foley, 2 I. E. R. 418. (E.E.)

7. Sequestration may be awarded against the separate estate of a married woman for costs given against her.—Keogh v. Cathcart, 11 I. E. R. 280. (R.)—[Reversed: 12 I. E. R. 215. (C.)]

8. Quære—If a sequestration not issued until the levari on which it is founded is out of return, be not void, although the benefice was in the bishop's hands under a prior sequestration?—Hogg v. Garrett, 12 I. E. R. 559. (C.)

LXXXIV. 2. Execution and Effect of: what may be Sequestrated.

9. The decree declared that the estate therein mentioned was divisible into three parts, and that the younger children of A., B., and O., were severally entitled to a third. O. was largely indebted to the estate, and a sequestration issued, and continued against him until his death; by means of which sums were brought in from time to time, and allocated according to the rights of the parties. Two of O.'s younger children died before any of the funds were allocated, and the Master's report found that sums (being their shares of the fund then in bank) were payable to their personal representatives. O. became entitled as executor and sole legatee of one of his deceased children, and as administrator and sole next-of-kin of the other, to both their shares, but made no claim, there being a sequestration against him. He died, owing a large balance to the fund, and the proportion of that balance to which his younger children should have been entitled exceeded the amount of the shares. T., another of O.'s younger children, having become legal personal representative of his deceased father and brothers, now applied for the aforesaid shares, after payment of the costs due to their solicitor. Held, that when O. became entitled to this money it was attached for the purposes of the decree by the sequestration against him, and should not now be paid to his representative.—Crone v. O'Dell, 3 I. E. R. 12. (R.)

10. The case of Waite v. Bishop (1 Cr. M. & R. 507) decides expressly that a sequestration is not retrospective, and that it attaches the future accruing profits only.—Egan v. Heenan, 3 I. E. R. 53. (R.)

11. A judgment is not per se a lien upon a benefice, but is attached thereon by a sequestration, which, however, will not give the judgment creditor priority over an annuitant who became such after the judgment was entered, but before the sequestration issued.—Wise v. Beresford, 5 I. E. R. 407; 3 Dr. & War. 276; 2 Con. & L. 282. (C.)

12. A sequestration having issued against the deft. for non-performance of a decree to pay money to the ptf., the sequestrators seized the rents and profits of his lands. The ptf. and a prior incumbrancer both applied for the funds in the sequestrator's hands. Held, that the prior incumbrancer was entitled to them.

Sequestration is neither in form or substance an execution. It is founded on default of performance of the decree of the Court, and gives no right in the funds levied, to the party at whose instance it is sued out.—Burne v. Robinson, 7 I. E. R. 188. (R.)

13. When an attachment, issued against a tenant under the Court, cannot be executed by reason of his being out of the jurisdiction, the Court will grant a sequestration against the tenant having other lands in this country.—Withington v. Blake, 8 I. E. R. 32. (R.)

14. When a sequestration for contempt in not answering has been issued against a deft., and the sequestrators are in possession, the Court will not permit the bill to be taken pro confesso if the ptf. elect to continue the sequestrators.—Cormick v. C., 9 I. E. R. 474. (R.)

15. A decree in sequestration is only a conditional decree, and will not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations, or of the 81st G. O.—Young v. Wilton, 10 I. E. R. 265. (C.)—[Affg. 10 I. E. R. 10. (R.)]

16. Sequestration may be awarded against a married woman's separate estate for costs given against her.—Keogh v. Cathcart, 11 I. E. R. 280. (R.)—[Rev'd.: 12 I. E. R. 215. (C.)]

1. Money in the sheriff's hands, levied under an attachment for costs awarded by a decree, remains in custodia legis, and is not, without further order, the property of the party who issued the attachment.

A., and B. (A.'s solicitor), issued for costs an attachment against C., who paid the amount to the sheriff, and lodged with him a sequestration against A. for a larger amount. Held, that, without the order of the Court, the sheriff was not justified in paying to the sequestrators the amount received on the attachment.

Costs are decreed to be paid by C. to A., or to B., A.'s solicitor. An attachment for the amount of the costs is delivered to the sheriff. C., having a demand against A., issues a sequestration for it; pays the costs to the sheriff; and lodges the sequestration with him. Seemle—If the money be paid into Court, B.'s lien for costs will prevail over C.'s sequestration.—Williams v. Reeves 12 I. C. R. 174. (R.)

LXXXIV. 3. Abatement and Discharge of.

2. In 1818 a decree directed a deft. to perform an agreement to pay certain sums. A sequestration was granted to compel performance. Upon application of a creditor by judgment of 1839, the Court refused to interfere with the possession of the sequestrators.—Reeves v. Cox, 1 I. Jur. 169. (R.)—[Reversed on appeal, ibid, 193; 13 I. E. R. 207. (C.)]

LXXXIV. 4. Sequestrator.

4. Service of the decree substituted on deft.'s law and land agent, on an affidavit of ptf.'s attorney, that deft. was influenced in leaving the country by the decree pronounced against him.—Blackwood v. Gregg, Hay. & Jon. 403. (E.E.)

5. Service of subpœna to appear and answer a tithe-bill substituted, by posting it with a copy of the order, on the doors of the church and of the R. C. chapel in the parish, and also on the place for posting notices for road sessions. The attorney for ptf. was directed to apprise defts. of the order by post-paid letters. A writ of assistance, to effect the posting, was granted.—Fitzgerald v. Dea, 1 Jon. 249. (E.E.)

6. Service of subpœna to appear and answer, on a minor at a school in France, substituted on his father residing in Guernsey; it appearing that the minor could not, by reasonable diligence, be personally served, though it did not appear that he was secreted, or withdrawn to avoid the service.—Loveday v. D'Esterre, 1 Jon. 561. (E.E.)

7. Service on respondent, of the conditional order for a receiver on a judgment, will be substituted when he keeps out of the way to avoid service.—Armitage v. Palmer, 1 Jon. 594. (E.E.)

8. Service of the conditional order for a receiver on a judgment will be substituted when the consor's heir-at-law resides out of the jurisdiction.—Wilson v. W., 1 Jon. 629. (E.E.)

9. Service of the subpœna substituted on the law and land agents of deft., who resided out of the jurisdiction, but whose residence was not precisely known.—Callaghan v. Pepper, 2 Jon. 46. (E.E.)

10. Service of the subpœna substituted on deft.'s general agent, when deft. resided abroad, but the place of his residence was unknown, though it did not appear that he was secreted, or withdrawn to avoid being served.—Somers v. Conolly, 1 I. E. R. 416. (R.)

11. A deft. out of the jurisdiction, and directed to execute a conveyance pursuant to the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 8, on hearing the messenger coming into the room where he was sitting, ordered the door to be barred. The messenger heard deft.'s voice, but did not see him; and, standing outside the door, stated in a loud voice the object of his visit, offering at the same time to leave copies of the decree, order, and conveyance, with deft.'s son and daughter. They refused to receive them. The son forcibly turned the messenger out of the house. The messenger then sent to deft.'s residence a notice, and a copy of the Court's order, with an explanatory letter (which there was strong evidence that deft. had received), appointing a time and place for deft. to execute the conveyance. The deft. did not execute it. Held, good personal service of the copies of the order and decree, and a sufficient tender of the conveyance, within the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78.—Piers v. P., S. & Sc. 89. (R.)

12. A deft., residing out of the jurisdiction, was directed to execute a conveyance under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 8. Having been denied at his residence, the messenger saw deft. in the house through an open window; informed deft. of the object of his visit, and left copies of the order and deed on a table inside the window, requiring deft. at the same time to execute the deed.—Held, that personal service of the order, and tender of the deed, had been effected sufficiently to give the Court jurisdiction to direct the Master to execute the deed.—Clarke v. De Burgh, S. & S. 100, n. (R.)

1. Ptf., residing abroad, was described in the bill as of "C., in the county of T.," where he had a house and estate. This misdescription was not intended to mislead. Def. was throughout aware that ptf. resided abroad. Def. made fruitless efforts to settle the suit. The monthly notice pressing for an answer was served; and some further time given deft. to file his answer nearly expired. Held, that he had clearly waived his original right to require security for costs.—Watson v. Pim, 2 I. E. R. 26; S. & Sc. 642. (R.)

2. Service of a subpoena to elect will not be substituted upon the solicitor of a deft. who has gone abroad; but will be substituted upon another deft. who is also co-trustee, if it appears that he acts for, or communicates with his co-deft.—Waller v. Fowler, S. & Sc. 702. (R.)

3. The 2nd G. O., of Feb. 1839, applies to cases in which service has been substituted against a deft. residing out of the jurisdiction.—Wise v. Bp. of Cork, Fl. & K. 390. (R.)

4. When a party, who has been ordered to pay costs, absents himself, to evade personal demand, and service of the certificate of the costs, the H. L. will direct service to be substituted on his agents in the appeal.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 708, n.

5. Service of subpoena to elect, on a deft. resident out of the jurisdiction, substituted on his land agent; service of the subpoena to appear and answer had been substituted upon his law and land agent.—Callaghan v. Pepper, 2 Jon. 505. (E.E.)

6. On an application under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, the Court will not substitute service of a subpoena to answer, upon a person who has been appointed receiver upon the deft.'s lands, in a cause in Ch., unless it can be sworn that he remits the rents to the deft.—Butler v. Gould, Long. & T. 270. (E.E.)

7. Service of process under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, allowed, and appearance entered, when the affidavit of service was sworn before a Justice of Peace, of the county of M., in America, and the deft. was not personally known to the person who served the process.—Atkinson v. Watson, Long. & T. 108. (E.E.)

8. The 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, does not authorise the Court to substitute the service of a subpoena to appear and answer upon the agent of a party made a deft. in respect of a charge he has on the lands, the subject of the suit; the manifest intention of the Act being, to authorise the service to be substituted upon the agent or receiver of the owner of the estate.—Maclean v. The Marquis of Donegal, 3 I. E. R. 383. (E.E.)

9. On a bill against the directors of an English Insurance Company for payment of the amount of a policy of insurance, service of the subpoena to appear and answer was substituted on the Irish agent of the directors; it appearing that the contract, the subject-matter of the suit, was made in Ireland.—Ahearne v. Harney, 3 I. E. R. 479. (R.)

10. A receiver, appointed by the Court of Ch. in an adverse suit, is not the receiver of the inheritor within the meaning of the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82.

The 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, does not authorise the Court to substitute service of the subpoena to appear on the law agent of the deft.—Anon., 3 I. E. R. 501. (E.E.)

11. Ordered, that service of a conditional order to appoint a receiver in a matter, by delivering true copies, and showing the original to the respondent's servant, residing in his dwelling-house in Ireland, and to his land and law agents, be deemed good service of the respondent; it appearing that for upwards of the last twelve months he had been resident in France.—Lynskey v. Handcock, 5 I. E. R. 403. (R.)

12. In proceeding under the Judgment Creditors Acts, to substitute service upon the agents of the respondent, out of the jurisdiction, the proper course is, to effect the service in the first instance, and then apply to have it deemed good.—Murphy v. Moore, 6 I. E. R. 263. (R.)

13. In a petition under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16, service of a conditional order on ratepayers was allowed, when the tithe rent-charge-payers could not be discovered.—Knox v. Marley, Long. & T. 159. (E.E.)

14. The affidavit to ground a motion for liberty to substitute service of the subpoena to appear and answer, because the deft. cannot, by reasonable diligence, be personally served, must state specifically the diligence used to effect personal service, in order that the Court may judge whether it is reasonable.—Hearne v. Nagle, 5 I. E. R. 158. (E.E.)

15. When a parliamentary appearance has been entered for a deft., upon service effected in the country, he may afterwards, without any order obtained for that purpose, be served out of the jurisdiction with the monthly notice to press for an answer.

Semble—It is not necessary to obtain an order to serve any conditional decree out of the jurisdiction.—Curtis v. C., Fl. & K. 208. (R.)

16. When a deft., who is merely a formal party to a suit, resides out of the jurisdiction,

1. Money in the sheriff's hands, levied under an attachment for costs awarded by a decree, remains in custody de jure, and is not, without further order, the property of the party who issued the attachment.

A. and B. A.'s solicitor, issued for costs an attachment against C., who paid the amount to the sheriff, and lodged with him a sequestration against A. for a larger amount. Held, that, without the order of the Court, the sheriff was not justified in paying to the sequestrators the amount received on the attachment.

Costs are decreed to be paid by C. to A., or to B., A.'s solicitor. An attachment for the amount of the costs is delivered to the sheriff. C., having a demand against A., issues a sequestration for it; pays the costs to the sheriff; and lodges the sequestration with him. Scotch.—If the money be paid into Court, B.'s lien for costs will prevail over C.'s sequestration.—Williams v. Pim, 2 I. E. R. 26; S. & Sc. 642. (R.)

2. Service of a subpoena to elect will not be substituted upon the solicitor of a def't. who has gone abroad; but will be substituted upon another def't. who is also co-trustee, if it appears that he acts for, or communicates with his co-def't.—Waller v. Fowler, S. & Sc. 702. (R.)

3. The 2nd G. O., of Feb. 1839, applies to cases in which service has been substituted against a def't. residing out of the jurisdiction.—Wise v. Bp. of Cork, Fl. & K. 390. (R.)

4. When a party, who has been ordered to pay costs, absents himself, to evade personal demand, and service of the certificate of the costs, the H. L. will direct service to be substituted on his agents in the appeal.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 708, n.

5. Service of subpoena to elect, on a def't. resident out of the jurisdiction, substituted on his land agent; service of the subpoena to appear and answer had been substituted upon his law and land agent.—Callaghan v. Pepper, 2 Jon. 505. (E.E.)

6. On an application under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, the Court will not substitute service of a subpoena to answer, upon a person who has been appointed receiver upon the def't.'s lands, in a cause in Ch., unless it can be sworn that he remits the rents to the def't.—Butler v. Gould, Long. & T. 270. (E.E.)

7. Service of process under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, allowed, and appearance entered, when the affidavit of service was sworn before a Justice of Peace, of the county of M., in America, and the def't. was not personally known to the person who served the process.—Atkinson v. Watson, Long. & T. 108. (E.E.)

8. The 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, does not authorise the Court to substitute the service of a subpoena to appear and answer upon the agent of a party made a def't. in respect of a charge he has on the lands, the subject of the suit; the manifest intention of the Act being, to authorise the service to be substituted upon the agent or receiver of the owner of the estate.—Maclean v. The Marquis of Donegal, 3 I. E. R. 383. (E.E.)

9. On a bill against the directors of an English Insurance Company for payment of the amount of a policy of insurance, service of the subpoena to appear and answer was substituted on the Irish agent of the directors; it appearing that the contract, the subject-matter of the suit, was made in Ireland.—Ahearne v. Harney, 3 I. E. R. 479. (R.)

10. A receiver, appointed by the Court of Ch. in an adverse suit, is not the receiver of the inheritor within the meaning of the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82.

The 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, does not authorise the Court to substitute service of the subpoena to appear on the law agent of the def't.—Anon., 3 I. E. R. 501. (E.E.)

11. Ordered, that service of a conditional order to appoint a receiver in a matter, by delivering true copies, and showing the original to the respondent's servant, residing in his dwelling-house in Ireland, and to his land and law agents, be deemed good service of the respondent; it appearing that for upwards of the last twelve months he had been resident in France.—Lynskey v. Handcock, 5 I. E. R. 403. (R.)

12. In proceeding under the Judgment Creditors Acts, to substitute service upon the agents of the respondent, out of the jurisdiction, the proper course is, to effect the service in the first instance, and then apply to have it deemed good.—Murphy v. Moore, 6 I. E. R. 263. (R.)

13. In a petition under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16, service of a conditional order on ratepayers was allowed, when the tithe rent-charge-payers could not be discovered.—Knox v. Marley, Long. & T. 159. (E.E.)

14. The affidavit to ground a motion for liberty to substitute service of the subpoena to appear and answer, because the def't. cannot, by reasonable diligence, be personally served, must state specifically the diligence used to effect personal service, in order that the Court may judge whether it is reasonable.—Hearne v. Nagle, 5 I. E. R. 158. (E.E.)

15. When a parliamentary appearance has been entered for a def't., upon service effected in the country, he may afterwards, without any order obtained for that purpose, be served out of the jurisdiction with the monthly notice to press for an answer.

Semble—It is not necessary to obtain an order to serve any conditional decree out of the jurisdiction.—Curtis v. C., Fl. & K. 208. (R.)

16. When a def't., who is merely a formal party to a suit, resides out of the jurisdiction,

Semble—The bill ought merely to pray the usual process of subpoena against him.—Wal-lace v. Mitchell, 6 I. E. R. 656. (E.E.)

1. Service of subpoena to appear and answer, on deft. resident in America, U. S., authenticated by affidavit sworn before the Vice-Chancellor of the Northern Circuit of the State in which the deft. resided, the Vice-Chancellor's signature and office being certified by the British Consul.—Reynolds v. M'Gawley, 6 I. E. R. 78. (R.)

2. When it appeared that no British Consul, or military officer acting under the authority of the Queen of England, was resident within 900 miles of a deft. in an equity suit, who resided in the U. S. of America, so that service of the subpoena to appear and answer on such deft. might be authenticated before such person; the Court ordered that such service be authenticated by an affidavit made before any magistrate in the State in which the deft. resided, and that such affidavit should be authenticated by a public notary of such state.—Eyre v. Dwyer, 6 I. E. R. 79, note. (R.)

3. When a judgment creditor out of the jurisdiction has been served with subpoena and notice under the 22nd and 15th G. O., and the memorandum entered under the 16th G. O., it is not necessary to enter a parliamentary appearance, and take the bill pro confesso against the party, in order to bind him by the proceedings.—Burroughs v. Molloy, 7 I. E. R. 6. (R.)

4. When a receiver, against whom an order for an attachment has been made, conceals himself so that his residence is unknown, service of an order to put his recognizance in suit will be substituted on his solicitor, with whom he is in communication.—O'Farrell v. M'Can, 7 I. E. R. 63. (R.)

5. When defts. out of the jurisdiction have given authority to a solicitor to file a charge for them in a suit, the Court will, in another suit, conversant about the property the subject of that charge, order that service of the subpoena to appear and answer the bill in the latter suit be substituted on the solicitor who filed and verified the charge.—Luckie v. Forsyth, 7 I. E. R. 181. (R.)

6. The Court will substitute service of subpoena, against defts. out of the jurisdiction, upon the solicitor who acted for them in a proceeding still pending in relation to the same rights in which they are defts. in the cause.—M'Loughlin v. M'L., 8 I. E. R. 157. (R.)

7. The Court will substitute service of subpoena against defts. out of the jurisdiction, upon the solicitor who acted for them in a proceeding still pending in relation to the same rights in which they are defts. in the cause.—M'Loughlin v. M'L., 8 I. E. R. 157. (R.)

8. When judgment creditors out of the jurisdiction are Peers, it is not necessary that they should be served with a copy of the bill, along with the letters missive; the 15th G. O. is applicable to the case of all parties who should otherwise have answered.—Coburn v. Gregg, 8 I. E. R. 591. (R.)

9. When a deft. has not taken out a copy of the original bill, or answered it, and the ptf. amends by filing a new engrossment, it is not necessary, in order to entitle him to have the amended bill taken as confessed, that he should have served the deft.'s solicitor with a copy of the new engrossment, or of the amendments.

Quere—Whether the practice is the same, though the deft. has taken out a copy of the original bill, if he has not answered it?—Blake v. Peyton, 10 I. E. R. 231. (R.)

10. The deft. residing out of the jurisdiction, an order was made on the 12th of Dec. to substitute service of subpoena and notice on W, solicitor for the deft. in the transactions to which the suit related. The order did not state when the deft. was to appear, as required by the 31st G. O. when the subpoena is served out of Ireland. The subpoena required the deft. to appear in eight days, and to answer in two months. A side-bar rule having been entered by the ptf., a parliamentary appearance was entered on the 8th of Jan. On the 12th of March the deft. entered a common appearance. Held, that if the order of the 12th Dec. was irregular in not stating where the deft. was to appear, the irregularity was waived by the common appearance.

Semble—The proceedings were regular; for when an order is made under the general authority of the Court, to substitute service on the solicitor of a deft. residing out of the jurisdiction, the service is to be considered a service within the jurisdiction, and the deft. must appear and answer within the time limited by the 31st G. O., as mentioned in the notice.—Johnston v. Tottenham, 11 I. E. R. 271. (R.)

11. One of three conuzors of a recognizance, while out of the jurisdiction, filed a bill against one of the others, and obtained a receiver. Service, of the writ of sci. fa. upon the recognizance, on the attorney of the ptf. in the suit, was deemed good service upon the ptf., a copy being sent through the Post-office.—Reg. v. Brown, 1 I. Jur. 162. (C.)

12. Some of the defts. had been served out of the jurisdiction with subpoenas, but did not appear; none of them had answered the bill, although the time allowed for that purpose had expired as to all. Held, that the case came within the meaning of the 25th G. O., that parliamentary appearances should be entered for the defts. who had been served out of the jurisdiction; and that the cause be set down for hearing pro confesso.—Fitz Gerald v. Quinlan, 12 I. E. R. 393. (E.E.)

1. When a debt, having an interest in the lands and premises in the bill mentioned, had sailed for Australia, and was on the high seas, the Court refused to grant an absolute order to substitute service of a subpoena to appear and answer against him, upon parties in this country; and only granted a conditional order to substitute service upon them on terms of the subpoena being personally served on the parties in this country, and being made returnable in twelve months, so as to enable the debt. to appear and answer.—M^cGusty v. Frazer, 12 I. E. R. 395. (E.E.)

2. Service of a conditional order for sale substituted, by leave of the Court, on the attorney of the principal owner, who had left the country.

There being minor owners, also out of the country, the Court appointed a guardian, in the same interest with them, on whom service for them might be substituted.—In re Purcell, 2 I. Jur. 14. (I.E.C.)

3. A suit by a simple contract creditor, to attach a rentcharge on the separate estate of a married woman, is within the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82 (Service of Process Act).—Copperthwaite v. Tuile, 18 I. E. R. 68. (R.)

4. Substitution of notice of a cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act 1850.—Power v. Shanahan, 3 I. Jur. 4. (C.)

5. Service of a notice of a petition on "a man-servant at the porter's lodge" is not sufficient.—Power v. Lord Mountcashel, 3 I. Jur. 76. (C.)

6. The Court has no power to order service of a notice of a petition under the Trustee Relief Act, out of the jurisdiction. When the parties interested resided abroad, the Court ordered the petition to stand over until a cause petition should be filed.—Ex parte Crawford, 2 I. C. R. 573. (R.)

7. A cause petition was filed for recovery of rent on foot of a lease. The tenant had died, and appointed A., B., and C. executors. A., one of the respondents, alone proved the will, and then assigned to X., who assigned to a pauper; the petition sought to make the assets of the testator liable for the rent. A. resided abroad. B., the co-executor, was his father, and a solicitor residing within the jurisdiction of the Court, and a legatee under the will. W., another son of B., was also a solicitor, lived in the same house with him, and prepared the assignment to X. Agency to A. was denied both by B. and W., the latter saying that in preparing the assignment he acted only for the assignee, X., and not for A. Held, that the circumstances implied agency to A. in B. and W.; and service of notice of the cause petition on B. and W. was directed to be deemed good service on A.—Westby v. Ford, 6 I. Jur. 165. (R.)

8. Notice of filing a cause petition was directed to be served on a respondent who was of unsound mind, and out of the jurisdiction, by serving the keeper of the lunatic asylum, and the friend of the lunatic in London. And liberty was given to the petitioner to appoint a guardian ad litem, if the respondent's friends should neglect to do so.—Bell v. Johnston, 7 I. Jur. 89. (R.)

9. An order to substitute service of a cause petition having been made, it abated by the sole petitioner's death. His executor was permitted to file a petition in the nature of a petition of revivor, and to substitute service of notice thereof in the same manner as the previous order had directed the original petition to be served.—Synge v. S., 7 I. Jur. 101. (R.)

10. The fact that assets consist partly of stock, will not give jurisdiction to the Court to order service out of the jurisdiction in an administration suit.—Freeman v. F., 4 I. C. R. 39. (R.)

11. When a cause petition is filed against a respondent of unsound mind, but not found so by commission, who has no wife, child, or servant on whom service can be effected, but resides in a lunatic asylum, the Court will direct service to be substituted upon the keeper of the asylum and the immediate relations of the lunatic; and in the event of their not appointing a guardian ad litem, the petitioner will be allowed to do so.—Cooper v. C., 1 I. Jur. N. S. 227. (R.)

12. The Masters have jurisdiction, in cases referred to them under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, to make orders to substitute service.—Splaine v. S., 10 I. C. R. 49. (R.)

13. The Masters have jurisdiction to make orders for substitution of service, in cases referred to them under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15.

The M. R. will not make such orders in those cases.—Splaine v. S., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 316. (R.)

14. The recognizance of a tenant under the Court was put in suit against G., one of the tenant's sureties, who resided out of the jurisdiction, and whose solicitor in this country acknowledged in writing, on his behalf, service of notice of the proceedings. A writ of sci. fa. having been issued; Seemle—that the Court had jurisdiction to direct substitution of service of the writ on G.'s solicitor.—The Queen v. Gibbings, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 44. (C.)

15. A recognizance having been put in suit against one of the conuzors, resident out of the jurisdiction, service of a writ of sci. fa., by transmitting a copy of it through the post, by a registered letter addressed to him, and by serving the writ on his solicitor, in an independent suit, was deemed good service.

Seemle—Motions on the Petty-bag side of the Court must be made in Term.—The Queen v. Swan, 16 I. C. R. 21. (C.)

16. T., living in Rio de Janeiro, instructed his London solicitors to appear for him in administration suits pending in Ireland. They employed an Irish solicitor to appear therein, who corresponded with them, but never with T., whose exact address they were and are ignorant of.

Another cause petition relating to claims of T. in those suits was filed. Held (reversing the Rolls decision), that a motion for leave to substitute service for T. on the Irish solicitor should be granted.

A., residing in London, appeared as respondent in the administration suits by another Irish solicitor, K., but did not instruct him to appear for her in the latter suit. Held, that service should be substituted for A. on K.—Barry v. M'Carthy, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 361. (C.A.)

The mode of service under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, was regulated by the G. Orders 1851-2, 3, 4, 82.

LXXXV. 1. b. Under the Chancery Ireland Act 1867.

By sec. 54, the old practice of service of Writ of Subpœna is abolished:—And by secs. 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, the printed copy of the bill is to be served instead.

The mode of service is regulated by G. O. 1867-21, 22, 25, 26, 30, 33, and 35 to 40.

1. It appearing to be for the benefit of the inheritor, a lunatic, the Court, on ptf.'s application after decree, stayed the proceedings of another creditor in Chancery, and directed him to file a charge under the decree; the Exchequer creditor consenting that the Chancery costs should be included in the report, if any sum was found due to the creditor in the Chancery suit, but not otherwise.—Lynch v. Skerrett, 2 Jon. 508. (E.E.)

2. Ptf. resided out of the jurisdiction. His bill was reported prolix. The Court restrained him from proceeding in the cause until he paid the costs of the reference and report of prolixity, though deft. had not compelled ptf. to give security for costs.—La Touche v. Lawlor, 2 Jon. 629. (E.E.)

3. The amount claimed in a suit for title composition was £6. 1s. 5d. No difficulty in recovering it at law existed. Proceedings were, therefore, stayed on payment without costs of that amount.

The Court will more freely exercise this control over the conduct of its suitors when a solicitor is the real ptf.—Disney v. Taaffe, S. & Sc. 105. (R.)—[Affirmed: 1 Dr. & Wal. 94. (C.)]

4. A motion, to stay ptf.'s proceedings until he shall give security for costs, should be made as early as possible; but circumstances may exist under which such a motion would not ever be too late.

The proceedings of a ptf., who had misdescribed his residence in the bill, were stayed until, &c.—Home v. Thompson, S. & Sc. 622. (R.)

5. It is not necessary to apply to ptf.'s solicitor before serving notice of a motion to stay ptf.'s proceedings until he shall give security for costs.—Shaw v. Dempsey, S. & Sc. 628. (R.)

6. A motion, to stay ptf.'s proceedings until, &c., was refused with costs, because deft.'s affidavit to support the motion misrepresented some material facts, and suppressed others.

Quære—Can such a motion be sustained, after a decree to account has been pronounced?—Murphy v. Archall, S. & Sc. 630. (R.)

7. A London stockbroker, whose name was still used in the firm there, was appointed executor of one who had contracted to grant a lease of mines in Ireland, for a large sum. He filed his bill for specific performance; and, in his affidavit to oppose a motion to stay his proceedings until, &c., stated that he had given up his residence in England, and had at some expense removed his family to Ireland, where he had taken a permanent residence. In one passage he stated that he intended to reside in Ireland altogether, but the other passages were qualified by a statement, that he intended to reside in Ireland until this suit, and all other affairs of the testator in Ireland, should have been finally settled and arranged. The motion was refused, without costs.—Pike v. Vigors, S. & Sc. 635. (R.)

8. When a party desires to restrain proceedings at law upon a judgment after an execution has been issued, the amount marked on the writ, and the costs at law, must generally be lodged in Court, or satisfactorily secured.—Rogan v. Weir, S. & Sc. 677. (R.)

1. A lease under the Court having expired, the tenant removed his property from the premises, owing upwards of a year's rent. The receiver had obtained a conditional order for liberty to put in suit the sureties' recognizance. By previous arrangement, W., one of the sureties, was the real tenant, who enjoyed the premises to his sole use, and always paid the rent, the nominal tenant having merely lent his name, and being insolvent. The other surety, C., had consented to join in the recognizance, because W. promised him an indemnity. The Court refused to stay proceedings against C., until it should appear that a proceeding against W. would be fruitless.—Meehan v. Cusack, 1 I. E. R. 370. (R.)

2. Ptf. resided abroad. Motion, to stay proceedings until, &c., refused with costs, deft. being aware of the residence abroad, but delaying his application until a negotiation opened by him for an amicable settlement, terminated unsuccessfully; until several months had elapsed after the notice pressing for his answer; and until the further time given him by ptf. to file his answer had nearly expired. Held, that deft. had waived his objection, since, if he meant to rely on it, he should have come immediately, or at least when served with notice, to press.

A ptf., residing abroad, but having a residence and estate at C., in the county of T., was described as of "C., in the county of T.," without further addition. Held, not a misdescription.—Watson v. Pim, 2 I. E. R. 26; S. & Sc. 642. (R.)

3. When it appears by the bill that the ptf. reside out of the jurisdiction, deft.'s motion, to stay proceedings until, &c., is a motion of course.—Lord Yarborough v. Brazier, 2 I. E. R. 463. (R.)

4. When a bill is filed for relief, which ptf. might obtain under the decree in another cause—Seemle a demurrer for want of equity on that ground cannot be supported.

The proper course is, to obtain a restraining order.—D'Arcy v. Beytagh, Fl. & K. 481. (R.)

5. A femme covert and infants, as co-plaintiffs, by one next friend, filed a bill in Vacation. Deft. filed a demurrer within the month allowed by the rules of the Court; and, when filing it, served ptf. with notice that he would apply, on the sitting of the Court, to have the proceedings stayed until security for costs was given, or the next friend was changed. Held, that deft. had not taken any step that prevented his making that application; that, though poverty is not a sufficient objection to the next friend of an infant, yet the femme covert and the infants having the same next friend, the proceedings might be stayed; and that they must be stayed as to all the parties, or not at all.

In such a case, the form of the order is, that the proceedings be stayed until the next friend of the femme covert be changed, or security for costs be given.—Drinan v. Mannix, 5 I. E. R. 162, 190; 3 Dr. & War. 154; 2 Con. & L. 87. (C.)

6. Proceedings stayed against one of several defts. in a tithe suit, upon payment of the sums decreed against him, and the costs of the cause and motion, save so far as the costs of the cause related exclusively to the other defts.—Ould v. Griffin, 8 I. E. R. 512. (E.E.)

7. Until the deft. in the original cause has answered, he is not entitled to call on the ptf. to answer the cross-bill. Before the deft. in the original cause has answered, he cannot stay the proceedings in that cause till the deft. in the cross-cause (the ptf. in the original), though out of the jurisdiction, shall answer the cross-bill. After answering the original bill, the ptf. in the cross-cause can stay publication in the original cause till the cross-bill be answered.—Raikes v. Cherry, 9 I. E. R. 140. (R.)

8. When the bill required, by the note at foot, one deft. only to answer, though subpoenas to answer were prayed against others, and the interrogating part was not divided or numbered—Held, not irregular, within the meaning of the 12th G. O.

If a bill be irregular, in consequence of the interrogating part not being divided or numbered, the proper course is, to stay the proceedings; not to move to take it off the file.—Burne v. B., 9 I. E. R. 205. (R.)

9. When the ptf.'s bill has been dismissed with costs, for want of prosecution, the deft. is entitled to stay him in another suit for the same object, until the costs of the first suit are paid.

The merits of the case cannot be discussed on the motion.—Montgomery v. Johnson, 9 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

10. When there are several suits, and a decree having been obtained in one, proceedings in the others are stayed, the ptf. in the stayed suits are personally liable, in the first instance, to pay the costs, of the several defts.—O'Keeffe v. Holmes, 1 I. Jur. 78. (R.)—[Affid.: ibid, 125. (C.)]

11. When a tenant under the Court, relying upon a legal technicality, has replevied goods distrained by a receiver, the Court will restrain the replevin suit, though the receiver has voluntarily taken steps in it; and will direct an account of the rent due to be taken by its own officer.—Whitelaw v. Sandys, 1 I. Jur. 150; 12 I. E. R. 396. (E.E.)

12. When two suits have been instituted to raise charge upon an estate, and a decree has been pronounced in the first, if important questions be raised in the second, the Court will not, by staying proceedings, deprive the ptf. of the benefit of those questions at the hearing.—Hamilton v. Syngé, 1 I. Jur. 201. (R.)

1. When the tenants admitted that some rent was due, and paid money on account, the Court made an order restraining them from proceeding with a replevin suit.

Semble—If the tenant plead non tenuit, the Court will not interfere.—Morrissey v. Fitzpatrick, 1 I. Jur. 225. (R.)

2. The Court will not stay proceedings in a replevin suit by a tenant, unless there has been some irregularity, and the receiver is liable to be defeated on technical grounds.—O'Brien v. Bernard, 1 I. Jur. 266. (R.)

3. When an order for a sale of lands has been made by the Commissioners for the Sale of Incumbered Estates, and a certificate thereof has been transmitted to the Court of Ch., the latter Court is bound by the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 42, to stay all suits or proceedings in which a decree for sale of the same lands has been pronounced. When no such decree has been made, that sec. leaves it at the discretion of the Court whether or not to stay any other suits and proceedings, even although their object should be to procure a decree for a sale of the same lands.

Subsequently to the institution of a foreclosure suit, and to the filing of the answer of defts. in that suit, who were incumbancers prior to the ptf., a petition was presented by a near relative of those defts., in the I. E. Court, and an order was made thereon for a sale of the mortgaged premises. Afterwards a motion was made under the 82nd G. O. of 1843, on behalf of those defts., to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution: this Court refused that motion with costs; but proprio motu, stayed the suit.—Bernard v. Bond, 1 I. C. R. 198; 2 I. Jur. 311. (C.)

4. A creditor's suit to administer the real and personal estate of a deceased testator was in the list for hearing at the time of the institution of a suit by a legatee, who could have obtained substantial relief in the creditor's suit, in which, shortly after, a decree to account was pronounced. Subsequently, on the petition of a creditor, the greater part of the real estate of the testator was ordered by the I. E. Court to be sold. This Court, being of opinion that the legatee's suit was oppressively and wantonly instituted, refused, with costs, a motion under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 42, on behalf of the legatee, to stay his own suit; and ordered that, if he did not file a replication within a short specified period, his bill should stand dismissed, as against one of the principal defts., with costs, including the costs of a contemporaneous motion made on her behalf, for its dismissal for want of prosecution.

The construction of the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 42, adhered to, as laid down in Bernard v. Bond, in reference to staying proceedings in this Court, when lands, the subject of litigation here, have been ordered by the I. E. Court to be sold.—Money Penny v. Gibbings, 1 I. C. R. 201. (C.)

5. A distress was made by a receiver. The notice of distress did not contain all the particulars required by the statute. The tenants brought actions of replevin. The Court stayed the proceedings in replevin, on payment to the tenants of all their costs. The receiver was allowed credit for this amount out of the estate, but had to abide his own costs of the motion.—Graves v. G., 5 I. Jur. 309. (R.)

6. When the validity of an instrument under which the petitioners have obtained an order for a sale is impeached, the Court will not consider that question, but will stay the proceedings, imposing terms upon the party to proceed elsewhere.—In re Gerrard's Trusts, 6 I. Jur. 19. (I.E.C.)

7. A cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, was filed to raise the amount of a charge on lands. The order of reference was made, and a receiver appointed. No party but the petitioner proved a charge in the matter. The respondent paid the petitioner's charge and costs, and now moved to have a consent, to dismiss the petition and discharge the receiver, made a rule of Court. An order was made to stay the proceedings on the petition, and to make the consent a rule of Court.—Dwyer v. Baker, 6 I. Jur. 341. (R.)

8. An order was made on a solicitor to lodge a list of the credits he admitted against his bill of costs; but, through mistake, not limiting any time within which to lodge it. An attachment was issued against him for not complying with the order. An action at law was then brought against the petitioner, but not against his solicitor, for issuing the attachment. Held, that the Court had not jurisdiction to stay the proceedings at law, they not being against a solicitor or officer of the Court; but that the original order for lodging the list of credits might be amended, by inserting the time within which the list of credits should be lodged, reciting in the order that the omission was through mistake.—Bolton v. Carmichael, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 116. (R.)

9. The Court will not upon motion stay proceedings for foreclosure and sale, upon the grounds that a compromise had been entered into before the filing of the petition, but will leave the respondent either to proceed by cross petition for specific performance, or to file in the Master's office a discharge to the original petition.—Hall v. Woodcock, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 227. (R.)

10. Pending an action against an administratrix, a cause petition was filed to administer the assets. The Court, under the Ch. Reg. Act, sec. 22, stayed the proceedings, and refused to allow the ptf. the costs of the motion to stay, although, after the order of reference, the deft. had obtained an extension of time to plead.—Ellis v. Fawcett, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 27. (R.)

1. Service of a subpœna to elect will not be substituted upon the solicitor of a deft. who has gone abroad; but will be substituted upon another deft., who is a co-trustee, if it appears that he acts for, or communicates with, his co-deft.—Waller v. Fowler, S. & Sc. 702. (R.)

2. Service of subpœna to appear and answer, on deft. residing in U. S. America, authenticated by affidavit sworn before the V. Ch. of the Northern Circuit of the State in which deft. resided, the V. Ch.'s signature and office being certified by the British Consul—Held, good.—Reynolds v. McGawley, 6 I. E. R. 78. (R.)

3. When a minor is out of the jurisdiction, the Court will not substitute service of the subpœna out of the jurisdiction: the provisions of the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, must be complied with.—Tighe v. Walsh, 1 I. Jur. 36. (E.E.)

4. In a foreclosure suit, service of the subpœna to appear upon A. who had a power of attorney to sell from one of the trustees of a settlement, was deemed good service.—Steele v. Frazer, 1 I. Jur. 139. (R.)

LXXXIX.* Suitors' Fee Fund.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 180, 192, 193.]

8. The salary of the second Commissioner in Bankruptcy is not charged on the Suitors' Fee Fund in aid of the Bankruptcy and Compensation fund, but on the latter fund only. On a deficiency, the Court has not power to marshal the funds so as to provide for payment of the salaries of both Commissioners.—In re Commissioner of Bankrupt, 8 I. E. R. 257. (C.)

9. The Court of Chancery has not jurisdiction, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 23, 24, to make a charging order against cash standing to the credit of the Suitors' Fee Fund, and ordered to be paid to a judgment debtor on account of his pension as a retired Registrar of the Court.

Semble—Such a pension, though paid out of the Consolidated Fund, if the Suitors' Fee Fund proves insufficient, is not a government annuity within the Act.—Quin v. O'Keeffe, 9 I. C. R. 331; 4 I. Jur. N. S. 167. (R.)

10. A retired Registrar of the Court of Ch. was entitled to a pension, charged upon the Suitors' Fee Fund, under the Ch. Reg. Act (Ir.) 1850, s. 135. A quarterly instalment having become due, a judgment creditor obtained a charging order (10 I. C. L. R. 363, Q. B.), against it. Held, that the Court of Ch. had not jurisdiction to enforce that order.

Semble—The instalment was not liable to such attachment, not being money in Court in a suit or matter under the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court.—Quin v. O'Keeffe, 10 I. C. R. 151; 5 I. Jur. 65. (C.)—[On appeal, the case was compromised. 10 I. C. R. 262. (C.A.)]

XC. TAKING PLEADINGS OFF THE FILE.

11. When it is alleged that perjury has been committed in a material part of the answer, the Court will not, upon a motion to take the answer off the file in order that the deft. may be prosecuted, enquire into the prosecutor's motives for making the application.—Anon., H. & J. 600. (E.E.)

12. It is the right of the Att.-Gen., on the part of the Crown, to have an affidavit taken off the file of the Court, in order that the deponent may be prosecuted for perjury. Therefore, though the case be such that the application would not, if made by a private prosecutor, be granted, it will be granted on the Att.-Gen.'s application.—Greene v. Hogan, 2 Jones, 573. (E.E.)

13. An answer will not be permitted to be taken off the file for the purpose of prosecuting the deft. who has sworn it, for perjury, ex debito justitiæ. Such a case must be made for it as will justify the Court, exercising its discretion, in complying with the application.—Daly v. Toole, 2 Dr. & Wal. 599; 1 I. E. R. 344; Napier v. N., 2 Dr. & Wal. 604; 1 I. E. R. 414; 2 I. E. R. 17. (C.)

1. The answer was sworn in Dec. 1838; publication passed in May 1840. In H. Term 1841, the ptf. applied to take the answer off the file, in order to prosecute the deft. for perjury in it. Held, that the application was not too late.—Reeves v. Clarke, 3 I. E. R. 190. (E.E.)

2. A ptf. served notice to continue an injunction on equity confessed, without reserving the right to except. He afterwards filed exceptions to deft.'s answer. Held, that they were irregular, and must be taken off the file.—Crofts v. Lord Egmont, 3 I. E. R. 277; Fl. & K. 82. (R.)

3. The solicitor of a deceased tenant for life, under J.'s will, was restrained, on the remainderman's motion, from acting for an annuitant by title paramount, in whose name he had filed a bill against the sole trustee and executor of the will, and his son, the remainderman, alleging that the will had been prepared by that trustee (the testator's law agent), not according to testator's instructions; and, further, that the trustee had, as such law agent, by gross misrepresentation and fraud, and without testator's authority, procured from ptf. a release of the annuity; praying that the release might be set aside, and the arrears of the annuity raised out of testator's estate: it appearing that several statements in the bill were founded on information confidentially acquired by the solicitor, as solicitor and agent for the deceased tenant for life; but the Court declined to grant that part of the motion that sought to have the bill taken off the file.—McKiernan v. Kernan, 4 I. E. R. 255. (R.)

4. One of several co-ptfs. was imbecile when the bill was filed, and his name was used without authority. The Court refused to order the bill to be taken off the file.

Secus—If he had been sole ptf.

Quere—Under such circumstances, could the Court order the the imbecile ptf.'s name to be struck out of the bill?—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 225. (R.)

5. An application to take an affidavit off the file, in order to prosecute the deponent for perjury, will not be granted ex debito justitiæ. Before granting it, the Court will use circumspection. The applicant must, therefore, make a case sufficient to induce the Court to exercise its discretion in his favour.—Davis v. Nolan, 7 I. E. R. 559. (R.)

6. An application to take an affidavit off the file, in order to prosecute the deponent for perjury, though it will not be granted ex debito justitiæ, approaches very closely thereto. The Court will not scrutinise the grounds or merits of the prosecution, or the truth of the allegations on either side, but will give every facility to the applicant, provided he satisfies the Court that his application is not made for vindictive or unjust purposes.—Madden v. Woods, 8 I. E. R. 48. (R.)

7. In sci. fa., on a receiver's recognizance, the replication assigned as breaches, that the Master's certificate found a balance in his hands; and that, by two orders of Dec. 1843, that balance was directed to be lodged and invested in two several parts, which orders had not been obeyed. The rejoinder stated that the certificate directed part of the balance to be applied pursuant to an order of 1841 (different from the orders mentioned in the replication), and the rest to be invested; and that the Master had power to make, and the receiver was bound to obey that certificate. The facts were, that the directions in the certificate and order of 1841 had not been obeyed. Side-bar rules were entered to enforce them, in which rules the time only was different, and which were the orders mentioned in the replication. The rejoinder was taken off the file as being frivolous and filed for delay.—The Queen v. Beatty, 8 I. E. R. 132. (C.)

8. When, subsequently to the statute 13 & 14 Vic., c. 51, a sci. fa., at the Petty-bag side of the Court of Chancery, upon a recognizance entered into by a surety for a tenant of lands, which were the subject of a suit at the Equity side of the Court of Exchequer, after reciting the recognizance, proceeded thus:—"As by the said recognizance, which was on, &c., in, &c., duly enrolled in her Majesty's said Court of Exchequer, and now remaining as of record in our said Court of Chancery, by virtue of the statute in that case made and provided, might appear;" to which sci. fa. the deft. pleaded that the Court of Chancery ought not to have or take further cognizance of the action, because the recognizance was on, &c., duly enrolled in the Court of Exchequer, whereby that Court then and there acquired, and still retained and possessed, full jurisdiction and authority to award execution against him for the said sum of, &c., according to the tenor and effect of the recognizance, and which plea concluded with the following averment—viz., "that there is not any such record of the said supposed recognizance now remaining in her Majesty's said Court of Chancery as in said writ of sci. fa. is above alleged; and this the said deft. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment whether this Court can or will take further cognizance of the action aforesaid." Upon a motion at the Petty-bag side to take this plea off the file as irregular, as not having been verified by affidavit, and as being false and frivolous, this Court refused to make any rule.

Under the concluding part of the 13th sec. of the statute, such recognizances may, upon agreement between the Lord Chancellor and Lord Chief Baron, be delivered over to such persons as may be appointed by the Master of the Rolls. Sed quare, whether recognizances so transferred, become records of, and capable of being sued upon in, the Court of Chancery, unless perhaps by the Crown under its special privilege to select its Court?—The Queen v. Jones, 1 I. C. R. 524. (C.)

pose of instituting a prosecution for perjury; it being alleged that the document contained false statements. Held, reversing the order of the M. R., that the application is not so much one to be granted ex deb. jus. but that the Court will enquire into the motives which have led to the prosecution; and will not lend its aid when the object is plainly the gratification of malicious feelings, and when it is equally clear that the admitted false statement was neither wilful nor corrupt.—M'Gee v. M'Donnell, 4 I. Jur. 153. (C.)

2. The time for filing a bill of review is regulated by analogy to the time limited by the 6 G. 1, c. 6, for bringing a writ of error; i. e., twenty years after the judgment, and five years after the disability, if any, of the ptf. in error has been removed.—Kelly v. Lennon, 7 I. E. R. 98; 1 Jon. & L. 305. (C.)

3. Under the 86th G. O., the ten days' notice to be given of examining witnesses is exclusive both of the day of serving the notice and of the day named for commencing the examination.

The Court is not bound to suppress depositions in every case of irregularity; and when, from a misconception of the 86th Order, only nine days' notice of examining witnesses was given, but the examination was not commenced until after ten days, and no party was prejudiced thereby, and publication passed without objection, the Court refused to suppress the depositions.—Attorney-General v. Ball, 9 I. E. R. 463. (R.)

4. On a petition to quash a writ of error on a judgment of a Court of inferior jurisdiction, made returnable into the Court of C. P., the Lord Chancellor declined to adjudicate upon the petition, and directed the parties to proceed upon the writ in the C. P., and take the opinion of that Court.

XCIII. 4. a. Writ of Ne Exeat Regno, when granted.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 58: G. O. (1867) 185.]

6. A writ of ne exeat regno was granted against deft., on facts alone, which evidenced an intention in him to leave the kingdom, and thereby endanger the recovery of ptf.'s claim under a decree; and although deft., by affidavit, denied that he had any such intention, the Court refused to discharge him until he gave security for the amount of the writ.

It is not necessary that the going abroad should be with intent to avoid process, if the effect will be to endanger the recovery of the debt.—M'Gauran v. Furnell, S. & Sc. 263. (R.)

1. £4000 were vested in trustees for F. and his wife, for their lives, and, after their deaths, to pay the principal to their children, in such shares as they should appoint. £1200 were lost by improper investments. The tenants for life and their children filed a bill against the trustees, one of whom absconded. The other, C., arrested under a writ of ne exeat, marked for £1200, applied to be discharged, because there was not any present debt actually "due and payable" to any of the ptfs. Held, that, though from the nature of the trusts none of the c. q. t. had a present right to any part of the principal, yet the sum unaccounted for was a debt due in equity, demandable from deft. as a defaulting trustee, and sufficient to sustain the writ; that the writ, though not applied for until after a lapse of six months from the time when C. had made the declarations relied on, that he would leave the kingdom, yet the persons chiefly interested being infants, the Court was bound to attend to their interests, on the facts being stated.

An affidavit from which the Court can, without difficulty, ascertain the exact sum due, sets forth the amount of the debt with a certainty sufficient to ground a writ of ne exeat.—Waller v. Fowler, S. & Sc. 274. (R.)

2. After bill filed, praying an account, &c., a judgment creditor moved for a writ of ne exeat, to prevent deft., the conuzor's administrator, who threatened to leave the kingdom, from doing so. Held, that the motion should be refused, because the debt was a legal one; and ptf.'s affidavit was not positive that the assets had been received by deft.—Hill v. O'Hanlon, 2 I. E. R. 463. (R.)

3. The Court requires specific evidence of a party's intention to leave the country before the writ of ne exeat will be issued; a presumed intention is not sufficient.—Darley v. Nicholson, 1 Dr. & War. 66; 1 Con. & L. 207. (C.)

4. The applicant for a writ of ne exeat is bound to show that the person against whom it is sought is indebted to him in a sum certain and recoverable in equity.—Alder v. Ward, 5 I. E. R. 367. (R.)

5. On motion (after bill filed praying an account, &c.) by judgment creditor, for a writ of ne exeat regno, to prevent the deft., who was administrator of the conuzor, and threatened to leave the kingdom, from so doing, the Court refused the writ, inasmuch as the debt was a legal debt; and the ptf.'s affidavit was not positive that the assets had been received by the deft.—Hill v. O'Hanlon, 2 I. E. R. 463. (R.)

6. Upon a bill filed by a landlord against an enant, assignee of a lease for lives renewable for ever, the lessee having covenanted that he, or his heirs or assigns, would, within three months after the fall of each life, nominate another, and pay £11. 10s. renewal fine, praying that the deft. might be compelled to take out a renewal (one of the c. q. v. having dropped more than forty, and another more than ten years, and there being but one of them subsisting), and pay the arrear of rent and the renewal fines, and also the septennial fines and interest, calculated as in the case of a tenant's bill for a renewal; and that, as the deft. threatened to leave the country, a writ of ne exeat might issue, marked for the amount of the rent and fines, &c., so calculated;—the ptf. having moved for the ne exeat, Held, as to the arrear of rent, that it was properly recoverable at law, and therefore a ne exeat could not issue for it.

As to the renewal-fines, that they also being legal specific debts, were not properly the subject of a ne exeat; and that their being at all recoverable in equity, must depend on the question, as yet undecided, whether equity will enforce the specific performance of such a covenant, especially in this case, having regard to the laches of the landlord, and the apparently mutual abandonment of the covenant by both parties, for a great length of time.

As to the septennial fines and interest, even assuming that the ptf. must have a decree obliging the deft. to accept a renewal, and pay the fines, it did not follow that such a decree must give septennial fines and interest; these being the compensation given by the Court to a landlord when the tenant, as ptf., comes for a renewal, notwithstanding the forfeiture at law, and deprives the landlord of his legal right. If recoverable as damages for breach of covenant, they should therefore be recoverable by suit in equity; besides, their being damages, and unliquidated, would of itself form a distinct objection to issuing a ne exeat for them.

J., lessee for lives, by deed (in form of a lease for same lives, reserving larger rent), assigned the whole estate at law to O., who assigned all his estate and interest under the deed to W. After the assignment to W., the rent having fallen into arrear, J. brought an action against her to recover it, and was defeated by a plea that he had no reversion. He then filed a bill against her, and prayed that a ne exeat, marked for the amount of the arrear, might issue. Motion for the ne exeat refused, as it was not clear that J., should have a decree.—Alder v. Ward, 5 I. E. R. 367. (R.)

7. A writ of ne exeat regno granted against an executrix.—Winning v. English, 2 I. C. R. 572. (R.)

8. When the intention of a deft. to go abroad is only discovered during the progress of a suit, the writ will be granted, though not prayed by the bill.—Murdock v. M., 1 I. Jur. 284. (R.)

XCIII. 4. b. Discharge from Writ of Ne Exeat Regno.

9. On a motion for a writ of ne exeat, ptf. omitted to state that an appeal was pending. Held, not such a suppression of facts as formed a ground for discharging deft.—M'Gowan v. Furnell, S. & Sc. 263. (R.)

1. B., having been arrested under a writ of ne exeat, which was discharged afterwards for irregularity, commenced an action for false imprisonment against D., at whose instance the writ had issued. The Court, at D.'s instance, restrained the action, and refused to give B. any compensation; but gave him the costs of the motion, since this restraining order should have been made part of the original order setting aside the writ.—Darley v. Nicholson, 2 Dr. & War. 86; 1 Con. & L. 207. (C.)

2. A respondent is not entitled to his discharge from custody under a ne exeat regno, upon the ground that he was made amenable to that writ by an arrest under a warrant issued on informations sworn by the petitioner, in respect of the very matters which were in question in the suit; even though the prosecution instituted in pursuance of those informations be eventually abandoned, if the petitioner appear to have had a bona fide intention of prosecuting the criminal proceedings at the time of procuring the arrest on the warrant.—Kelly v. Birch, 3 I. C. R. 466; 7 I. Jur. 73. (C.)

C. chapel in the parish, and also on the place for posting notices for road sessions. Ptf.'s attorney was directed to apprise defts. of the order by post-paid letters.

A writ of assistance, to effect the posting, was granted.—Fitzgerald v. Dea, 1 Jon. 249. (E.E.)

4. A writ of assistance will not be granted to aid a receiver in distraining for rent.—White v. Phibbs, S. & Sc. 88. (R.)

5. A writ of assistance will only be granted to aid service of a writ, or in execution of process of the Court; but not to aid a receiver in levying a distress for rent, though the distress had previously been rescued.—Robinson v. Wynne, S. & Sc. 88. (R.)

6. A writ of assistance will not be granted to the sheriff, in executing an attachment directed to him which issued against a tenant under the Court, for non-payment of rent.—Meagher v. M., 1 Jon. & L. 31. (C.)

XCIII. 8. Generally: Writs of other kinds.

7. A purchaser under a decree, under colour of an injunction to put him into possession, dispossessed persons who claimed adversely to the title of the parties to the cause. The Court granted a writ of restitution to restore them to possession; and a reference to the officer to ascertain the amount of damages sustained by them in consequence of the ouster. The purchaser was ordered to pay those damages, with full costs: the applicants undertaking not to bring an action.—Anderson v. Barry, 2 Jon. 631. (E.E.)

8. The Court will permit the amendment of a sci. fa., by stating the recognizance, on which it issued, to be a joint, not a several one, after deft. has pleaded.—Reg. v. Fennell, 1 Dr. & Wal. 511. (C.)

9. A sheriff seized under a writ of fi. fa., issued out of this Court, under 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, at the suit of the ptf., who refused to indemnify him against claims to the goods made by the parties. The Court enlarged the time for making the return.—Bowyer v. Blair, Fl. & K. 385, 586. (R.)

The lessor assigned his interest. The assignee purchased part of the tenant's interest. Held, that the assignee of the reversion could not take advantage of the condition; and that, the lands having been sold under a decree without such preference having been given, an exception to the title, on that ground, should be overruled.—*Sparrow v. I. PRESUMPTION OF TITLE.

2. By deed, in 1769, A. granted a perpetual yearly rentcharge of £134, payable out of lands held by him for three lives, perpetually renewable. The deed was lost. It appeared from a memorial thereof that A. had granted to B. and C., for the uses mentioned in the deed, a yearly rentcharge of £134, for ever, issuing out of the lands. The rentcharge was paid by the owner of the lands, from 1769 down to 1860, when a petition was presented to the L. E. Court to sell the rent-charge. Held (overruling a decision of a Judge of the L. E. Court), that the memorial, coupled with evidence of the payment of the rentcharge down to 1860, was sufficient evidence of a perpetual subsisting rentcharge, so as to enable the Court to sell.—In re Harding, 11 I. C. R. 29. (C.A.)

II. PRESUMPTION OF PAYMENT, RELEASE, AND SATISFACTION.

3. Rent, which was to cease upon payment of a sum of money, was charged upon and payable out of several denominations of land. There was evidence to show that it had not been paid by, or demanded from the owners of one denomination for upwards of a century; but there was nothing to show that it had not been regularly paid out of the other denominations. Held, that the Court would not presume that the redemption money was paid, or that that portion of the land had been released. — Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 448. (R.)

4. Lands, liable to a jointure of £2000 a-year payable to V.'s wife, were devised by V. to A.

for life, remainder to trustees for 1000 years, upon trust to raise money to pay V.'s debts and legacies; remainder to B. for life, remainder to C. for life, remainder over. V. died in 1804. The jointress, in 1805, advanced £8500 in payment of V.'s debts, and took from the trustees a mortgage to secure that sum. In 1806 she married B. On that occasion the jointure was settled to her separate use, and the £8500 mortgage was settled on B. for life; and, if he survived her, upon him absolutely. On V.'s death A. entered into possession of the lands, and died in 1807. B. then entered into possession of the lands. His wife, the jointress, died in 1827. He died in 1828. C. then entered into possession; and, being entitled to the personal estate of the jointress, filed a bill in 1843 praying a foreclosure of the mortgage. That bill stated that, during the life of the jointress, the rents of the lands had been insufficient to pay the jointure. There was not any evidence of payment of interest upon the mortgage up to the filing of the bill. Held, on the principle laid down in Burrell v. Lord Egremont (7 Beav. 295), that the mortgage debt was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27.

That, although upon the death of the jointress in 1828, more than twenty years had elapsed without any payment in respect of the mortgage, yet the Court would presume that, from that period, B., and, after his death, C., had kept down the interest.—Lord Carbery v. Preston, 13 I. E. R. 455. (C.)

5. A lease for 500 years, dated 14th Dec. 1669, contained a covenant by the lessee, his executors, &c., with the landlord, his executors, &c., not to sell before the first proffer be made to the landlord, his executors, &c., to the end that they might have the first refusal thereof, and pay as much as any other person should bona fide offer. Held, a covenant running with the land, but not a perpetual one.

An assignment of the tenant's interest was made 140 years ago. Held, that it must be presumed that he declined the offer, or waived his right, and the tenant now holds discharged from the covenant.—In re Houghton, 11 I. C. R. 236; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 112. (L.E.C.)

6. In 1703 lands were demised for 500 years. The representatives of the lessee dealt with them from 1725 until 1840, as if they had been freehold. The devolution of the title between 1726 and 1770 was not proved. Held, that, as between claimants under a deed of 1770, the lands were to be treated as if a release of the reversion on the 500 years' term were to be presumed.—Lysaght v. Royse, 12 I. C. R. 444. (C.)

7. A married woman obtained over her husband's estate a receiver, for arrears of an annuity settled to her separate use. By an order, made with her consent, the receiver was discharged, without prejudice to her proceeding, as she might be advised, for the arrear then declared to be due, or the accruing gales. The husband went into possession. After the making of the consent order, a creditor obtained an order for a receiver. The wife re-appointed the receiver in her cause. Held, that the presumption of release, or payment of arrears of pin-money, did not arise; and that she was entitled to the arrear due at the date of the consent order, and to the subsequent gales.

Principles touching arrears of pin-money.—Edgeworth v. E.; O'Sullivan v. Edgeworth, 16 I. C. R. 348. (R.)

III. PRESUMPTION OF DEEDS AND OTHER MATTERS, GENERALLY.

1. Rent, which was to cease on payment of a sum of money, was charged upon and payable out of several denominations of land. There was evidence to show that it had not been paid by, or demanded from the owners of one denomination for upwards of a century, but there was nothing to show that it had not been regularly paid out of the other denominations. Held, that the Court would not presume that the redemption money was paid, or that that portion of the lands was released.—Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 448. (R.)

2. A Court cannot, without proof, presume an agreement on the ground that, if there was not an agreement, there was fraud.

The Court will not act upon fraud or other misconduct, unless that fraud or misconduct has been put in issue by the pleadings.—Siree v. Kirwan, 9 Cl. & F. 716.

3. An agreement to reduce rent was presumed from the receipt of the reduced rent, which was consistent with the recital in a settlement, though during the greater part of the period a tenant for life received the rent. The reduction was held to extend to the entire interest, which was an estate for lives and a term of years in remainder; and not to be confined to the estate for lives.—Enraght v. Haughton, 8 I. E. R. 274. (C.)

4. A lease for lives by way of renewal, made while the former lease is subsisting, and not surrendered, being outstanding in other parties, though intended to operate in possession, passes a good legal estate.

Five-sixths of the legal estate being outstanding in other persons, two of whom owned a moiety beneficially; B., on behalf of his son, who was entitled to the other sixth and moiety, took a renewal, and lived nearly twenty years. His estate descended to the son. On a question as to the line of descent from the son—Held, it could not be presumed either that there had been a conveyance of the five-sixths to B., or a surrender of them.

Semble—The doctrine of Thomas v. Cook, 2 B. & Ald. 119 (surrender by acquiescence), does not apply to estates of freehold: Lynch v. L., 6 I. L. R. 131, on this point questioned.

An estate pur autre vie will not merge in an estate for the same life in remainder, whether created by the same or different instruments.

Lewis Bowles' case, 11 Rep. 81 a., and Williams v. W., Pr. in Ch. 319, explained and observed upon.—Creagh v. Blood, 8 I. E. R. 688; 3 Jon. & L. 133. (C.)

5. The rule, that every presumption is to be made in favour of a marriage proved de facto, does not authorise the presuming as true a circumstance necessary to the validity of the marriage (according to the lex loci where it was celebrated) which, on the evidence, is not to be believed.—Piers v. P., 10 I. E. R. 341. (C.)

6. In 1805, C., entitled to a charge upon lands, died after (as was alleged) making a will, under which the petitioner claimed a portion of the charge. No evidence of the existence or probate of that will was given; but for upwards of thirty years the parties interested in the charge, and in the lands on which it was charged, had acted on the belief of the existence and probate of such will. During a considerable portion of that time, the owner of the lands was a lunatic, under the protection of the Court of Ch., which also had acted on the supposition of there being a will. Some of the respondents, who subsequently became owners of the lands, had in a former suit made verified statements, mentioning and relying on the execution of C.'s will. Held, in a suit to raise the amount due on foot of the charge, that the existence and probate of the will, and the assent of the executor might be presumed.—Toker v. Lanesborough, 7 I. C. R. 241; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 125. (C.)

7. V., possessed of a term for years, with a t. q. covenant for renewal, devised all his landed property, houses, and tenements, goods and chattels of every description, ready money and outstanding debts, to his sons, A., B., and C., to be equally divided between them; and appointed his wife executrix.

V. died in 1833. On his death, his widow, who proved the will, and B., went into possession of the lands until her death in 1847, when B. took out administration de bonis non, and continued in possession, applying all the rents to his own use. In 1850 a perpetuity grant of the lands under the Church Temporalities Act, reciting V.'s will, and that B. was administrator de bonis non, was made to him expressly in that character. In an administration suit—Held, that the perpetuity grant rebutted the presumption of an assent by the executor to the bequests, arising from lapse of time.

That the lands should be sold, and divided into three shares, for the benefit of V.'s sons, or their representatives.

That the claim of A.'s representative should, by reason of the surplus rents received by B., be paid out of B.'s share in priority to judgments registered as mortgages against B.—McConnell v. Crothers, 9 I. C. R. 217. (R.)

8. The Commissioners of Public Works, by drainage operations, diminished the water-power of portion of a river, separating two properties. On one property was a mill. The arbitrator awarded one sum as compensation for the water-power. Held, that the compensation must be deemed to have been awarded respecting the mill, not respecting the unemployed water-power, available to, but not used by the proprietor of the other estate.—St. George v. Redington, 10 I. C. R. 176. (C.A.)

1. A document, more than thirty years old, purporting to be a copy of a lost instrument, and coming out of the proper custody, is not made evidence by an endorsement in the handwriting of the deceased family solicitor of the claimant under the lost instrument, that he has compared the copy with the instrument, and knows the handwriting of the witnesses to the original, and of one of the parties, to be genuine.—Kerin v. Davoren, 12 I. C. R. 352. (C.)

2. The entry in a corporation minute-book, of a resolution accepting a proposal for a lease of part of the corporate property was partly erased. Held, that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the erasure must be presumed to have been made before the book was signed by the chairman of the meeting at which the resolution was passed.

If a corporation has partly performed a contract for a lease, the Court will decree its specific performance, though the contract was not under the corporation's seal.

A statute empowered a corporation to make leases of the corporate property under their common seal, for a certain term in possession, and at the highest rent, and provided that all leases made in any other manner should be null and void. Held, that the statute did not preclude them from entering into an agreement for a lease, provided it was without delay carried into effect by the execution of leases in compliance with the statute.—Stevens's Hospital v. Dyas, 15 I. C. R. 405. (R.)

I. AGENT'S APPOINTMENT AND AUTHORITY: WHAT ENGAGEMENTS OF HIS BIND HIS PRINCIPAL.

3. Payment by an under-tenant, C., to the head landlord, A., with the assent of B., the intermediate landlord, of the head rent, does not per se make C. such an agent of B. as to induce the Court to decree a reversionary lease of the premises, obtained by C. from A., a trust for B.—Maunsell v. O'Brien, 1 Jones, 176. (E.E.)

4. An agent's authority to contract for a lease of lands need not be in writing. Scoble—A written proposal for a lease, made to an agent, who has not power to enter into a contract for such a lease, may be acknowledged by parol by the principal, so as to bind him.—Callaghan v. Pepper, 2 L. E. R. 399. (E.E.)

5. A person appointed agent to pay the head rent on the part of a lessee for lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal, is the lessee's agent, so that a demand and notice upon him will bind the lessee, who resides abroad, and is, admittedly, unaware of the facts.

The presumption is, that the tenant is acquainted with the title under which he claims, and with the circumstances connected therewith. This presumption holds until the contrary is proved.—Butler v. Earl of Portarlington, 4 I. E. R. 1; 1 Dr. & War. 20; 1 Con. & L. 1. (C.)

6. A., agent over a property held by four sisters as tenants in common, had a power of attorney from three of them to make leases. When about to leave the country, under suspicious circumstances, he executed, as by a power of attorney from the four sisters, a lease of the property to B., his under-agent. The lease was, at the suit of the four sisters, decreed to be set aside.—Rossiter v. Walsh, 2 Con. & L. 562; 2 Dr. & War. 485. (C.)

7. Though the general rule is, that notice to an agent, in order to affect the principal, must be in the same transaction, yet if, from all the surrounding circumstances, from the one transaction being so recent, or so closely connected with the other, that the party must be presumed to have remembered the previous one, the notice, though not in the same transaction, will bind.—Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 6 I. E. R. 238; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 11. (C.)

8. In order to set aside a conveyance from a principal to his agent, it need not be proved that the property was sold at an under-value. Though an agent may buy from his principal, he must fully disclose all the knowledge which he possesses respecting the property. If there be any underhand dealing—e. g., a purchase in another's name—however good the price, or fair the transaction in other respects, it is not valid in a Court of Equity.—Murphy v. O'Shea, 8 I. E. R. 329; 2 Jon. & L. 422. (C.)

1. An agent, with authority to receive rents, wrote to his principal immediately before the expiration of a lease, stating the acreable rent which he thought would be obtained for the estate; and desiring the principal to send him a power of attorney to let it. The principal, in his answer, did not object to the agent's letting, and stated that he would "send the power of attorney to follow this," as soon as he could get it. There were subsequent acts of recognition, though they were afterwards retracted. Held, a sufficient authority to let the estate.—Dyas v. Cruise, 8 I. E. R. 408; 2 Jon. & L. 460. (C.)

2. A cause petition was filed to recover rent under a lease. The tenant had died, and appointed A., B., and C. executors. A., one of the respondents, alone proved the will, and then assigned to X., who assigned to a pauper. The petition sought to make the assets of the testator liable for the rent. A. resided abroad; B. was his father, a solicitor, residing within the jurisdiction of the Court, and a legatee under the will. W., another son of B., was also a solicitor, lived in the same house with him, and prepared that assignment. Agency to A. was denied both by B. and W., the latter saying that in preparing the assignment he acted only for X., and not for A. Held, that the circumstances implied agency to A. in B. and W.; and service of notice of the cause petition on B. and W. was directed to be deemed good service on A.—Westby v. Ford, 6 I. Jur. 165. (R.)

3. Seemle—The rule, that directors are not a company's agents to commit a fraud, cannot apply to a case in which the fraud relates to a matter which is of the essence of the contract, and a part of it.—Ex parte Ginger, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 221. (C.)

4. H., solicitor and land agent of S., died in 1851. In 1854, E., solicitor for the administratrix of H., furnished S. with a bill of costs for work done by H. for S., who died in 1855. In 1862, B., solicitor for the petitioners, executors of S., wrote that the executors had handed him the costs and account on foot of rents which had been furnished; that the amount, save a small sum of costs, was already barred by the Statute of Limitations at the time when the bill was furnished to S.; but—continued B.—"the instructions I have received were to look at the matter fairly, and if anything appeared due, to settle it, notwithstanding Mrs. H. not being legally entitled to recover. I have accordingly done so; and, without entering into any particulars of the costs, but merely looking at the matter of the rents, it seems to me that Mrs. H. is indebted to Mr. S.'s executors." The writer then made a claim respecting the rents of another property alleged to have been lost by default of H., and concluded:—"Therefore, the executors are not in any way called on to pay, unless you can within a week show me, in any reasonable way, that Mr. H. did not act as Mr. S.'s agent over these properties, or that he used due diligence to collect the rents."

In a suit to administer the assets, the Master found that H. had not been agent over the latter property. Held, that the letter contained a sufficient acknowledgment to save the bar of the Statute of Limitations.

An agent's written acknowledgment, made after the passing of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 19 & 20 Vic., c. 97, suffices to save from the bar of the Statute of Limitations a debt contracted before the Act passed.—Leland v. Murphy, 16 I. C. R. 500. (R.)

II. AGENT'S DUTIES AND LIABILITIES.

5. A principal, V., agreed to sell part of his estate to his agent, X.; but, when he made the agreement, was unaware that that part included the only turf bog on the estate. There was not any concealment, nor apparently any knowledge by X. of this circumstance. V., by will, named X. a trustee for sale. X. accordingly assisted his co-trustees, and did not insist on performance of the agreement until after the lapse of nearly a year from V.'s death, nor until after the estate had been advertised for sale. Held, that V.'s ignorance touching the turf bog afforded sufficient ground for refusing to enforce specific performance; and that X.'s conduct after V.'s death amounted to a virtual abandonment of the agreement.—Chambers v. Betty, Beat. Rep. 488. (C.)

6. A landlord's agent procured from a tenant a conveyance of his farm under suspicious circumstances. The Court, not being satisfied with the evidence, after a lapse of five years, directed an issue to enquire whether the deed had been obtained by fraud, duress, or undue influence?—Smith v. Ward, H. & J. 705. (E.E.)

7. The decree in De Montmorency v. Deveaux, 1 Dr. & Wal. 119, affirmed, without costs, by the House of Lords, on appeal.

Where dealings between a solicitor and client, or principal and agent, are, in their inception, voidable in a Court of Equity, but have been saved from impeachment by reason of the client or principal having done acts confirmatory of them, the solicitor or agent will not be entitled to the costs of a suit instituted by the client or principal to impeach those dealings, but in which the bill has been dismissed.—De Montmorency v. Deveaux, 2 Dr. & Wal. 410.—[See 7 Cl. & Fin. 188.]

8. A lease obtained by an agent from his principal, who was strict tenant for life, with a limited power of leasing, at an under-value, and for a term longer than the power of the tenant for life authorised him to grant.—Held, fraudulent and void as against the successor of the grantor.—Ker v. Lord Dungannon, 1 Dr. & War. 541; 1 Con. & L. 335; 4 I. E. R. 344. (C.)

9. An agent may take a lease from his principal; but must be always prepared to prove that full information had been imparted to the principal, and that the contract had been entered into in perfect good faith.—Molony v. Kernan, 2 Dr. & War. 31. (C.)

III. AGENT'S POWERS AND INCAPACITIES.

1. The appellant had for a long time acted as the counsel and legal adviser of A., and, during that employment, acquired an intimate knowledge of A.'s property and liabilities, and had acted for him in compromising securities. Held, that a purchase by the appellant of those securities, after the relation of client and counsel had ceased to subsist, made without notice to A., and at a price less than their nominal amount, whilst the compromise was pending and feasible, was a trust for A.; and that the appellant was entitled only to the sum actually paid by him, with customary interest.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 657.—[See 1 I. E. R. 289; 1 Dr. & Wal. 22. (C.)]

2. If it appears that, in a transaction between principal and agent, there has been underhand dealing by the agent—e. g., that he has bought the principal's estate, in the name of another person, for himself, however fair the transaction may be otherwise—and no matter how good the price was, the purchase is invalid in equity.

To set aside a sale from a principal to his agent, it need not be proved that it was made at an under-value. An agent may buy from his principal, provided that the agent deals with him at arm's length, and after a full disclosure of all his knowledge respecting the property.—Murphy v. O'Shea, 8 I. E. R. 329; 2 Jon. & L. 422. (C.)

3. A Joint-stock Banking Company held bound by a deed for the benefit of creditors, from the conduct of their public officer and others in assenting to it, though neither the company nor directors had given any authority to execute it, and the arrangement was an improvident one for them.

Semble—The rule requiring an authority under seal from a partner to execute deeds does not apply to such a case.

A creditor's deed provided that if the assignment made thereby should for any reason become inoperative, or any of the property thereby conveyed, or intended so to be, should not have been effectually assigned thereby, the parties might abandon it. The deed was an act of bankruptcy, under the 6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 20. No notice was given, as required by that section; and an attempted sale in execution of the trusts failed, from inability of the trustees to make out title. Held, that it could not be avoided under the proviso, which contemplated an act by some stranger thereafter, and not a defect inherent in the deed itself.—Dudgeon v. O'Connell, 12 I. E. R. 566. (C.)

4. A land-agent has not authority to enter into contracts for leases. Entering into possession under a contract for a lease is a part performance; but the Court will not decree a specific performance, unless the terms of the contract are clearly proved. A tenant paid a fine, and entered into possession, but did not for thirteen years claim a performance of the contract for a lease, nor until after the death of the agent with whom the contract was said to have been made. During part of the time he paid an increased rent. There was evidence that the contract was for a tenancy from year to year. The Court refused a specific performance.—Mortal v. Lyons, 8 I. C. R. 112. (R.)

IV. ACCOUNTS BETWEEN PRINCIPAL AND AGENT: ALLOWANCES TO AGENT.

5. An account against a land agent, for 27 years preceding the filing of the bill, decreed; but refused respecting gratuities which he had, with his principal's knowledge, received from the tenants, though the gratuities were charged to have been extortionate; the principal not having lost by their exorbitant nature, except so far as they had been taken as fines.—Palmer v. Browne, Beat. Rep. 540. (C.)

6. An agent had for several years stated accounts with his principals. In them he was not charged with interest on the balances in his hands, but in the last account settled previous to his discharge was debited with interest on several half-yearly balances. On his discharge he furnished an account not charging himself with interest; but on a bill filed to enforce payment of the balance then due, interest was given on it.—Bateman v. McElligott, 7 I. E. R. 471. (C.)

7. In a suit by a principal against his agent, for an account, a sum admitted by answer to be due will be ordered to be paid into Court.—Blake v. Comins, 1 I. Jur. 330. (R.)

8. A., entitled to a life estate in lands, remainder to his wife B. for life; C., entitled to an annuity; and D., having a judgment against A., and a policy of insurance; A., B., C., and D., in consideration of £350, advanced to A., conveyed to E. the lands, annuity, and policy of insurance respectively, subject to redemption. It was provided that A. should become tenant to E. of these lands, at a yearly rent, in case of non-payment of the interest and premiums on the policy; and A., B., and C. appointed F. irrevocably their attorney, to receive the rents of the mortgaged premises and the annuity, to pay (after receiver's fees and outgoings) the interest and premiums on the policy; and to invest, out of the annuity, a sum to form a fund to pay the principal, and to pay the balance of the annuity to C. and of the rents to A. The sums secured by the judgment and policy of insurance, when they should be paid, after deducting the £350 and interest, were to be applied by E. to pay D. any demand due to her by A., and the balance to A. It was provided that F. should not act as receiver until the interest or premium on the policy should be in arrear. F. entered into receipt of the rents (as he alleged, under a subsequent power of attorney from A.) and of the annuity, no portion of which he invested to form the fund for payment of the annuity; and applied the rents for the purposes of A., and in paying the interest of a mortgage due to himself, F., by the directions of A.; and the annuity in payment of the interest on the £350, with the consent of C., who had, before such consent, taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act. Held, that F. was not agent or trustee for C. as to the lands, and therefore was not bound to account to her assignee for bygone rents.

Semble—B., being only a surety, her life estate is not liable, after the death of A., to repay the sums paid out of the annuity of C., for interest and premiums on the policy.

Quære—Whether F. should have credit for payments out of the annuity, contrary to the directions of the mortgage deed, made with the consent of C., after her discharge as an insolvent?—M'Dowell v. Reede and others, 14 I. C. R. 192. (R.)

[Held, that F. was not bound to pay the assignees the sums recovered by him after the insolvency.—M'Dowell v. Reede, 16 I. C. R. 430. (R.)]

1. A petition for an account against a land agent, referred to accounts A., B., and C., furnished by him; stated that C. omitted to bring forward a large portion of arrears of rent, shown by B. to be due; charged that they were lost by the agent's wilful default; that C. showed a large amount of arrears of rent to have been allowed to accumulate during the period comprised in that account; that the accumulation was owing to the wilful default and neglect of the agent, as the lands were set at reasonable rents; that he was bound to account for the rents which he had received, or which, without wilful default, he might have received, while he was agent. Held, having regard to the reference to the accounts, that the pleading warranted a decree eliciting a reference whether any part of the arrears had been lost by the wilful default of the agent.

A principal wrote to his agent—"I pity poor J. R.; I will leave the matter in your hands, to do what you think fit and fair, knowing, as you do, the state of both of us, and of our unfortunate country. If possible, accede to this request, for he has been a good tenant hitherto." Held, that the letter did not authorise the remission of an arrear of rent due by the tenant.—Pennefather v. Bolton, 14 I. C. R. 234; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 45. (R.)—[Varied: 14 I. C. R. 335; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 221. (C.A.)]

V. EFFECT OF BANKRUPTCY OR INSOLVENCY OF THE PRINCIPAL, OR OF THE AGENT, OR OF A FACTOR: OF THEIR RESPECTIVE LIENS OF CONSIGNMENTS.

2. A. and B., partners, being indebted to C. and D., the ptfs., A. by letter, proposed to assign a claim which A. and B. had upon P.'s estate, then the subject of a Chancery suit. Properties of P., sold under a decree, were bought by A. in his own name; but, as he alleged in letters to C., really in trust for C. and D. Shortly afterwards, A., having committed an act of bankruptcy, executed deeds declaring that he held in trust for C. and D. His assignee having obtained a judgment in ejectment against part of the premises, a bill was filed praying that he should be restrained from executing his habere; that he should be declared a trustee for ptfs. respecting all the premises; and that he should be directed to convey to them. Held, that, though there was not express proof of B.'s concurrence, A. was authorised in all that he had done; that the trust was clearly established; and that ptfs. were entitled to the conveyance sought.—Johnson v. Perrin, Hayes, 322. (E.E.)

VI. NOTICE TO AGENT: WHEN IT BINDS THE PRINCIPAL.

3. Notice of a prior unregistered deed of annuity to the solicitor of a mortgagee, whose mortgage is registered, is notice to the mortgagee so as to preclude him from relying upon the provisions of the Registry Acts as against the prior unregistered annuitant.—Nixon v. Hamilton, 1 I. E. R. 46; 2 Dr. & Wal. 364. (C.)

I. PRINCIPAL AND SURETY GENERALLY: CONTRIBUTION BETWEEN CO-SURETIES.

4. A surety by recognizance, who pays the whole amount into Court, when pressed with Crown process, is entitled to use the Crown securities, in order to levy a moiety from his co-surety, provided that he shares with his co-surety the benefit of any counter security which he may have taken from the principal. Latouche v. Pallas, Hayes, 450. (E.E.)

5. A motion by sureties of a tenant under the Court to reduce the rent was granted under the circumstances, with the receiver's consent, and the consent of the interested parties, upon the terms of all arrears due being paid.—M'Evoy v. M'E., S. & Sc. 699. (R.)

6. An application, on behalf of the sureties of a tenant under the Court, for liberty to surrender the lands because the tenant was in insolvent circumstances, and the lands had fallen in value, was refused, with costs.—Hone v. Lord Langford, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 328. (C.)

7. Joint judgment against A., B., and C. A. was the principal, B. and C. were sureties. A. dies; judgment revived against B. and C. C. was heir-at-law of A., but the revival was against him as one of the surviving conuzors and not as heir. The Court appointed a receiver, on petition, over the lands which had come to C. by quasi descent from A., the principal debtor.

Semble—As a general rule, when there is a joint judgment, and, all the conuzors being principal debtors, one of them dies, the Court will not appoint a receiver over the lands of the surviving conuzors alone. The judgment ought to be revived against the surviving conuzors, and the heir and terre-tenants of the deceased conuzor; and the Court should appoint a receiver over the lands of the heir and terre-tenants of the deceased conuzor as well as over the lands of the survivors, in order to enforce contribution.

An arrest under a ca. sa., and a discharge under the Insolvent Act, is not cause against the appointment of a receiver on the judgment.—Mercer v. M'Kee, 11 I. E. R. 322. (R.)

1. A. and B. became sureties for C., and were sued for his default. A. procured the amount sued for, on the security of a mortgage from A., and a judgment against B. The mortgage was paid by A., who obtained an assignment of the judgment; registered it as a mortgage against lands of B.; and filed a petition for foreclosure and sale. B., by his discharge, set up a defence that he became surety on the promise and undertaking of A., that he would indemnify him from all loss. Held, that parol evidence was admissible to prove the contract to indemnify, as it was to rebut the equity on which the petition was founded.

Semble—Such a contract of indemnity is not within the Statute of Frauds, and need not be in writing. Held, that the defence might be relied on without filing a cross petition.—Rae v. R., 6 I. C. R. 490. (R.)

2. A. became surety for B., to secure his due performance of his duty as a county cess collector. B. and C., by deed, covenanted to indemnify A. against any loss he might sustain, as such surety. B. was suspended by the Grand Jury for a deficiency in his account. A. handed him the sum required to make up his deficiency; and so prevented him from being declared a public defaulter. Held, that this was not a payment constructively equivalent to a payment in the character of a surety, so as to affect C., who got no notice of the transaction, there being an arrangement between A. and B. that the money so paid was to bear interest at £6 per cent.—Caroline v. Stewart, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (C.)

II. LIABILITIES OF SURETY.

3. The Court, after dismissal of the bill, has jurisdiction to order that a recognizance, given by the ptf. and his sureties, to abide such order as the Court might make touching the mesne rates of the lands, shall be put in suit against the sureties.—Costello v. Hunt, 2 Jon. 784. (E.E.)

4. A petition by a solvent surety of an insolvent tenant, to surrender, or reduce the rents of premises of which the value had greatly diminished since the lease was made, was dismissed, with costs.

Semble—The general principle, by which a surety is supposed to be regarded more favourably than his principal by Courts of Equity, is erroneous.—In re O'Neills Minors, S. & Sc. 686. (R.)

5. A receiver's sureties are liable under their recognizance for the costs of an attachment against the receiver for not passing his account, and for all costs incurred in discharging him, and appointing a new receiver.—Munnell v. Egan, 9 I. E. R. 283; 3 Jon. & L. 251. (C.)

6. A. was seized in fee of the S. estate; the D. estate was settled to such uses as A. and B. should jointly appoint; in default of appointment, to A. for life, remainder to B. in fee. A. subsequently charged his life estate in D. with an annuity of £1000 in favour of B. There were incumbrancers upon S. A. borrowed £20,000 upon a mortgage of D. and S., to which B. and the incumbrancers on S. were parties. By that deed, A. and B. conveyed all the lands to the mortgagee. The proviso for redemption was to the effect that, upon re-payment, the lands should be re-conveyed to A. in fee. Testatum, that B. and the incumbrancers on S., gave priority to the mortgage over their respective charges. A. subsequently borrowed £17,000; upon which occasion, by a mortgage of all the lands for £37,000, to which B. and the incumbrancers on S. were parties, A. and B. conveyed all the lands to the mortgagee, subject to a proviso for redemption, to the effect that, upon re-payment, the lands should be re-conveyed to A. and B. in fee. Testatum, that A. and the other incumbrancers agreed to give priority to the mortgage over their respective charges.

Both estates having been sold in the I. E. Court, the mortgage was paid out of the joint produce. B. made an affidavit, stating that he had been induced by A., and joined in the mortgage, upon the representation that the money would be applied to pay A.'s (his father's) debts; that his (B.'s) interest in D. would only stand as a collateral security; and that he had received only a nominal consideration, and was in no way privy to any arrangement with the mortgagees. The price having proved insufficient to pay all the incumbrances, the I. E. Court decided that the mortgage should be deemed to have been paid out of the price of D., before recourse was had to the proceeds of S. Held, reversing that decision, that B. was a surety only, as between himself and A., and that the incumbrancers on S. were not entitled to indemnity out of B.'s interest in D.—In re Keily, 6 I. C. R. 394; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 453. (C.A.)

7. A. was trustee of a settlement, part of the trust fund being secured by a bond. B., executor of the obligor, with the assent of A., lent the sum secured by the bond, and all the assets of his testator, on mortgage of an estate, which, in consequence of the depreciation of property at the time, was sold in the I. E. Court for a sum insufficient to reach the mortgage. In a suit by the c. q. t. of the settlement and the legatees of the testator, A. and B. were ordered to bring into Court the amount secured by the bond, in equal shares; and B. was ordered to bring in the remainder of the assets, without prejudice to any proceeding by A. against B. on foot of the bond. Held, that A. could not in equity recover from B. the moiety of the sum secured by the bond, which he had paid into Court under the decree.—Montgomery v. Waring, 6 I. C. R. 533. (R.)

III. SURETY'S RIGHTS IN BANKRUPTCY AND GENERALLY, AGAINST HIS PRINCIPAL, AND HIS PRINCIPAL'S ESTATE.

1. A surety by recognizance, having paid the debt, though after a levari issued against him, but never returned, is entitled to the benefit of the recognizance, and to stand as a creditor by matter of record against his co-surety for contribution.—Salkeld v. Abbot, Hayes, 576. (E.E.)

2. A surety pays a debt secured by separate judgments against himself and the principal upon their joint and several bond. He may, by bill in equity, compel the creditor to assign to him the judgment obtained against the principal.

A surety is entitled to the benefit of all the securities obtained by the creditor from the principal for the debt.—Mara v. Ryan, 2 Jon. 715. (E.E.)

3. A surety paying off the debt is entitled to the benefit of a security given without his knowledge by the debtor to the creditor, at a different time, to secure another demand in addition to that for which he became surety.—Scott v. Knox, 2 Jon. 778. (E.E.)

4. Upon A.'s appointment as county treasurer in 1831, he, together with B., C., D., and E., entered into security by recognizance, whereby A. acknowledged himself indebted to the King in £7000 sterling. By the same instrument, B. and C. acknowledged themselves to be jointly and severally indebted in £5000 sterling, and D. and E. in £2000 sterling. The condition was that A. should duly account pursuant to the 4 G. 4, c. 33. In that condition the instrument was described as "the foregoing recognizance." In 1837, A. resigned, as a defaulter in upwards of £18,000, of which about £4000 were due to the Crown, and the residue to the county. Held, that this recognizance secured the single sum of £7000, and no more; that the sum secured was £7000 British, though the 4 G. 4, c. 33, only required the Treasurer to secure £7000 Irish; and that A., upon paying that sum, was entitled to have the recognizance of himself and his sureties vacated; but that, on payment of that sum by the sureties, they were not entitled, as against the Crown, to the benefit of the recognizance acknowledged by A.

Sureties of a county treasurer, paying the amount of his recognizance, are not by reason thereof entitled to priority over the Crown, there being a debt due by him to the Crown beyond the amount of the recognizance.—The Q. v. O'Callaghan, 1 I. E. R. 439; Jon. & C. 154. (E.E.)

5. Testator, as principal, and his son, as surety, they being successive tenants for life, joined in granting an annuity; and gave, as a collateral security, a joint and several bond and warrant, conditioned that, if the annuity was in arrear, the annuitant might issue execution against the father during his life, and after his death against his son. Both having died, the son's executor paid several gales of the annuity. Held, that he could recover, as against the father's assets, only the principal sums so paid, but not interest upon them.

A fund of the father's having been originally assigned to secure the annuity, which sum became part of his assets and produced interest, the son's executor was recouped to the full amount of the bond, with interest.—Caulfield v. Maguire, 8 I. E. R. 164; 2 Jon. & L. 141. (C.)

6. A., having obtained from B. an advance of money, mortgaged lands, to secure that sum. C., as surety for A., conveyed a charge of £5000 further to secure the debt. Proviso for redemption, that if A., or C., or either of them, should, on a day therein named, repay B. that sum, B. would re-convey the lands and charges on the uses on which they had been held before the execution of the deed. The period of redemption having elapsed, the debt was paid out of C.'s charges. Held, that notwithstanding the form of that proviso, C. was entitled to the benefit of B.'s securities against A.'s lands.—M'Neale v. Reed, 7 I. C. R. 251. (C.)

7. V. becomes security for payment of a composition by an arranging trader. When two instalments have been paid, the case is turned into bankruptcy. The creditors prove against the principal's estate for their first bills, giving credit for the instalments. V. then becomes bankrupt. The creditors, having elected, will not be allowed to prove on his estate for two sets of unpaid bills.—Re Sheehan & Feehan's Estate, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 198. (B.)

8. A surety in a bond for S. paid the oblige £108 five days after S. had been adjudicated a bankrupt. The surety owed S. £99, as the price of fixtures, &c., left by S. in a house which he was giving up to the surety. The Judge of the Bankrupt Court disallowed the surety's claim to set off the £99, and prove for the balance. Upon appeal, held, that the surety was entitled, under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 10, s. 253, to set off and prove as he claimed.—In re Steele, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 274. (C.A.)

IV. SURETY: HOW DISCHARGED.

1. In the case of principal and sureties, circumstances may exist which will prevent the principal's payment of the entire sum operating as a discharge of the sureties.—In re O'Callaghan, 1 I. E. R. 448, n. (R.)

2. By deed, executed in consideration of £9000, purported to be paid to L. and H. by D. and J. L. granted them an annuity charged on his estate, for three lives, and further secured by the joint and several bond and warrant of attorney of L. and H., but with a stipulation that execution should not be issued on the judgment until the annuity should be forty days in arrear. The deed contained covenants for title and further assurance by L., and a covenant to pay the annuity by L. and H. On the construction of this deed—Held, that H. was merely a surety; it having been proved that the £9000 were raised for L.'s use, and therefore that a subsequent alteration in the contract reducing the rate of the annuity from £20 to £9 per cent. on the loan of a further £1000, without H.'s knowledge, discharged him from his liability as surety.—Eyre v. Hollier, L. & G., temp. Plunket, 250. (C.)—[Rev'd.: 2 Dr. & War. 590; 9 Cl. & F. 1.]

3. A creditor, having the security by bond of a third person, for the due accounting of an agent, settled accounts with that agent, and took from him a bond for the balance due, and bills at different dates for the amount of the bond and interest thereon, until the last bill should fall due. At the same time, he stipulated that he should be at liberty to proceed, at any moment, on the original security.—Held, that this did not discharge the surety.—Lindsay v. Lord Downes, 2 I. E. R. 307. (C.)

4. By the will of a testator, who died in 1815, his real estates were charged with his debts as far as his personal assets should be insufficient. A creditor brought actions against his executrix, who gave pleas of confession, but then filed a bill against the creditor. The amount of the demand was ascertained by the Master's report. The executrix having no assets to meet the demands, P. advanced the money; and a deed was executed, by which the demands were assigned to P.; and the executrix covenanted that whichever of the sons who were entitled to the real estate should first come of age would execute a mortgage to P. To secure the advance, she covenanted to insure her life for the amount, and assigned her jointure to secure the regular payment of the premiums. P. covenanted on payment to re-assign to her. The insurance was not kept up, nor the mortgage executed. A suit was instituted by P. to raise the demand out of the realty. Held, that it could not be resisted on the ground that this was a mode of realising assets, and released the realty, by giving time to the personalty, the primary fund, or was the acceptance of a security which was suffered to be lost.

That the pleas of confession and report were not an admission of assets by the executrix.

That the demand need not be proved de novo against the devisees of the realty.—Purcell v. Blennerhassett, 9 I. E. R. 103; 3 Jon. & L. 24. (C.)

5. A tenant's recognizance was executed at the same time as his lease, but was not enrolled until four years later. In the meantime he became insolvent, and incumbered his property. Held, that the neglect to enrol the recognizance, when the lease was executed, had not discharged the surety.

Quære—Whose duty is it to enrol the recognizance?—Jephson v. Maunsell, 10 I. E. R. 38, 132. (R.)

I. PRIORITY OF SECURITIES BETWEEN THEMSELVES, AND PROCESSES OF COURTS, GENERALLY.

6. P. mortgaged X. and Y. As a collateral security P.'s sons assigned their estate in N. Afterwards P. sold X. to the deft., and covenanted against incumbrances. The mortgagee purported to be a party to, but never executed this conveyance. P.'s sons joined in a bond to indemnify the deft. against all incumbrances.

In 1805 the mortgagee filed a bill to foreclose against P., his sons, and the purchaser. In 1806 the sons equitably mortgaged N. to the ptf., who took without notice of the purchaser's claim. Held, that the transaction at the purchase gave the purchaser a right, as against the sons, to have N. applied to pay the mortgagee before X. could be so applied; and that, as the equitable mortgage was made to the ptf., pending a suit in which that right would be given effect to, he took subject to the same liability.

Semble—But for the pendency of the suit, the ptf., as equitable mortgagee, would have had priority over the purchaser.

Held, that the ptf. was entitled to have Y. sold, and to redeem the mortgage on N.—Going v. Farrell, Beat. Rep. 472. (C.)

1. An attorney obtained from a client a conveyance of his real estate (out of which his wife was dowable), in trust to pay himself and the client's other creditors; and also to secure future advances to be made by him to the client. The attorney afterwards became a party to a deed, prepared by himself, whereby the client's wife relinquished her dower, in consideration of a jointure to herself, and a charge for her younger children on the lands. He did not communicate to her the existence of the former deed, or inform her of the effect of the borrowing clause therein. Held, that further advances made by him were not entitled, by virtue of the trust-deed, to priority over the charge for the younger children; but that equity was administered for their benefit only.—Brown v. Lynch, 2 Jon. 706. (E.E.)

2. A prior mortgagee instituted in Chancery a foreclosure suit, and obtained a decree for a sale. A puisne mortgagee instituted a like suit in the Exchequer (the prior mortgagee not being a party thereto), and obtained a receiver, who brought in by-gone rents of the mortgaged premises. Held, that the puisne mortgagee was not entitled to this sum as against the prior mortgagee, who had filed a bill in the Exchequer to attach it.—Lismore v. Chamley, Hayes, 329. (E.E.)

3. Two judgments for like penal sums against one debt. were obtained by different persons on one day, and in the same Court. The sum reported due on foot of one of them exceeded that reported due on foot of the other. The fund proved insufficient. Held, that it should be divided between the creditors in proportion to the sums reported due to them respectively.—Woods v. Davis, 2 Jon. 815. (E.E.)

4. B. being entitled to a large sum charged on land, in 1826, on his daughter's marriage, covenanted that he would direct, appoint, and otherwise assure that £20,000, part of his personal estate, should, within three months after his decease, be transferred to, and vested in the trustees of his daughter's settlement. In 1836, B., by will, directed that, in performance of that covenant, £20,000 should be paid to those trustees out of the charge; and, if the charge proved deficient, then out of his residuary personal estate. In 1820, B. had given his bond, with warrant, &c. Judgment had been entered on it. Held, that, as against the charge, the trustees, claiming under the covenant, were entitled to priority over the judgment creditor.—Brownlow v. Earl of Meath, 2 L. E. R. 883; 2 Dr. & Wal. 674. (C.)

5. If a creditor, with a prior incumbrance, buys the estate, which is subject to a puisne incumbrance, he lets the puisne incumbrancer in, to the injury of the prior incumbrance, the benefit of which is completely lost.—Garnett v. Armstrong, 5 L. E. R. 533; 4 Dr. & War. 82; 2 Con. & L. 458. (C.)

6. The puisne mortgagee's general right to compel the prior mortgagee, who has a second fund to resort to, and the common fund is a deficient one, to exhaust the second fund before he touches the common one, exists when the mortgagor has become bankrupt.

It is perfectly settled that, if a debtor has given security to two persons, and one of them has two funds to resort to, and the other has only one of those funds as his security, and there is a deficiency in the fund which is doubly charged to meet both demands, the Court always throws upon the second security, as far as it will bear it, the claim of the creditor having the two funds.—In re Cornwall, 2 Con. & L. 131; nom. Baldwin v. Belcher, 3 Dr. & War. 173; 6 L. E. R. 65. (C.)

7. By marriage settlement in 1820, two sums of £2000 and £3000, secured by the several bonds and warrants collateral of K. and his son, were vested upon trust for D., the intended husband, for life, with ultimate remainder to D. absolutely, if there should not be any children of the marriage. Judgments were entered upon the bonds.

In 1825, the trustees transferred to D. the bond for £2000, and the warrant collateral, but did not assign the judgment. A month later D. assigned this bond and warrant to W. to secure £1998. 17s. advanced by W. to D. W. pledged them with his bankers, by whom, in 1833, notice was for the first time given to one of the trustees.

Payments were occasionally made by D. to W., so that in 1837 only £200 remained due to W. That sum being paid off, W. got up the securities from his bankers, and re-assigned to a trustee for D. Within a few days afterwards that trustee and D. assigned the securities to the ptf. in the second cause, in consideration of a pre-existing debt, and of moneys then advanced.

In 1829, D. had granted to the ptf. in the first cause an annuity charged upon his life estate. In and before 1831 this annuitant had made applications to K., and to K.'s agent, and the agent had made payments to him in respect of the annuity; and further, in 1833, a suit had been instituted in the Court of Exchequer, by this annuitant, to enforce payment of the annuity, and the trustees of the marriage settlement had been defts. therein.

A question of priority arose between the ptf. in the two causes. Held, that the ptf. in the second cause could not be regarded as a party claiming through or under W.; and therefore that the notice given on W.'s behalf in 1833 could not be considered as operating for the benefit of that ptf. His claim was therefore postponed.—McCarthy v. The Earl of Kingston; Gregory v. The same, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 439. (C.)

8. A. having contracted to purchase an estate, obtained a conveyance from the tenant for life, in which the remainderman in fee did not join, in 1835. In M. Term 1835, A. confessed a judgment to W. for £4000. In Feb. 1836, A. mortgaged the estate to E. for £5000; and in June 1836, on a further advance of £2000 by W., he mortgaged to W. for £6000.

In March 1837, A. became bankrupt. The estate was not of sufficient value to pay both mortgages. Held, that the provisions of the 126th sec. of the Bankrupt Act did not apply, and that W.'s judgment had priority over C.'s mortgage.—Baldwin v. Belcher, 6 I. E. R. 424; 1 Jon. & L. 18. (C.)

1. In a suit to carry into execution the trusts of a will, the receiver was ordered, out of the rents, to pay H., a femme covert, and devisee of real estates, £400 annually, for her separate use, and on her own receipt, by way of maintenance. By a subsequent deed, whereto H. and her husband were parties, the estates, subject to charges, were conveyed in fee to such uses as H. should appoint by deed. Held, that the £400 a-year was not a chose in action, but a portion of H.'s estate in the lands; and that a puisne assignee thereof could not, by giving an earlier notice of the assignment to him to the trustees in whom the estates were vested, obtain priority over a prior assignee who had not given notice; and that the memorial of the first mortgage was a sufficient memorial of the assignment of the £400 a-year.—Rochard v. Fulton, 7 I. E. R. 131; 1 Jon. & L. 418. (C.)

2. R., a judgment creditor, having sued out a fi. fa. in 1840, on which there was a return of nulla bona (the debtor's leasehold estate having been mortgaged), filed his bill on the 16th of Nov. 1840. W., a prior judgment creditor, subsequently presented his petition for a receiver. By an order in the cause and matter, and also in the cause of the prior mortgagee, a receiver was appointed. The lands having been sold to pay the mortgage, R. and W. applied for the surplus fund. Held, that R. was entitled to it in priority to W.

The right acquired by suing out the fi. fa. was not lost on the return of the writ.

The right of the judgment creditor, before the return of the writ, is but inchoate and incomplete; but when on the return it appears that his execution is frustrated by a legal impediment, then the equitable remedy is called into operation.—Simpson v. Taylor, 7 I. E. R. 182. (R.)

3. The devisee of a leasehold estate for lives having suffered an arrear of rent to become due, the landlord brought an ejectment. At the devisee's request, a third party advanced money to pay the rent. The money was applied accordingly, and the devisee mortgaged the lands to secure its re-payment.

The mortgagee is not entitled to priority over the judgment creditors of the devisor.—Angell v. Bryan, 2 Jon. & L. 763. (C.)

4. By a marriage settlement, reciting that the lady was entitled to an annuity charged on the estate of her son by a former marriage, and that the rents were inadequate to meet it, she assigned the annuity, and the arrears and future payments thereof, on trust to receive so much as the rents would answer, for the benefit of herself and husband, and to hold the arrears then due and thereafter to become due, in consequence of the rents being insufficient to answer the same, on trust, if her son should attain twenty-one, &c., in her lifetime, to release them, but if he should die before her under age, &c., that the arrears due and to become due, should form a fund subject to the appointment of the wife. It was declared that in the meantime, and until the arrears should become either absolutely vested in the son or subject to the wife's appointment, the trustees should not require payment of them. The son attained twenty-one, and the rents afterwards became sufficient to pay the annuity, and leave a surplus. Held, that though the case was not directly within the deed, the arrears were not raiseable as against a mortgagee of the son.—Battersby v. Rochfort, 8 I. E. R. 284; 2 Jon. & L. 431. (C.)

[The Lord C., doubting the correctness of his construction of the deed, directed a re-argument, upon which he pronounced the above opinion erroneous, 9 I. E. R. 191; 2 Jon. & L. 451. (C.)]—[Affid.: 2 H. L. Cas. 388; 14 Jur. 229.]

5. A marriage settlement, made by the husband's father, was defective on the face of it, in omitting any limitation after the life estate of the husband and a jointure to the wife, whereby the reversion would descend to X., the elder brother of the husband. A correction of the settlement was refused as against a judgment creditor of X., though sought as soon as the omission was discovered; the evidence of the intended limitations consisting of a letter and memorandum from the lady's father, and conversations with the settlor after the date of the settlement, the draft being lost, and the solicitor who prepared it being unable to account for the omission.—Milner v. M., 8 I. E. R. 488. (C.)

6. A party, having an annuity charged on an estate for life, filed a bill and obtained a receiver. A judgment creditor whose judgment was a charge on the inheritance, obtained an extension of the receiver under the Sheriffs Act. Held, that the judgment creditor was entitled to have the entire rents applied to pay off both principal and interest due to him, in priority to the annuitant, the Court having no jurisdiction to fix an equity on the fund.—Corbet v. Mahon, 8 I. E. R. 635; 2 Jon. & L. 671. (C.)—[See 10 I. E. R. 201. (R.)]

7. A settlement charged a jointure on X. and Y.; and declared that until the death of A. (tenant for life of Y.), it should be borne out of X.; but that after that, X. should be released, and it should be borne out of Y. and not out of X. Although it was held to be charged on both estates at once, yet as between the estates themselves it was Held, that Y. should be wholly exhausted to indemnify X., before X. was resorted to.

A settlor having two estates, limited both to himself for life, then to secure a jointure charged on X. until a third person died, and then on Y., with power to remove the charge from both by giving other security; then as to X. to the issue of the marriage in settlement, and as to Y. to himself and his heirs.

He then covenanted to charge £3000 for children's portions, and that it should be the first charge on all property which he should die seized or possessed of, and have priority over all other charges thereon. Held, that the £3000, not attaching on any property during the settlor's life, were at his death a charge on Y. only, and was piousne to the jointure on it.—Sullivan v. S., 8 I. E. R. 685; 2 Jon. & L. 769. (C.)

1. A judgment creditor cannot have a sale as against other judgment creditors whose judgments are prior to August 1840.

Seemle—When his judgment affects a life estate, and he has an equity to throw other incumbrances on other estates, he cannot have those other estates sold to clear the life estate.—Edington v. Bloomfield, 9 I. E. R. 115. (C.)

2. When a receiver, appointed on the petition or in the suit of a piousne incumbrancer, is extended to the matter or suit of a prior incumbrancer, the rents received before the extension belong to the piousne incumbrancer.

Rents due at the date of the extension, but not received until afterwards, belong to the prior incumbrancer.

Rents, due at the date of an order appointing a receiver under the Judgment Acts, but received afterwards, belong to the judgment creditor, not to the debtor.

An equitable mortgagee is entitled to priority over a subsequent creditor by judgment affecting the legal estate, who is in possession by a receiver, though the judgment was obtained without notice of the mortgage.—Abbott v. Stratton, 9 I. E. R. 233; 3 Jon. & L. 603. (C.)

3. A., tenant for life; remainder to his son, B., in tail. A. and B. executed a deed whereby, after reciting an agreement between them, that A. should grant B. and his assigns an annuity of £100, chargeable on the lands, and payable during the lives of A. and B., and the survivor of them; and that, in consideration thereof, A. should have power to charge the lands with £1000, with interest from his death, for his own benefit, but not to be raised or paid until two years after his death, A. and B. declared the uses of a recovery suffered by them to be, that B., and his assigns, should, during the lives of A. and B., and the survivor of them, receive thereout an annuity of £100, with the usual powers of distress and entry for non-payment; and, subject thereto, to A.'s use for life; and, after his death, to B.'s use in tail. A. was thereby empowered to charge the lands with £1000, with interest from his death, to be disposed of as he should appoint amongst his younger children. A., having exercised this power, died. B. and several younger children, survived. Held, that the £1000 were a charge prior to B.'s annuity.—Mills v. M., 9 I. E. R. 299; 3 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)

4. Since the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, judgments of the same Term, entered after its passing, have priority inter se as charges on lands, according to the true dates of their entries.

Quere—As to the priority inter se of such judgments entered before the passing of that Act?—Borough v. Williamson, 11 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

5. D. was tenant for life of estates, subject to a charge on the inheritance of £15,000 vested in S.

A bill was filed by D.'s creditors claiming under a deed of the 20th of April 1799, and a receiver was appointed over D.'s life estate.

S. filed a bill to raise the charge which had been created by a settlement of the 12th of Nov. 1761. D. died on the 5th of Oct. 1844. S. obtained an order on the 27th of Jan. 1845, from the late M. R., that the receiver should be extended to S.'s cause so far as related to the rents due at the time of the decease of D. and then remaining uncollected. A sum being in the receiver's hands consisting of rents due in D.'s lifetime, part of which was collected before and part after the order of the 27th of Jan. 1845,—Held (affirming the Master's allocation report), that the creditors of D.'s life estate were entitled to the rents received before, and S. to the rents received after, the order of the 27th of Jan. 1845.—Moore v. Donegal, 11 I. E. R. 364. (R.)—[Affirmed: ibid. 412. (C.)]

6. S., seized in fee of K., X., and other lands, by deed of Feb., reciting that he had charged his unsettled estates with £2000 for his daughter, conveyed K. and X. to B., his eldest son, for life, remainder to his issue in tail; in consideration of which B. covenanted to pay all S.'s debts and incumbrances. By deed of the 12th of June between S., B., and W. (another son of S.), reciting that S. intended to convey K. to W., he conveyed X. to B. and his issue, as in the former deed. Both deeds recited other provisions made for W. and other children in lieu of charges on estates settled on B. in remainder. By deed of the 13th of June, between S., B., and W., S. conveyed, and B. confirmed, K. to W. for life, remainder to his issue in tail. B. paid the debts and charges. On the death of S., W. went into possession of K., and so continued until his death. In a suit by the son of B., Held that the deed of Feb. was for valuable consideration, which extended to the issue of B. That the deed of the 13th of June was a voluntary deed, no consideration moving from W. to S. That even if both deeds were voluntary, the deed of Feb. should prevail; and that neither S. nor B., nor both of them, could revoke it by a subsequent voluntary settlement.

The futility of a defence resting on an unproved inconsistent prior conveyance, though evinced by admission, in answer to another suit, observed on.

Expenditure on the estate claimed, with ptf.'s knowledge, but chiefly in his minority, Held, no defence.—Scott v. S., 11 I. E. R. 487. (C.)—[See 13 I. E. R. 212; 4 H. L. Cas. 1065.]

7. Receiver appointed on a judgment, notwithstanding a voluntary deed executed the same day as the judgment was entered; the judgment having relation back to the first day of the preceding Term.—Beamish v. Phaire, 11 I. E. R. 559. (R.)

1. An unregistered mortgage has priority over the subsequent certificate of the appointment of assignees.—Leech v. Law, 11 Jur. 41. (C.)

2. A., having obtained a judgment in respect of a salvage advance, extended a receiver already appointed by B., a prior judgment creditor; and moved for payment in priority. Held, that the Court will not, on petition, decide the question of priority, B. insisting on his right to be paid according to the priority of his judgment.—O'Grady v. Glover, 11 Jur. 153. (R.)

3. A., being declared purchaser of an estate, sold under the Court of Exchequer, for £12,000, lodged £5000, and applied to ptfs. to lend £8000 on a mortgage, to be the first charge on the property. After the agreement for the loan, but before its completion, a judgment was confessed by A. Nevertheless, the ptfs. proceeded with the loan; and a consent, made a rule of Court, ordered that the conveyance should be made to a trustee for both parties, who, by deed of same date with the conveyance, mortgaged the lands to ptfs. Held, that the judgment creditor had priority to the mortgagees.—Walcott v. Lynch, 21 Jur. 309. (C.)

5. In 1836 a receiver was appointed under the Sheriffs Act, at the suit of A., over a term for years, which was afterwards sold under an Act of Parliament, and the money brought into Court to the credit of the matter. Held, that as against a prior creditor, A. was entitled only to the dividends of the fund, but not to the principal, notwithstanding the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22.—Colvan v. Gregg, 13 I. E. R. 88. (R.)

6. In an incumbrancer's suit A., the inheritor, admitting his liability to an arrear of interest, and disputing his liability for more, he was ordered, on a motion for a receiver, to pay within a certain time the admitted amount, and pay the accruing gales of interest for the future. He did pay accordingly for some years; but, having made default, the receiver was appointed under this order: and, under a consent order subsequently made, applied the funds from time to time in paying the future interest. The receiver was afterwards extended on the petitions of several puisne judgment creditors of A. A fund having accumulated, brought in by the receiver after paying the interest,—Held, that it could not be claimed by the judgment creditors, while the principal and disputed arrear of interest were due to the ptf.; the receiver, when once appointed, being so for all purposes of the cause, and not to be considered limited to the payment of the accruing interest.

On an appeal, counsel for the appellant only can be heard in support of his case, and not counsel for others in the same interest who have not appealed.—Stewart v. Marquis of Donegal, 13 I. E. R. 106. (C.)

7. T., a trustee, lent trust-money on mortgage to M. By an arrangement on the marriage of M.'s daughter, a valuable leasehold interest was granted by M. out of the mortgaged premises, and put in settlement; T. being the person who managed it, and the solicitor who prepared the lease and settlement, the daughter or her husband not being informed of the mortgage. T. afterwards, with his co-trustee and their c. q. trusts, filed a bill to foreclose the mortgage, and sell, if necessary, discharged of the lease. Held, that the parties deriving under the settlement must be fixed with notice of the mortgage and trust, and could not rely on T.'s conduct as a defence against even him, and therefore could not object to his being a co-plaintiff.

Quere—Whether, if notice was not shown, such an equity against a trustee would be a defence?—Twycross v. Moore, 13 I. E. R. 250. (C.)

8. A father, V., upon the marriage of his son, D., executed, in 1821, a settlement, conveying a freehold and chattel real (which latter was recited to be subject to a mortgage) to trustees, to hold subject to the charges and incumbrances affecting them, and specified in the annexed schedule, for 500 years; and, subject to that term and the aforesaid charges and incumbrances, upon other trusts. One of the trusts of the term was to raise £7000 after V.'s death, for the sole use of him and his personal representatives, and to be disposed of as he should direct. There followed a proviso that the £7000 should, in the first instance, be subject to the payment of all his debts then affecting the premises, and to his covenants therein contained for payment (inter alia) of the incumbrances affecting them; it being the true intent of the settlement that the residue of the £7000, left after those payments, should be disposable by V., who also covenanted that the premises were free from incumbrances, other than such charges and incumbrances as at the time, or immediately before the execution of the settlement affected them, and were a lien thereon, and specified in the schedule. In the schedule, both judgment debts and simple contract debts were specified. In 1825, the mortgagee of the chattel real, having advanced to V. and D. a further sum, part of which was applied in payment of three of the judgment debts specified in the schedule, V. and D. re-mortgaged the chattel real, and mortgaged the freehold to him for the aggregate debt; and for better securing the same, V., reciting his power under the settlement, directed that the trustees of the term should, after his decease, raise £7000, and apply it to pay whatever might then remain due on foot of the aggregate mortgage debt. The judgments paid off were assigned as a collateral security to the mortgagee. In a foreclosure suit by the mortgagee, held, that so much only of the advance by him in 1825 as was applied in paying the three judgment debts ranked equally, in point of priority, with the other judgment and simple contract debts specified in the schedule. That all the judgment and simple contract debts specified in the schedule were well charged by the settlement upon the term, and the £7000 to be levied thereout; and that the remaining portion of the advance made in 1825 ranked subsequently to all those judgment and simple contract debts.

That the mortgage of 1825 did not operate as a revocation of the settlement in respect of the debts specified in the schedule.

Quære—Whether, independently of the term and of the £7000, the debts specified in the schedule were well charged upon the freehold and chattel real, the subjects of the settlement?—Greene v. Stoney, 13 I. E. R. 301. (C.)

1. The lands of A. and B. were jointly mortgaged for £150. A. vested in the owner in this matter, subject to the payment of the mortgage in exoneration of B.; and B. vested in the party now showing cause. Subsequently, the petitioner advanced to the owner a further sum of money, and obtained an assignment of the original mortgage. A railway company having occasion for part of A., paid the petitioner £250 generally. Held, that he was bound to apply this in payment of the first mortgage.—In re Vance, 3 I. Jur. 247. (I.E.C.)

2. An incumbent, in 1840, by deed, charged his then present benefice with an annuity, and covenanted that any benefice to which he might be preferred, in lieu of that which he then held, should, immediately upon his becoming entitled thereto, stand charged with the annuity. In Aug. 1840, he was promoted to a new benefice. In Oct. 1840, a judgment was recovered against him by a creditor, who obtained sequestration of the new benefice. In 1849, the annuitant filed a bill to raise the arrears of his annuity by means of a receiver. That bill was taken as confessed against the incumbent, and was answered by the sequestration creditor. Held, that the annuity attached upon the new benefice at the moment at which the incumbent became entitled thereto, and had priority over the claim of the sequestration creditor; and that this was so, whether or not at the rendition of the judgment, he had notice of the annuity and covenant.

That the annuitant was entitled to have a receiver appointed over the benefice, upon an interlocutory application, made for that purpose before the hearing of the case.—Battersby v. Homan, 2 I. C. R. 232; 2 I. Jur. 121. (C.)

3. A judgment is not, as against the lands of the conuzor, entitled under the statutes 10 Car. 1, sess. 2, c. 3 (Ir.), and 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, to priority over a voluntary conveyance of anterior date, executed by the conuzor when not in embarrassed circumstances.—Evans v. E., 2 I. C. R. 242; 5 I. Jur. 21. (C.)

4. Registration under the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 90, does not confer any priority on judgments inter se during the lifetime of the conuzor.

A. recovered against B. a judgment in 1838. In that year B. died, having bequeathed (subject to charges) a chattel real beneficially to his executrix and his son. The executrix assented to the bequest. In 1843, C. recovered a judgment against B.'s executrix and son. In 1846, D. recovered a judgment against them, which judgment was immediately registered. A writ of fi. fa. on that judgment was lodged with the sheriff on the 18th of Jan. 1849. On the 25th of Jan. 1849, the judgment of 1843 was registered. On the 30th of Jan. 1849, the sheriff sold to A. the chattel real, under the fi. fa. issued on D.'s judgment of 1846. A.'s judgment of 1838 was, on the 6th of Feb. 1849, revived against B.'s executrix in her representative character. On that judgment a fi. fa. was issued, and a return of nulla bona made. On the 28th of Feb. 1849, the chattel real was, by indenture, conveyed to A. by the sheriff and B.'s executrix and son. A. afterwards obtained assignments to himself of the charges on the chattel real. On a bill subsequently filed by C. against A., and B.'s executrix and son, to have the amount of the judgment of 1843 raised out of the chattel real—Held, that the judgment of 1846 was not, in virtue of its earlier registration, entitled to priority over the judgment of 1843.

That A. was not, in respect of the judgment of 1838, entitled to the benefit of the proviso in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 102, s. 22, in favour of purchasers, mortgagees, and creditors, who became such before the passing of that Act, i. e., in 1840; and that A. was not entitled to use that judgment, or the charges assigned to him, as a protection to his title to the chattel real as against C.

That the title to the chattel real acquired by A. under the sale by the sheriff on the fi. fa. issued upon the judgment of 1846, was not protected, as against C.'s judgment of 1843, by the proviso in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, "that nothing in that Act contained shall take away or prejudice any remedy or proceeding which any judgment creditor may, or, if that Act were not passed, might have or take in relation to his judgment; but such creditor shall be at liberty to proceed at law or in equity for recovery of any sum secured by, or due upon, any such judgment, whether before or after such period as aforesaid, as if that Act had not been passed." A decree was pronounced for C., as prayed by his bill.—Hyde v. Atkinson, 2 I. C. R. 246; 5 I. Jur. 33. (C.)

5. An ante-nuptial settlement, executed in 1782, recited that H. was seized in fee of the lands of W. (the fact being that he was seized in tail of part, and in fee of the remaining part), and that he was seized of an estate for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, in the lands of B., and possessed of a term for years in the lands of R. By that settlement, W. was settled upon H. for life (subject to a term of 500 years, to provide for younger children £1500 as portions, which might be raised during the lifetime of H., with his consent), remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage successively in tail male. B. and R. were thereby settled upon H. for life (subject to making good any deficiency in the £1500 portions), remainder to the first son of the marriage, his heirs, executors, &c. That settlement contained a power (afterwards exercised) for H. to charge upon all the lands £2000, to be raised at any time which he might appoint; and a proviso enabling him to deprive any son, who might misconduct himself, of any estate thereby limited to him. No recovery of W. was suffered to the uses of that settlement. In 1811, E., eldest son of the marriage, being of age, joined H. in a deed making a tenant to the præcipe in a recovery about to be suffered of W., reciting that he was seized of an estate for life, and E. of an estate in remainder in tail male in W., and their intention to bar all estates tail, remainders, &c., therein; and declaring that the recovery should enure for the purpose of securing any sums which H. and E. might jointly charge upon W., and to such other uses as they might jointly appoint; in default of appointment, to the uses of the settlement of 1782. The deed of 1811 contained a proviso that in the event of E. dying in the lifetime of H., and without issue, W. should stand charged with £2000 for the younger children of H. A recovery was duly suffered to the uses of that deed. Neither H. nor E. ever exercised the powers conferred upon them of jointly charging or appointing W. Subsequently to 1811, judgments were recovered against E., who died in 1819, in the lifetime of H., and without issue. Held, that the £1500, for portions created by the settlement of 1782, were primarily charged upon W., and that the other lands constituted only an auxiliary fund to pay those portions.

That the younger children of H., in regard to their charge of £2000 under the deed of 1811 upon W., were not, as against the judgment creditors of E., entitled to have, upon the principle of marshalling, the charge of £2000, created by the settlement of 1782, thrown altogether upon R., but that all the lands should bear that charge pro rata.—[Hargreave, C., dissentiente.]

That as the power for H. to charge £2000 under the settlement of 1782 overrode all the other powers and provisions in it, the £1500 portions should not be deducted from the value of W., in ascertaining the proportion of the £1000 charge of 1782, which those lands were to bear, but that proportion should be calculated upon the full value of W.—In re Jones's Estate, 21 C. R. 544. (I.E.C.)

1. Blanks were left for the names of the baronies in which lands, the subject of a deed of marriage settlement, were situate. After the execution of the deed, the names of the baronies were inserted. The deed was re-acknowledged before witnesses other than the witnesses to the original execution of the deed. An affidavit by one of the witnesses to the execution of the deed, verified the execution of a memorial and of the deed itself, though the deed as altered was not re-acknowledged before him. Subsequently the grantor signed a document in the presence of the witness, declaring that the names of the baronies had been inserted in his presence, and by his direction, in pursuance of the original intention of the parties, and for the purpose of registration only. The memorial was registered, on production of the affidavit and the original deed, under the 3 G. 4, c. 116. Held, following Gardiner v. Blesinton, 1 I. C. R. 64, from which decision the Court dissented, that the insertion of the names of the baronies in the deed was an alteration in an immaterial point; and that neither the deed nor the registration was thereby invalidated.

Lands were devised to A. for life, subject to a term of 1000 years, to secure portions for his younger brothers and sisters. The testator, by a deed of 1836, charged a portion for one of the sisters on the lands, and, by a codicil referring to the deed, revoked the bequest made by the will in her favour. A party claiming from A., under a deed of 1841, registered before the deed of 1836, availed himself in the Master's office of the codicil to diminish the portions bequeathed by the will. Held, that he could not rely on the codicil as adeeming the legacy, and at the same time avail himself of the prior registration of his deed, by disclaiming knowledge of the contents of the deed of 1836.—Delacour v. Freeman, 2 I. C. R. 633. (R.)

2. Two judgments having been lodged with the officer for entry on the same day, the date of entry was the same. Held, that neither was entitled to priority, although one appeared before the other on the roll. The fund, under such circumstances, is distributable moiety between them; the judgments being for the same amount.—Norcott v. Massey, 6 I. Jur. 113. (R.)

3. V. entitled to an undivided fourth of the lands of A., B., C., and D., by deed reciting that he was entitled to D., granted an annuity out of D. A petition having been presented in the I. E. Court to sell the grantor's interest, the Court directed a partition of the lands, and awarded A. to the grantor of the annuity, and B., C., and D. to the parties entitled to the other three-fourths, without notice to the annuitant. Held, that as against subsequent judgment creditors of the grantor, the annuitant was entitled only to so much of the produce of A. as was equivalent to the one-fourth of the value of D.—In re Wilkins, 4 I. C. R. 575. (P.C.)

4. Premises were, by a post-nuptial and voluntary deed, dated 28th Feb. 1826, charged with a rentcharge of £40 per annum. A judgment was obtained by a creditor, in E. Term 1836, for the penal sum of £900, and duly registered, charging the premises. On the 21st Nov. 1846, the premises were mortgaged for £700. A bill having been filed to foreclose the mortgage, and the fund proving deficient, the rentcharge was declared to be void as against the mortgage, but good as against the judgment; that the mortgagee, though subsequent in point of time to the judgment creditor, should have the first claim on the fund, to the extent of the value of the rentcharge as calculated by a notary; that the judgment creditor should stand second for his whole demand; the mortgagee third in respect of the balance of his demand; the residue, if any, to go to the owners of the rentcharge. — v. McCowan, 7 I. Jur. 389. (M.O.)

1. F., seized of the M. and D. estates, by a post-nuptial settlement executed in 1807, conveyed D. to the use of himself in fee, free from his wife's dower, and conveyed M. to the use of himself for life; remainder to provide a jointure for his wife in lieu of dower, remainders over in strict settlement. F. covenanted that his wife would levy a fine to the uses of the deed. F.'s wife signed this deed, but died without having ever levied a fine, and without having ever been called on to do so. Held, that the deed of 1807 could be supported, as not merely voluntary, against subsequent purchasers for value from F.

2. By settlement of 1810 power was given to A., the intended husband, to appoint to all and every, or any one or more of the children, grand-children, or other issue of the marriage, in such manner and form, and, if more than one, in such parts, &c., and for such estate and estates, time or times, and for such interests, and with such limitations over, or substitutions, or charges in favour of any one or more of the children, &c., respectively, and either by way of legacy, portion, present interest, remainder, or otherwise, as A. should by deed or will direct; it being the true intent of the parties that A. might divide the premises in such portions as he should think fit amongst his children, or appoint the entire to one or more child or children, and charge the said premises by way of pecuniary provision for the other children of the marriage. Power was given A. to charge £200 for his own benefit, and a jointure and portions for a second wife, and children of a second marriage.

By settlement executed in 1844 by A. and B., his eldest son, on B.'s marriage—reciting the power of appointment in the settlement of 1810; the powers to A. to charge; that A. had agreed to release the latter powers; that the lands in which A. had a life estate were subject to various debts, charges, and incumbrances stated in a schedule; and that A. had not appointed the lands,—A. appointed the lands after his own death, but subject to the debts, &c., thereinbefore mentioned, and then affecting the lands, and released his power of charging them with a jointure and portions. A present annuity of £200 a-year, and a jointure of £300 for his intended wife were provided and secured by a term; and a term puisne to that term was created, to raise £4000 portions for A.'s younger children. The schedule to the deed comprised the £4000 portions, and £530, a bond debt of both father and son.

Semble—The power would have authorised an exclusive appointment; but Held, that the deed of 1844 operated as an appointment of the estate, subject to a charge of £4000, which took priority of the jointure to B.'s wife.

That a charge of the bond debt was created by the recital, and the appointment subject to it had also priority over the jointure.

That, independently of the power, the £4000 was a charge in priority to the jointure under the deed of 1844.—In re Nash, 5 I. C. R. 384. (P.C.)

3. H., a judgment creditor, made a debt. in a suit, permitted a report and decree to be made in 1828, which omitted all mention of his claims. In 1855, he obtained an order giving him liberty to file a charge, and obtain, at his own expense, a separate report in respect to his claims; but reserving to the persons who had proved in the cause a right to rely on the decree against his claims. The Master found that his incumbrance was subject to the rights and priorities established by the decree of 1828. Held, that, on the true construction of the order of 1855, the Master was right.

Quare—Whether the order of 1855 was right in permitting H. to file a charge in respect of a claim omitted in a decree to which he was party?—Knox v. Waters, 5 I. C. R. 430. (C.)

4. A was seized in fee of X., and for life, with remainder to his son in tail, of Y., subject to incumbrances. By a private Act of Parliament, passed in 1843, X. was vested in a trustee, subject to the incumbrances affecting it, and to judgments against A., which were specified in a schedule to the Act, to the use of A. for life, remainder to his son in tail; and Y. was vested in the trustee, in trust, to sell and pay incumbrances, and to pay the residue to A. A. was also seized in fee of Z., not included in the Act. A. confessed a judgment in 1846, and died, having allowed large arrears of interest to accrue on the incumbrances on X. A portion of X. and Z. were sold in the I. E. Court. X. was sufficient to pay the arrears of interest. Held, reversing its decision, that the arrears of interest on the judgments named in the schedule to the Act should be paid out of the produce of X., so as to leave the produce of Z. to pay the judgments of 1846.—In re Fox, 5 I. C. R. 541. (P.C.)

5. In 1812, a mortgage was executed by A. and B. to C. In 1813 two judgments, and in 1815 a third judgment, were obtained by C. against A. C. entered into possession of the mortgaged lands in 1812, and continued in possession until 1855. In a redemption suit—Held, that the judgments were not, so far as related to the question in this case, to be considered as incorporated in the mortgage so as to form one security, and therefore that the rents received, or which might have been received, by C., were to be applied—first, in paying the interest and principal due on the mortgage; secondly, in paying the interest and principal due on the two judgments of 1813; thirdly, in paying the interest and principal due on the judgment of 1815.—Montgomery v. Donohoe, 5 I. C. R. 495; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 91. (R.)—[Affirmed: 6 I. C. R. 168; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 401. (C.)]

1. The order made by a Court of Law, under ss. 132, 133, 134, and 135 of the C. L. P. A. Act, 1853, to attach stock standing to the credit of a debtor in a cause in the Court of Ch., does not per se operate as a seizure of or a charge on the stock. Semble—The lodging of such an order with the Accountant-General, without obtaining an order of the Court of Ch. does not charge the stock.

Semble also, that a conditional order does not attach the fund, under the C. L. P. Act.

A conditional order to charge funds in Chancery was obtained in a Law Court, under the C. L. P. Act, on the 30th June; made absolute on the 8th August; and lodged with the Accountant-General on the 14th Nov. A conditional order to charge the same fund was obtained in Ch. by another creditor, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, on the 1st August, lodged with the Accountant-General on the 7th August, and made absolute on the 13th Nov. Held, that the creditor who had obtained the order in Ch. was entitled to the fund in priority to the other.—French v. Balfé, 6 I. C. R. 63; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 299. (R.)

2. Bequests of several legacies, followed by a gift of the residue of the testator's real and personal estate, are sufficient to charge the legacies upon the real estate.

B., who possessed both real and personal estate, by will, in 1825, after bequeathing an annuity to his wife, further bequeathed to her £1000, "in trust to give such part of said sum as she may consider my estates and assets may justify, to my daughter A., on her marriage with her consent; the entire or remainder of said sum to go and be considered as part of the residue of my property as hereinafter bequeathed to my son B." He then bequeathed £5000 to A., and, if she should die before marriage, then "this bequest shall be considered as part of the residue of my property, and shall go and merge in same." After some small pecuniary bequests, "As to all the rest, residue and remainder of any property I may die possessed of or entitled to, of what nature soever, whether estates freehold, lease, &c., &c., I hereby bequeath, devise and grant the same to my son B., with liberty to him to dispose of the same in any way he may think proper."—Held, that the legacies bequeathed to A. were well charged on the real estates, and entitled to priority over a subsequent mortgage by B.—In re Browne, 6 I. C. R. 240; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 322. (I.E.C.)—[Affd.: 6 I. C. R. 390; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 49. (C.A.)]

3. E., by a post-nuptial settlement, in 1835, limited lands, "subject to the debts, charges, and incumbrances in the schedule mentioned," to trustees for 1000 years, subject thereto, to his eldest son, V., for life; remainders over in strict settlement. The trusts of the term were, after the death of E. "to raise money sufficient to pay off the debts, &c., specified in the schedule to the said deed, or such or so much thereof as should then remain unsatisfied; and to apply the money to so be raised in paying off such debts," &c. "accordingly." E. acquired by the same deed, a general power of charging the lands, subject, to the term. Amongst the debts, mentioned in the schedule were two, secured to J. by promissory notes. In 1844, E. gave J. a bond, on which judgment was recovered against him. In exchange, the promissory notes were delivered up.

E., by will, in 1843 referred to the settlement of 1835, and confirmed it. Under his general power of charging, he charged the lands with payment of his debts, so far as his personal estates should be insufficient to discharge them, and bequeathed the residue of his personal property, after payment of his debts, to the petitioners, whom he appointed his executors.

After the decease of E., J. obtained payment of the sum due on foot of his judgment out of E.'s personal estate. Held, that the lands comprised in the settlement of 1835 were the primary fund to pay the judgment obtained by J. on the bond given in extinction of the promissory notes.—Stuart v. Castlestuart, 6 I. C. R. 289; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 6. (C.)

4. R., before his second marriage, in 1832, executed three bonds, with warrants of attorney to confess judgment thereon; and by a deed executed the same day, erroneously reciting that judgments had been entered on the bonds, declared the trusts of those judgments to be for the three daughters of his first marriage.

Judgments were not entered on the bonds until after the solemnization of the second marriage. By settlement executed in contemplation of the second marriage, which did not mention the bonds or judgments, R. settled lands for the purposes of that marriage. R. afterwards, for value, charged his reversionary interest in those lands. Held, that the judgments of 1832 were to be treated as voluntary, and postponed to the subsequent charges created by R.

After the creation of the charges by R., two of the daughters assigned their judgments, for value. Held, that such assignment for value did not operate by relation, so as to give the judgments priority over the charges created by R.—O'Donovan v. Rogers, 7 I. C. R. 496; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 291. (C.A.)—[Affirming Rolls decision: 7 I. C. R. 1.]

5. A., in consideration of £2632 advanced by B., his son, in pursuance of a previous agreement, by deed dated the 21st Nov. 1844, settled his fee simple estates in strict settlement, and conveyed the lands of C. and K., which he held under a f.f. grant, to trustees, to sell, and apply the proceeds to the payment of debts affecting the fee-simple estates, incurred prior to T. Term 1842; and to take an assignment of those debts, to secure £6000 for A.'s younger children.

The advance was secured by a judgment entered up immediately before the execution of the deed of 1844. A schedule to that deed contained a considerable number of judgment debts, entered up subsequently to T. Term 1842, but before the judgment securing B.'s advance. Held, that upon the construction of the deed of 1844, the trusts of the deed were intended to have priority to B.'s judgment [Hargreave, C. dissenting.]

C. and K., were held under a f.-f. grant, subject, as to K., to a lease for three lives, all of which, at the execution of the deed of 1844, were alleged to be dead. The deed provided that B. should take proceedings to recover actual possession of K. B. took those proceedings; but on investigation it appeared that one life was in being. Held (Hargreave, C., dubitante), that the proviso was a condition precedent to the carrying out of the contract intended by the deed of 1844; and that, as it never had been fulfilled, B. was not bound to carry out the trusts of the deed.—In re Blake, 7 I. C. R. 65. (I.E.C.)

1. A. bequeathed a legacy to H., which she directed to be paid and retained by him in the first instance, without any delay or deduction immediately after her decease. She then made other bequests, among which was a bequest of £250 to R.; and if the full amount of the debt due to her should be recovered, she left R. £200 in addition. She appointed H. her executor and residuary legatee. Held, that the legacy to H. should not have priority; but should, on a deficiency of assets, abate rateably with the other legacies.—Roche v. Harding, 7 I. C. R. 338; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 253. (R.)

3. A tenant for life of estates, with a power to charge them with £7000 for the benefit of his younger children, executed on the marriage of P., his third son, a bond and warrant of attorney, on which judgment was entered, to secure £1400 as provision for such third son. By will he devised his estates to his eldest son, subject to his debts and incumbrances of every kind, and bequeathed £2000 to his only daughter, M., and £1000 to his only son, H., charging these legacies on the estates, in exercise of the power. The testator concluded his will by stating that he had avoided making mention in his will of his married children, as he had already, by bond or otherwise, provided for them at their respective marriages, adequately to the provision made by his will for his other children.

It having been decided (7 I. C. R. 18), that the charge of the judgment debt to P., by the will, operated as an execution of the power to charge for younger children,—Held, overruling a decision of the I. E. Court, that the charge of £1400 had not priority over the legacies.—In re Morgan, 8 I. C. R. 266; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 357. (C.A.)

4. By marriage settlement, it was covenanted that a term should be vested in trustees, to secure portions for the younger children of the marriage, as the father should appoint by deed or will. On the marriage of one of the younger sons, he wrote a letter promising to appoint a portion of the fund in his favour. On the marriage of another younger son, the father made a regular appointment, by deed in his favour. Held, that the former, though but a contract to appoint, being prior in date, should be preferred to the subsequent regular appointment.—In re Jennings, 8 I. C. R. 421. (P.C.)

5. V., possessed of a term of years, with a t. q. covenant for renewal, devised all his landed property, houses, and tenements, goods and chattels of every description, ready money and outstanding debts, to his sons, A., B., and C., to be equally divided between them, and appointed his wife executrix.

V. died, in 1833. On his death his widow, who proved the will, and B. went into possession of the lands, until the death of the wife in 1847, when A. took out administration de bonis non, and continued in possession, applying all the rents to his own use. In 1850 a perpetuity grant of the lands under the Church Temporalities Act, reciting V.'s will, and that A. was administrator de bonis non was made to him expressly in that character. In an administration suit—Held, that the perpetuity grant rebutted the presumption of an assent by the executor to the bequests, arising from lapse of time.

That the lands should be sold, and divided into three shares, for the benefit of V.'s sons or their representatives.

That the claim of A.'s representative, by reason of the surplus rents received by B., should be paid out of B.'s share in priority to judgments against B. registered as mortgages.—M'Connell v. Crothers & others, 9 I. C. R. 217. (R.)

6. Two judgments, of 1797, were obtained against D., seized of the lands of B. & S. B. was sold in the I. E. Court, on the petition of a mortgagee of 1845; and the proceeds of the sale, being insufficient to pay the mortgage, an issue was directed by that Court, to try whether the judgments had been paid. A verdict found that they had not. The mortgagee was thereupon directed by the I. E. Court to pay the sum due on the judgments, and they were assigned to a trustee for her. Held, that the judgments were subsisting charges against S., and were not barred by the Statute of Limitations.—Morris v. Herbert, 9 I. C. R. 327. (R.)

1. By deed, reciting an intention on the grantor's part, to found and benefit charities, lands were conveyed, on trust, to pay annuities for the maintenance of some of the charities, on certain gale days, "without any abatement, deduction, or defalcation whatsoever." The trustees were then directed to pay other annuities for the benefit of the other charities. The estate proving deficient to pay all the annuities, the Master, upon a reference to him, decided that those ordered to be paid "without any abatement, &c., &c., had priority." Held, that the annuities had no priority over each other. The doctrine of cy-pres in reference to charities expounded. — In re Evans's Charities, 10 I. C. R. 271. (C.)

2. A., by will, in 1836, executed a power of appointing amongst his younger sons, £2000, charged by his marriage settlement on the lands of H., of which he was tenant for life. After his death, his eldest son V., who took H. as tenant in tail, conveyed them in 1837 to trustees, to secure £1600 by way of mortgage, the younger sons being parties to the mortgage, and consenting thereby to postpone their claims. At the same time, V. executed his bond collateral, to secure the same sum, and warrant, upon which judgment was entered.

In 1841, V. purchased the lands of F.; and in 1845, a judgment was obtained against him by S. H. and F. were subsequently sold in the L. E. Court. The proceeds of H. having proved insufficient to pay the amount due on foot of the mortgage, a Judge of that Court ordered that the mortgage debt should be paid rateably out of the proceeds of H. and F., and the surplus of H. applied in discharge of the appointees' claims, and the surplus of F. in discharge of the judgment of 1845. This Court, upon appeal, reversed that decision, being of opinion that no equity had arisen upon the purchase of F. in favour of the appointees under the will, so as to entitle them to insist upon the mortgagee's claim being paid rateably out of the proceeds of H. and F., and that consequently the doctrine of marshalling did not apply. — [Barnes v. Raester, 1 Y. & Col. Ch. Cas. 401, commented on.] — In re Lowder's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 346; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 210. (C.A.)

3. A. mortgaged B. to V., and gave him as a collateral security a judgment, which attached on both B. and W. Subsequently V. assigned his debt and securities to C. And A. at the same time mortgaged B. to C. for a further sum, with a covenant against all incumbrances, except the mortgage to V. Held, that C., as against a puisne incumbrancer, was entitled to be paid the debt assigned to him by V. out of W. first, so as to leave B. unimpaired to meet the second mortgage made to C. himself. — In re Roddy's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 369. (L.E.C.)

4. A. devised several annuities, which she directed only to be a lien upon and charged on the yearly income of her lands, real, freehold, and chattel real, but not upon any other personal estate. She directed that, if the yearly income of her lands should fall short of paying the annuities, the deficiency should equally and proportionably be upon all such annuities; each to receive according to the magnitude of such annuity, and in proportion thereto, but no such deficiency to be vested upon her personal estate. She devised the residue of her property, real and personal, after satisfying the annuities, &c. The income of the lands was insufficient to pay the annuities. Held, that they being charged on the income only of the lands, were, for each year, satisfied by payment of a proportionable share, and that the arrears were not charged on the future rents. — Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 11 I. C. R. 457. (R.)

5. In a marriage settlement, a husband covenanted with his trustees that his heirs, executors, &c., would, from his death, pay his wife a yearly jointure of £40; and pay them £400 for the benefit of the children, if any. The husband became indebted to one of the trustees, who entered up judgment against him, and insured the husband's life for its amount. Upon sale of the trust property — Held, that the assignee of that judgment was entitled to be placed upon the final schedule of incumbrances in priority to the settlor's wife and children; and that, in considering dealings between a trustee and his c. q. t., the length of time during which the trustee's acts have been acquiesced in, with the knowledge of the c. q. t., is to be taken into account in the trustee's favour. — [Ennis v. Smith, Jon. & Car. 400, followed.] — In re McKenna's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 330. (C.A.)

6. A. was seized in fee of estates called the family estates, and tenant for life of devised estates, with remainder to B., his eldest son, in tail, subject to large incumbrances affecting each estate. A. and B. agreed that all the incumbrances should be paid by the sale of C., a portion of the devised estate, which was of sufficient value for the purpose; and that the residue of the devised estate, and the family estate, should be settled on A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder over. Two deeds were executed. By one the entail of the devised estate was barred, and it was conveyed to such uses as A. should appoint. By the other A. conveyed the family estate, and conveyed and appointed the devised estate to such uses as A. and B. should jointly appoint; in default of appointment, to the use of trustees for 1000 years, to secure younger children's portions; and subject thereto to the use of A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail, remainder over. A. covenanted with B., that he would sell C. and would, out of the rents received by him before the sale, and the money which should arise from such sale, pay all the charges and incumbrances affecting both estates.

A. misapplied the rents, and suffered an arrear of interest of the incumbrances on the family estate to accrue. Consequently the price of C. proved insufficient to pay the incumbrances and the interest on them; and a portion of the family estate was sold. Held, that B. had an equity against A. to be recouped out of the rents of the life estate which he derived under the deed, to the extent of all interest on the incumbrances scheduled in the deed, which accrued after its date, and which were levied by sale of any of the family estates, in consequence of A.'s misapplication of the rents.

That although A. was not bound, before the execution of the deed, to pay the arrear of interest then due on the family estate, it was, under the deed, to be paid out of the rents and produce of the sale of C.

That the rents and the produce of the sale of C. were also applicable to pay arrears due on the devised estate.

That the equity of the petitioner to be recouped prevailed over the right of judgment creditors of A., whose judgments were obtained after the deed, and who had appointed a receiver over his life estate.—Kilworth v. Mountcashel, 12 I. C. R. 43. (R.)

1. A., seized of real estate, subject to a mortgage, which he had covenanted to pay, by will, in 1829, bequeathed pecuniary legacies, and directed that all his chattel property whatever (except as before bequeathed) should be sold; and, in the first place, the produce thereof to be applied to pay his just debts and funeral expenses; and in the next place, in discharge of his legacies. The mortgaged estate descended to the heir-at-law. Held, that he was entitled to have the mortgage paid out of the personal estate in preference to the legacies.—Burley v. Armstrong, 12 I. C. R. 270; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 50. (R.)

2. A rector, by deed, granted for value an annuity charged on his tithe rentcharge and glebe lands, payable on the 1st May and 1st Nov. in each year. The deed gave a power of distress when the annuity should be 31 days in arrear; and contained a power of attorney to the grantee to receive the rentcharge, and a demise to a trustee to secure it. The annuity was paid to the 1st of Nov. 1860. In April 1861, the grantee served notices on the tithe rentcharge-payers to pay their rentcharge to him. Afterwards, on the 19th of April, a sequestration was issued on foot of a judgment pulsne to the annuity deed. On the 2nd May 1861, the grantee of the annuity deed filed a petition for a receiver over the tithe rentcharge. Held, that he was entitled, as against the sequestration creditor, to the tithe rentcharge received by the sequestrator after the filing of the petition.—Irvine v. Frew, 12 I. C. R. 418; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 72. (C.)

3. The assignor of a judgment, who, by the deed of assignment, covenants not to do anything to vitiate or defeat the assigned judgment, is not entitled to enforce prior securities vested in him, so as to exhaust the property subject to the assigned judgment.—Williams v. W., 12 I. C. R. 507. (C.)

4. A covenant in a marriage settlement, that the wife shall, out of the property of which the husband shall die seized or possessed, receive an annuity, only binds the property remaining after payment of debts.—Rowan v. Chute, 13 I. C. R. 169. (C.)

5. By settlement, in 1787, on the marriage of E., lands held for lives renewable were settled to the use of E. for life; remainder to the use of the issue of the marriage, as E. should appoint; in default of appointment, to them, share and share alike; on failure of issue, to E. absolutely. The issue of the marriage were F. and the petitioner M. On the marriage of F., in 1816, a settlement, to which E. was a party, was executed, which recited the limitation contained in the settlement of 1787; also, that F. was entitled to one moiety of the lands in that settlement, subject to the life estate of E., and put that moiety in strict settlement. E., by this deed, did not exercise his power of appointment, nor convey the settled lands. In 1817, M. married; and a settlement was then executed, in which E. joined, using words sufficiently large to convey all his interest in the lands comprised in the deed of 1787. Held, that, whatever might be the construction of that deed, the petitioner, claiming under E., would not be allowed to disappoint the provisions of the deed of 1816.—Nunn v. Donovan, 13 I. C. R. 184; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 313. (C.)

6. In a marriage settlement, executed in 1812, the husband, V., covenanted with the trustees of the settlement that his heirs, executors, &c., would, from and after his death, pay to his widow an annuity of £40 a-year, and pay the trustees £400 for the children of the marriage. V. became indebted to one of the trustees, who, in 1828, entered up judgment against him for £600, and also effected a policy of insurance upon V.'s life for a similar amount. The judgment was assigned to B., who also purchased a judgment obtained against V. in 1834 for £200, on which occasion a policy of insurance had been effected upon V.'s life. In 1860, the property comprised in the settlement of 1812 was sold in the L. E. Court. Upon settling the final schedule of incumbrances, a Judge declared that the jointure of £40 per annum, and the £400 for the children, were entitled to priority over the judgment of 1828; and that the judgment of 1834 had been satisfied by payment of the amount reserved by the second policy above mentioned. Held, reversing that decision, that both judgments should have precedence of the jointure and of the £400.

That the provision made in the settlement of 1812 for the widow and children, was only to affect such property as the settlor should have after payment of his just debts; that the trustee was not, as such, disqualified from dealing with the settlor, even though such dealings might have the effect of injuring the provision for the widow and children.

That when such transactions have been, with full knowledge of the state of facts, acquiesced in by c. q. trusts for a long period of time, it would be dangerous, and against public policy, to allow them to be re-opened.—In re M'Kenna's Estate, 18 I. C. R. 239. (C.A.)

1. A. being possessed of two estates, X. and Y., both were sold in the L. E. Court. X. was subject to a mortgage, and also to prior incumbrances. Y. was subject to the prior incumbrances, but not to the mortgage. There was a subsequent judgment affecting both estates. Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to have the securities marshalled, so as to have the prior incumbrances paid, in the first instance, as far as possible, out of the produce of Y., and that the subsequent judgment creditor had no equity modifying the mortgagee's right in that respect.—In re Scott's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 63. (C.A.)

2. S., in 1854, purchased several denominations in the I. E. Court, as trustee for E. Before the conveyance was executed, E. agreed to sell them to S. in consideration of a bill of exchange for £10,000, and a mortgage upon them. S. forged a conveyance from the I. E. Court, and executed for value a conveyance to W., reciting the forged conveyance as if genuine. Afterwards the L. E. Court executed a conveyance to S., reciting the purchase-money to be E.'s. Held, that no interest under the genuine deed passed by estoppel to W., so as to give him priority to E.'s demand. That E. had a lien for the amount of the bill.—Eyre v. Sadleir, 14 I. C. R. 119. (C.)

3. By marriage settlement, lands were limited (amongst other uses) to the use of trustees for 500 years, and, subject to that term, to the use of A. for life, remainder to the use that A.'s intended wife should receive a jointure; and, subject to these limitations, to the use of the first son of the marriage in tail male, remainders over. The trusts of the term were, to secure the payment of the jointure; and upon further trust, after the decease of A., or, in his lifetime, with his consent in writing, to raise £10,000 as portions for younger children, to be divided between them as A. should appoint. There were issue of the marriage an eldest son, and two younger children. A., by two deeds poll, appointed the whole of the £10,000 to his two younger children in certain proportions, and directed that it should be raised with interest immediately. Before the registration of the deeds poll, A. had, in conjunction with his eldest son, mortgaged the lands in fee, and confessed judgments to a large amount before the mortgage. Some of them A. charged by mortgage on his life estate. The aggregate amount of the judgments and of the mortgage in fee exceeded the value of A.'s life estate. One of A.'s younger children presented a petition to sell A.'s life estate to raise her appointed share of the £10,000; but the petition was dismissed, at the instance of the creditors on A.'s life estate. A petition was then presented by the same younger child, to raise her portion, by sale of the reversion expectant on the determination of A.'s life estate. On cause shown against the conditional order for payment by the remainderman, and various mortgagees and judgment creditors—Held, that the petition must be dismissed, with costs; that the power given to A., to raise the £10,000 in his lifetime, was a power appendant to his life estate, and was suspended by his acts: that it was inequitable for him to exercise it, as the effect would be to throw exclusively on the estate of the remainderman the payment of the interest which accrued during A.'s lifetime, and for the payment of which his estate was the primary fund.

That this equity does not apply to judgment creditors, for, as they do not acquire any security by contract, there is nothing inequitable in diminishing their security by a power of charging. When cause shown by different parties, who represent but one estate, is allowed, and costs are awarded, they are to be paid to the person first showing cause.—In re Greene's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 325; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 348. (L.E.C.)

4. In 1846, A. mortgaged to B. the lands of X., and in 1854 assigned them to his son, in consideration of natural love and affection. They were held under a renewable lease, and the son covenanted to perform the lessee's duties. A. merely covenanted for further assurance. In 1856, the assignment was registered. In 1860, A. mortgaged lands which, with X., had been included in the mortgage of 1846. Proceedings for the sale of A.'s lands having been instituted, a supplemental petition for the sale of X. was presented on foot of the mortgage of 1846. The order was made, but a direction was given that A.'s lands should be sold first. The proceeds of their sale sufficed to pay off the mortgage of 1846 and the prior incumbrances, but left no sufficient residue for the mortgage of 1860. Held, that the assignment was not to be deemed to have exonerated X. from the mortgage of 1846, notwithstanding the covenant for further assurance; that the assignment was to be deemed a voluntary conveyance, and therefore no indemnity could prove effectual against a purchaser for value; that the proceedings which had been instituted gave jurisdiction, and that, independently of such proceedings, jurisdiction would have been given by any well-founded equity of marshalling, or of contribution.—In re Rorke's Estate, 15 I. C. R. 316. (L.E.C.)

5. Estates, subject to charges, were settled on A. for life; remainder to his eldest son, B., for life; remainder to B.'s first and other sons in tail. A. covenanted to sell C. a portion of the estates; and, out of the rents received by him before the sale and the purchase-money, to pay off all the charges on the settled estates. C., in consequence of A.'s default in not keeping down the interest, proved insufficient to pay off the incumbrances, and another portion of the estates was sold to defray the deficiency. Held, that B. had an equity to be recouped the sum so raised for payment of the principal, as well as the interest of the charges which C. had proved insufficient to pay, out of the rents of

A.'s life estate, and in priority to A.'s judgment creditors whose judgments had been obtained subsequently to the date of the settlement.—Kilworth v. Mountcashel, 15 I. C. R. 565. (R.)

1. A judgment creditor, on behalf of himself and the other judgment creditors on the life estate of X., instituted a suit to which a trustee for all the judgment creditors was a party. At the hearing, it was dismissed on the merits. Another judgment creditor, who (save so far as the trustee represented him) had not been a party to it, subsequently instituted, for a like purpose, a suit, which relied upon different equities, and put forward additional facts supported by new evidence. Held, that the dismissal of the first suit was not an absolute bar to the prosecution of the second.

A., seized in fee of estates, subject to a charge of £2000, for his sisters, between whom it was to be equally divided, gave on the occasions of their marriages judgments dated respectively H. Term 1802 and E. Term 1802, to secure to his sisters respectively portions of £1000 and £2000. In 1809 he executed a voluntary post-nuptial settlement, whereby, after reciting that he was seized in fee of those estates, subject to a jointure of £600 for his wife, and subject also to charges amounting in the whole to £3000, principal money, with which they stood charged for the use of his sisters, as expressed in their several marriage settlements; and reciting that from the love and affection which he bore his wife and children, he was anxious to settle and assure the inheritance of those estates, in order to secure for his family the most certain and liberal provision which the nature and value of his estates would admit of, he settled the lands on himself for life, remainder to his eldest son for life, remainders over in strict settlement. He subsequently contracted debts, which were secured by judgments on his life estate; and, on the marriage of his eldest son in 1831, executed a deed by which he adopted and confirmed the limitations of 1809. The judgment of E. Term 1802 was paid off out of the rents and profits of the life estate of A., who died in 1861. Held, that the deed of 1809 showed no intention to onerate A.'s life estate with the judgment of E. Term 1802; and that therefore the judgment creditors on that estate were entitled to raise out of the inheritance the amount paid on foot of this judgment out of the life estate.—Dolphin v. Aylward, 15 I. C. R. 583. (C.A.)

II. HOW PRIORITY IS LOST OR ACQUIRED.

1. Generally.
2. By Tacking Securities.
3. By Equitable Lien.
4. By Notice, or its Want.
5. Under the Registry Acts.

II. 1. How, generally, Priority is Lost or Acquired.

2. By deed of Sept. 7, 1812, lands, subject to outstanding incumbrances, were settled on

A. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail. In 1816, A. granted B. annuities charged on the life estate; and, in 1818, paid off some of the prior incumbrances, and had them assigned to a trustee for his own benefit. In 1820, A., and his trustee joined in assigning to C., for value, without notice, those paid incumbrances. Held, that the arrears of the interest on those charges were incumbrances on the life estate prior to the annuitant; and that, as against him, the interest, payable on those charges out of the life estate, had not been merged by the dealings of the owner of the life estate therewith.—Harman v. Foster, 1 Dr. & Wal. 637. (C.)

3. A party claiming under an annuity, charged on a rectory and vicarage by the incumbent, is entitled to priority over a judgment creditor of the incumbent, although prior in point of time, who did not obtain a sequestration until after the date of the charge.—Wise v. Beresford, 5 I. E. R. 407; 3 Dr. & War. 276. (C.)

4. W., being, in 1824, indebted to judgment and other creditors, by indenture made between him; H., a creditor and trustee; and such of the creditors as had executed and should execute; conveyed his real and chattel-hold estates to H., in trust, by sale or mortgage, to pay, first, the mortgage creditors; secondly, the judgment creditors; thirdly, the bond; and fourthly, the simple contract creditors; all of whom were set out in different schedules to the deed; and to hold the surplus in trust for W. H. was empowered to pay the debts (as to those of each class) at such times, and in such order as he should think most convenient and proper; and also, to settle the amount of any of the debts in such manner as he should think expedient, save only that no security of any of the creditors who should execute the deed should thereby be prejudiced or affected. Held, that by the operation of that deed the judgment creditors lost the original priorities of their judgments, and, the fund being deficient, they were bound to abate pari passu amongst themselves.—Taylor v. Gorman, 6 I. E. R. 321. (R.)

5. The judgment creditors of G., of whom T., his solicitor, was one, joined in a trust deed, the effect of which was, that they should be paid without priority. T. claimed a lien for costs on title deeds of G.'s property. In a suit for carrying into effect this trust deed, which included mortgage creditors who were to be first paid, and whose mortgage was prior to T.'s lien, the decree (under which G.'s property was sold) ordered T. to bring in the title deeds, without prejudice to his lien. T. lodged the deeds. The lien was prior to the claims of other judgment creditors. Held, that T. could not insist on his lien.

6. A father, tenant for life, with power to charge £500 for younger children; and his son, tenant in tail, settled the estate to the uses, that the son should receive a rentcharge of £100 for their lives, and that of the survivor, with powers of distress and entry for non-payment; then to the father's use for life, with power to charge an additional £1000 for younger children; then to the son in tail. The father, having exercised the power, died. His son, and several younger children, survived. Held, that although, if it was the intent to give the annuity priority over the £1000, equity would not allow a legal merger to destroy it, yet the true construction of the deed showed, that it was not the intention that the annuity should exist after the father's death, though granted for the son's life; and, therefore, that the general rule, which in family settlements gives priority to charges for younger children, must prevail.—Mills v. M., 9 I. E. R. 299; 3 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)

1. The 2nd sec., as well as the 1st, of the Redocking Act, 9 G. 4, c. 35, only avoids judgments in favour of purchasers becoming such after twenty years from their entry. Therefore, a judgment of M. T. 1818 was not rendered void by sec. 2, in favour of a purchaser under a conveyance of 1831, though not revived or redocketed either within twenty years from its entry, or five years from the passing of the Act.—Hickson v. Collis, 10 I. E. R. 447. (C.)—[Rev., on re-hearing, 6 I. E. R. 524; 1 Jon. & L. 271. (C.)]

2. The re-docketing mentioned in the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 90, s. 2, is re-docketing under the 9 G. 4, c. 35. Therefore, when a judgment creditor of T. Term 1840, before the former Act came into operation, lodged the affidavit with the proper officer, and obtained a certificate that the judgment was re-docketed, but the officer neglected to make the proper entry in the book, as required by the 9 G. 4, c. 35, so that the judgment did not appear to be re-docketed as against one of the convezees—Held, that the creditor had lost his priority as against subsequent mortgagees.

Registration under the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 90, gives no priority to judgments inter se.—M'Mini v. M'Connell, 2 I. C. R. 609. (R.)

3. A. borrowed money by mortgage of his estates, D. and S., to which B., a prior incumbrancer on D., and C., a prior incumbrancer on S., were parties, and consented to give the mortgage priority over their respective charges. The lands were subsequently sold, and the mortgage paid out of their joint produce. The residue of the fund produced by sale of the S. estate was not sufficient to pay C.'s incumbrance. Held, that C. was not entitled to contribution against B.; there not having been any common liability to pay a common demand.—In re Keily, 9 I. C. R. 87. (C.A.)

4. A solicitor, failing to obtain a loan for his client from a stranger, lent him the money on mortgage, in the stranger's name, and used that name to obtain from his client priority for the loan, over two jointures payable out of the estate, and concealed the fact of himself being the lender. Held, that such a loan by a solicitor to his client, accompanied with concealment of the real lender's name, and the absence of independent advice by a solicitor to a client in such transactions, rendered the mortgage deeds voidable, so far as they acquired priority over the jointures.

When a supplemental petition in the nature of a petition of review, on newly-discovered matter, has been filed, the original cause must be re-heard before the C. A. simultaneously with the supplemental petition.

The original cause petition should, for this purpose, be set down in the Lord Chancellor's list of causes; and the order for re-hearing should direct that the supplemental petition be heard together with it.—[Barton v. Sampson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 71.]—Radcliffe v. Orme, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (C.A.)

II. 2. By Tacking Securities.

5. On lending money on mortgage, the mortgagee procured, as an additional security, an assignment of a judgment on a bond in a penalty, which had been obtained against the mortgagor before the mortgage, and in paying which part of the mortgage debt had been applied. At the date of the assignment, the principal only was due. Held, that, as against the mortgagor's judgment creditors, intervening between his judgment and his mortgage, the mortgagee was entitled to levy, under his judgment, the whole principal, and all interest (not exceeding the sum due on foot of the mortgage) thereon, although he had been paid the interest due on the mortgage.—Kirby v. O'Shea, 1 Jon. 565. (E.E.)

6. It is a mistake to suppose that the doctrine of tacking does not apply in this country as well as in England, in cases unaffected by the Registry Act.

Ex parte proceedings under the Sheriff's Act, for the appointment of a receiver, are not a lis pendens which would affect a purchaser with notice of the judgment.—Tennison v. Sweeney, 7 I. E. R. 511; 1 Jo. & L. 710. (C.)

7. In 1792, C. obtained against B. a judgment, which was never revived or re-docketed, but interest on it was paid within twenty years before the proceedings by the creditor.

In 1812, B. entered into a recognizance to abide the decree to be pronounced in a cause of L. v. O'B., in which, though revived, a decree had not been pronounced.

In 1816, B.'s heir granted an annuity for value, charged on the lands which he inherited. The lands being sold, a fund remained in Court, consisting partly of the surplus of the purchase-money, partly of rents received in the cause, and partly of dividends of stock purchased by the two former sums. An order having been made in May 1844, to report priorities and distribute these funds amongst the creditors, pursuant to the 102nd G. O., and report thereon—Held, that the judgment was to be postponed to the annuity.

That payment of interest on the judgment within twenty years prior to the order was sufficient to take it out of the Statute of Limitations, though more than twenty years had elapsed between the obtaining of the judgment and the payment. The annuity, by gaining priority over the judgment, under Moore's Act, does not carry up the recognition so as to give it priority over the judgment, no provision being found in that Act similar to that in the Registry Act, and the judgment being only affected to the extent of the annuitant's claim against the land.

That it was possible there might be a decree in the revived suit of L. v. O'B., and if so, the recognition would be a subsisting charge, and would have priority over the annuity as against the surplus produce of the sale, but would not attach upon the rents or dividends.—Latouche v. O'Brien, 10 I. E. R. 118. (R.)

1. A prior undocketed judgment is not postponed to a subsequent re-docketed judgment, in consequence of the existence of a mortgage pulse to the re-docketed judgment, if the owner of the mortgage makes no claim upon foot of it, even though his omission to claim may be in consequence of an agreement with the owner of the undocketed judgment, made after the institution of the proceedings in which the question was raised.

The appointment of a receiver in a mortgage cause does not take the case out of the operation of the 81st G. O. of 1843.—Woodroffe v. Greene, 15 I. C. R. 176. (C.A.)

II. 3. By Equitable Lien.

2. An incumbrancer agreed to advance money to preserve K. from eviction for non-payment of rent, and took a security by deed affecting K. and other lands, for the repayment of the money so to be advanced. She afterwards paid the rent, and redeemed K. Held that she was entitled, as against an incumbrancer on K. when redeemed, to be paid the sum advanced, in priority; and that, since full effect could not be given to her security by deed, she was remitted to her lien.—Kehoe v. Hales, 5 I. E. R. 597. (E.E.)

3. The conuzor of a judgment, being seized in quasi fee, became, by deed prior to 1840, tenant for life of the lands; and created charges thereon. Afterwards, the judgment creditor advanced money to save them from eviction; and, during the conuzor's life, filed a bill to sell them. Held, that, as a salvagor, he was entitled to a sale of the quasi fee, though not, as a judgment creditor, against remainderman, or creditors prior to 1840.—Fetherstone v. Mitchell, 11 I. E. R. 35. (C.)—[See s. c. 9 I. E. R. 480. (R.)]

4. A sub-tenant, having redeemed his landlord's interest by advances for head rent, filed a bill to sell that interest; and afterwards made further advances for the same purpose. Held, that these advances were the first charge on the mesne landlord's interest in priority to incumbrances prior in date; and that the sal-

vagor was entitled to a sale for payment.—Locke v. Evans, 11 I. E. R. 52. (E.E.)

5. When a tenant for life has permitted arrears of charges to accumulate, the claim of a remainderman for compensation out of the life estate, for the increased burden cast on the inheritance, has priority over charges on the life estate created by the tenant for life, and secured by a demise of a legal term, without notice of the facts constituting the remainderman's equity.—Fitzmaurice v. Murphy, 8 I. C. R. 363; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 500. (C.)

II. 4. By Notice and Want of Notice.

6. V. mortgaged X., by a deed containing a borrowing clause. On obtaining a further loan he mortgaged Y. to secure the entire sum borrowed. The mortgagee's representatives conveyed X. by a deed which recognised the first mortgage as then subsisting. Held, a sufficient acknowledgment under the old law to keep alive the right to redeem Y.

J., the mortgagee, while in possession, made a lease; the mortgage having been duly registered. The lessee set up a title as a purchaser without notice, and relied on there being no acknowledgment to bind him. Held, that notice was rendered immaterial by the priority which V.'s equitable title acquired by the registration.

That the acknowledgment by J. alone sufficed against his lessee.—Ball v. Lord Riversdale, Beat. Rep. 550. (C.)

7. A. and B. were equal partners in mills and concerns of which A. was lessee. In Nov. 1810, they took in C. as partner, for £8500. In Jan. 1811, B. proposed to sell to A. and C. his share for £8500, and to let his name continue in the firm for five years, they paying interest at £8 per cent. on his money remaining in their hands. This proposal was accepted. Thenceforward, A. had two-thirds, and C. one-third of the profits. In July 1812, A. conveyed to C. the legal estate in one-third of the mills and concerns, by a deed which was never registered. In August, 1812, C. by his marriage settlement, conveyed his one-third to A. and D. as trustees for himself for life, with remainder to pfts. as tenants in common. This deed was registered in 1814. In 1819, B. withdrew his name from the firm, and furnished A. and C. with an account current, showing a balance due to him of about £24,000; made up of the £3500, with interest at £8 per cent., and of advances made since 1814 to the firm on B.'s credit. A. and C. then mortgaged the mills to B. to secure the £24,000. The mortgage was registered soon after. C. died in 1820, and A. in 1823. In 1826, B. procured from A.'s representatives an assignment of the equity of redemption, and entered into possession of the mills. The bill charged that, before the mortgage was executed, B. had been informed by A. and C. of the prior settlement; and prayed for an account and partition, and for an allotment of one-third. The only evidence of notice was the testimony of

E., who had been A.'s family solicitor, and who swore that he had apprised B. of the settlement. Held, that the registration of the mortgage did not give it precedence over the settlement, which was founded on the unregistered deed of 1812; that the settlement, having been registered before the mortgage, thereby prevailed over it, even though no actual notice had been given to deft.; and that deft. had not a claim, as a creditor, against the ptf.'s one-third of the partnership assets. —Stuart v. Ferguson, Hayes, 452. (E.E.)

1. The registration of a deed of separation and maintenance having been fraudulently prevented by the agent of the husband, who afterwards negotiated a registered mortgage—Held, that the mortgagee was fixed with notice of the separation deed through the mortgagor's agent, who acted for both parties; and his security was postponed to the unregistered deed. —Nixon v. Hamilton, 1 I. E. R. 46; 2 Dr. & Wal. 364. (C.)

2. In a foreclosure suit, B. claimed under a mortgage of the equity of redemption, executed by the defts. in Feb. 1839, and duly registered on the 7th of that month. The mortgage was obtained to secure a debt due to B. from the mortgagors, which had been previously secured in 1825, by the bond of D., who then held the mortgaged premises in trust for the mortgagors. Upon the death of D., the premises (which were chattel) were assigned to the c. g. trusts by his personal representatives. The priority of B. under her mortgage was disputed by simple contract creditors of the mortgagors, who, having brought actions at law, had agreed that the proceedings in such actions should cease upon the terms contained in a consent dated the 19th Jan. 1839, and made a rule of Court on the 2nd Feb. following—namely, that they should be paid their respective demands, when proved, together with costs, out of the produce to be realised by a sale of the mortgaged premises, after payment of prior incumbrances. The attorney acting for B. in procuring the execution of the mortgage to her, not only knew of the rights, and had notice of the proceedings of the other creditors, but was in fact an active agent for the defts. (the mortgagors) in effectuating the arrangement whereby the other creditors had been induced to relinquish their proceedings at law upon the terms contained in the consent. Held, that such notice to B.'s attorney was sufficient to prevent her (although unaffected by personal notice) from gaining a priority by force of the registry of her mortgage deed over the other creditors, who had acquired a prior equitable lien on the land by virtue of the consent.

That B. had no equitable right or claim (as against the consent creditors) to the mortgaged premises in respect of their having been the assets of D., the obligor in the bond of 1825.

Semble—That under no circumstances, would B. have had such an equity, as it was competent for the representatives of D., upon his death, to assign over to c. g. trusts the trust premises, without their being in the first instance subject to the debt due to B. Notice to an attorney or agent is not to be considered as implied or constructive notice merely, which is properly referable to something that a party or his agent ought, if reasonable diligence had been used on his behalf, to have acquired a knowledge of, but which possibly neither he nor his agent ever did know or acquire any knowledge of. The general proposition that notice to an agent, so as to affect his principal, must be in the same transaction, admits of qualifications. —Executors of Lenehan v. M' Cabe, 2 I. E. R. 342. (E.E.)

3. The Count and Countess D'O. being entitled in her right to estates subject to incumbrances, a receiver was appointed; and was directed to pay her £400 a-year out of the estates, for her separate use. An arrangement was entered into by a subsequent deed, by which the estates were settled to her separate use, subject to charges in favour of Count D'O. and others; and until this arrangement was completed, the allowance was to be paid to Lady D'O. Lady D'O. afterwards mortgaged the estates for £2100 to the ptf., excepting the £400 a-year, which was by a separate clause in the deed assigned to a trustee to secure payment of the interest. The deed was registered as a deed of mortgage of the estates generally, and the memorial did not particularise the £400 a-year. The receiver refused to recognise the title of the trustee, but paid the £400 on Lady D'O.'s order to him. Lady D'O. afterwards borrowed £5000 from the deft., who previously to the loan was informed by the receiver that he had heard that there had been an assignment of the £400 a-year, but that he did not recognise it. A mortgage was executed of the estates to the deft., and the £400 a-year was assigned by a separate deed to a trustee (who had been agent and solicitor to Lady D'O.) to secure an interest of the £5000, and an order was obtained to pay it to him. This order was afterwards rescinded, and a bill was filed to settle the priority of the claims of the ptf. and deft. Held, that the £400 a-year, being a portion of the estate, was within the Registry Act, and that the description in the memorial was sufficient to include it.

Semble—That the information given by the receiver to the deft., coupled with the memorial, was sufficient notice of the ptf.'s mortgage.

The doctrine of Dearle v. Hall, 3 Russ. 1, is confined to choses in action, and was not, therefore, applicable to this case. —Rockard v. Fulton, 7 I. E. R. 181; 1 Jon. & L. 413. (C.)

4. A father, seized of the absolute interest in the lands of K. and M., and of an estate for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail, in the lands of F., and indebted by judgments which were charges upon all these lands, by settlement, executed on the marriage of his second son, settled K. on him, and the issue of the marriage; and by a contemporaneous deed conveyed his life estate in F., and the reversion, subject to his life estate in M., to his eldest son, who thereby covenanted generally to indemnify the lands settled on the second son against all the father's incumbrances. Held, that a subsequent mortgagee of F. and M., with notice of this covenant and of the incumbrances, was bound by them, and was not entitled to contribution as against K.—Power v. Standish, 8 I. E. R. 526. (E.E.)

1. A judgment was obtained in 1817. By a consent in causes in 1833, it was admitted that the amount of that judgment and of several others was due, and it was ordered that the receiver should be continued to keep down the interest, which, if paid, the creditors should not proceed on their judgments for eight years. In 1834 J., by his solicitor D., filed a bill referring to the consent, and in 1837 took a mortgage of the estates from the heir of the judgment debtor; D., still acting as his solicitor. Held, that J. had notice of the judgment of 1817.

That though the judgment had not been revived or redocketed (nor registered under the recent statute), the mortgagee having notice of it took subject and pulse to it.—Beere v. Head, 8 I. E. R. 647. (R.)—[Second point reversed: 9 I. E. R. 76. (C.)]

2. An estate having been sold under a decree of the Court of Exchequer, for £12,000, the purchaser lodged in Court £5000 of his own moneys, and applied to the ptf. in the present suit to lend him the remaining £7000, on the terms of securing that sum as the first incumbrance upon the lands. After an agreement with the ptf. for this loan, but before it was carried out, the purchaser confessed a judgment for value. The ptf., although having notice of the judgment, advanced £8000, of which £7000 was paid into Court as the residue of the purchase-money, and £1000 to the purchaser. By consent, made an order of Court, the conveyance of the lands was made to a trustee for the purchaser and the ptf. The trustee, in consideration of the £8000, mortgaged the lands to the ptf. Held, that the judgment was prior to the mortgage as a charge upon the lands.—Walcot v. Lynch, 13 I. E. R. 199. (C.)

3. A., in 1835, granted out of leasehold lands an annuity to B., who neglected to register his deed till 1852. B. was a tenant to a part of the lands. The grantor shortly after 1835 assigned his interest in the entire lands to C., who employed a solicitor as his land agent, who received the rents till 1847, and always allowed B. to deduct the amount of his annuity from his rent, and gave receipts to that effect. In 1845 the entire leasehold lands were reconveyed to the former owner, who, by deed of the same date, granted another annuity to D., charged on the same lands. The solicitor who had been receiving the rents from B., acted as solicitor for D. in this transaction. D.'s deed was registered in 1848. The grantor's leasehold interest in that portion of the lands to which B. was tenant, was evicted in 1850, whereupon B. filed his petition to establish the priority of his annuity over that of D. as to the remainder of the lands. Held, that D. was affected through his solicitor, with notice of B.'s annuity. That B.'s annuity should be declared prior, though D.'s was first registered. That actual notice to a solicitor is actual notice to his principal.—Richards v. Brereton, 5 I. Jur. 336. (C.)

4. A., tenant for life, subject to old charges affecting the inheritance, and having a general power to charge £10,000 on the estate, paid off the charges with a loan from B. and C., to whom they were assigned; and by a contemporaneous deed, in execution of his power, charged the estates with £10,000, and created a term to secure that sum to B. and C., to whom power was given to raise the charges and the £10,000, and apply them to pay the principal, interest, and costs due on foot of the loan. It was declared that the moneys to arise from the sale of or by virtue of the charges should be vested in B. and C., in trust to pay the surplus to A. for his own benefit. The deed also contained a clause of redemption of the old charges and the £10,000 thereby appointed, on repayment of the loan. Afterwards, in 1842, a judgment was obtained against A., who, in 1844, mortgaged his equity of redemption in the charges and £10,000 to D., who had constructive notice of the judgment. The lands having been sold in the I. E. Court—Held, affirming its decision, that as to so much of the fund as represented the value of A.'s life estate, the judgment had priority over D.'s mortgage of the charges.—In re Phillips, 4 I. C. R. 584. (P.C.)

5. A judgment registered as a mortgage under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, s. 6, takes precedence of prior unregistered instruments of which the conuzee has not notice.—Corbett v. De Cantillon, 5 I. C. R. 126. (C.)

6. Two judgments were obtained in 1803, and another in 1805, against A., seized in fee of lands. A. died, and the lands descended on B. and C., his daughters and co-heiresses. In 1809, on the marriage of C., her moiety was settled to uses, under which the respondents, M'C. and wife, claimed. An agreement for a partition was afterwards entered into between the owners of the two moieties, which was never carried into legal execution. One term was, that the judgments should be thrown on B.'s moiety. In 1843, B.'s moiety was mortgaged, in trust, to the petitioner, who had notice of that agreement. The judgments were assigned as a collateral security. Petitions were filed in the I. E. Court to sell both moieties; but the Commissioners stayed the sale of C.'s moiety, until it should be ascertained whether B.'s moiety would be inadequate to pay the judgments and the mortgage. A petition was filed in this Court for a receiver pending the proceedings in the I. E. Court; and the Master appointed a receiver over both moieties.

On appeal from his order—Semble that the petition was not sustainable as against the appellants, M'C. and wife; because no elegit had issued on the judgments, and the suit was not to administer the conuzor's assets; because the judgments were not made charges by the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, as against M.C. and wife, as purchasers under the settlement of 1809. Held, that the petitioners having had notice of the agreement to throw the judgments on B.'s moiety, the Court would not, until it ascertained that that moiety was insufficient to pay them, appoint a receiver over C.'s moiety.

Semle.—That the petitioner, as mortgagee of B.'s moiety, having had notice of the agreement, was not entitled to throw the judgments on C.'s moiety, in order that the proceeds of B.'s moiety might suffice to pay the mortgage.

The Court will not in general admit affidavits not used before the Masters on appeals from orders made by them in cases referred under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, especially when they refer to matters not put in issue by the petition or discharge.

In this case, such affidavits were admitted by consent.—Tressilian v. Caniffe, 4 I. C. R. 399. (R.)

1. M. was tenant for life of K. and other lands, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail. W. was supposed to be the eldest son of M. In 1832, M. and W. suffered a recovery of all the lands, by which they were conveyed to the use of M. for life, remainder to provide £100 a-year for S., the wife of M., remainder to W. in tail. This deed was duly registered. By marriage articles, dated the 12th March 1833, W. agreed to charge all the lands with a jointure of £200 a-year for his intended wife, J. This deed was never registered. After the death of M., T., one of his sons, claimed the lands. W. and T. entered into a compromise by a deed, dated the 13th Feb. 1835. By it £100 per annum was charged on K. for S. She released the former annuity. Subject thereto K. was limited to W. in fee. This deed was registered. W. was a solicitor, and as such prepared the deed. No other solicitor was employed about the preparation of the deed, save one who by affidavit stated that he acted only for T. Held, that W. must be taken to have acted as solicitor for S., and that she was in consequence affected with constructive notice of the unregistered deed of 1833.—Tucker v. Henzill, 4 I. C. R. 513. (C.)

2. By marriage settlement, not registered, lands were charged with £800 for M., and £250 for each of the younger children of the marriage. There was issue, B. a son, and A. a daughter, who, respectively, became entitled to the lands and the £250. Upon the marriage of A., a settlement was executed, which recited that A. was entitled to £250, and M. to £800; and that M. had agreed to settle £550, part of same, on A. Of this settlement B. was trustee. B. subsequently married C., when he, by deed, settled the same lands upon himself for life; remainder to the issue of the marriage. No allusion was made to the charges of £250 and £550 settled by the prior deed. Both deeds were registered on the same day, by the same person, but the latest deed was first registered. The entry by the officer as to both was, "Registered on Monday the 12th of May 1817, at or near the hour of two o'clock." Held, that the deeds were of equal priority in point of registry.

K., a solicitor employed in the preparation of A.'s settlement, was afterwards employed by B. in the preparation of the second deed. No property of C. was settled thereby, but it was stated that K. had been consulted by her. K. afterwards registered both instruments. Held, that C. had notice of A.'s settlement.—Moore v. Mahon, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (C.)

3. A., tenant for life of lands, was also entitled to be paid during his life the interest upon an incumbrance prior to his life estate, vested in the trustees of his marriage settlement. B. who had full notice of A.'s interest, took from him a mortgage of his life estate in the lands, with some collateral securities, without requiring any assignment of his interest in the incumbrance.

The deed of mortgage contained, in the common form, a covenant that, in default of payment, the mortgagee might enter and hold the land free from incumbrance.

The lands were subsequently sold in the I. E. Court, and the Commissioners invested in stock a sum to answer the charge vested in the trustees. Held, that by the deed of mortgage and the covenant, the life interest of A. in the stock was specifically charged with payment of the mortgage debts.—King v. Daly, 6 I. Jur. 50. (C.)

4. In 1840, C. having a charge by judgment for £1500 upon X., applied to B. for £1500 to enable him to purchase X. in Ch. B. consented, on the terms of a conveyance being made to R. as a trustee for B., as well as for C. R. became the purchaser for £3000, of which £1500 was paid by B. in cash, and R.'s promissory note was given for the remainder. By deed of the 2nd June 1840, X. was conveyed to R. without any declaration of trust in the deed.

C. having got R.'s promissory note accepted as cash, subsequently, by sundry payments, reduced his debt of £1500 to £900.

By deed of the 9th July 1844, reciting the deed of the 2nd June 1840, and that C. purchased X. from B., save so far as they should stand as a security to B. for £900, it was declared that X. was vested in R., in trust in the first instance, by sale or mortgage, to pay B. £900, with interest and costs, then in trust for C., his heirs and assigns, for ever. This deed was not registered until the 2nd of Dec. 1852.

In 1852, L. obtained a judgment against C. for £60, and registered it as a mortgage against X. on the 13th Nov. 1852.

In 1843, a judgment obtained against C. in 1836, was assigned to W., and by him duly redocketed in 1844, and afterwards registered in 1850.

In 1854, X. was sold in the I. E. Court, on the petition of L.; and on the settlement of the final schedule of incumbrances, the Commissioners postponed B.'s claim of £900, to the claims of L. and W. on foot of their respective judgments. Held, on appeal, that the original transaction should be regarded as C.'s own purchase, B. lending him £1500; that R. was a trustee for C., and for no other person; and that the judgments obtained against C., became, in the order of their priority, available against the trust estate; that B.'s claim to priority, founded on the recitals in the deed of 1844, could not be sustained; that B. was entitled to such priority only as was given him by the deed of 1844, and its subsequent registration in Dec. 1852; and that his claims should be postponed to the claims of L. and W.—In re Cooke, 6 I. C. R. 430. (C.A.)

1. Notice, to V., one of the directors of a Bank, of a prior unregistered deed is not notice to the board of directors so as to bind the shareholders, when V. has not communicated his knowledge, and the existence of the prior unregistered deed has been fraudulently concealed, V. being a party to the fraud.

Notice to the trustee of a duly registered deed will not affect the priority of that deed when such notice consists of the trustee's knowledge of a prior unregistered instrument executed by himself, which knowledge he fraudulently abstained from communicating.

Notice to a person, employed only for some specific purpose, and under no obligation to communicate the knowledge which he possesses, does not bind a purchaser who employs an agent, who really transacts the business.

On the 15th March 1855, J., being largely indebted to the T. Bank, and requiring further advances, agreed in writing, in consideration of an advance to him by the T. Bank of £10,500, to assign the lands of C. to S. and R., upon trust to sell, and out of the proceeds pay all past, present, and future advances made to him by the T. Bank. This agreement was not registered, but J. signed it; his signature being witnessed by N., the sec. of the L. & C. Bank. J. was then chairman of the board of directors of the L. & C. Bank; S. was sole managing director of the T. Bank; and R. was a director of the L. and C. Bank.

In July 1855, S. made a proposal to the board of directors of the L. & C. Bank for a loan to J., and stated that J.'s debt to the T. Bank did not exceed £40,000, and that the T. Bank did not hold any security from him. The directors of the L. & C. Bank advanced to J. £95,000; and by deeds of the 1st Aug. and 7th Sept. 1855, J. conveyed the lands of C. to B., L., and S., upon trust to sell, and pay all incumbrances. These deeds were registered in Aug. and Sept. 1855.

In 1857 the lands were sold in the I. E. Court; and the Judge held that the registered deeds of the 1st August and 7th Sept. were entitled to priority over the unregistered agreement. The official manager of the T. Bank appealed, on the ground (among others) that the Directors of the L. & C. Bank had, at the time of the execution of those deeds, notice of that equitable agreement.

The evidence disproved actual notice to the directors. It appeared that that agreement had been allowed to remain unregistered by the express direction of S.; that he had fraudulently concealed the knowledge of it for the purpose of saving the credit of J. (whose solvency was essential to the welfare of the T. Bank); and that it was the intention of all parties from the commencement to keep secret that agreement. Held, that actual knowledge possessed by J. the chairman, and R. a director, of the L. & C. Bank, and S., a trustee of the deed of the 1st Aug., did not bind the L. and C. Bank.

D. the solicitor of the L. & C. Bank, when about to register the deeds, applied to K., the solicitor of the T. Bank, for information and assistance. K. did not disclose the agreement which had, he thought, been abandoned, and which he knew was to be kept secret; but gave D. information as to other securities; in consequence of which, the L. & C. Bank stopped part of the loan. K. assisted D. in registering the deeds. Held, that these transactions did not make K. the solicitor and agent of the L. & C. Bank, so as to fix them with the notice which he possessed of the agreement.—In re Burnmaster, 9 I. C. R. 41; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 559. (C.A.)

2. A., upon his marriage in 1808, executed marriage articles, whereby he covenanted with trustees to provide at his decease £30,000 for an eldest son, V., of the marriage, and (if there should be then living issue of the marriage other than a son or a daughter) £20,000 for the younger children. He died in 1821, seized of real and personal estate; leaving an eldest son, V., and two daughters, by whom a suit to administer his assets was instituted. In it a receiver was appointed. Pending this suit, one of the daughters died. V. soon after coming of age, having become indebted on his own personal account to B., and being entitled as heir or devisee to his father's real estate, mortgaged to B. the real estate, to secure the debt. The deed of mortgage recited the articles, the pendency of the suit, and V.'s intention to pay his sister. Held, that the claim of the sister, under the articles of 1808, had priority, as against the real estate of A., over V.'s mortgage.—Richardson v. Horton, 7 Beav. 112, disapproved of.—Hynes v. Redington, 10 I. C. R. 206. (C.)

3. In 1835, A., by deed of settlement, upon the marriage of his daughter, agreed with two trustees to charge his lands with £1000, to be held upon trust for the husband and wife for life, remainder to the children. This sum was collaterally secured by a contemporaneous bond, with warrant given by it to the trustees, on which they entered judgment in 1836. In that year (one of the trustees having previously died), a negotiation was entered into between A.; the husband of his daughter; the surviving trustee; and G.; whereby, to enable A. to borrow money on the security of his lands, in priority to the judgment, the surviving trustee executed a warrant to satisfy the judgment, reciting in it that the sole right to the judgment was vested in him by virtue of an indenture executed in the life of the deceased trustee; and that the debt was paid and satisfied. The warrant did not otherwise refer to the settlement. The statement as to the payment was false in fact. G. received the warrant, but did not satisfy the judgment. In 1843 A. entered into a negotiation with E. for a large loan by mortgage. Upon that occasion the judgment was referred to in a list of incumbrances of A.'s lands, furnished by A. to E., as paid. By the terms of the agreement the money was to be paid in to the joint names of D. and S., as "mutual trustees," to be applied in discharge of the incumbrances on A.'s lands. D. was solicitor for A., and S. for E. The mortgage was executed and registered in 1843. The settlement of 1835 was registered by D., in April 1845. The warrant finally came into the hands of one of the agents of E., upon the payment of the creditor who held it, and satisfaction was entered in Dec. 1845. A.'s lands having been sold in the L. E. Court, Judge Longfield gave precedence to the mortgage deed over the settlement. On appeal therefrom—Held, affirming the ruling below, that A. had power to pay off the £1000 during his life. Distinguishing this case from those of Shppard v. Wilson, 4 Hare, 392, and Winter v. Bodd, 2 S. & S. 507.

Per the Lord Justice of Appeal (following In re Barmester, 9 I. C. R. 41), assuming that D. had notice of the settlement before he and S. paid out the money raised by the mortgage, E. was not affected with notice.

Held, that assuming E. to have had notice by D., or otherwise, the effect of notice was qualified by the recital in the warrant, that the judgment was paid. That the mortgage of 1843 took, by the registration, priority of the settlement of 1835.—In re Lane's Estate, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 32. (C.A.)

1. R., the owner of lands, and also a solicitor, executed to S. a mortgage, dated March 29th, 1856, of the lands, but, by arrangement between the parties, not registered until 3rd April 1859. On the 7th March 1859, R. made a lease on fine of the lands to M. The lease was registered 16th March 1859. R. prepared it and had it registered, for which M. paid him costs out of pocket only. M. employed no other solicitor in the transaction, nor had he ever employed R. as his solicitor in any other transaction. Held, that R. was M.'s solicitor in the transaction; that M. must therefore be held to have had through R. notice of the prior unregistered mortgage; and that the lease should be postponed to the mortgage.—In re Rorke's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 442; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (C.A.)—[Affg. 13 I. C. R. 273; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 53. (L.E.C.)]

II. 5. Under the Registry Acts.

2. A judgment entered within 20 years before the passing of the 9 G. 4, c. 35, and not revived or redocketed since its entry, or within five years after that Act passed does not thereby lose its priority over a subsequent conveyance executed before that Act passed. Blake v. Darcy, S. & Sc., 498. (R.)

3. Ptf., claiming lands under a deed registered in 1805, filed his bill against the deft. in possession under a deed executed and registered subsequently, praying an issue at law or an ejectment, and removal of temporary bars; and in the event of succeeding, an account of rents and profits. Deft. pleaded a purchase for value without notice in 1830 (as in Wabryn v. Lee, 9 Ves. 24), and demurred to the account. Held (disallowing the plea), that the prior registration gave priority both in Law and Equity, even as against a purchaser for value without notice.

Seemle, a person cannot protect himself by this plea when, by due diligence, he could have discovered the real state of the title. Neglecting to search the registry is a failure of due diligence.

Held also, that when at the time of a purchase tenants are in possession, the purchaser entering into possession and receipt of the rents has constructive notice of the title by which the tenants hold.

Held, overruling the demurrer, that as the ptf. could not have full relief except in Equity, he was entitled to the account, as consequential to the relief, after he should have established his title at Law.—Hamilton v. Lyster, 7 I. E. R. 560. (R.)

4. A. obtained a judgment in T. T. 1845. B. obtained a judgment in T. T. 1846. A. sued out an elegit, the inquisition on which was returned and filed on the 20th of July 1846, and went into possession of the lands extended. B.'s judgment was registered in Sept. 1846; A.'s in Feb. 1847. Held, that A.'s judgment had priority.

Seemle—The registration of a judgment under the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 90, gives no priority as between judgment creditors, except for the protection of heirs and personal representatives in the administration of assets.—O'Brien v. Scott, 11 I. E. R. 63. (R.)—[On appeal an issue was offered, but not taken; ibid, 459. (C.)]

5. A., entitled to the benefit of articles of agreement entered into by the owners of lands situated in Ireland to mortgage them to him for £42,000, by a deed executed in 1840, reciting the articles, assigned that sum and all the securities for its payment, upon trusts. By a deed executed in England in 1842, reciting the articles, A., for value, assigned the same sum, with all the securities for its payment, to M. by mortgage. The deed of 1842 was registered before that of 1840. The memorial of the deed of 1842 described the lands on which the £42,000 were charged in the same manner as they were described in that deed itself; but neither deed nor memorial mentioned the names of the baronies or parishes in which the lands were situated.

Seemle—That the deed of 1842 would have been properly the subject of registry, if the memorial had stated the names of the baronies and parishes. Held, that in consequence of the omission from the memorial, of the names of the baronies and parishes, the deed of 1842 was not formally registered, and therefore had not gained priority over the deed of 1840.

Malcolm v. Charlesworth, 1 Keen, 63, observed upon.—Gardiner v. Blesinton, 1 I. C. R. 64; 3 I. Jur. 116. (R.)—[Reversed: 1 I. C. R. 79; 3 I. Jur. 125. (C.)]

1. K., by an unregistered deed, granted a rentcharge to his daughter, by whose marriage settlement, executed on the following day, to which K. was a party, and which recited the grant, the rentcharge was conveyed by her to trustees. The latter deed was registered. K. afterwards mortgaged the land out of which the rentcharge issued, by a deed, which was registered. Held, that the rentcharge, though granted by an unregistered deed, had priority over the mortgage, by reason of the registration of the settlement.—Hunter v. Kennedy, 1 I. C. R. 148. (R.)—[Affirmed: ibid, 225; 3 I. Jur. 128. (C.)]

2. A judgment was obtained on the 3rd of Dec. 1845. The conuzor died on the 19th of Jan. 1847. Another judgment was entered against the same conuzor, on the 3rd of Feb. 1847, after his death, and was registered under the 8th & 9th Vic., c. 90, on the same day. The judgment of 1845 was not registered until the 22nd of Nov. 1847. Held, in a suit for the administration of the real and personal assets of the conuzor, that the judgment of 1847 had priority over the judgment of 1845.—Revell v. R., 4 I. C. R. 436; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (R.)

3. R., by marriage settlement in 1758, settled K., in the barony of C. and county of L., to the use of himself for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. In 1786, R., and O., his eldest son, entered into articles of agreement, which recited, that by the deed of 1758, K., in the barony of C. and county of L., had been settled in strict settlement, and by which R. and O. agreed to suffer a recovery of K. (without further describing them), which should enure to the use of R. for life; remainder to the use of O. for life; remainders over to the other sons of R. and their children, in strict settlement. No words of limitation were contained in the articles, which further provided an annuity of £50 a-year out of K. for O. during the life of R. These articles were not registered until 1791, and the memorial altogether omitted to state the barony in which K. was situate. A recovery of K. was duly suffered in 1786; and the deed, which was enrolled, but not registered, creating the tenant to the precipe, declared that the recovery should enure to the uses of a deed to be executed in pursuance of the articles. No deed declaring the uses of the recovery was executed. The petitioner was son of one of the sons of R., and all the limitations previous to the estate limited to him were exhausted. In 1788, O., by a deed reciting that he was entitled to K. in fee, subject to the life estate of R. therein, and that he was entitled to an annuity issuing out of K., conveyed to M., K., subject to a perpetual rent of £15 a-year, and conveyed to a trustee for M. the annuity during R.'s life. A document purporting to be a memorial of this deed was registered in 1788, but neither described the lands conveyed nor the nature of the conveyance. R. died in 1789. In 1808, O. conveyed the rent of £15 a-year, reserved by the deed of 1788, to a trustee for M. In 1811, K. was, with other lands, settled by M. for value. The respondents claimed under that settlement. On a petition, filed to have the articles of 1786 carried into execution—Held, that neither the deed of 1786 nor the deed of 1788 was effectually registered; that the mention in the deed of 1788 of the annuity created by the articles of 1786 was not, as against persons claiming under the settlement of 1811, notice of the articles; and that the petitioner was not entitled to recover.

If the barony in which the lands affected by a deed are situate be mentioned, even in a recital in that deed, the memorial for registration must also mention the barony.

A purchaser is not fixed with notice of a deed by evidence that he had notice of an annuity created by that deed, and which, from the notice given of its existence, appeared to have expired many years before the purchase.—Stephenson v. Royce, 5 I. C. R. 401; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 68. (C.)

4. By a post-nuptial settlement of Nov. 13th, 1850, John M'Evoy settled certain lands, of which he was then seized, to the uses declared by the settlement. In M. Term 1853 a judgment was recovered by the petitioner against John M'Evoy, and on the 12th Dec. 1853 it was duly registered as a mortgage against the lands comprised in the settlement. The settlement was not registered until April 1854.

The judgment of M. Term 1853 was declared well charged on the lands in the petition mentioned; and the post-nuptial settlement of the 13th Nov. 1850 was declared void as against the registered mortgage of the 13th Dec. 1853; and the settlement was postponed to the judgment mortgage vested in the petitioner.—Montgomery v. M'Evoy, 5 I. C. R. 128, note. (C.)

5. A judgment was obtained for poor-rates in 1848, against the owner of land. In 1850 he took the benefit of the Insolvent Act. In 1855 the judgment was registered. Held, that the judgment did not, by reason of the registration, take priority as a charge over a mortgage of 1832, under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 104, s. 18.—In re Malley, 5 I. C. R. 342. (P.C.)

6. The memorial of registration of a deed was witnessed by the witnesses who had attested the execution of the deed, but did not contain in its body their names or additions. Held, that the registration was void.

Quare—Whether a deed appointing money secured on lands by a term of years is within the Registry Acts?—In re Jennings, 8 I. C. R. 421. (P.C.)

7. In 1831 B. obtained a judgment against A. In 1855 a decree, on consent in an administration suit, declared A. a trustee for himself and his brothers and sisters, as to lands in which he had the legal estate. In 1856 the judgment creditor registered his judgment as a mortgage under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, against the lands. Held, that the registration of the judgment affected that portion only of the lands in which A. was beneficially interested.

The registration of a judgment as a mortgage under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, operates in equity to pass the beneficial interest of the debtor only. If the debtor has a legal estate, it is transferred to the creditor, subject to the same equities as it was liable to before the registration.

An administrator cum test. an., being in possession of premises which the testator held as tenant from year to year under C., took a lease from D., the head landlord, to commence from the expiration of C.'s lease. Held, that the lease was a graft on the testator's interest, and formed part of his assets.—M'Auley v. Clarendon, 8 I. C. R. 568; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier. 433. (C.A.)

[Approved of: Eyre v. M'Dowell, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (H.L.); 9 H. Lds. Cas. 619.]

1. A creditor, having obtained a judgment against the official manager of a banking company, registered an affidavit of the judgment against the real estate of a former shareholder in the company, without having issued a sci. fa. against him. Held, that a Court of Equity ought to give relief against such registration, as being a cloud on the shareholder's title.—Hone v. O'Flahertie, 9 I. C. R. 119; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 505. (C.)

2. The defence of a purchase for value without notice, is not available against a covenant to renew, or other equitable claim under a prior registered instrument.

A. conveyed lands on trust to pay his debts. The deed was registered. Before it was acted on, A. made a lease with a covenant for renewal, which was also registered. The lands were sold in an administration suit by a judgment creditor of a deceased owner. The purchase-money was paid into Court, and the balance paid to the trustee, who joined in the conveyance. A. had not been served with subpoena, or appeared till after the date of the lease. In a suit, instituted after a great lapse of time, for renewal, by the representative of the lessee against the representative of the purchaser, insisting that the trust deed was voluntary and revocable, and that the sale in the suit did not affect the lease—Held, that the purchaser having got a prior legal estate under the trustee, and the equitable estate from payment of the prior incumbrances, was not bound to renew, especially after such a time had passed without recognition of the ptf.'s rights.—Drew v. Lord Norbury, 9 I. E. R. 171. (C.)—[Affd.: ibid, 524. (C.)]

3. A judgment registered as a mortgage under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, is entitled to priority over a prior unregistered instrument of which the conuzee has not had notice.—In re Hamilton, 9 I. C. R. 512. (C.A.)

4. A., B., and C. were seized severally of equal portions of the lands of D. which were subject to a mortgage and to collateral judgments against them obtained in 1846. The lands were sold in the I. E. Court in separate lots, and A.'s share being insufficient to pay his one-third of the mortgage, the deficiency was paid out of the proceeds of B.'s share, and the judgment against A. was assigned to a trustee for B. A. was also seized of the lands of E., against which a judgment obtained in 1856 had been registered as a mortgage. The conuzee of the latter judgment had been a purchaser of one of the lots of D. in the I. E. Court, and thus had notice of, or an opportunity of ascertaining, the assignment of the judgment. Held, that as to the deficiency of A.'s share of the mortgage paid out of the proceeds of B.'s share of D., the judgment of 1846 had priority over the judgment mortgage of 1856.—Scott v. S., 9 I. C. R. 319. (R.)

5. A judgment recovered in 1819, never revived or redocketed, must be postponed, not only to the gales of a rentcharge created by the judgment debtor in 1827, and assigned in 1841, which accrued due after that period, but to its arrears which were then due, and were included in the assignment.—Walcott v. Smyth, 11 I. C. R. 266. (C.)

6. On the 6th Oct. 1855, V. equitably mortgaged his estate to E. The deed of mortgage was not registered. On the 25th Aug. 1856, D. obtained a decree in the Court of Ch. against V.'s estate; and, on the 7th of the ensuing Nov., registered the decree as a mortgage under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29. Held, that this registration did not give the decree statutable priority over E.'s equitable mortgage.

A judgment, registered under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, and the 13th & 14th Vic., c. 29, only affects the property of which the debtor was at the judgment's date lawfully possessed of in his own right, and over which he had disposing power; but does not displace the prior equitable mortgagee's interest.—Eyre v. M'Dowell, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (H.L.); 9 H. Lords Cas. 619.

7. A., a solicitor, mortgaged lands to B. on March 20th, 1856. By agreement, the deed was not registered till April 3rd, 1859. A lease on fine of the lands was made by A. on March 7th, 1859, to C., and registered on March the 16th in that year. A. drew the lease and registered it, and was paid costs out of pocket by C., who employed no other solicitor. Held, that A. was C.'s solicitor. That the Court felt itself constrained by the decisions to treat C. as affected with notice of the mortgage, through A. as his solicitor, and to postpone the lease to that mortgage.—In re Rorke's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 273; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 53. (L.E.C.)—[Affd.: 14 I. C. R. 442; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (C.A.)]

8. In an ordinary marriage settlement, when the lands settled are the property of the husband, he cannot be considered a purchaser, for value, of the life estate in those lands limited to him by the settlement. A., by his settlement, executed in contemplation of his marriage, settled lands, which he owned in fee, to himself for life, remainder to provide a jointure for his widow, remainder to the children of the marriage. Held, that a judgment which, before the execution of the settlement, was a charge on the lands, remained a charge upon A.'s life estate, although the judgment had not been registered pursuant to the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 90, within the time (viz.: five years) required by the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, s. 3, for keeping it in force against purchasers under the settlement.—In re Brown's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 283; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 289. (C.A.)

1. When a settlement contains a covenant that all the real and personal estate of the settlor whereof he then was, or should at any time thereafter be possessed or entitled unto, should stand charged with the payment of a sum for the trusts in the settlement mentioned, that covenant to charge after-acquired property is not capable of registration under the Registry Acts, so as to give the settlement priority over subsequent purchasers for value without notice of the after acquired lands. Gubbins v. G., 1 Dr. & Wal. 160, n. considered, and held not to be a decision to the contrary.—Re F. & W. Olden, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (B.)

2. In 1853, P. conveyed by deed all his life estate in eighteen townlands, to the trustees of a Life Ass. Society. In 1856 Q. obtained a judgment for £1000, and registered it as a mortgage against thirteen of those townlands. The eighteen townlands were sold in the I. E. Court; and the Ass. Society was fully paid out of the produce of the thirteen denominations against which Q. had registered his judgment as a mortgage. This payment wholly exhausted the produce of those thirteen townlands. The produce of the other five remained to be disposed of. The assignee of Q. insisted that he was entitled to marshal the securities so as to give him the same priority over these five denominations as he had over the other thirteen. Held, that Q. merely took that beneficial interest which P. had, at the time of the registration of the judgment, power to convey; and that Q.'s assignee was not entitled to marshal the securities, or to have the judgment mortgage declared a charge on the remaining five denominations.—Lynch v. Cooke, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 102. (C.A.)

3. Upon a motion allowed to be made after settlement of the final schedule of incumbrances in the L. E. Court, an order was made which postponed an unregistered judgment to a registered deed, and also to several intermediate registered judgments. Soon after that order, the owner of the unregistered judgment arranged that the owner of the registered deed should withdraw his claim; and consented that the order should be rescinded. Held (reversing the decision below), that the order was not a final adjudication of the priorities of the parties, equivalent to a decree in Ch.; that it ought to be rescinded, and the priorities placed in the order in which they originally stood on the first schedule.—In re Scott's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 57. (C.A.)

1. A., seized in fee of premises, subject to an entire quit rent, by indenture sold a portion of them, then in the possession of B., who was his attorney and tenant, to him, his heirs and assigns. The same indenture recited that A. was seized of other premises, which, with the premises conveyed, were subject to the quit rent, and that B. had agreed to indemnify A., his heirs and assigns, and the other premises, the estate of A., from payment of the quit rent, B., for himself, his heirs, executors, &c., covenanted with A., his heirs and assigns, that he, B., his heirs and assigns, would at all times thereafter pay the quit rent of all the premises, as well of such as were thereby sold to him, as of the others the estate of A.; and would, at all times thereafter, save harmless and indemnify A., his heirs and assigns, from the payment thereof. Held, in a suit by an assignee of the unsold lands against a volunteer under B., that the sold lands were specifically bound to indemnify the unsold lands against the payment of the quit rent.

The proper mode of indemnifying against the payment of a quit rent is, by a grant of a rentcharge in fee, equal in amount to the quit rent, and issuing out of lands held in fee.—Hutton v. Waddy, 2 Jon. 541, 549. (E.E.)

1. A bill for chief rent is sustainable in this Court when the acts of the party liable to pay it have occasioned all the difficulty in the way of ptf.'s proceeding at law.—Archbp. of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 2 Dr. & War. 535. (C.)

2. Quit rent is a debt or incumbrance affecting the lands in payment of which money lodged in Court, and awarded as compensation for damages occasioned by works carried on by the Commissioners of Public Works, may be applied, under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 (8 & 9 Vic., c. 18), s. 69.

Advances to a tenant for life, under the Drainage Act (5 & 6 Vic., c. 89), should not be paid out of the fund so lodged in Court, such fund representing the corpus of the estate; the tenant for life being bound to pay the annual instalments; and it being possible that all such instalments may become payable during his life.—In re Commissioners of Public Works, ex parte Studdert, 6 I. C. R. 53. (R.)

3. Quit rents and Crown rents are charges and incumbrances within a covenant indemnifying a purchaser against specified charges, "and all other debts, charges, and incumbrances, that might at any time thereafter affect the" purchased lands.—Massy v. O'Dell, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 293. (C.A.)

4. Railway calls, made payable by instalments, cannot be enforced.

The twenty-one days' notice of a call required by 8 Vic., c. 16, sec. 22, must be exclusive of the first and last days.

The abandonment of part of a railway is no defence to a claim for calls; nor is the non-subscription of the prescribed capital a defence.

A Railway Co., proving against the estate of a bankrupt for calls, must, according to the universal principle in bankruptcy, deduct the price or value of the shares from the amount of their claim, or give up the shares for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt.—In re Jennings, 1 I. C. R. 236. (B.)—[Affid.: 1 I. C. R. 645. (C.)]

5. A Railway Co. is "a Joint-stock Company," within the meaning of the Irish B. and I. Act (20 & 21 Vic., c. 60), and, as such, is liable to be made bankrupt.—In re Bagnalstown and Wexford Railway Co., 15 I. C. R. 491. (C.A.)

6. When a judgment, obtained against a Railway Co. for a debt due to a contractor for executing railway works, is registered as a mortgage under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29; and the company are then declared bankrupt; that mortgage will be declared a valid charge upon their lands and premises, purchased for the construction of a railway thereon.

The word "person" in that statute includes a "body corporate;" e.g., a Railway Co.—In re Bagnalstown Ry. Co., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 156. (B.)

7. A Railway is a Joint-stock company established for trading and commercial purposes. Part of the earthworks of a railway had been made, but no rails had been laid, nor had any traffic or trading taken place—Held, that it was not necessary to prove trading on the company's part; and that it might be declared bankrupt, as a company established for trading and commercial purposes.—Re Banbridge Extension Ry., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 195. (B.)—[Affid.: ibid, 278. (C.A.)]

II. DIRECTORS OF: THEIR RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

8. C., one of the provisional directors of a projected Railway (which was not carried into execution) was sued by the engineer for services performed in surveying the proposed line. In that action judgment was recovered against C. C. filed a bill against his co-directors for contribution. It was objected that the suit should be for the general administration of the partnership affairs. Held, that it was properly framed.

One who is originally named in the prospectus as a director, and afterwards ratifies and consents to his appointment as such, is liable on the intermediate contracts entered into by his co-directors.

The test of liability to contribution is, liability to the ptf. at law; not the holding of shares in the projected Co.

The amount of each director's contribution is to be ascertained by dividing the total loss by the number of directors who consented to act; not of those named in the prospectus as directors; nor by reference to the number of shares subscribed for by each director.

Ptf. having released one of the directors, in order to make him a competent witness on the trial at law—Held, that, if such a release was an act proper to be done to further the defence of the action, his share of the loss should be borne equally by all parties having the benefit of the defence at law; and enquiries upon that point were directed.—Lefroy v. Gore, 7 I. E. R. 228; 1 Jon. & L. 571. (C.)

III. SHAREHOLDERS IN, OR PROPRIETORS OF RAILWAYS: THEIR RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

1. Shares in a Ry. Co. stood in the name of a bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy, on the 13th of Nov. 1837. A large sum for calls was then due on the shares. The company proved for it in the bankruptcy in July 1849, and received a dividend, the assignees not requiring the shares to be brought in, and the secretary of the company expressly stating that they had no security for the calls. Subsequent calls were made, the shares still remaining in the bankrupt's name. In July 1852 the company served a notice on the bankrupt, that the shares would be forfeited. Accordingly the shares were declared forfeited, at a meeting of the directors. In May 1853, the assignees tendered the amount of the calls which fell due after the fiat.

On a petition filed by the assignees against the company, Held that the assignees might, when the company proved for the calls, have had the transmission of the shares authenticated to them under the 8 Vic., c. 16, s. 18, and have had them sold for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate.

But that the assignees not having then accepted the shares, they continued the property of the bankrupt; and had been forfeited for non-payment of the calls.

Semle—The proof under the bankruptcy was not equivalent to payment of the calls, so as to satisfy the provisions of the statute, which makes the payment of the calls a condition precedent to the right to transfer the shares.—Turner v. The D. & B. J. Railway Co., 3 I. C. R. 526; 6 I. Jur. 225. (C.)

2. Shares in a Ry. Co. were declared forfeited, for non-payment of calls. On petition filed to redeem them, the redemption was decreed (vide 3 I. C. R. 526), on payment of all arrears of calls, and of interest thereon. Held, that the owner of the shares was entitled to set off, as against such arrears of calls, and interest, the amount of all dividends which, but for default in payment of calls would have been payable in respect of such shares, in proportion to the capital paid up.—Turner v. D. & B. J. Railway, 4 I. C. R. 194. (C.)

3. The petitioner, a shareholder in a Railway Company, made default in paying calls upon his shares, which the directors declared forfeited. He subsequently paid the amount due upon these calls, and resumed his original shares. By their Act of Incorporation (8 & 9 Vic., c. 119, Loc. & Per., sec. 7), the company were enabled before the completion of the line to pay interest at £4 per cent. upon calls paid up (provided that no such interest should be paid to any shareholder who should be in arrears to any calls). Under this sec. the directors had proceeded to pay interest out of the proceeds of the railway to such shareholders as had paid up the calls made, but not to the petitioner, who had made default in payment. He having presented a petition complaining that he had been deprived of a proportionate share of the profits of the railway, because the directors had applied its profits in paying the interest upon the money paid up, to which he by his default had become disentitled; and praying that he might be declared entitled to the profits of the shares that had accrued—Held, that he was not entitled to relief.—McKenna v. Mid. Gt. Westn. Ry. Co., 7 I. Jur. 301. (C.)

4. A director of a Joint-stock Banking Company assigned to another director a number of shares, at a price far above the market price of the shares, which were unsaleable. The price was paid, but the transfer was not made with the formalities required by the partnership deed. Held, that it was invalid, and that the transferrer was rightly placed on the list of contributories in respect of his shares.—Ex parte Kennedy, 6 I. C. R. 121. (R.)

IV. PURCHASE OF LANDS BY RAILWAY COMPANIES.

5. A Ry. Co. having served notice to treat with the owner of land, under 8 & 9 Vic., c. 18, and been furnished with the title and a claim for £500 compensation, obtained possession from the occupying tenant, and commenced the works without paying the money; or lodging it in Court, and giving security required by the Act. The Court granted an injunction against the company's proceeding with the works; and to compel them to restore the land to its former condition. The injunction not to issue on the Company's undertaking to lodge the sum claimed and give the bond required.—Armstrong v. Wat. & Lim. Ry. Co., 10 I. E. R. 60. (R.)

6. A Railway Company, having agreed to purchase lands, entered, and carried on their works without the vendor's leave, and without having paid him, or lodged the money in bank. The Court granted an injunction till the money should be paid.—Anderson v. N. & W. Ry. Co., 1 I. Jur. 11. (E.E.)

7. A Railway Company having taken lands occupied by D.'s tenants, and the parties not agreeing to the compensation offered, steps were taken for holding an inquisition, in which one solicitor acted for D. and the tenants. The company afterwards acceded to the valuation made for tenants. A verdict was taken by consent for D., and the company gave a written undertaking to pay any sum to which the solicitor was entitled as solicitor for D. and his tenants, when ascertained by the proper officer, under their Act of Incorporation. They took from D. a conveyance, the costs of which and of making title were taxable in Ch. under their Act. The costs of ascertaining the compensation for the tenants should properly under it have been settled with their claim by Justices of the Peace, and the costs of an inquisition were taxable in a Law Court. The solicitor, having furnished separate bills of costs for D. and the tenants, to which the Co. objected, petitioned for taxation; and to enforce payment. Held, that the costs of D. only could be taxed or enforced in this Court, and that the undertaking gave no jurisdiction as to the costs of the tenants.—Marquis of Drogheda v. Gt. S. & W. Ry. Co., 12 I. E. R. 108. (C.)

1. A Railway Co., having need of lands for the construction of their railway, served, in Nov. 1846, a notice to treat, upon the owners of the legal estate in the lands; but the parties not having come to any arrangement in pursuance of that notice, the company, in May 1847, proceeded by inquisition before the sheriff and a jury, and a verdict was then given for sums for purchase-money and compensation. Afterwards, in the same month, the company went into possession of the lands. In March 1848 an abstract of the title of the owners was furnished to the company, and from that period up to Jan. 1851, a correspondence took place between the respective parties, partly relating to title, and partly to a claim made by the owners for interest upon the purchase and compensation moneys. Eventually the company refused to pay interest, and in Jan. 1851 lodged the purchase-moneys in the Bank of Ireland to the credit of all persons interested in the lands. A cause petition having been filed by the owners, praying a specific performance, and interest at the rate of £5 per cent. upon the purchase and compensation moneys, from the period at which the company took possession of the lands up to the time of the lodgment of those moneys in bank—Held, that the ordinary relation of vendor and purchaser, under the circumstances above detailed, existed between the parties.

That the owners were entitled to the interest as prayed for.—Blount v. Gt. S. & W. Ry. Co., 2 I. C. R. 40. (C.)

2. A Ry. Co., in 1846, served upon a landowner the usual notice to treat, which not having been complied with, they served him in 1847 with a second notice, offering a nominal sum for purchase-money for his land, and compensation for consequential damage; and stating, that if that sum were not accepted, they would proceed by the inquisition of a jury to ascertain the amount to which he was entitled. That sum he refused to accept; but afterwards, in May in the same year, entered into an agreement to accept £110 for purchase-money and compensation. The company constructed the greater part of their line, but neither entered into possession of the land in question, nor paid the £110. In 1849 their compulsory power for acquiring land, and in 1851 their power to construct the railway, expired. A petition, afterwards filed by the landowner, praying specific performance of the agreement of May 1847, or, alternatively, that the company should be compelled to complete the purchase conformably to the notice to treat of 1846, and to the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 8 & 9 Vic. c. 18, was dismissed without prejudice to the petitioner's right to proceed at law on the agreement of 1847.—Munroe v. Newry and Warrenpoint Ry. Co., 2 I. C. R. 260. (C.)

3. The Court will grant an ad interim injunction to restrain a Ry. Company from carrying out, without the sanction of Parliament, a contract to purchase the property of a Canal Company, when that purchase would create a monopoly.

Railway Companies purchasing a canal; constructing a new branch line, or becoming proprietors of coaches, will, unless authorised to do so by their Acts of Incorporation, be considered as getting such monopoly contrary to public policy. Their purchase must be sanctioned by Parliament.

The Court will not permit the defeat of this doctrine by a colourable agreement or lease.

The Canal Carriers Act, 8 & 9 Vic. c. 42, does not sanction a transfer of the working stock or fixed property of a canal.

An injunction will not be granted to restrain a company from applying to Parliament for an Act to enlarge their powers, or to sanction an agreement with any other company; but will be granted to restrain them from using the company's funds to defray the expenses of procuring such an application, when a monopoly is likely to be created thereby.

Quere—When shareholders purchase a share in an opposing company, whose acts they desire to restrain, immediately before filing a petition to restrain them, and in order to enable them, as shareholders, to file such a petition, whether they are entitled notwithstanding to their equitable relief as shareholders of such other company?—McDonnell v. The Mid Gt. W. Ry. Co., Ireland—McDonnell v. The Grand Canal Company, 5 I. Jur. 185. (R.)

4. P. agreed with the promoters of a railway bill, then before Parliament, that their railway, which would pass through his estate, might be made upon these conditions:—First, that if the company obtained an Act of Incorporation they should pay him £1000 for all lands required by them, and £4000 for residential injury. Secondly, that the tunnel near his property should be constructed in a specified way. Thirdly, that they should make a station at a particular place, &c. The company obtained their Act, but never made the railway. Held, that the true construction of the contract was, that the moneys were to be paid only if the railway was made, and the land used, since the whole contract must be construed together, and all the conditions contemplated the event that the railway would be made.

Lord Cottenham's doctrine, stated in Edwards v. The Grand Junc. Ry. Co., 1 Myl. & Cr. 650, that an incorporated company are the successors or assignees of the projectors, and come into existence bound by all the burdens created by those projectors, discredited by Lords Cranworth, L. C., and Brougham.—

Preston v. The Liv., Man., and New. Ry. Co., 1 I. Jur. N. S. 217. (H.L.)—[S. c. 5 H. L. Cas. 605.]

1. A Ry. Co. entered upon lands without giving previous notice to the occupier holding under a lease, and without his consent, but having agreed with the owner of the lands. They deepened a drain thereon, which had been connected with the railway, but was not marked on their plans. It was necessary for the maintenance of the railway, and was executed with as little injury as possible. The occupier presented a petition praying an injunction to restrain the company from committing waste, and from keeping the drain open, or keeping possession of the premises. Held, that the Court ought never to interfere to restrain a company by injunction from doing an act already done; that if a company enter upon lands without giving the requisite notice, when notice is required, the proper course is to proceed at law for the trespass, as this Court cannot in such a case properly estimate the amount of damages.

The motion was directed to stand over, to enable the petitioner to bring an action of trespass, first, to establish that the entry of the company on the lands without notice was not warranted by any statute, and, secondly, to ascertain the amount of damages.

Quære—Whether a company intending to execute any of the works mentioned in the Rys. Cl. Consol. Act, 8 & 9 Vic., c. 18, s. 16, when such works are not set out in the plans, can for this purpose enter upon lands not on the plans, without giving previous notice to the occupier of the lands?—Newcombe v. D. & W. Ry. Co., 7 I. Jur. 323. (R.)

2. A person who traverses the award of the arbitrator under the Railways Act (Ir.), 1851, is not entitled under the 22nd sec. of the Act, to interest at £5 per cent. on the amount of the damages, awarded by the verdict, from the time when the R. Co. went into possession of the lands.—In re D. & E. Railway, 11 I. C. R. 467; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 148. (R.)

V. INVESTMENT OF PURCHASE-MONEY: COSTS.

3. The Gt. S. & W. R. Co. having purchased settled land, the tenant for life conveyed to them under their Act. He and the tenant in tail applied to draw the purchase-money out of Court. No disentailing deed had been executed. Held, that the money was to be considered as bound by the limitations affecting the land, and to be dealt with as subject to be invested in lands, to be settled to the same uses as the sold lands; and that a disentailing deed was necessary to enable the parties to draw the money.—In re Gt. S. & W. Railway, 9 I. E. R. 482. (R.)

4. The costs of preparing and verifying the execution of a power of attorney from parties residing in Jersey, to draw out of Court purchase-money lodged in Court under the provisions of a Railway Act, are chargeable against the company as costs incident to drawing out the money.—In re Godley, 10 I. E. R. 222. (R.)

5. A tenant at will, having agreed to give possession of lands to a Railway Company for £23, subsequently refused to give possession unless his sister, who, he alleged, had an equal interest in the premises, was also satisfied. The money was offered to be paid on his giving possession, but was not formally tendered. The company having lodged the sum agreed on in Court to the separate credit of the tenant, solely, alleging in the warrant his refusal to accept it as the reason for the lodgment—Held, that the tenant was entitled to draw the entire money out of Court. Costs were refused, each party having been in default.—In re S. E. Ry. Co., 12 I. E. R. 398. (E.E.)

6. An application, to draw out of Court money lodged there by a Ry. Co. could have been avoided, had the company, on bringing in the money, obtained a continuing order to pay it out. Held, that the company should pay the costs of the motion.—Ex parte Cremon v. Gt. S. & W. Ry. Co., 4 I. Jur. 182. (R.)

7. Under the Lands Cl. Consol. Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vic., c. 18, s. 80, Ry. Cos. are liable to the cost of orders obtained by successive tenants for life for payment to them of the dividends accruing on stock purchased with the price of land taken by them, and by them paid into Court; but not to any costs incurred consequent on the order.—Ex parte Gordon v. Belfast & Co. Down Ry. Co., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (R.)

VI. SUITS BY, AGAINST, AND BETWEEN A RAILWAY COMPANY, AND ITS MEMBERS.

8. A bill, filed in 1850 by the owner of a leasehold, stated that a R. Co., whose railway was intended to intersect the ptf.'s lands, in Sept. 1847, served upon the ptf. the usual notice to treat; and that, no agreement having been come to between the parties, the company, in Dec. 1848, issued their precept; upon which an inquisition having been held, the jury awarded to the ptf. a sum for purchase-money, and a sum for compensation. The ptf., offering to perform her part of the contract, frequently applied to the company to complete their part, which they failed to do. The bill averred that the ptf. could have adequate relief in equity only, and prayed specific performance, payment of the sums awarded by the inquisition, and interest thereupon from the date of the inquisition. Demurrer, for want of equity, and on the ground that the ptf.'s remedy was at law, overruled.—Doherty v. Wat. & Lim. Ry. Co., 13 I. E. R. 538. (C.)

9. The abandonment of part of a railway is not a defence to a claim for calls. Neither is the non-subscription of the prescribed capital a defence.—In re Jennings, 1 I. C. R. 236. (B.)

10. A company had notice from the Railway Commissioners to state their views as to the liability of the company to contribute to expenses incurred by another company; and, instead of objecting to the amount or character of the expenses, expressly repudiated any liability whatsoever. The Commissioners decided that they were liable to contribute. A cause petition, to set aside the award on the ground that evidence was in existence to show that the expenses and charges were improper, but which evidence was not received by the Commissioners, was dismissed with costs.—*D. & En. RECOGNIZANCE.

[As to Recognizance of a Tenant to Court, see also PRACTICE, RECEIVER.]

1. A surety by recognizance, having paid the debt, though after a levari issued against him, but never returned, is entitled to the benefit of the recognizance, and to stand as a creditor by matter of record against his co-surety for contribution.—Salkeld v. Abbot, Hayes, 576. (E.E.)

2. The costs of suing a surety upon his recognizance for a tenant under the Court cannot be recovered in addition to the sum secured by the recognizance; such a recognizance not being a security for a debt really due to the Crown.—Keily v. Murphy, S. & Sc. 479. (R.)

3. The recognizance of a tenant under the Court and his sureties is not a debt due to the Crown.—Bell v. Tape, S. & Sc. 488. (C.)

4. A tenant under the Court, being in default, took the benefit of the Insolvent Act. Held, that the sureties' recognizances should be put in suit, though the arrears might have been recovered from the tenant, if the receiver had used due diligence.—Richardson v. Walsh, 1 I. E. R. 147. (R.)

5. In 1831, A., being appointed county treasurer, entered with four others into security by recognizance, whereby A. acknowledged himself indebted to the King in £7000 sterling. By the same instrument, B. & C. acknowledged themselves to be jointly and severally indebted in £5000 sterling; and D. & E., similarly, in £2000 sterling. The condition was—that A. should duly account pursuant to the 4 G. 4, c. 33. In that condition the instrument was described as "the foregoing recognizance." In 1837, A. resigned. He was a defaulter in upwards of £18,000, of which about £4000 was due to the Crown, and the residue to the county. Held, that this recognizance secured only one sum of £7000; that £7000 British was the sum secured, although the Act required the treasurer to secure only £7000 Irish; and that A., upon paying that sum, was entitled to have the recognizance of himself and his sureties vacated; but that the sureties, on payment of that sum, were not entitled as against the Crown to the benefit of the recognizance acknowledged by A.

A county treasurer's sureties, paying the amount of his recognizance, are not therefore entitled to priority over the Crown, if the treasurer owes the Crown a debt beyond the amount of the recognizance.—The Queen v. O'Callaghan, 1 I. E. R. 439; Jon. & C. 154. (E.E.)

6. Costs paid under a decree or order, which is afterwards reversed on appeal, must be repaid by the solicitor who received them, to the person from whom they were received.—Malone v. O'Connor, 2 I. E. R. 13. (C.)

7. After plea, the Court will permit a sci. fa. to be amended.—Reg. v. Fennell, 1 Dr. & Wal. 511. (C.)

8. The sheriff returned nil on two several writs of sci. fa. issued on a recognizance, entered into by parties residing abroad, and directed to the sheriff of the county where the party's estate lay. Held, that rules to plead might be entered as on a return of scire feci.—Reg. v. Barry, 2 I. E. R. 189. (C.)

1. Bill for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, and for an injunction to restrain execution of an habere. On the coming in of the answer, the injunction was continued to the hearing, on the terms, amongst others, of the ptf.'s giving security by recognizance "in the sum of £827, being the sum stated in the deft.'s answer to be due for rent up to and including the 1st of May last." A recognizance reciting the order, and purporting to be in pursuance of it, was entered into, but by mistake was conditioned, "if the said J. O. L. (the ptf.) shall well and truly account (&c.) for mesne rates, and well and truly pay (&c.) such sum as shall be decreed for the said mesne rates," then the recognizance to be void. Afterwards the bill was dismissed with costs, and the ptf. having become insolvent, the Court (for the purpose of enabling the deft. to proceed against the sureties for the £827, upon the recognizance) ordered, that the ptf. should, within one month, pay the £827, in the injunction order, and recognizance mentioned, as and for the mesne rates of the lands in the pleadings mentioned; and in default of such payment, that the defts. should be at liberty to sue on the recognizance, without order.

When the intention of the parties to a recognizance has been mistaken, the Court will, on putting it in suit, either reform it so as to conform to the intention, or construe the words used so as to have that effect.—O'Leary v. Purcell, 3 I. E. R. 329; Fl. & K. 126. (R.)

2. Recognizances and crown bonds, although the Crown is but a trustee in them for a subject, are not within 8 G. 1, c. 4 (Statute of Lim.)—Regina v. Bayley, 4 I. E. R. 142; 1 Dr. & War. 213. (C.)

3. On a levari on a recognizance at the suit of a subject, the sheriff is entitled to levy one shilling only in the £1 for the first £100, and sixpence for every other £100.—Creed v. C., 4 I. E. R. 299; Fl. & K. 396. (R.)

4. On the Petty-bag side of the Court of Ch. it is not the practice that the sci. fa. on a recognizance should set out the condition, although to do so would be more correct; the Court refused to alter the practice.

An averment of facts showing the jurisdiction of the officer before whom the recognizance is taken, is necessary in a sci. fa.; though the statement be omitted in the recognizance itself. But the position in the sci. fa. of that averment is unimportant; and its being intermixed with the statement in the body of the recognizance, from which it had been omitted—Held, not a ground for a plea of nul tiel record; and liberty to plead to the merits was refused.

A sci. fa. on a recognizance, conditioned for a tenant's paying his rent, in the usual form, stated that the conuzors, describing them as of the county of Cork, came before A. B., "who then and there was a Master Extraordinary in and for said county, and duly authorised in that behalf, and then and there acknowledged themselves to be bound," &c.; concluding "as by the said recognizance of record may appear;" but did not set out the condition. Defts. pleaded nul tiel record. Held, that the omission of the condition was a variance; but that, since the uniform practice appeared to be to omit the condition, the Court would sustain that practice, and not allow the objection to prevail.

That the introduction into the sci. fa. of the allegation, that A. B. was a Master Extraordinary for the county of Cork, was not a variance, not being a statement of the record, but an independent averment upon which issue might be taken.—Reg. v. Hurley, 4 I. E. R. 637; 2 Dr. & War. 433; 1 Con. & L. 473. (C.)

5. To a sci. fa. on a recognizance by a tenant under the Court, and his sureties, one of the defts. pleaded performance of the condition by the tenant, by payment of the rent, and also a discharge under the Bankrupt Act. Replication, that the tenant did not pay the said rent, contrary to the form and effect of the condition—Held, bad, as not assigning a particular breach.

But the Crown was allowed to amend, on the terms of not proceeding personally against the bankrupt, nor against his after-acquired property.—Reg. v. O'Donnell; Reg. v. Kelly, 6 I. E. R. 639; 1 Jon. & L. 271. (C.)

6. A sci. fa. on a recognizance stated that three persons, described respectively as "of A., B., and C., in the county of G., came before J. R., who then and there was one of the Masters Extraordinary of the High Court of Ch. in Ir., in and for the said county of G.; and jointly and severally acknowledged themselves to be indebted." Held, on special demurrer, that the sci. fa. was bad for want of an averment that the recognizance was taken in the county of G.

The Court of Ch. can dispose of Petty-bag cases out of Term.

A sci. fa. on a recognizance stated that "on, &c., at Ballinasloe, in the county of Galway, M. F., J. L., and T. L. came before J. R., who then and there was one of the Masters Extraordinary, &c., and then and there jointly and severally acknowledged themselves to be indebted." The record of the recognizance did not contain the words in italics, but at foot of it were these words, "Taken and acknowledged before me at Ballinasloe, in the county of Galway aforesaid, the day and year above mentioned." Held, on the plea of nul tiel record, that the variance was fatal.—The Queen v. Lynch, 7 I. E. R. 263; 2 Jon. & L. 462. See 2 Jon. & L. 103. (C.)

7. In sci. fa. on a receiver's recognizance, the replication assigned as breaches that the Master's certificate found in his hands a balance, which, by two orders of Dec. 1843, was directed to be lodged and invested in two several parts, which had not been done. The rejoinder stated that the Master's certificate directed part of the balance to be applied pursuant to an order of 1841, which was other than and different from those mentioned in the replication, and the rest to be invested; and that the Master had power to make, and the receiver was bound to obey that certificate. The facts were, that the directions in the certificate and order of 1841 had not been obeyed, and side-bar rules were entered to enforce them, in which only the time allowed was different, and which were the orders mentioned in the replication. The rejoinder was taken off the file as frivolous, and filed for delay.—The Queen v. Beatty, 8 I. E. R. 132. (C.)

1. Vacating a recognizance as to one of the sureties.—Callaghan v. C., 8 I. E. R. 572. (R.)

2. Two pleas to a sci. fa. on a recognizance, the second of which commenced with the averment, by leave of the Court, &c., pursuant to the statute in that case, &c., though informal—Held, sufficient on demurrer.

To a sci. fa. on a recognizance, averring that it was taken in the county of C., before A. B., a Master Extraordinary for the county of C., it was pleaded that A. B. was not a Master Extraordinary for the county of C.; Held, a good plea.

To a sci. fa. stating a recognizance taken before A. B., and that it was so taken at X., in C., before the said A. B., then being a Master for the county of C., duly authorised in that behalf; a plea that the recognizance was not taken and acknowledged in manner and form as in the sci. fa. alleged, at X., in the county of C., or elsewhere in C.—Held, bad, for duplicity, and as too large a traverse.—The Queen v. Irwin, 9 I. E. R. 546. (C.)

3. The proceeding by sci. fa. on a receiver's recognizance is an award of execution, and not a judgment recovered, and does not bear interest under 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 26.—Feely v. Kilkenny, 10 I. E. R. 443. (C.)—[Affirming the decision at the Rolls: 10 I. E. R. 423. (R.)]

4. The appointment of sequestrators for disobedience of an order on a receiver, to bring in the balance due by him on foot of his account, is good cause against the appointment of a receiver by a creditor whose judgment is pious to the receiver's recognizance.—Warren v. W., 13 I. E. R. 69. (R.)

5. When, subsequently to the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 51, a sci. fa., at the Petty-bag side of the Court of Ch., upon a recognizance entered into by a surety for a tenant of lands, the subject of a suit at the Equity side of the Court of Exchequer, after reciting the recognizance, proceeded thus:—"As by the said recognizance, which was on, &c., in, &c., duly enrolled in her Majesty's said Court of Exchequer, and now remaining as of record in our said Court of Chancery, by virtue of the statute in that case made and provided, might appear;" to which sci. fa. the debt. pleaded that the Court of Ch. ought not to have or take further cognizance of the action, because the recognizance was, on, &c., duly enrolled in the Court of Exchequer, whereby that Court then and there acquired, and still retained and possessed, full jurisdiction and authority to award execution against him for the said sum of, &c., according to the tenor and effect of the recognizance; and which plea concluded with the following averment, viz.—"that there is not any such record of the said supposed recognizance now remaining in her Majesty's said Court of Chancery, as in said writ of sci. fa. is above alleged; and this the said debt. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment whether this Court can or will take further cognizance of the action aforesaid." Upon a motion at the Petty-bag side to take this plea off the file as irregular, as not having been verified by affidavit, and as being false and frivolous, this Court refused to make any rule.

Under the concluding part of the 13th sec. of the statute, such recognizances may, upon agreement between the Lord Chancellor and Lord Chief Baron, be delivered over to such persons as may be appointed by the M. R.

Quære—Whether recognizances so transferred become records of, and capable of being sued upon in the Court of Ch., unless perhaps by the Crown, under its special privilege to select its Court.—The Queen v. Jones, 1 I. C. R. 524. (C.)

6. The costs of the appointment of a receiver under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 55, and the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, on a receiver's recognizance, beyond the penalty of the recognizance, are chargeable against the receiver.—The Queen v. Dillon, 4 I. C. R. 545. (C.)—[Affirming Rolls decision, 3 I. C. R. 564.]

See MORTGAGE, V.—STATUTE, 56 G. 3, c. 60.

7. A decree, with costs, of this Court was reversed by the Lords, who directed the bill to be dismissed with costs. Before the appeal, the ptf.'s solicitor had compelled debt. to pay the costs below on receiving ptf.'s receipt therefor. Ptf. had directed his solicitor to retain these costs in his possession to defend the appeal. Held, that debt. could not, on the Lords' decree, compel ptf.'s solicitor to refund those costs.—Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 344; 2 Con. & L. 160. (C.)

1. A settlement of 1800 secured a jointure of £200 a-year to S., if she survived her husband, who died in 1809. For many years afterwards, S. received the jointure from her stepson, H., the inheritor of the estate on which it was charged. In 1830, the jointure being two years in arrear, S. wrote to H. that, to serve him, she would feel happy in thenceforth giving up the jointure, and would make him a present of the arrears then due. In 1834, H. died. By will, he charged his estates with an annuity of £200 to S. By codicil, he substituted an annuity of £100, accompanied by a declaration that it was granted on condition that S. would not seek to raise the jointure. In 1837, S. died, having made ptf. her sole residuary legatee and executor. After the date of the letter in 1830, S. never demanded either the jointure or the annuity of £100. Ptf. filed a bill to raise the arrears of the jointure. Held, that the bill should be dismissed, so far as it sought relief respecting the arrears which accrued during H.'s life; but directed an account of what became due between his death and that of S. — Langley v. L., 2 I. E. R. 313. (E.E.)

1. Release of an annuity, given by an illiterate person, without professional assistance, and for an inadequate consideration, set aside after several years, the price being held inadequate as to the debt, by whose covenant the annuity was secured; although, considering the nature of the security, it might not have been so from a stranger. — Garcey v. M'Minn, 9 I. E. R. 526. (C.)

2. The decision of the C. P. in Handcock v. H., 10 I. L. R. 565, respecting the effect of a release of the debtor's lands from a judgment, in discharging his other lands, doubted. — Handcock v. H., 11 I. E. R. 472. (C.)

3. A., in 1838, devised his real estates at M. to his nephew, and bequeathed to other persons legacies amounting to £8000, which were primarily charged upon the moneys which might be in bank to A.'s credit at his death. In 1839 the nephew, in compliance with A.'s express desire, purchased real estates at C. A., out of moneys standing to his credit in the bank, lent the purchase-money to the nephew, who shortly afterwards repaid it in part, but a balance of £7700 still remained due to A. By a codicil made in 1840, A. reciting that he had devised real estates to his nephew, charged them with £8000, with interest at £5 per cent. from his decease, and directed that sum and interest to be paid to his executors within six months from his decease, to pay legacies named in his will. Held, that parol evidence was admissible of facts showing that A. stood in loco parentis to the nephew; and also to show the above-mentioned circumstances attendant upon the purchase of the estates at C.; and that the nephew being unable to repay the balance of £7700, A. refused to accept a security from him for it, but instead thereof, directed his own solicitor to prepare a codicil, charging £8000 upon the estates at M., which sum was to be applied towards the purposes to which he had by will directed a similar sum formerly in cash at bank to be applied; in consequence of which direction the codicil executed by him in 1840 was prepared.

Held also, that these facts amounted in Equity to a release by A. of the debt of £7700 due to him from the nephew, and that the charge of £8000 upon the estates at M. must be considered as substituted for that debt.

The Court admitted the parol evidence, not for the purpose of construing the will or codicil, but in order to ascertain whether or not the £7700 was a debt due to A. at his death.

Semble—The dictum of Wigram, V. C., in Cross v. Sprigg, 6 Hare. 552, that if a debt be not released at Law it cannot be considered in Equity, is not sustainable. — Hedges v. Alchworth, 13 I. E. R. 406. (C.)

4. H., being seised of an estate tail in W., certain judgments were obtained against him in 1824. Upon his marriage, subsequently in that year, W. was settled upon him for life, with remainders over for the benefit of the issue of the marriage; and a recovery was suffered to the uses of the settlement. In 1825, H., by purchase, acquired B. in fee. In 1826 several other judgments were obtained against him. In 1829 the ptf. agreed to lend to H. £2000 upon mortgage of his fee in B., and his life estate in W., provided that the judgment creditors of 1824 would release B. from their judgments, to which they assented, and then (1829) executed a deed-poll, which recited that H., being desirous to have B. clear of incumbrances, had requested the judgment creditors of 1824 to release it from the incumbrances thereupon by their judgments; and that they, being satisfied that the residue of H.'s lands were a sufficient security for their judgments, agreed thereto; and by the operative part they released, exonerated, and for ever discharged B. from their respective judgments, and from all writs of execution and executions, and every other writ then sued out, or thereafter to be sued out, against B., by virtue of their respective judgments, or otherwise in relation thereto; and they agreed (for their respective judgments only) to indemnify H. for all costs, damages, and expenses, which should at any time be incurred by reason of B. being attached in execution under those judgments. Afterwards H. executed the proposed mortgage to the ptf. Held, that both at Law and in Equity, the operation and effect of the deed-poll of 1829 was to exonerate W. as well as B. from the rights and remedies of the judgment creditors of 1824.

The 11 & 12 Vic., c. 48, s. 72, enacting that the release of any portion of lands in Ireland from any judgment affecting the same, shall not nullify or affect the force of such judgment as regards the residue of such lands, or any other property not specially released, does not apply to releases executed before that statute passed.

A sci. fa. under O'Neill's Act, issued after the execution of the release, and the death of H., at the suit of one of the judgment creditors of 1824, against the three infant daughters of H. (tenants in tail of W. under the marriage settlement of 1824) as his co-heiresses-at-law, and against other persons as terre-tenants of W. The sheriff in his return stated that he had summoned the three infants, "co-heiresses of the abovenamed H., deceased," and also that he had summoned the terre-tenants of W. specially named in the sci. fa.; and testified that there was not any other heir or heiress of H., and that he (the sheriff) had not served any other terre-tenants of W., or of any other lands of H., except those specially named in the sci. fa. Judgment of revivor was obtained on default. Held, that the original judgment was by the revivor re-established as against W., and that the infants, having pretermitted their opportunity of pleading the release to the sci. fa., could not afterwards set up that release as a defence in equity against raising the amount of that judgment out of W. — Handcock v. H., 1 I. C. R. 444. (C.)

5. A., by will, left property to trustees to be divided among his five grandsons, V., W., X., Y., Z., and directed the shares to become vested, and to be payable to them as they severally attained the age of twenty-five years; but if any one of them should die under that age, "then, that the share of the one so dying should be divided equally among such other of his said grandsons as should survive." The minors were made wards of Court. The shares of each had been ascertained, and lodged to the credit of the matter, and to the separate credit of each respectively. V., W., and X. had attained the age of twenty-five, Y. and Z. had not; but all had been discharged from the wardship of the Court. W., X., and Y. by deed released to Z. their contingent right to the share standing to his separate credit. V. did not release his right; and Z. filed a petition praying that three-fourths of the entire sum standing to his separate credit be paid out to him.

Under these circumstances, the M. R. declined making any order on the petition.—In re Mathews Minors, 5 I. Jur. 154. (R.)

1. A lease for lives contained a covenant by the lessor that, upon the death of any of the lives, he would, at the request of the lessees, his heirs, &c., and on payment of a fine, from time to time, and at all times for ever, renew and put in a new life; provided that the life or lives of these that should be renewed be of the issue or posterity lawfully begotten of the lessee. The lease also contained a clause giving the lessor a right of pre-emption. Several renewals, for the lives of persons not the issue of the lessee, were granted, but subject to the covenants in the original lease. The last of these renewals was made by a tenant in fee of the reversion. Held, that the lease was a lease in perpetuity, and as such within the Ren. Lease. Conv. Act.

The owner of the reversion would be bound by the covenant to renew, though the performance of the condition became impossible by the failure of the posterity of the lessee.

Quere—Whether a release of the condition might not be presumed from the renewals?—Sherlock v. Kennedy, 15 I. C. R. 160. (R.)

2. A testator, after devises to his sons, bequeathed portions, charged on his real and personal estate, to each of his daughters, to be paid to them respectively on attaining age, or day of marriage, provided they should marry with consent of the executors; and if either of his sons or daughters should at any time thereafter intermarry with a Papist, he revoked and made void to all intents and purposes the devises and bequests, so as aforesaid made to such child or children, and instead thereof left to each of his children so offending one shilling, and devised and bequeathed such child or children's share or shares to the survivors. Held, that on the construction of the whole will, the restriction upon a daughter's marrying a Roman Catholic was to be confined to the period of minority.—Duggan v. Kelly, 10 I. E. R. 473. (C.)

3. A father, a professed Roman Catholic, had his children baptized by R. C. priests, and their births entered in a Douay Bible; but they never during his life attended R. C. worship, except on one occasion of great solemnity, to see Mass performed by way of spectacle. He had a Protestant governess for the younger, and placed the two elder children at a Protestant school, and they, with his sanction, attended worship at a Protestant church, and were generally brought up as Protestants. By will he appointed his wife, a Protestant, their testamentary guardian. Held, that the children, who were wards of Court, should be brought up as Protestants. The Court will be guided by the intention of the father as to the faith in which his children shall be brought up, and will not act on the ground of the worldly advantage of the children. The circumstance that the children have, for several years after the father's death, been brought up in a particular faith, is one which should have weight with the Court as to those of the children who are of an age to have formed opinions on religious subjects.—In re Kellers, 5 I. C. R. 328. (R.)

4. A father, by will, appointed a guardian; and directed that his children should be brought up in the Protestant faith, and that their mother should have no control over their education or religion. She was a Roman Catholic. Her application, under the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 54, for an order to obtain the custody of the children, was refused by this Court.—In re Cornwallis Minors, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 458. (C.A.)—[Affirming Rolls decision: ibid, 148.]

5. A ward of Court, aged about nine years, who had been ordered to be brought up as a Roman Catholic, was, in disobedience to the orders of the Court, removed out of the jurisdiction of the Court by one of her relatives, and educated in the doctrines of the Established Church. At the age of fifteen years she was brought back within the jurisdiction. The Lord Chancellor having, in a personal interview with her, been convinced that she was herself attached to the religious opinions in which she had been brought up, ordered her future religious education to be conducted in conformity with them.

The actual conscientious convictions of a minor, who has arrived at the age of conscious responsibility, are to be secured against pressure or coercive influence.—In re Browne, 8 I. C. R. 172; Dru. Rep. temp. Napier, 351. (C.)

RENTCHARGE.

See TITHES.

2. The Court will entertain a suit to raise the arrears of a rentcharge, although ptf. appears by his bill to have full legal remedies.—Ahearn v. O'Callaghan, Hay. & J. 339. (E.E.)

3. A testator's heir-at-law admitted that the will, which was lost, had been duly executed and attested, and that thereby lands were devised to him, subject to a perpetual rentcharge. Upon evidence of its contents by two witnesses, who had heard the will read, but could not state that it was executed and attested, as by law required, further than that the person reading it read out the names of the testator, and of certain persons, as if they had executed and attested it; and upon proof of the payment of the rentcharge for 35 years up to the year before the filing of the bill, the Court declared the lands well charged therewith; and that the heir-at-law, and the persons deriving title with notice under a settlement of the lands, executed by him on his son's marriage, and duly registered, and also his judgment creditor, were bound to give effect to the devise of the rentcharge.—Wise v. W., 2 Jon. & L. 603. (C.)

4. Since the statute of Quia Emptores, there cannot be a grant in fee-farm. A rent reserved on a grant in fee, if accompanied by a power of distress, is a rentcharge, and as such a bill will lie to recover it.—Brady v. Fitzgerald, 11 I. E. R. 55; Pennefather v. Stephens, 11 I. E. R. 61. (R.)

5. A bill in equity does not lie to recover the arrears of a rentcharge, unless it be proved that there are circumstances which render the legal remedies useless or very difficult.—Brady v. Fitzgerald, 12 I. E. R. 273. (C.)

6. A., seized of P. and other lands, directed all his just debts, funeral expenses, and legacies to be paid by his executors, and devised all his real and freehold estates (save a part devised to his wife), upon trust, that his wife and her assigns should, after his decease, receive a rentcharge, with power of distress; and that three of his daughters should receive rentcharges, with like remedy by distress and entry, as provided with respect to the rentcharge to his wife. A. then bequeathed pecuniary legacies to his children, and left all the residue and remainder of his real, freehold, and personal estates, subject to his debts and the aforesaid legacies and annuities, to the trustees. Held, that the rentcharges to the daughters were specifically charged on the same lands as the rentcharge to the wife, and had priority over the legacies which were charged by the residuary clause only.—Weir v. Chamley, 1 I. C. R. 295. (R.)

7. A rentcharge was granted to A. and his heirs, charged on land held for lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal. A. died intestate, and without an heir. Held, that his administratrix was entitled to the rentcharge under the 1 Vic., c. 26, s. 6.—Plunket v. Reilly, 2 I. C. R. 585. (R.)

8. No more than six years' arrears of tithe rentcharge can be recovered by the owner of such tithe rentcharge from the owner of the lands.—Ecclesiastical Commrs. v. Sligo, 5 I. C. R. 46; 7 I. Jur. 261. (C.)

RENTS AND PROFITS.

See ACCOUNT, III, et passim—INTERMEDIATE PROFITS—PRACTICE, RECEIVER.

9. Ptf. filed his bill to set aside an instrument for fraud, and to obtain possession of lands devised to him. Before this suit ended, the original deft. died. It was revived against his devisee and personal representative. The Court decreed ptf. entitled to mesne rents from the time at which his title accrued, with costs.—Blackwood v. Gregg, Hay. & J. 310. (E.E.)

1. Devise of realty to W. and his heirs, on trust, to receive the rents, &c., and apply them in discharging testator's debts and legacies; then to convey part to testator's brother, R., for his life, and the residue, and R.'s part after his death, to such of W.'s sons as should at W.'s death be his second son, for life; remainder to the first and other sons of such second son, in tail male; remainder to W.'s third, &c., sons, in strict settlement. W. was also residuary legatee. The debts and legacies having been all paid, R. died during W.'s life. Held, that testator's heir-at-law was entitled to the rents, &c., as undisposed of realty, till W.'s death; that the residuary clause was confined to personalty, so that thereunder the intermediate rents, &c., did not pass to W.—Wills v. W., 4 I. E. R. 531; 1 Dr. & War. 439. (C.)

2. In a suit instituted by a judgment creditor to redeem an elegit creditor in possession, the latter must account only for the rents received, not for those which, without wilful default, he might have received, except from the filing of the bill, from which date he must account for what rents he might, without wilful default, have received.—M'Donnell v. Walsh, 2 Dr. & War. 252; 1 Con. & L. 389. (C.)

3. A lease for lives, reserving a rent and duties, or a sum in lieu of the duties, with a covenant for perpetual renewal upon payment of a renewal fine, contained a proviso that if the lessee should not within three months after the fall of each life pay to the lessor, &c., the renewal fine over and above the rent, fees, and duties, and nominate a new life, the lessor might refuse to renew. The lessee covenanted to pay fees and duties, sums of money in lieu of duties, and renewal fines; and that if it should happen that the rent, fees, and duties, or other sums of money thereinbefore mentioned should be unpaid for 21 days after the days on which they ought to be paid, the lessee, his heirs, &c., should forfeit to the lessor, &c., one shilling in the pound, in the name of a penalty, and so proportionably thereafter for a greater or lesser time whenever the same should be so behind afterwards. There was a power of distress, as well for the rent, fees, and duties, and other sums of money to be paid for the renewal, as also for the sums so to be forfeited; with a right of re-entry, if the rent, &c., or any of them, or any part thereof, &c. One life dropped many years before, without payment of the renewal fine. On a petition for a fee-farm grant—Held, that the lessee was bound to pay the penalty of one shilling in the pound on the renewal fine before the grant should be executed.—Ex parte Sheil, 1 I. C. R. 190. (R.)

I. ITS INCIDENTS.

II. WHAT CONSTITUTES IT, OR PASSES AS.

4. A testator concluded his will in these words:—"As to all my personal estate, &c., subject, however, to my debts and legacies hereinbefore bequeathed, I give the same to W., whom I appoint executor of this my will; and also, in case of any residue, I appoint him my residuary legatee." Held, that this clause was confined to personal estate; and that by it certain rents, undisposed of during W.'s life, did not pass to him for life.—Wills v. W., 4 I. E. R. 531; 1 Dr. & War. 439. (C.)

5. V., seized of an estate pur autre vie, and possessed of about £4500 of personalty, bequeathed "£1500, the other part of the £4500, together with any further property," in trust for the use of his father, to be disposed of by him, share and share alike, as he by deed or will should appoint, among V.'s brothers, and the daughter or daughters of his sister. The residuary clause was in these words:—"As to the rest," &c., "of my worldly estate and fortune, not heretofore and hereby disposed of, in trust to the use of my affectionate father, J. C., and his heirs, executors, and administrators, for ever." Held, that the estate pur autre vie passed under this clause, and not under the words "any further property."—Acheson v. Fair, 3 Dr. & War. 512; 2 Con. & L. 208. (C.)

6. V., by will, after bequeathing legacies and directing that his debts should be paid, ordered all his effects to be sold by auction, and such money or valuables as he should die possessed of to be handed over to D. to be applied to the use of K. to a fixed amount, during her life, and any residue, remaining after her demise, to be expended in masses for his son's soul. V. directed a security in J.'s hands to be applied as above. "My Royal Canal stock is to be sold; also my Grand Canal debentures, as necessity may require, at the discretion of my executors." Held, that this clause disposed of all the residue, including the stock and debentures, and that it all passed to the executors on K.'s death; that the bequest for masses was valid, not void as a superstitious use.—Read v. Hodgins, 7 I. E. R. 17. (R.)

1. "I bequeath to my wife all the household furniture and moveable goods and chattels in and belonging to my dwelling-house, except my books. I bequeath to her the use of my plate, with power to dispose of such portion thereof as she shall think proper." Held, that she took only a life interest in the plate; and that, since she had not disposed thereof during her life, it fell into the residue.—Espinasse v. Luffingham, 8 I. E. R. 129; 3 Jon. & L. 186. (C.)

2. C., having a power to appoint a money fund to all and every or any children of hers, and to the exclusion of any one or more of them, in such shares and payable at such times as she should appoint, and in default of appointment, the fund to be equally divided amongst them, C. by will appointed different sums to several of her children; reciting that her daughter, M., had declared her intention of becoming a nun, and had retired into a convent preparatory thereto. C. declared that she deemed M.'s patrimony in that case sufficient for her maintenance; but, if M. should change her mind, and return to her family and friends, C., bequeathed £1000 in trust for M. to receive the interest thereof during her life, and at her death to be divided amongst her children, if any; or, if she did not leave the convent, or did not leave issue, the £1000 to be divided amongst C.'s three daughters therein named, to whom C. bequeathed any residue of the fund that might remain after paying her legacies. Held, that the power authorised an appointment to take effect upon the happening of a contingency, and that the interest, which should accrue on the £1000 while that contingency remained undetermined, passed under the residuary bequest.—Caulfield v. Maguire, 8 I. E. R. 164; 2 Jon. & L. 141. (C.)

III. WHO TAKE IT.

3. V. devised all his estates to three trustees, whom he named executors, and charged them with annuities and pecuniary legacies. The will concluded thus:—"I give, devise, and bequeath unto my said trustees, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike, all the rest, residue, and remainder of my property not herein disposed of, to answer any contingency that may arise or happen with respect to the trusts of this my will, or in case of non-payment of my rents, as also to answer the several legacies and bequests herein mentioned, and to pay the expense of agency." By codicil, V. altered some of the bequests of the annuities, and proceeded thus:—"I leave my brother-in-law, P." (one of the trustees), "residuary legatee to all my property; and I hereby empower him to keep clerks, agents, &c., in any manner he thinks proper, and also to fee one of the first lawyers upon any question he may think fit to consult for advice, and to do all other acts he may think proper, with or without the consent of my other trustees or executors." Held, that all V.'s real estates, not previously disposed of, passed to P., who took the beneficial interest therein.—Warren v. Newton, Dr. Rep. temp. Sug., 464. (C.)

4. V., being seized in fee of T., S., and B., and also seized as of freehold of several lands, and possessed of considerable property, devised T. to his daughter, L., and her issue, taking his surname, in strict settlement; and, in lieu of such issue, to his nephew, R., and his issue, in strict settlement, with several limitations over; but left the ultimate reversion in fee undisposed of. V. devised S. and B. in strict settlement, leaving the ultimate reversion in fee undisposed of; and, after devising several parts of his freeholds, devised the residue "of my properties, both freehold and personal, I may die possessed of to my brother R. T., and, if he shall survive me, I request and desire that he shall convert all the personal property into fee-simple property, and, at his decease, leave the same entailed on his son, R., in the same manner as I have myself entailed the T. estate." Held, that the direction to entail applied as well to the freeholds which passed by the residuary devise, as to the freehold lands to be purchased with the residuary personal estate.—Tennent v. T., Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 161; 1 Jon. & L. 379. (C.)

5. V. devised part of his real estates to his son, W., in settlement, and other parts in fee, and the residue, not specifically devised, to W. whom, with E., V. appointed executor and executrix. By codicil, reciting W.'s death, and the devises of the particular estates to him, V. devised the aforesaid estates, if E. should die without issue in his wife's life, to his wife for life; remainder to R.; and appointed E. sole executrix and residuary legatee. V. died seized of estates other than those specifically devised. Held, that E. did not take the residuary realty.—Hillas v. H., 10 I. E. R. 134.

IV. RESIDUARY LEGATEES AND DEVISEES.

[See also LEGACY.]

6. V. bequeathed all his property, real and personal, to trustees, to be distributed by them as trustees in the following manner—i. e., to pay to his daughter, A., the interest of £6000 at the rate of £5 per cent. for life, and after her death to be divided among the children of A., share and share alike; the portions to be paid to each of the boys at 21, and to each of the girls at her marriage, provided her husband should settle a jointure equal to her portion; if not, the portion not to be paid, but the interest at £5 per cent. on her own receipt, and the principal to be paid to her children (if any) share and share alike; if she should die without children, then to be paid to her surviving brothers and sisters, share and share alike; and to pay to his daughter, B., the wife of Y., and her three children, the interest of £6000 at £5 per cent.—i. e., to B., £180, to her son, H. £40, to her daughter F., £40, and to her daughter M., £40; making among them £300 a-year; the above payment to continue during the life of B.; after her death the £6000 to be appropriated among her children in the same manner and on the same terms and conditions as required respecting A. and her children; to pay to his daughter, C., £300 a-year for life, and after her death £100 a-year to her husband, Z.; should C. leave any children, they were to have £6000, the same as A.'s children; the £100 a-year to be paid to Z. to be considered part of the interest. He gave all the residue of his property to his son, one of the trustees, and authorised them to advance any part of his daughters' portions, with their consent, to provide for any of his grandchildren. £1300 was paid with B.'s consent for the advancement of H. Held, in a suit instituted by the son to have sums set apart to provide for payment of the legacies, and to have the residue transferred to him, that as the £300 a-year, bequeathed to B. and her children, was a distinct bequest from that of the principal sum of £6000, a sum of stock sufficient to provide for the interest at £5 per cent. on £1700 (the remainder of the legacy of £6000, minus £1300 paid to H.) should be set apart during the life of B.—O'Neill v. Billing, 2 L. C. R. 80. (R.)

SCIRE FACIAS.

See RECOGNIZANCE.

1. It is not the practice, on the Petty-bag side of the Court of Ch., that the sci. fa. on a recognizance should set out the condition thereof; although it would be more correct to do so. The Court refused to alter the practice.

An averment of facts, showing the jurisdiction of the officer before whom the recognizance is taken, is necessary in a sci. fa., although the statement be omitted in the recognizance itself; but the position in the sci. fa. of the averment is unimportant, and its being intermixed with the statement of the body of the recognizance, out of which it had been omitted, was held not to be a ground for a plea of nul tiel record.

A sci. fa. on a recognizance conditioned for a tenant's paying his rent, in the usual form, stated that the conuzors, describing them as of the county of C., came before B., "who then and there was a Master Extraordinary in and for said county, and duly authorised in that behalf, and then and there acknowledged themselves to be bound," &c., concluding "as by the said recognizance of record may appear," and did not set out the condition of the recognizance. The defts. pleaded nul tiel record. Held, that the omission of the condition of the recognizance in the sci. fa. was a variance; but that, as the practice appeared to be uniformly to omit the condition, the Court would sustain that practice, and not allow the objection to prevail.

That the introduction into the sci. fa. of the allegation, that B. was a Master Extraordinary for the county of C., was no variance, not being a statement of the record, but an independent averment upon which issue might be taken.—Reg. v. Hurley, 2 Dr. & War. 433; nom. Reg. v. Hortley, 1 Con. & L. 473; 4 I. E. R. 637. (C.)

2. A sci. fa. on a recognizance stated that on the 28th April 1838, J. of L., in the county of G., came before R., "who then and there was one of the Masters Extraordinary of the High Court of Ch. in Ireland, in and for the said county of G., and duly authorised in that behalf, and acknowledged himself to be indebted to us in the sum of £230." Held, upon demurrer, that it was not sufficiently averred in the sci. fa. that the recognizance was taken within the jurisdiction of the Master Extraordinary.

The jurisdiction of the person taking the recognizance must be stated, and it must appear on the sci. fa. that the recognizance was taken within that jurisdiction.—Reg. v. Lynch, 1 Jon. & L. 462. (C.)

1. A sci. fa. on a recognizance stated that "on, &c., at Ballinasloe, in the county of Galway, M. F., J. L., and T. L., came before J. R., who then and there was one of the Masters Extraordinary, &c., and then and there jointly and severally acknowledged themselves to be indebted." The record of the recognizance did not contain the words in italics, but at foot of it were these words, "Taken and acknowledged before me, at Ballinasloe, in the county of Galway, &c." Held, on a plea of nul tiel record, that the variance was fatal.—The Queen v. Lynch, 7 I. E. R. 268; 2 Jon. & L. 103. (C.)

2. A sci. fa. on a judgment is not a mere continuation of a former suit, but creates a new right. In 1813 a judgment was obtained. In 1828 it was revived by sci. fa. In 1838 a bill was filed in the Court of Exch. in Ir. against the debtor's representatives. The bill prayed an account, and that the principal and interest due on foot of the judgment might be satisfied out of the debtor's real or personal estate. To this bill a plea of the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 40, was filed. Held, that the sci. fa. had created new rights, and that the plea of the Statute of Limitation did not bar the suit.—Farrell v. Gleeson, 11 Cl. & F. 720.—[Affg. decree below: not reported.]

8. A. and B., claiming by title paramount to a judgment creditor, were served with a sci. fa. as tenants of the lands of the conuzor; and, having neglected to plead thereto, were not allowed to show cause against the appointment of a receiver on foot of the judgment.—Johnson v. M'Donnell, 2 I. Jur. 59. (R.)

4. The condition of a recognizance was, "that by order of this Court, in a cause wherein J. was ptf., and G. deft., J. and B. should jointly and severally pay the deft., his executors, administrators, or assigns, or his or their solicitor, all and every such sum, not exceeding in the whole £702, with interest from a day past, as should or might be, from time to time, during or at the termination of the said cause, ordered to be paid by the ptf. to the deft., or his executors, administrators, or assigns, or his or their solicitor; and that J. and B. should enter into a recognizance in £14,000, to secure this sum." Sci. fa. on the recognizance.—Plea, that "the above sum, or the interest, or any part thereof, was not ordered to be paid by the ptf. to the deft., his executor, &c., according to the intent and meaning of the said recognizance and condition. Replication, stating orders for costs and neglect to pay same." Held, on general demurrer, that the condition of the recognizance was confined to orders to pay the principle sum and interest, and did not include or relate to costs in the cause.—Reg. v. Brydge, 2 I. Jur. 97. (C.)

5. A sci. fa. on a recognizance stated, that on, &c., at D. in the county of the city of D., B. of, &c., came before E., who then and there was one of the Masters of the High Court of Ch., in Ireland, and on, &c., C. and F., described respectively as resident in the county of Galway, came before J., who then and there was one of the Masters Extraordinary of the High Court of Ch., and jointly and severally acknowledged, &c. The recognizance on record omitted, in each instance, the words "then and there," and did not state by the memorandum at the foot, where either recognizance was taken. Held, on plea of nul tiel record that the variance was fatal.—Reg. v. Graydon, 2 I. Jur. 139. (C.)

6. Sci. fa. on a joint and several recognizance, commanding the sheriff "to make known to A., one of the conuzors, that he be in our said Court of Chancery, on, &c., to show cause, if any he can, why, &c., execution should not be had against him, &c., according to the term and effect, &c." Plea executio non, because the recognizance was not acknowledged by A. modo et forma, concluding to the country. Special demurrer, that the plea was multifarious and double, and tendered no safe issue, and ought not to have concluded to the country. Held, that the plea was bad, and that the sci. fa. being confined to one of the several conuzors, was regular.—Reg. v. Usher, 2 I. Jur. 225. (C.)

7. Declaration in sci. fa. on a Crown bond, not setting out the condition of the recognizance. Plea, nul tiel record. Demurrer.

Judgment for the Crown.—The Queen v. Hamilton, 2 I. Jur. 252. (E.E.)

8. A plea to a sci. fa. by the Att.-General, on a recognizance acknowledged on giving security for a receiver, set forth the condition, and averred performance. In a replication traversing the plea, and assigning breaches of the condition, it is not ground of demurrer to omit, in assigning more than one breach, an averment that it is "according to the form of the statute;" and a special demurrer on this ground will be overruled with costs.—Reg. v. Treston, 2 I. Jur. 257. (C.)

9. A sci. fa. on a recognizance stated, that on, &c., to wit, at N. in the county of C., John M'Donnell of N., &c., came, &c., and acknowledged the recognizance. The recognizance on record did not contain the words "to wit, at N. in the county of C." Plea, nul tiel record. Held, that the words in the sci. fa., although laid under a scilicet, constituted an averment upon which issue might be taken; and not being an averment of what was contained in the recognizance, the plea of nul tiel record could not be sustained on the ground of variance.—Reg. v. M'Donnell, 2 I. Jur. 279. (C.)

10. A sci. fa. stated that F. B., of C., with others, jointly and severally acknowledged a recognizance, and commanded the sheriff to make known to the said F. B., &c.—Plea by F. B., executio non, because at the time, &c., a certain other F. B., to wit, F. B. formerly of C., in said recognizance described as F. B. of C., with others, came before, &c., without this, that the same F. B., now appearing, is the same who acknowledged the recognizance.

On demurrer—Held, a good plea, not contradictory to the record; and that the debt was not concluded by the sheriff's return.—The Queen v. Blake, 2 I. Jur. 312. (C.)

1. When, after the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 51, a sci. fa., at the Petty-bag side of the Court of Ch., upon a recognizance entered into by a surety for a tenant of lands, which were the subject of a suit at the Equity side of the Court of Exchequer, after reciting the recognizance, proceeded thus:—As by the said recognizance, which was, on, &c., in, &c., duly enrolled in her Majesty's said Court of Exchequer, and now remaining as of record in our said Court of Chancery, by virtue of the statute in that case made and provided, might appear; to which sci. fa. the debt. pleaded that the Court of Chancery ought not to have or take further cognizance of the action, because the recognizance was, on, &c., duly enrolled in the Court of Exchequer, whereby that Court then and there acquired, and still retained and possessed, full jurisdiction and authority to award execution against him for the said sum of, &c., according to the tenor and effect of the recognizance. The plea concluded with the following averment:—"That there is not any such record of the said supposed recognizance now remaining in her Majesty's said Court of Chancery, as in said writ of sci. fa. is above alleged; and this the said debt. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment whether this Court can or will take further cognizance of the action aforesaid." Upon a motion at the Petty-bag side, to take this plea off the file as irregular, as not having been verified by affidavit, and as being false and frivolous, this Court refused to make any rule. Under the concluding part of the 13th sec. of the statute, such recognizances may, upon agreement between the Lord Chancellor and Lord Chief Baron, be delivered over to such persons as may be appointed by the M. R.

Quere—Whether recognizances so transferred become records of, and capable of being sued upon in the Court of Chancery; unless, perhaps, by the Crown, under its special privilege to select its Court?—The Queen v. Jones, 1 I. C. R. 524. (C.)

2. When a recognizance purports to have been taken before the Lord C. B. of the Court of Exch. in Ireland, the allegation in the sci. fa., that it was taken before him "in the Court of Exchequer at Dublin," is no variance; and the place where it was taken is sufficiently set forth in the recognizance.—The Queen v. O'Callaghan, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 335. (C.)

SCOTLAND.

3. When a question arises, in consequence of estates in Scotland being devised to a specified person, the Court will not adjudicate thereon until it has ascertained, by a reference to the Master, whether the estates did pass by the Scotch Law.—M'Call v. M'C., 2 Con. & L. 184. (C.)

1. An order having been obtained in 1847 superseding a commission of bankruptcy against B., with costs to be paid by the petitioning creditors, before they were paid, B. was, in 1849, discharged under the Insolvent Act. Held, that the assignee, one of the petitioning creditors, took, as ordered in 1847, subject to the lien of the solicitor who obtained the order, and could not be permitted to set off against that lien a debt due to himself by the insolvent when those costs were incurred.—Ex parte Orr; In re Petticrew, 1 I. C. R. 102. (C.)

2. In a suit to raise the amount of a charge on lands, a sum, paid under a mistake by the tenant in tail of the lands to the owner of the charge, and paid on account of other demands, cannot be claimed as a set-off.

A. was tenant in tail of lands subject to a charge of £5000 in favour of B., who was entitled to a charge of £3000 upon other lands of which A. was owner. From a misrecital in the deeds this charge of £3000 was supposed to be valid; and A., until he discovered his error, paid B. the interest thereon. B. then instituted a suit to raise the £5000, and A. claimed to set off the amount of interest which he had paid by mistake against the amount reported due to B. on foot of the charge of £5000. Held, that A. had no right to such set-off in that suit, the charge of £5000 being a charge upon the lands, and A. not being personally liable thereto; and that, the set-off claim being only in the nature of a simple contract demand, he should proceed at law to recover it.

Also that the recital in the Master's order to the effect that the respondent was not entitled to recover back the £428. 18s. 0d. should be omitted from that order; the Master being without authority to make such a declaration in that suit.—Fitzgerald v. F., 1 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (R.)

5. Generally.

I. 1. Construction of Settlement: what Estate passes by.

1. By post-nuptial articles of 1760, J. covenanted, in pursuance of ante-nuptial articles, and for other valuable considerations, to settle his estate to his own use for life; remainder to trustees to preserve, &c.; and at J.'s death (subject to a jointure) to the use of H., his son, and his assigns, for life; and, after his death, to the "heirs male of his body;" in default of such issue, "to T., a second son, and his assigns, for life;" and, after his decease, to his issue male: remainder to the third, fourth, and other sons, and the heirs male of their respective bodies: remainders over. Power to J., H., T., or any of J.'s issue male, who should become seized under the limitations, to make leases for three lives, or thirty-one years. Power to H., &c., when seized, to jointure to an amount not exceeding £150 per annum. Held, that H. took only a life estate.—Brennan v. Fitzmaurice, 2 L. E. R. 113. (E.E.)

2. By post-nuptial settlement premises were conveyed to trustees to the use of A. for life; remainder to trustees to preserve, &c.; remainder to the use of B. (A.'s eldest son), and his heirs; and for default thereof, to the use of the second, third, &c., and all and every the other sons of A., severally, in tail male, &c. B. died without issue. Held, that B., having been only a tenant in tail, under the limitations, on his decease without issue male, C., the second son, was entitled but to an estate in tail male, and did not take as B.'s heir-at-law.

By post-nuptial settlement premises were conveyed to trustees to the use of A., the husband, for life: remainder to trustees to preserve, &c.; remainder to the use of B. (A.'s eldest son), and his heirs; and, for default thereof, to the use of C., the second son, and all and every the other sons successively in tail male; remainder to the use of the daughters, share and share alike, as tenants in common in tail male; remainders over. B. died without issue. Held, that B. having been only tenant in tail under the limitations in the settlement on his decease without issue male, C., the second son, was only entitled to an estate in tail male, and did not take as B.'s heir-at-law.—Wall v. Wright, 1 Dr. & Wal. 1. (C.)

3. A. was seised for life of lands, and B. in remainder in fee-simple therein. By articles executed in 1771, before the marriage of B. with L., to which A. was a party, it was agreed that A. and B. should, within six months after the marriage, settle and assure the lands, so as to secure a jointure for L., "and so that immediately after the death of B. (subject to the provisions made for jointure), the lands should go to and be vested in the issue of B. by L.; and that such issue should also be entitled to a further sum of £1000, to be charged upon all the estate, real and personal, of B., but in such shares and proportions as B., by deed or will attested by three witnesses, should direct or appoint; and, failing such appointment, in equal shares." Held, that the word "issue" meant children, and that the articles were to be carried into execution by giving all the children estates in common in fee.

But when the articles are very ambiguous, and there has been a great lapse of time, the Court will be slow to put a construction upon them, which would affect the rights of a purchaser, which it would have adopted without hesitation as between the parties themselves.—Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459, 491. (C.)

4. By post-nuptial articles, J., having then two living sons, H. & T., and one daughter,

M., covenanted with trustees to settle specified fee-simple lands as counsel should direct, to his own use for life: remainder to trustees to preserve, &c.: remainder to the use of H., and to permit him to take the rents, &c., for life: remainder to the heir male of the body of H., and to permit him to take, &c., for life: like remainder to T.; remainder to T.'s issue male: remainders to J.'s unborn sons in tail male in strict settlement: remainders over. Held, that H. took only a life estate.

Semble—That a limitation to trustees to preserve, &c., not confined to the life of a tenant for life, will not be cut down to that life, if there are contingent remainders which may require protection during a longer period.—Rochfort v. Fitzmaurice, 4 I. E. R. 375; 2 Dr. & War. 1; 1 Con. & L. 158. (C.)

1. By marriage settlement, lands were settled upon the husband for life, remainder to the issue of the marriage in such shares as the husband should by will appoint; in default of appointment, to the issue, share and share alike. Held, that the children of the marriage, as they respectively came in esse, took immediate vested interests in the lands, liable to be divested by the husband's exercise of the power of appointment.—Heron v. Stokes, 1 Con. & L. 270; 2 Dr. & War. 89; 4 I. E. R. 284. (C.)

2. An intended wife being seised of a remainder in fee, which would vest in her immediately on her father's death, if he died without having had other issue, it was settled on the intended husband for life, on her death, "if she ever became entitled thereto, but not otherwise." Held, that the husband's life estate vested in him, although the wife predeceased her father.—Wallace v. W., 2 Dr. & War. 452; 1 Con. & L. 491. (C.)

3. By settlement of the 3rd July 1801, freehold lands were settled by T. on his eldest son, G., and his issue, in strict settlement, with an ultimate remainder to H., second son of the settlor, in fee. By the same settlement other lands, partly freehold and partly chattel, were settled on T. for life, and from and after the decease of T., to "the several uses, intents, and purposes, as are hereinbefore declared," respecting the first set of lands, and subject to which those lands were in the previous part limited to the use of G., "to and for the use and benefit of the said H., subject to the provisions hereinbefore made for the issue of the marriage." Held, that the second set of lands were limited to the same uses as the first, and that H. took an estate in fee in the lands.—Garde v. G., 3 Dr. & War. 435; 2 Con. & L. 175. (C.)

4. By settlement, lands were limited to the use of the settlor, for life; remainder, subject to a term, to the use of his three daughters, for their lives, as tenants in common; remainder to trustees, during the life of each daughter, to preserve contingent remainders; remainder, as to the share of each daughter at her death, to her first and only sons successively in tail male; remainder, in case of the death of any one or more of the daughters without issue male, to the survivor or survivors during her and their respective life and lives; remainder, in like manner as the original share, to the first and other sons of such surviving daughter or daughters in tail male; remainder, in case all the daughters should die without issue male, as to the share of each, to her daughters as tenants in common in tail; and if one or two of the daughters should die without issue, then the share or shares of such daughter or daughters should go to the daughters of the survivor or survivors, as tenants in common in tail general. Held, that the limitation in case of the failure of issue generally of any of the daughters, to the daughters of the survivor or survivors, was a good contingent remainder.

That the words "survivor or survivors" were to be construed as if they were "other or others," and that the limitation to the daughters of the settlor's daughters was not defeated by the death of one of them in the life of another who afterwards died without issue.

The objection of remoteness does not apply to a contingent remainder.—Cole v. Sewell, 6 I. E. R. 66; 4 Dr. & War. 1; 2 Con. & L. 344. (C.)

5. By deed of family settlement in 1794, lands in D. were settled upon A. for life; remainder to B. for life; remainder to C. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail. E. was C.'s eldest son.

By deed of family settlement in 1818, lands in L., including a terminable lease, were conveyed to trustees for 1000 years, subject thereto as to the freeholds for A. for life; remainder to C. for life; remainder to E. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail. The chattels were to be held on analogous trusts. The trusts of the term were—first, to pay scheduled debts; and, subject thereto, until the expiration of the lease of S., or the end of 99 years from the date of the deed, if seven persons therein named should so long live, whichever should first happen, to raise a sum of £3500 per annum, and accumulate it by way of compound interest, and at the end of the trust for accumulation, to invest the proceeds in lands, to be settled to the like uses as the freeholds. The deed provided that if the lease of S. expired before the end of the 99 years, one moiety of the accumulations should accumulate till the end of the 99 years; and that if, at the expiration of the lease of S., or at any time thereafter and before the end of the 99 years, the person who, for the time being, should be entitled to the lands in L., should be also, under the limitations of the deed of 1794, entitled to the lands in D., the trustees immediately thereupon should raise £2000 per an., and accumulate that, and the whole produce of the accumulations till the end of the 99 years. The deed further empowered A., B., and C. to revoke all the uses and trusts therein, except those of the 1000 years' term, and the trusts for paying debts; and to limit new uses and trusts.

By deed of 1819, executed on the marriage of C. with V., the uses of the deed of 1818 were varied, by introducing prior to the limitations of the deed of 1818, except the trusts of the 1000 years' term, and the trust for paying debts, a term of 1200 years to raise £20,000 for a specified purpose; a trust to raise a jointure of £1000 per annum for V.; and a term to raise portions for younger children. A. died; B. died without issue; C. and E. joined in suffering a recovery of D. Eventually this property was, by deed of 1846, to which C. and E. were parties, limited to raise debts incurred by them; subject thereto to provide an annuity of £3000 per annum for E.; subject thereto for C. for life; remainder to E. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; remainders over. The S. lease expired in the year 1853, in the life of C. and E. Held, that the jointure and portions provided by the deed of 1819 were charges upon the accumulations provided by the deed of 1818.

That notwithstanding the re-settlement of D., by the deed of 1846, C. was, at the time of the expiry of the S. lease, seized of D., by virtue of the deed of 1794, and that the trust for raising £2000, and for accumulating the produce of the accumulations, took effect. —Londonderry v. L., 4 I. C. R. 361. (C.)

1. Under a deed executed while he was unmarried, A. had an estate for life in lands, and a power to charge them with any sum, not exceeding the yearly sum of £600, as a jointure for his wife. He married twice; and by will devised the lands to his second wife for life, subject to a rentcharge of £300, to be paid to his only daughter by his first marriage, who was entitled to the lands under the deed. If his daughter died without lawful issue, he devised the entire rents of the lands to his wife for life; and, if his daughter survived his wife, he devised the entire lands to her for life, and then to her heirs for ever. Held, that the power authorised an appointment in favour of the second wife.

That the will was in equity a valid appointment in her favour of such annual sum, not exceeding £600 a-year, as the net rental of the lands would amount to over £300 a-year. —Barron v. Constable, 7 I. C. R. 467; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 312. (R.)

2. Marriage articles recited that the father of the lady, who had attained age, had agreed to give her a portion, and that the gentleman, B., had agreed to settle properties to secure a jointure; and, for that purpose, to convey them, if their sale to him was confirmed, or otherwise to assign their purchase-money, then lodged in Court, to trustees, to secure the jointure for her; that B. had purchased the lands under a decree, and had lodged the purchase-money; and that title was in process of being made out. B. covenanted with the trustees, in consideration of the marriage and marriage portion, that he and his heirs would convey the lands (when the title thereto should be perfected, and they had been conveyed to him and his heirs), to the trustees, to hold to his use for life, and after his decease to the use that the wife should, during her life, receive a jointure; and, subject to such jointure, and to a term to secure its payment, to the use of B. and his heirs; and if the sale should not be completed, and if the sum lodged in Court should become payable to him, it was covenanted that it should be received and taken by the trustees upon trust to invest it in the funds or in lands, in trust as to the interest or rents, for B. for life, and after his decease to secure a jointure for the wife, and subject to such jointure for B. and his executors; B. covenanted with the trustees that, if the lands or the purchase-money should not, by the interest thereof, produce the amount of the jointure, all his other property, and all the property thereafter to be acquired by him, should be charged with payment of the deficiency. Held, that the articles barred the wife of her dower. —In re Dwyers, 13 I. C. R. 431. (R.)

3. E., wife of T., being seized of fee-simple lands, E. and T. conveyed them, by fine and deed leading its uses to a trustee and his heirs, to the use of E. and T., and the survivor, for life; remainder to enable E., by will, to devise the lands among the issue of E. and T. in such shares as she should appoint, "it being however expressly declared that E. is to have power thereby only to devise such shares and proportions in strict settlement upon such child or children, and their lawful issue, whether male or female; but that if such child should die without having lawful issue, who should attain the age of twenty-one years, or be married, that then and in such case, the said lands should be devised go to and among the surviving children and their issue, who should attain the age of twenty-one years, in such shares and proportions as E. should by will appoint;" in default of appointment, to the children, and such of their lawful issue as should attain the age of twenty-one years, or be married, share and share alike.

The deed further provided, that if E. made no will, T. might, by will, "give devise, and bequeath the said town and lands to and among their issue, in the manner aforesaid, in such shares and proportions as he should thereby direct, limit, and appoint;" in default of appointment, to go equally among the children, and their lawful issue, for ever. Held, that T., could not appoint estates greater than life estates to his children. T. had power to appoint life estates to his children in esse at the date of the deed, with remainders to their issue in strict settlement. —Bell v. B., 13 I. C. R. 517. (C.A.)

4. A marriage settlement contained a limitation of the husband's estate to the daughters of the husband, as tenants in common in fee-simple. Held, that such limitation, so far as it extended to the daughters of a future marriage, did not come within the doctrine of Clayton v. Lord Wilton, 3 Madd. 302, because its avoidance, as to such daughters, could not prejudice its validity, so far as it affected the daughters of the marriage; and that, as regards the former class, it could not, in the absence of special reasons, be deemed to have been stipulated for by the husband, whose estate was being settled, nor by the wife. Held, therefore, that, as to those daughters, it was voluntary; and would be void as against a purchaser for value. — In re Cullin's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 506; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 117. (L.E.C.)

I. 2. What Interest is created by Settlement.

1. By marriage articles £6000 were vested in trust after the death of T., the husband, and of the wife, for the child or children of the marriage (other than an only son or a son for whom another provision was made), in such shares, &c., and subject to such restrictions and provisos in respect of such of them as should be females to prevent their marrying without consent, as T. should appoint, and in default of appointment to such child or children equally; the share of a son to be paid at twenty-one, and of a daughter at twenty-one or marriage; in default of issue, save an only son, in trust for him; in default of issue of the marriage, in trust for the executors or administrators of T. T. died without making any appointment. Held, that the younger children took vested interests; and that the share of a daughter, who died under twenty and unmarried, was transmitted to her personal representative, and did not go to her surviving sister. — Hynes v. Redington, 7 I. E. R. 405; 1 Jon. & L. 589. (C.)

2. A father, tenant for life, with power to charge £500 for younger children; and his son, tenant in tail; re-settled the estate, to the use that the son should receive a rentcharge of £100 for their lives and that of the survivor, with powers of distress and entry for non-payment; then to the use of the father for life, with power to charge an additional £1000 for younger children; then to the son in tail. Held, that although if it was the intent to give the annuity priority over the £1000, equity would not allow a legal merger to destroy it; yet, on the true construction, it was not intended that it should exist after the father's death, though granted for the son's life; and that the general rule, giving priority in family settlements to charges for younger children should prevail. — Mills v. M., 9 I. E. R. 299; 3 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)

3. By ante-nuptial settlement, moneys, the property of the wife, were settled in trust to pay the interest to her during life; and in the event of her death in the life of her husband, then, as to the principal, in trust as she should appoint; in the event of her dying without appointing and without issue surviving her, then "in trust for the persons legally entitled thereto as the next-of-kin to the wife," free from the control or debts of the husband. The wife died in the life of the husband, without leaving any issue surviving. She was survived by a brother, a sister, and a niece (the only child of a deceased brother). Held, that the niece was entitled to one-third part of the moneys. — Kidd v. Frasier, 1 I. C. R. 518; 3 I. Jur. 365. (C.)

4. Moneys, the property of the wife, secured by judgments, were, by an ante-nuptial settlement assigned upon trust for her during life, and, if there was issue of the marriage, upon trusts for their benefit; and if no such issue, upon trust to permit the wife to dispose of the moneys to such persons as she, whether sole or married, or by any deed or writing, with or without power of revocation, to be by her sealed and delivered in the presence of, or attested by two or more witnesses, should appoint; or, in default of such appointment, gift, or devise, to her next-of-kin under the Statute of Distributions.

There was not any issue of the marriage. The surviving trustee received a portion of the moneys secured by the judgments, and paid a part thereof to the husband during his lifetime, and the remaining part to the wife after his death. No appointment by deed or writing was ever executed by the wife. Held, that the wife took only a life estate with a general power of appointment; and that, as she never had exercised that power with the solemnities specified in the settlement, the payments to her and to her husband were invalid; and that the trustee was bound to replace the fund for the benefit of the next-of-kin of the wife. — Reid v. Thompson, 2 I. C. R. 26. (C.)

5. Lands were conveyed, by marriage settlement, to trustees, to the use of A. for life, remainder to trustees for 100 years, remainder to B. (the husband) for life, remainder to trustees for 300 years, and subject to such term to the use of the first and other sons of B. in tail male; in default of such issue, to the use of the daughter and daughters of B. in tail, remainder to the first and other sons of C. (the wife), by any aftertaken husband; remainder to the use of A., with power (which he exercised) to dispose thereof by will or otherwise, at any time during his life. The trusts of the term for 300 years were, that if there should be one or more child or children of B. and C., other than an eldest or only son, the trustees should, in the life of B., with his consent, or else not until after his decease, by demise, &c., of the term, raise such sum and sums for the portion or portions of all and every such child or children (not being an eldest son), not exceeding in the whole £1000, as B. should by deed or will appoint, to be divided amongst them as B. should appoint; in default of appointment equally; the portion or portions to be paid to sons at twenty-one, and to daughters at twenty-one or days of marriage, which should first happen, with interest in the meantime from the death of B., if such respective times of payment should happen after his death; but if in his lifetime, within three months after his death, but not sooner, unless with the consent of B. There was issue a son, who died in his infancy, and a daughter, who married, and died in B.'s lifetime, under the age of twenty-one years. On her marriage, articles were executed by her and her husband, agreeing to settle the estate, and not noticing any claim to the portion. Held, that the portion was not vested in the daughter at her death, and did not pass to her husband as her representative.

That the articles might be read in evidence in this Court, though they had not been mentioned in the schedule of evidence used before the Master, nor given in evidence at the Rolls. —Simpson v. Frew, 5 I. C. R. 17; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 222. (C.)

1. Money was settled upon trust to pay the principal among the issue of the marriage, with power of appointment in the parents; and, in default of appointment to pay these moneys, "amongst the said issue in equal shares and proportions, upon their respectively attaining age or marriage (if daughters)." The language being ambiguous—Held, that the whole object of the settlement being to provide for the children of the marriage, the Court, in order to effectuate that object ought not to give them vested interests in their portions.—Richardson v. Goodman, 3 I. Jur. 317. (C.)

2. A wife's lands were conveyed by settlement for 999 years, on trust, during so many years of the term as she should live, to pay the rents to her or her appointees, and, subject to a prior charge of £10,000 to pay her husband M., during the residue of the term, for so many years as he should live after her death, an annuity of £1000, and to pay the residue as she by deed or will should appoint; as to the residue of the term, after the death of her and M., on trust, if there should be younger children of the marriage, that the trustees should, by sale or mortgage of the residue of the term, and by the rents and profits in the meantime, raise £15,000 for their portions, payable with interest, as she should appoint; in default of the appointment, to sons at twenty-one, and to daughters, at twenty-one or marriage; and should, out of the rents in the meantime, and until the portions became payable, raise for maintenance such sums as she should appoint, not exceeding interest at £5 per cent. on the respective portions; if no appointment, sums not exceeding such interest. She appointed the surplus rents, after the £10,000 charge and £1000 annuity, and some legacies, to her eldest son, and died, leaving M.; her son, and one daughter, surviving. The daughter married L. On bill filed by her and L., it was decided [12 I. E. R. 298. (C.)] that L. and his wife were not entitled to have principal or interest on the portion raised during the lifetime of M. After the death of M., L. and wife instituted a suit to raise the portions, with interest from the date of the marriage of L. and wife, when the portion vested absolutely. Held, that they were entitled to interest from the period when the portion vested absolutely.—Lloyd v. Massey, 10 I. C. R. 240; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 119. (C.A.)

I. 3. Who take under Settlement.

3. Money, the property of the intended husband, was vested in trustees, in trust, during the joint lives of husband and wife, to pay him the interest; after his death, to permit her to receive it for life, subject, however, to such control and limitations as he should by will appoint amongst their issue, living or likely to come forth; in default of such issue; or of such will, to the wife for life: after her death, as she should appoint amongst such of the issue as should be then living; in default of appointment, equally; if no issue was living at the wife's death, over. The husband and several children of the marriage, survived the wife. Held, that the husband was not then entitled to that trust fund for his own benefit.—Smith v. Doolan, 2 Jon. & L. 747. (C.)

4. The execution of a power to appoint a jointure and portions for children by deed, supported in equity though executed by will.

By marriage articles a provision was made for the intended wife and the children. A power was given to the husband to appoint a jointure for any wife or wives he might marry, and to appoint portions for younger children. Held, that the power to appoint jointure and portions was confined to the children of a second or subsequent marriage.—Mills v. M., 8 I. E. R. 192. (C.)

5. By settlement, executed in 1800, on his first marriage, A. was seized of an estate for life in lands; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; with power to charge the lands with £2000 for such purposes as he should think fit, and with £1000 for his child or children by any after-taken wife. He also became entitled, by subsequent event, to two sums of £500 and £1000, charged on the lands by the same deed. There was no issue of the first marriage. By settlement, executed in 1809, on his second marriage, he charged the lands with £2000 and £1000 under the powers, and assigned the sums of £2000, £500, and £1000, in trust, if there should be two or more younger children or daughters, to be divided amongst them, after the death of their father and mother, as he should by deed or will appoint; in default of appointment, equally; and if no issue of the marriage, or issue one only son, or one or more daughter or daughters, or one or more younger children who should die before the time of payment of the portions, then as to the £2000, £1000, and £500, in trust, for A., his executors, &c. There was issue of the second marriage two sons and a daughter (B., C., and D.). The eldest son, B., joined A. in suffering a recovery of the estate; and, by deed of 1834, it was conveyed, subject to a term, to the use of A. for life; remainder to the use of B. for life; remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail; remainder to C., the second son, for life; remainder to the first and other sons of C. in tail; remainder over. The trusts of the term were to raise, by sale or mortgage, £12,500, to be disposed of as A. and B., or the survivor, should appoint. It was raised. A. appointed £250 of the £500, £1000, and £2000, to D., and the residue to C. Afterwards, B. died without issue, whereupon C. became entitled, subject to the charge of £12,500, to a life estate in part of the lands; the remainder having been sold to pay incumbrances. Held, that the appointment out of the sums of the £500, £1000, and £2000, did not become void by C. becoming an elder son entitled to the lands under the deed of 1834.

Spencer v. S., 8 Sim. 87, and Peacock v. Pares, 2 Keen, 689, observed on.—Tennison v. Moore, 13 I. E. R. 424. (R.)

1. By an ante-nuptial settlement, moneys, the property of the wife, were settled in trust, to pay the interest to her during her life; and in the event of her death in the life of her husband, then, as to the principal, in trust, as she should appoint; and in the event of her dying without appointing, and without issue surviving her, then "in trust for the persons legally entitled thereto as the next-of-kin of the wife," free from the control or debts of the husband. The wife died in the life of the husband, without leaving any issue surviving. She was survived by a brother, a sister, and a niece (the only child of a deceased brother). Held, that the niece was entitled to one-third part of the moneys.—Kidd v. Frasier, 1 I. C. R. 578; 3 I. Jur. 365. (C.)

2. A fund was, by marriage settlement, vested in trust, in the first place, to pay the interest to the husband for life; after his death, to the wife, if she survived him, for life; after the death of both, to "assign, transfer, and set over" the sum amongst the issue of the marriage, in such shares and at such times as the husband should by will or deed appoint; in default of appointment, to "assign, transfer, and set over" that sum amongst the issue of the marriage, share and share alike; but, if no issue of the marriage living at the decease of the survivor of the husband and wife, then "to assign, transfer, and set over" to the husband, his executors, &c. There were four children; three died in the husband's lifetime, unmarried and without issue; one having attained twenty-one, the others under age. The husband, who survived the wife, while two of the children were alive, appointed by deed a part of the fund to a son, who alone survived him, and directed that the remainder should go and be held in all respects as the entire fund would have gone if no appointment had been made thereof. Held, that the word "issue" was not confined to children, but meant all descendants.

That the issue took vested interests, in equal shares, on their births, subject to the amount of the shares being varied by the husband's appointment, and subject to his right to appoint in favour of surviving issue, to the exclusion of the representatives of the issue who had died before the appointment; and that the unappointed part of the fund was divisible equally among a son, who survived the father, and the representatives of three children, who died in the life of the father, whether they had attained twenty-one or not.—In re Howard's Trusts, 7 I. C. R. 344. (R.)

I. 4. What passes under, or is comprised in.

3. A marriage settlement provided that a deficiency in a jointure should be charged on

X. and Y.; and declared that, until the death of A. (tenant for life of Y.) this should be borne exclusively out of X., and no part out of Y.; but, after A.'s death, X. should be released from all future payments of it, and it should be borne out of Y., and not out of X. It appearing from the entire settlement that the intention was, to secure the jointure, at all events, the deficiency was held charged on both X. and Y. at the same time. This declaration was confined so as only to affect the arrangement between the two estates themselves.—Sullivan v. S., 7 I. E. R. 453; 1 Jon. & L. 678. (C.)—[See 8 I. E. R. 685; 2 Jon. & L. 769. (C.)]

4. A tenant in tail is not bound to keep down interest on charges; nor is a tenant for life bound to pay interest accrued during the life of a former tenant for life. By a marriage settlement, incumbered lands, of which the husband was tenant in tail, and a sum of stock, were vested in trustees, and the husband was made tenant for life; and an arrear of interest due at the date of the settlement was, under a power in the settlement, paid off with a portion of the stock.—Held, that the husband was not bound to replace the stock so applied.—Kennedy v. Daly, 7 I. C. R. 445. (R.)

5. A., having power, by deed or will, to appoint the lands of D. (held with other lands for lives renewable for ever, and subject to a proportional rent of £19), to the use of such child or children of his marriage, in such shares, &c., or the whole, to one of such children, for such estates, and with such conditions, &c., and limitations over, for the benefit of some or one of such children, and subject to such charges for the other or others of such children as he should appoint, purchased the reversion of D.; and afterwards, by settlement, on the marriage of B., his eldest son, reciting that he was seized in fee of D., and that it had been agreed that an annuity, to be thereby granted and charged on D., should be assigned upon the trusts of the settlement, granted an annuity of £100, to be charged on D. for 100 years; upon trust, after the decease of the survivor of A. and his wife, to pay it to B. for life; and after his decease, to C. (B.'s intended wife), so long as there should be issue of the marriage, and she should remain a widow; and after the decease of the survivor, or if C. survived B., and there should have been no issue of the marriage, or she should marry again, in trust, for the executors, &c., of A. By will, A., reciting his power, devised all his right to D. to his three sons, in trust, by sale, &c., to raise a sum for his younger children. Held, that the settlement was an execution of the power, and that the annuity was charged on the entire interest in D., and not on the reversion only.

That the settlement operated as an appointment to B., and a settlement by him on C.; who was, therefore, though not an object of the power, entitled to the annuity after B.'s death.—Irwin v. I., 10 I. C. R. 29. (R.)

I. 5. Generally.

1. R., seized of an undivided moiety, conveyed it, on his marriage in 1775, to trustees for himself for life; remainder to his first and every other son in tail; remainder to himself in fee. The settlement empowered R. to lease for three lives. Having afterwards bought the remaining undivided moiety, R. leased the whole, in 1785, to T., for three lives renewable for ever. In 1797, on the marriage of his eldest son, G., by a deed to which R. and G. were parties, all the lands were settled to R.'s use for life; then to G.'s use for life; remainder to the use of such of G.'s sons as G. should appoint to. By this deed, R. covenanted against all incumbrances "save and except the leases heretofore bona fide made by R." G. covenanted for further assurance and quiet enjoyment against all persons "except the lessees in such leases as aforesaid." G. executed the power of appointment in favour of his son, W.; and died in R.'s life. On R.'s death, W. filed a bill to set aside the lease of the moiety settled in 1775, as being contrary to the leasing power. But—Held, that W., claiming and deriving benefits under the re-settlement, which referred to the lease made by R., was bound by that lease; and could not set it aside.—Steele v. Mitchell, 3 I. E. R. 1; 1 Dr. & Wal. 568. (C.)

2. A reversionary term, expectant upon the estate for life of the settlor, was vested in trustees, to secure children's portions, payable after the death of the tenant for life (the settlor). The deed provided that it should be lawful for the settlor and the trustees in his life to raise and levy, by sale or mortgage, or other disposition of the term, the portions, or any part thereof, in the settlor's life. Held, that this provision entitled the settlor to charge such portions in his life, payable with interest from the date of his so charging.—Whaley v. Morgan, 2 Dr. & Wal. 330. (C.)

3. By deeds of settlement and appointment £15,000 were charged for three daughters, and appointed to them in equal shares, payable at 21 years, or day of marriage, with interest from their father's death. A subsequent deed of re-settlement created a term of 500 years upon trust (amongst other trusts) to raise if all the daughters respectively attained age, or married, £6000; and to pay each of them £2000 in addition to the portions provided by the previous deeds, with a proviso that if any daughter died under 21, and before marriage, that the £6000, or any part thereof, should not be raised. Held, that interest on the additional portions was payable only from the time when the youngest daughter attained age; the deed having, in every other instance in which it was intended that interest should be given, expressly provided for its payment. In construing family deeds, the intention to give interest being plain, the Court must effectuate it, even though there are not express words to that effect.

An intention, apparent on the face of a particular clause, that sums given by addition to portions already provided shall bear interest, may be controlled by the general intention apparent on the whole instrument.—Clayton v. Earl of Glenall, 1 Dr. & War. 1; 1 Con. & L. 311. (C.)—[Affg. Fl. & K. 151. (R.)]

4. There is no difference between executory trusts, whether created by marriage articles, or by a voluntary settlement, or by will. In the latter cases there is more difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that a particular trust is executory; for, in the first case, the nature of the instrument establishes the fact, whereas, in the latter, it must be collected from the nature of the dispositions in the instruments.—Rochford v. Fitzmaurice, 4 I. E. R. 375; 2 Dr. & War. 1; 1 Con. & L. 158. (C.)

5. P., seized for life of B., with a jointuring power to the extent of one-third of the clear rents and profits thereof; and being also seized of W. in fee; by marriage articles, reciting that he was seized of B., but not specifying his estate therein, agreed to charge, and thereby charged B. with a jointure of £500 per annum for his intended wife, M., with the usual power of distress. The articles further provided that, if the distress on B. proved ineffectual, M. should enter into and distrain W. for the arrears of jointure.

M. survived P., who devised W. to D. The jointure being in arrear, a distress on B. proved ineffectual. The amount of the jointure considerably exceeded one-third of the clear yearly value of B. Held, that W. was liable for the difference between that one-third and the amount (£500) of the jointure.—Locke v. Darley, 2 Dr. & War. 256; 1 Con. & L. 407. (C.)

6. In B.'s marriage settlement, A. covenanted that if "there shall not be any issue male of the marriage, or that all such issue male shall happen to die under the age of 21 years, or that if there shall be three or more daughters of the marriage," then A. would pay an additional portion of £1000 among B.'s daughters at 21 years or marriage, as B. should appoint; in default of appointment, "among such daughters, in case there shall be three or more such daughters, share and share alike." Held, that A. was chargeable only if one of the first two events and the last happened together; the last "or" should be construed "and."

Semble—The gift in default of appointment would not vest unless the three daughters attained age, or married.—White v. Supple, 2 Dr. & War. 421; 1 Con. & L. 525. (C.)

7. Under an agreement executed before the intended marriage, "that in case one or either of the parties survives the other, the survivor shall, in case of issue, leave the said issue two-thirds of whatever property may remain, retaining one-third, or, to be more specific, that if the husband survived, he should settle two-thirds of the property he may possess; and if the wife survived, she should settle and hand over two-thirds of any property remaining at the time." Held, that the wife surviving was entitled to one-third of all the property, and was bound to hand over two-thirds immediately to the children.

If the husband had survived, his obligation would have been confined to a disposition by will.—M'Donnell v. M'D., 2 Con. & L. 481; 4 Dr. & War. 376. (C.)

1. Bank stock was vested upon trust to pay F. an annuity for life out of the proceeds; to invest the residue of the proceeds; and, after F.'s decease, to divide the stock, and the savings of the proceeds into five equal shares: one share to be transferred to each of five persons named.

During F.'s life, one-fifth of the stock was, upon the marriage of one of those five persons, settled. Held, that from the parties' intention gathered from the nature of the instrument, and upon its true construction, one-fifth of the accretions by way of bonus subsequently added to the original principal, and also one-fifth of the surplus dividends, were subject to the trusts of the settlement.—Plunkett v. Mansfield, 2 Jon. & L. 344. (C.)

2. By marriage settlement, reciting that the lady was entitled to an annuity charged on the estate of her son by a former marriage, and that the rents were inadequate to meet it, she assigned the annuity and arrears and future payments thereof, on trust to receive so much as the rents would answer for the benefit of herself and husband, and to hold the arrears then due and thereafter to become due, in consequence of the rents being insufficient to answer it, on trust, if her son should attain twenty-one, &c., in her lifetime, to release them; but if he should die before her under age, &c., that the arrears due and to become due, should form a fund subject to the appointment of the wife. It was declared that in the meantime, and until the arrears should become either absolutely vested in the son, or subject to the wife's appointment, the trustees should not require payment of them. The son attained twenty-one. The rents afterwards became sufficient to pay the annuity and leave a surplus. Held, that though the case was not directly within the deed, the arrears were not raiseable as against a mortgagee of the son.

The conveyance under the former English Insolvent Acts to the provisional assignee is within the general Registry Act, nor is the registration of it dispensed with by the registration of the conveyance by the provisional to the creditor's assignee.—Battersby v. Rochfort, 8 I. E. R. 284; 2 Jon. & L. 481. (C.)—[The Lord Ch., doubting his construction of the deed, directed a re-hearing, upon which he reversed this decision: 9 I. E. R. 191; 2 Jon. & L. 451: (C.)]—[Affd.: 2 H. L. Cas. 388; 14 Jur. 229.]

3. A wife's lands were conveyed by her settlement to trustees for 999 years, on trust, during so many years of the term as she, A., should live, to pay the rents to her or her appointees, and, subject to a prior charge of £10,000, to pay the husband, H., during the residue of the term, for so many years as he should live, after her death, an annuity of £1000, and to pay the residue as she by deed or will should appoint. As to the residue of the term after the death of A. and H., on trust, if there should be younger children of the marriage, by sale or mortgage of the residue of the term, and by the rents and profits in the meantime, to raise £10,000 for their portions, payable with interest, as A. should appoint; in default of appointment, to sons at twenty-one, and to daughters at twenty-one or marriage; and should by the rents in the meantime, and until the portions should be payable, raise such sums as she should appoint for maintenance, not exceeding interest on the respective portions. A. appointed the surplus rents (after the £10,000 charge and £1000 annuity and some legacies) to her son, the deft., and died. Held, that during H.'s life, the portions could not be raised by a sale of the term either in possession or expectancy on his death.—[Affg. Rolls decision: 11 I. E. R. 429.]

That no appointment having been made to provide for the interest, it too was only raiseable along with the principal, and not by a receiver in the meantime.—[Reversing Rolls decision: 11 I. E. R. 429.]—Lloyd v. Massy, 12 I. E. R. 298. (C.)—[See infra, I. 2; s. c. 10 I. C. R. 240; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 119. (C.A.)]

4. An ante-nuptial settlement recited that the intended wife was entitled to choses in action: and that, the intended husband being in trade, it was considered more beneficial for the parties that he should not for the present make any settlement of any part of his property. The choses in action were then conveyed in trust to pay the interest, &c., arising from them, to the husband for life, and after his death, to assign them to the wife if she survived him; but if she died in his life, to assign them to him; if he secured to her at any time thereafter an annuity of £250 during her life, then in trust to assign the choses in action to him, such annuity to be taken by the wife in lieu and bar of dower and thirds, or claim to any share of his personal estate under the Statute of Distributions. The husband subsequently acquired by purchase the lands of T. in f.f., and died without having secured to the wife the annuity of £250. Held, that she was entitled to dower out of T.

The husband devised all his estate and interest in the house and lands of T. (subject to the charges after mentioned) to his eldest son, A. for life; and, on A.'s decease, to all his sons in such shares as he (A.) should appoint; in default of appointment, in equal shares among such sons. There were similar limitations to the testator's son, B., and his sons; and C. and his sons; and over, in each case subject as before. Then followed a power to A., when he should be in possession of T., to grant to any wife £500 a-year for her jointure, and in bar, or without bar of her dower, and to create a term to secure it. There was also a power for A. to charge his lands with £5000 for his daughters, in a certain event, and to create a term for that purpose. The testator declared that it should be lawful for the devisees, "according as they or any of them shall be in possession of the estate of T., to demise or lease all and singular, or any part" thereof, for any term not exceeding twenty-one years. After creating a charge of £3000 on the house, lands, and furniture, &c., at T., for his daughter, and bequeathing to his wife, "in addition to the sums already settled on her," an annuity of £50 during her life, and charging that annuity and his private debts (not trade debts) on the house, lands, furniture, &c., at T., and directing his son A. to pay the head rent of the lands, he concluded his will by saying, "I hereby ratify and confirm the settlement made on my wife." Held, that the widow must elect between her dower and the annuity of £50.—Robinson v. Wilson, 13 I. E. R. 168. (C.)

1. Lands were conveyed by marriage settlement to trustees, to the use of A., for life, remainder to trustees for 100 years; remainder to B. (the husband) for life, remainder to trustees for 300 years; and, subject to such term to the use of the first and other sons of B. in tail male; in default of such issue, to the use of the daughter and daughters of B. in tail; remainder to the first and other sons of C. (the wife) by any after-taken husband; remainder to the use of A., with power (which he exercised) to dispose thereof by will or otherwise, at any time during his life. The trusts of the term for 300 years were, that if there should be one or more child or children of B. and C., other than an eldest or only son, the trustees should, in the life of B., with his consent, or else not until after his decease, by demise, &c., of that term, raise such sum and sums for the portion or portions of all and every such child or children (not being an eldest son) not exceeding in the whole the sum of £1000, as B. should by deed or will appoint, to be divided amongst them as B. should appoint; in default of appointment equally; the portion or portions to be paid to sons at twenty-one, and to daughters at twenty-one or days of marriage, which should first happen; with interest in the meantime from the death of B., if such respective times of payment should happen after his death; but if in his lifetime, within three months after his death, but not sooner, unless with the consent of B. There was issue a son, who died in his infancy; and a daughter, who married, and died in B.'s lifetime. Held, that the portion vested in the daughter, although she died in her father's lifetime, and although the term to secure it was in remainder after his life estate.

That she answered the description of a child, other than an eldest or only son, although she was an only child at her death; and was entitled to the portion, although the estate on which the portion was charged, was vested in her in remainder after her father's death, as such remainder was not absolutely vested in her, but was liable to be divested if her father had a son.—Simpson v. Frew, 4 I. C. R. 428. (R.)

2. Ante-nuptial articles provided that if there should be one or more child or children of the marriage besides an eldest or only son, the said younger child or children should have £2000; but if there should be no son and an only daughter, such daughter to have the £2000; and if there should be two or more daughters, and no son, such two or more daughters to have and be entitled to £3000, said sums to be payable to the younger child or children as the father should appoint; in default of appointment, share and share alike, on their respectively attaining age, or preferment in marriage. There were five children, three of whom died under age and unmarried. The father died without exercising the power. Held, that the surviving younger child, who attained age and married, was entitled to the whole £2000.—In re Dowling's Trusts, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 427. (C.A.)—[Affirming Rolls decision: ibid, 318.]

3. E., by ante-nuptial articles under seal, covenanted to purchase lands and to charge them with a jointure for his wife. He also professed to charge all property, of which he should during the coverture be seized, with the jointure. Those articles were registered. He afterwards purchased the lands of U., but did not execute any conveyance for the purpose of charging them with the jointure; and subsequently mortgaged them to J., who had notice of the articles by deposit of title deeds. No conveyance having been executed to S. Held, that the jointure was to be paid in priority to the equitable mortgage.

Quære—Whether Gubbins v. G., 1 Dru. & Wal. 161, n., ever was decided, or would now be treated as a binding authority?—Creed v. Carey, 7 I. C. R. 295; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 128. (C.A.)

4. When under one settlement there is a tenant in tail in possession and a tenant in remainder, the former is protector of the settlement as to the latter; and when the former is a lunatic the Lord Chancellor, as protector of the settlement, can consent to a disentailing deed by the latter.—In re Mahony, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 43. (C.)

II. VALIDITY OF SETTLEMENT.

1. Whether Void, as being Fraudulent, Voluntary, or otherwise.
2. Post-nuptial; respecting Wife's equitable Property claimed by the Husband.
3. Post-nuptial; when Voluntary; when for Value.
4. Constituted by Letter.
5. Made in pursuance of Articles; Variance between them and the Settlement.

II. 1. Whether Settlement is Void, as being Fraudulent, Voluntary, or otherwise.

5. A settlement made by a banker on his son's marriage, and purporting to provide for the issue of the marriage, is within the Irish Bankers Act (33 G. 2, c. 14), s. 3; and the limitations in favour of the unborn children are void.

Semble—That the case of a jointure settled on the wife of a son on his marriage is not within that sec.—Spearing v. Delacour, 1 Dr. & Wal. 591. (C.)

1. When a party has a right to appoint an estate to one of his children, who joins his father in settling the estate upon the son's children, although these grandchildren are not objects of the power, the Court, nevertheless, holds such a dealing as an appointment of the estate to the child; and a subsequent disposition of it by him in favour of his own children.—Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459. (C.)

2. A., on the marriage of his son, B., settled, among other estates, one of which he had been, but was not then, in possession, and respecting which he was then engaged in litigation. He was ultimately declared not entitled thereto. By the settlement, A. covenanted generally with F., the lady's father, for title to all the lands; and he and B. covenanted with the trustees for title and quiet possession, notwithstanding any acts done by A. or B. The settlement provided that, if A. should purchase the head rents and inheritance of any of the settled estates which were held for lives, his purchase should be subject to the trusts of the settlement, but that he should have power to charge with the purchase-money the estate so purchased. A. did so purchase; and he charged the estate with the purchase-money in favour of his daughter, D., without valuable consideration. Held, that this appointment was as valid against general creditors as the settlement of any other part of his property would have been, and would, therefore, prevail against them unless A. had at the time been indebted to the extent of insolvency; and that the claimants under the settlement, in respect of the breach of the covenants therein contained, were general creditors.—Martyn v. Macnamara, 4 Dr. & War. 411; 2 Con. & L. 541. (C.)

3. When a voidable estate is created by settlement, and the person by whom it is voidable is a party to, and derives benefit under, the settlement, Chancery will interfere to prevent him from doing any act to avoid it.

That in such case the entry of the person having power to render void the estate, is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to be deemed an act of confirmation; and not an avoidance.—Massey v. Batwell, 5 I. E. R. 382; 4 Dr. & War. 56; 2 Con. & L. 413. (C.)

4. The consideration of marriage will not operate to support limitations to collaterals, in a marriage settlement; which, therefore, as against subsequent purchasers for value, are voluntary.—Stackpole v. S., 6 I. E. R. 18; 2 Con. & L. 489. (C.)

5. A father, C., tenant for life, with remainders to his son, D., joined D. in executing a post-nuptial settlement, whereby C. & D. assigned the lands to a trustee in trust for C. for life, subject to an annuity for D.; after C.'s death, in trust for D., subject to a jointure

(charged by the pre-existing deed), and charged with portions for C.'s younger children. Afterwards, C. and D. joined in a mortgage which did not notice this settlement. The mortgage contained covenants for title, but not against incumbrances. Held, that, as regarded the provisions for younger children, the settlement was not voluntary or void as against the mortgagee, nor revocable by C. and D.; and, even if revocable, was not revoked by the mortgage.—Bennett v. Bernard, 10 I. E. R. 584. (C.)—[Re-argued and partly reversed, 12 I. E. R. 229. (C.)]

6. S., being seized in fee of K., X., and other lands, by deed of Feb., reciting that he had charged his unsettled estates with £2000 for his daughter, conveyed K. and X. to B., his eldest son, for life, remainder to his issue in tail, in consideration of which B. covenanted to pay all S.'s debts and incumbrances. By deed of the 12th of June between S., B., and W. (another son of S.), reciting that S. intended to convey K. to W., he conveyed X. to B. and his issue, as in the former deed. Both deeds recited other provisions made for W. and other children in lieu of charges on estates settled on B. in remainder. By deed of the 13th of June, between S., B., and W., S. conveyed, and B. confirmed, K. to W. for life, remainder to his issue in tail. B. paid off the debts and charges. On the death of S., W. went into possession of K., and so continued until his death. In a suit by the son of B.—Held, that the deed of Feb. was for value, which extended to the issue of B.; that the deed of the 13th of June was voluntary, no consideration moving from W. to S.; that even if both deeds were voluntary, the deed of Feb. should prevail; and that neither S., nor B., nor both of them, could revoke it by a subsequent voluntary settlement.

The futility of a defence resting on an unproved inconsistent prior conveyance, though evidenced by admissions in an answer to another suit, observed on.

Expenditure on the estate claimed, with ptf.'s knowledge, but chiefly in his minority—Held, no defence.—Scott v. S., 11 I. E. R. 487. (C.)—[See 13 I. E. R. 212; 4 H. Lds. Cas. 1065.]

7. In an ante-nuptial settlement conferring considerable benefits upon the husband in the property of the wife, to which it chiefly related, which settlement recited that it was made by the wife "in consideration of the marriage and of the provision thereafter made and provided for her by the husband," he covenanted "that whatever estates and property, whether real or personal, and wherever situate, or either or both, should in the event of his decease, if the wife should survive him, be charged and chargeable with, and subject to, the payment of an annuity or yearly rent-charge to be paid and payable to her and her assigns during so many years as she should live, besides and in addition to the provision hereby made and intended for her."

With the exception of a contingent reversionary interest in a policy of assurance for £3000 on the life of the husband, which policy was subject to a debt of £2000 and interest thereon at £4 per cent., there was not any provision made out of his property for her beside the annuity. At the period of the marriage he was engaged in trade, and was seized of real estate. Subsequently he acquired other real estate, and afterwards became bankrupt. Held, that the annuity was well charged upon the real estate of which he was seized at the marriage, and upon the real estate which he subsequently acquired.

The draft of the above settlement did not contain the covenant as to the annuity. On the draft was endorsed a memorandum, in the handwriting of the husband, stating that the solicitor who prepared that draft "had omitted to insert a clause subjecting whatever property he (the husband) might die possessed of to a yearly rentcharge of £250 for the benefit of his intended wife during her life, exclusive of such other advantage as she might be entitled to by the foregoing deed." On the death of the husband, a bill was filed (by a party claiming under a mortgage of both estates, and of a date pious to the settlement) praying that the covenant might be reformed in conformity with the memorandum. The widow in her answer resisted the reformation, and denied that it ever was her understanding of the marriage contract that the operation of the covenant was to be limited to such property only as the husband might die possessed of. The parol evidence of three trustees of the settlement was to the same effect. One of them deposed that to him, both at and after the marriage, the husband had stated his intention that the estates which he then possessed, or should thereafter acquire, should be subject to the annuity. Held, that the bill should be dismissed, without costs; and a declaration inserted in the decree, that the annuity was well charged upon the estates of which the husband was seized both at and after marriage.—White v. Anderson, 1 I. C. R. 419. (C.)

II. 2. Post-nuptial Settlement; respecting Wife's Equitable Property claimed by the Husband.

1. When a husband makes a post-nuptial settlement of property belonging to his wife, on his wife and children, otherwise unprovided for, if it be such as a Court of Equity, on a bill filed by the wife for a settlement, would direct to be made, it is not voluntary within the 10 Car. 1. sess. 2, c. 8, s. 1.—Ashe v. Lowe, Hay. & J. 287. (E.E.)

2. By the decree of this Court, a femme sole, a subject of Great Britain was decreed entitled to a sum, to be realised by a sale of lands. Before the sum was realised, she intermarried abroad with a subject of the Austrian Empire, and continued to reside with her husband in that empire. The sum being realised, and in Court, an application on behalf of the husband and wife, that the money should be paid out to the attorney for the husband and wife, on a warrant executed abroad by them, and on an affidavit, stating that, by the laws of the Austrian Empire, the sum would be at the absolute disposal of the wife, was granted: the Court not requiring that the husband should thereout make any settlement on the wife, or that any commission for her separate examination should issue.—Hutchinson v. Cathcart, 8 I. E. R. 394. (E.E.)

II. 3. Post-nuptial Settlement: when Voluntary: when for Value.

3. A's wife claimed an annuity on his estates under a voluntary deed, or had a right to dower. She concurred in a sale of some of his estates to a stranger, and joined in a covenant to levy a fine. She was induced to do so by other estates of her husband being settled by articles under which ptf., her grandson, claimed. They recited other considerations, but there was not proof of any. No fine was levied in pursuance of the covenant, but the purchaser was never disturbed. Held, that there was a sufficient consideration to sustain the articles as against a subsequent purchaser for value.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadler, 9 I. E. R. 595. (C.)

4. A. father, tenant for life, remainder to his son, joined him in executing a post-nuptial settlement by which father and son assigned the lands, in trust for the father for life, subject to an annuity for the son; and after the father's death in trust for the son, subject to a jointure (charged by a pre-existing deed), and charged with a sum for portions of the younger children of the father. The father and son afterwards joined in a mortgage, which did not notice this settlement. It contained covenants for title, but not against incumbrances. Held, that the settlement, as regarded the provision for the younger children, was not voluntary or void as against the mortgagee, nor revocable by the father and son; and even if revocable, was not revoked by the mortgage.

The doctrine, that creditors or parties proving their demands under a decree are entitled to consider the suit as theirs from the commencement, so as to prevent the effect of the Statute of Limitations, is not confined to suits purporting to be on behalf of creditors generally, but extends to an ordinary mortgagee's suit for foreclosure and sale, in favour of prior creditors proving charges on the mortgaged lands.—Bennett v. Bernard, 10 I. E. R. 584. (C.) —[Re-argued and partly reversed: 12 I. E. R. 229. (C.)]

5. F., seized of the M. and D. estates, by a post-nuptial settlement, in 1807, conveyed D. to the use of himself in fee, free from his wife's dower; and conveyed M. to the use of himself for life; remainder to provide a jointure for his wife in lieu of dower; remainders over in strict settlement. F. covenanted that his wife would levy a fine to the uses of the deed. She signed it, but died without having ever levied a fine, and without having ever been called on to do so. Held, that the deed could be supported, as not merely voluntary, against subsequent purchasers for value from F.

Very informal documents held, in favour of a child, to amount to the exercise of a power of appointment.—Blake v. French, 5 I. C. R. 246; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 60. (C.)

1. A husband and wife were living separate, in consequence of adultery by the husband, and proceedings were about to be taken against him in the Consistorial Court, for a divorce and alimony. The result of a negotiation was an agreement, carried out by two letters, signed by the husband. One was directed to the wife's father. By it the husband undertook to pay his wife £60 a-year, half-yearly, during the time they lived separate, and to pay her the one-fourth part of any gross sum he might enjoy from any permanent employment in his profession as an engineer. The other letter was directed to the husband's brother, on whose estate the husband had a charge, authorising him to pay the £60 a-year. Held, in a suit for specific performance by the wife and her father, that the agreement was in the nature of a family arrangement, and for sufficient consideration.

That as the husband and wife were separated at the time, the agreement was not contrary to the policy of the law, and might be enforced.

That the agreement bound the respondent, as a personal contract to pay a separate maintenance, which the Court would enforce by its decree, although there might be a remedy at Law.—Bucknell v. B., 7 I. C. R. 130. (R.)

II. 4. Constituted by Letter.

2. The correction of a settlement entered into upon the evidence of a letter and conversations, refused.—Milner v. M., 8 I. E. R. 488. (C.)

3. A., being about to be married to a minor, entitled to considerable property on marrying with consent, applied to his uncle B., who wrote to him that he had devised an estate to him. The letter being communicated to the lady's guardians, they resolved that the marriage should not take place until B. made a settlement; after which B. wrote a letter to A., saying that his sentiments respecting A. remained unalterable, but that he would never settle his property out of his power as long as he existed; that his will was made, and he was confident he should never alter it to A.'s disadvantage; that the estate should come to A. at his death, unless some unforeseen occurrence should take place; that he never had settled anything on his nephews, and for fear of provoking family jealousy, would not deviate from that rule; that he would have pleasure in hearing of A.'s union, and would regret retarding his happiness; and that his only motive for not complying with her guardians' wishes was the avoiding of jealousy: he desired this to be shown to the guardians, and that everything should be candid and explicit. The guardians assented to the match, by a resolution, referring to B.'s letters, his affection for A., and his having declined to make an immediate settlement. The marriage was had. B. was a trustee in the marriage settlement, which recited A.'s expectations from him, but the contents of which he did not know. There were other letters, expressing B.'s good will and intention. He afterwards sometimes treated A. as the person to succeed him. Held, that no binding contract to devise to A. was made out; but that, if there was a contract, it was only conditional, and B. was the judge of what "unforeseen occurrence" might alter it; and that, therefore, B. might dispose by will of his estate as he pleased.

That no case of a representation to induce the guardians to consent to the marriage was made out, so as to bind B. to fulfil their expectations.—Mousell v. White, 7 I. E. R. 413; 1 Jon. & L. 539. (C.)

4. A., hearing that a marriage, to which he had not assented, had been fixed between his daughter and B., signed and sealed a document, by which he agreed to settle, assign, and make over to his daughter, on the occasion of her marriage with B., a house, free of all rent, for his own term thereof, to the purpose that it should be settled on herself and her issue by B.; and to execute any further instrument or conveyance of it which counsel should advise to carry out the assignment of the premises to his daughter, as a marriage portion. That document was enclosed in a letter to B., in which A. expressed his ultimate intentions, as to the remainder of his property, to be, that, after the death of himself and his wife, part of it should go to his sons, and another part should be divided, share and share alike, among his three daughters, with such arrangements as should secure the property to the family, so that if one died without issue, that portion should not go to strangers, but pass to the other branches of the family. The letter reached B. on the morning of the marriage, which had been previously fixed, and which took place. B., being separated from his wife, filed a cause petition in the name of himself and his wife, for a specific performance of the agreement, by an assignment, in trust for A. for life, or until bankruptcy or insolvency; then to his wife, to her separate use; and, after their death, to the issue of the marriage; if no issue, to A. absolutely.

Semble—The agreement should be carried into effect, by settling the house to the separate use of A.'s daughter, for life; and, after her death, upon her issue, if any, or by settling it on her without any limitation to her separate use.

Held, that the letter would not be enforced as an addition to the agreement, or as itself containing a binding agreement.

That the letter would not be enforced as a representation, as the marriage did not take place on the faith of it; and there was a written contract executed by A.

The agreement was stated in the petition as an agreement that B. should have a life interest in the house. Held, that the document did not support the case made by the petition, which should therefore be dismissed.

That the interest of his wife was inconsistent with his, and that she should not have been joined as a co-petitioner.—Kirwan v. Burchell, 10 I. C. R. 63. (R.)

II. 5. Made in pursuance of Articles: Variance between them and the Settlement.

1. By articles, executed in consideration of marriage, and of the wife's fortune, it was agreed that the trustees of a money fund should, after the husband's decease, pay the residue of the interest, and also the principal (subject to a jointure for the wife), to the issue of the marriage, or to any one or more of them, in exclusion of the others, in such shares as the husband should have, by deed or will, appointed; in default, to all the issue, in equal shares—to such of said issue as should be sons at 21, and to such of them as should be daughters at 21, or marriage. It was further agreed that power should be given to pay, towards the maintenance of any of said issue, any sum not exceeding one-half of the principal belonging to such child respectively; and, if there should be no issue, or if all such issue should die in the husband's lifetime, that then the entire of the trust fund should, subject to the jointure, vest in, and be assigned and go to the husband, his heirs, executors, &c., absolutely, for his and their sole use and benefit. It was further agreed that a regular deed of settlement should be executed, and that it should contain the several clauses and covenants in such cases usual and proper. Held, that the word "issue" in the articles should be read "children."

That the settlement ought to contain clauses vesting the sons' shares in them at 21, and vesting the daughters' shares in them at 21 or marriage; and should also contain clauses of accruer and survivorship of the shares of sons dying under 21, and of daughters dying under 21 without having married, in favour of the surviving or other children.

That the husband was entitled to the fund, either in the event of his surviving all his children, or of no child attaining a vested interest therein, and that the settlement ought to contain clauses accordingly.—Roche v. R., 2 Jon. & L. 561. (C.)

2. A., an infant, by articles executed previously to her marriage, covenanted to settle her real estate after she came of age; and during her coverture executed a settlement in pursuance of the articles, but did not levy a fine. Held, that she was not bound either by the settlement or by the articles.—Brown v. M'Clintock, 7 I. E. R. 347. (C.)

3. By marriage articles, R., the intended husband, in consideration of the marriage and of the fortune of E., the intended wife, agreed to convey lands held under a lease for lives renewable for ever, to trustees, in trust for himself for life, and in the event of E. surviving him "to the use of the said E. and the child or children of the said intended marriage; and if no child of the said intended marriage, then to the use of E., her heirs, executors, &c., for ever." Held, that a settlement in pursuance of the articles should give an estate for life to E., with remainder to the issue of the marriage.—Rossiter v. R., 9 I. Jur. N. S. 373. (C.A.) —[Rev. 14 I. C. R. 247. (R.)]

III. SETTLEMENT OF FUTURE PROPERTY.

4. The lands of S., held for lives renewable, were devised to A. for life; remainder to his children in strict settlement; remainder to testator's daughters, B. and C. in quasi tail; and if either B. or C. died without issue, to the surviving daughter in quasi tail.

On the marriage of E., eldest son of B., a settlement was executed, reciting that E., under his grandfather's will, was entitled to a contingent remainder in S., on failure of issue of A., subject only to such powers over it as should appear to be vested in A.; and covenanting on the part of E., to settle S. when vested in possession in him.

After the execution of the settlement, A. died without issue. After his decease, B. and C. barred their respective estates in quasi tail, and died. B.'s moiety of S. descended, and C.'s was devised to E., who sold them to a person affected with notice of the covenant. Held, as against the purchaser, that though the estates in existence at the execution of the settlement had been destroyed, the estates in the land which actually became vested in the settlor were bound by his covenant.

Semble—That "surviving daughter" must be taken to mean "other daughter."—Osborne v. Smith, 4 I. C. R. 58. (C.)

IV. EFFECT OF HUSBAND'S BANKRUPTCY OR INSOLVENCY.

[See In re Casey's Trusts, 4 I. C. R. 247.]

V. WHEN AN INFANT IS PARTY TO THE SETTLEMENT.

5. A., upon the marriage of his daughter, charged by deed in 1798 upon lands money, which thereby was assigned to trustees, to permit husband and wife to receive the interest during their lives, and after their decease to pay the principal amongst the children, as the parents or the survivor of them should appoint. There was not a clause empowering the trustees to give discharges. The surviving parent died in 1845. No payments appeared to have been made by the owner of the lands after 1826. Held, that the charge was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, there being no person capable of giving an effectual discharge for the principal until the death of the surviving parent.—M'Carthy v. Davant, 11 I. E. R. 29. (C.)

6. In a marriage settlement executed in 1812 the husband covenanted with the trustees that his heirs, executors, &c., would from his death pay his widow, if she survived him, an annuity of £40 a-year; and that they would pay the trustees £400 for the children of the marriage. The husband became indebted to one of the trustees, who in 1828 entered up a judgment against him for £600; and also effected a policy of insurance for a similar amount upon the husband's life. The judgment was subsequently assigned to B., who purchased a judgment obtained against the husband in 1834 for £200, on which occasion a policy of insurance upon the husband's life had been effected. In 1860 the property comprised in the settlement of 1812 was sold in the L. E. Court. Upon settling the final schedule of incumbrances, a Judge declared that the jointure, and the £400 for the children, were entitled to priority over the judgment of 1828; and that the judgment of 1834 had been satisfied by payment of the amount reserved by the second policy. Held, upon appeal (reversing the decision below), that both judgments should have precedence of the jointure and of the £400; that the provision in the settlement of 1812 for the widow and children was only to affect such property as the settlor should leave after payment of his just debts; that the trustee was not, as a trustee, disqualified from dealing with the settlor, even though such dealing might have the effect of injuring the provision for the widow and children; and that when such transactions have, with full knowledge of the state of facts, been acquiesced in by c. q. trusts for a long time, it would be dangerous and against public policy to let them be re-opened.—In re McKenna's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 239. (C.A.)

VI. AGREEMENTS, &c., AT VARIANCE WITH, OR FRAUDULENT AS BEING AGAINST THE SETTLEMENT.

VII. SATISFACTION AND PERFORMANCE OF THE SETTLEMENT.

1. A marriage settlement conveyed freeholds on trust for the issue male, in such shares as the father should appoint. By indenture, reciting the settlement, he conveyed to a trustee, for the eldest son and his issue, other lands, in consideration of his releasing all his rights under the settlement. Held, that the father was entitled to that share of the settled property to which the son had been entitled in default of appointment.—Barron v. B., 2 Jones, 798. (E.E.)

2. In 1790, upon the marriage of K., lands were settled to the use of K. for life, remainder to trustees for 500 years, remainder to the issue male of K. The trusts of the term were to raise, if there were two or more daughters and no issue male, £6000 for their portions, to be paid in such shares as K. should appoint; if no appointment, share and share alike. The settlement provided that if K. advanced any of the daughters in his lifetime, such advancement should, according to its amount, be deemed a satisfaction of the portion, unless K. should, by writing under his hand, declare the contrary. There were issue, three daughters only, E., I., and S.; but no son. In 1813 K. contracted to sell the estates; and to protect the purchaser against the contingency of there being issue male, £71,000 of the purchase-money was permitted to remain a charge upon the lands. In 1821, K., on the marriage of E., assigned £50,000, part of the unpaid purchase-money, to the trustees of the settlement, as her portion, not to be paid, however, until K.'s death. In 1826, on the marriage of another daughter, S., K. covenanted that he would appoint and assure that £26,000, part of his personal estate, should, within three months after his death, be transferred to the trustees of the settlement of I. In 1836, K., by will, directed that in performance of this covenant £20,000 should be paid to the trustees of the settlement of I., out of the unpaid purchase-money, and if that proved deficient, then out of his residuary personal estate. He bequeathed to his executors £20,000, upon trust to pay the interest thereof to his remaining daughter, I., who was unmarried, for her separate use during her life. Held, that I. was to elect between the provision made for her by the will and by the settlement; and that, taking the latter, she was entitled to the whole £6000.—Brownlow v. Earl of Meath, 2 Dr. & Wal. 674; 2 I. E. R. 383. (C.)

3. A father, upon the marriage of his daughter, executed to the intended husband his bond, with warrant of attorney for confessing judgment thereon, conditioned for the payment of £800 by instalments. He afterwards bequeathed to his daughter £800. Held, that this legacy could not be considered as a satisfaction of the debt due to the husband.—Hall v. Hill, 1 Dr. & War. 94; 1 Con. & L. 120; 4 I. E. R. 27. (C.)

4. Semble—That a rentcharge may be a satisfaction for a portion in gross.—Walcott v. Bloomfield, 6 I. E. R. 227. (C.)

5. An attorney entitled to landed property, mortgaged it. The mortgage was not duly registered, and he, in about a year and a-half after the execution of the first mortgage, mortgaged the same property to another person, who did not know of the first mortgage. The second mortgage was duly registered, but the second mortgagee employed the mortgagor as his attorney in the transaction. Held, that the second mortgagee was affected with notice of the first mortgage, in consequence of his having employed the mortgagor as his attorney; and that his mortgage must, therefore, be postponed to the first.—Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 6 I. E. R. 128; Dr. & Rep. temp. Sudgen, 11. (C.)

VIII. CARRYING INTO EXECUTION BY THE COURT.

1. In pursuance of Articles or Covenant, generally.
2. In pursuance of Trusts for that purpose.
3. In case of Wards of Court.

VIII. 1. Executing generally, or in pursuance of Articles, by Court.

1. A father, on his eldest son's marriage, settled lands, and covenanted to pay all the incumbrances affecting them. Held, that the Court would decree specific performance without an enquiry whether any or what damage had been sustained, incumbrancers having actually instituted suits, and the lands being in danger of being sold.—Vereker v. Lord Gort, 1 I. E. R. 1. (R.)

2. On the marriage of H. with L., he covenanted to convey specified lands, on trust that they should go to and be vested in his issue by L.; and that such issue should be entitled to the further sum of £10,000, to be charged on all other the real and personal estates of H., not therein comprised, but in such shares as H. should by deed or will appoint; in default, as L., if she survived H., should by deed or will appoint; failing appointment, equally. Held, that a Court of Equity would execute the articles by giving successive powers of appointment to H. and L.; and, in default of such appointment, a limitation to the children of the marriage as tenants in common in fee.—Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459. (C.)

3. The only difference between the construction of executory trusts in a marriage settlement and a voluntary settlement or will is, that in the former the nature of the instrument affords a presumption that the intention is for a strict settlement; whereas in the latter case, that intention must appear on the face of the instrument.

Semble—A limitation to trustees to preserve, &c., not confined to the lifetime of a tenant for life, will not be cut down to that life, if there are contingent remainders which may, during a longer period, require protection.—Rochfort v. Fitzmaurice, 4 I. E. R. 375; 2 Dr. & War. 1; 1 Con. & L. 158. (C.)

4. The Court has not jurisdiction to compel a male ward, with whom a marriage has been solemnized without its consent, on his attaining age, to execute a settlement of his estate so as to exclude his wife from all participation therein.—Re Murray, 5 I. E. R. 266; 3 Dr. & War. 88; 2 Con. & L. 186. (C.)

5. In settlements, when the husband and wife are living together, and the case is not one of contempt, it is not the course to settle any part on the wife to her separate use by way of pin-money, unless the property be large. Such a provision refused when the sum to be settled was under £1400.—Harpur v. Ball, 8 I. E. R. 404, 500; 2 Jon. & L. 599. (C.)

6. Vesting clauses to sons at twenty-one, and daughters at twenty-one or marriage, are proper to be introduced in a settlement in pursuance of articles directing "usual and proper clauses." So are clauses of survivorship and accruer, if the intent appears to be that no part of the property shall go over, unless all goes over.—Roche v. R., 8 I. E. R. 714. (C.)

7. The wife of A. claimed an annuity on his estates under a voluntary deed, or had a right to dower. She concurred in a sale of some of his estates to a stranger, and joined in a covenant to levy a fine; and was induced to do so by other estates of her husband being settled by articles under which the ptf. (her grandson) claimed; the articles recited other considerations, but there was no proof of any. No fine was ever levied in pursuance of the covenant, but the purchaser was never disturbed. The articles were upheld, as for sufficient consideration, against a subsequent purchaser for value.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadler, 9 I. E. R. 595. (C.)

8. By marriage articles the intended husband agreed, in consideration of the marriage and the intended wife's fortune, to convey lands in trust for himself for life; and, if she survived him, to the use of the intended wife, and the child or children of the intended marriage; if no children of the marriage, then to the use of the wife, her heirs, &c. Held, that a settlement in pursuance of the articles should give to the wife an estate for life, remainder to her children.—Rossiter v. R., 14 I. C. R. 247. (R.)—[Rev'd: 9 I. Jur. N. S. 373. (C.A.)]

VIII. 2. In pursuance of Trusts for that purpose.

9. A. and B., father and son, in 1818 executed a settlement on B.'s marriage. They, the lady, her father, and certain trustees were the parties to this deed. Freeholds were conveyed on trust for A., for life, remainder to B., and were exonerated from debts due by A., which were made charges on leasehold premises expressly specified. These premises were vested on trust (inter alia) to keep down the interest of A.'s debts affecting any of the settled estates, and the trustees were empowered, "with the desire and consent" of A. and B., and notwithstanding any of the trusts therein contained, to sell those leaseholds to pay the debts and incumbrances. In 1824, A. and B. executed another deed, which recited that of 1818; appointed new trustees; added new debts; and made provision for paying all. The trustees never acted in discharge of the trust, and the deeds were not communicated to the creditors; but B., who, by an arrangement with A. had possession and management of the estates, paid the interest on the debts. After the deaths of A. and B., B.'s son entered into possession of the estates. A bond creditor, C., whose name and claim were set forth in the schedule to the deed of 1818, filed a bill to carry the trusts thereof into execution. Held (by the Ld. Ch. of Ir.), that C.'s debt "was within the trust contained in the indenture for the payment of the scheduled debts."

On appeal, the H. L. affirmed that decree.—Synnott v. Simpson, 5 H. L. Cas. 121.

IX. REFORMING & RECTIFYING MISTAKES IN.

1. A marriage settlement conveyed lands to A. (the intended husband), his heirs, and assigns; and, if A. died, leaving one son or more sons of the body of his intended wife to be begotten, the elder of them, and the heirs male of his body was always to be preferred before the younger; with full liberty to A. "to make such reasonable provision as he should think fit," for the younger child or children. If A. died, leaving no son, but one or more daughters, then to her or them, on respectively attaining age, their heirs and assigns, share and share alike. Four sons and four daughters were born. A., by will, in pursuance of that power, charged the lands with £1500, to be divided amongst the younger children as therein directed. The first taker disputed A.'s right to charge in favour of daughters, one of whom filed a bill to raise her portion of the £1500. Held, that the power was well exercised; and that, since it was evidently intended by the settlement to provide for daughters as well as sons, the Court would effectuate that intention, and support the appointment, by transposing the clause creating the power, and that containing the limitations to the daughters in the event of there not being a son; whereby the words "such younger children" would include both sons and daughters.—Fenton v. F., 1 Dr. & Wal. 66. (C.)

2. When a marriage settlement made by the husband's father was defective on its face, in omitting any limitation after the life estate of the husband and a jointure to the wife, whereby the reversion would descend to X., the elder brother of the husband, a correction of the settlement was refused as against a judgment creditor of X., though sought as soon as the omission was discovered; the evidence of the intended limitations consisting of a letter and memorandum from the lady's father, and conversations with the settlor after the date of the settlement; the draft being lost, and the solicitor who prepared it being unable to account for the omission.—Milner v. M., 8 I. E. R. 488. (C.)

3. A., seized of a life estate, with remainder in tail to B. in lands, entered into a voluntary agreement with B. to re-settle the lands, and that A. should be made tenant for life of one portion, X., as of his former estate, with remainder in tail therein to B. By mistake, X. was limited by the settlement (which was executed thus) to B., for life only, with remainder to his heirs male in strict settlement. The mistake was discovered after A.'s death, but before the birth of any issue of B., who filed a bill to have the mistake corrected. Held, that the Court could not bind the rights of the unborn issue, so as to divest them of any legal estates thereunder, or amend the deed, but only declare the rights of the parties according to their original intention and contract.—Richards v. Fitzgerald, 9 I. E. R. 486. (E.E.)

4. By marriage settlement, lands of the husband were, by mistake, and contrary to the parties' intention, settled upon the issue of the marriage.

Form of decree to rectify the settlement, the contingent limitations to the unborn issue not being capable of destruction.—Hamil v. White, 3 Jon. & L. 695. (C.)

5. The draft of a marriage settlement did not contain a covenant as to an annuity of £250 which was to be settled on the intended wife, but on the draft was endorsed a memorandum in the handwriting of the husband, stating that the solicitor who prepared that draft "had omitted to insert a clause subjecting whatever property he (the husband) might die possessed of to a yearly rentcharge of £250 for the benefit of his intended wife during her life, exclusive of such other advantages as she might be entitled to by the foregoing deed." On the death of the husband, a bill was filed (by a party claiming under a mortgage of both estates, and of a date pulsne to the settlement), praying that the covenant might be reformed in conformity with the memorandum. The widow, in her answer, resisted the reformation, and denied that it ever was her understanding of the marriage contract that the operation of the covenant was to be limited to such property only as the husband might die possessed of. The parol evidence of three trustees of the settlement was to the same effect; one of them deposed that to him, both at and after the marriage, the husband had stated his intention that the estates which he then possessed, or should thereafter acquire, should be subject to the annuity of £250. Held, that the bill should be dismissed, without costs, and that a declaration should be inserted in the decree that the annuity was well charged upon the estates of which the husband was seized both at and after the marriage.—White v. Anderson, 1 I. C. R. 419. (C.)

6. Under a settlement made upon his father's marriage in 1783, A. was entitled to a younger child's portion. He filed a bill, in 1825, to raise it; praying an account of all prior incumbrances. The inheritor set up prior articles, executed in 1765 on the marriage of ptf.'s uncle (ptf.'s father's elder brother), which were registered in 1767. In 1829, ptf. amended his bill by bringing before the Court B. and her husband, the only persons beneficially entitled under these articles. B. having answered, a decree was pronounced in 1834, granting the prayer; and the usual reference was made. Before the Master, B.

and her husband claimed, in right of her charge under the articles of 1765, the principal thereby charged, with 68 years interest. Upon exceptions to the report—Held, that the memorial of the articles of 1765 was good secondary evidence of those articles, possession having been shown to have gone along with them; and that execution of the memorial by the grantee satisfied the statute: that B.'s charge under the articles of 1765 was not affected by the 8 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, which is prospective, not retrospective: that the account of interest on foot of this charge should be confined to the time when the bill was filed: that, according to the settled practice of the Court, p'ts. were entitled to costs only according to the priority of their demands.—Peyton v. M'Dermott, 1 Dr. & Wal. 198. (C.)

1. By marriage settlement, reciting the intended marriage, and that the father of the lady, "for the purpose of securing a provision for her, by way of jointure, in case she should survive her intended husband, and of providing for the issue of the marriage, had agreed to secure a sum of £4800 as her portion, in the manner hereinafter mentioned;" the father, in pursuance of that agreement, conveyed lands of which he was seized in fee, subject to a mortgage, to trustees for 99 years, to raise £1000 part of the £4800, and pay it to the intended husband for his own use; and to allow him to receive the interest on £1300, further part of the £4800, for his life; and if his intended wife should survive him, to let her receive the interest during her life; and then to pay the principal to the executors or administrators of the intended husband. If there should be any child or children of the marriage, the trustees were then directed to raise £2500, residue of the £4800, and pay it to the children, if more than one, in such shares and at such times as the intended husband should appoint; in default of the appointment, to pay it to them in equal shares if more than one; and if but one, the whole to such one at twenty-one or marriage; subject, to a life interest in that sum, thereby given to the intended husband. It was declared that if there should be no issue of the marriage, the £2500 should not be raised. There was only one child of the marriage. He died a few days after his birth, in the life of his father. Held, upon the construction of the settlement, that the child took a vested interest in the £2500 on his birth; and that his personal representative was entitled to have it raised out of the estate.

The right to interest on this sum was limited to the year 1825, when the sum was first claimed; but interest on the £1000 and £1300 was allowed:—on the £1000, from the filing, in 1800, of the original bill; on the latter, from the time when the right to that sum accrued.—Reilly v. Fitzgerald, 6 I. E. R. 335; Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 122. (C.)

2. Rights of children under marriage articles to annuities, charged on leaseholds for lives, and on a term of years.—Richardson v. Nixon, 7 I. E. R. 620; 2 Jon. & L. 250. (C.)

3. V. devised lands to P. on trust, to convey them to his three sons in such shares as P. should appoint; in default of appointment; V. gave the lands to them equally, as tenants in common. In 1786, P., in execution of the trust, conveyed part of the lands to the use, that if S. (one of the sons) married with P.'s consent, but not otherwise, any wife, who survived S., should receive for jointure an annuity (not exceeding a specified sum) as S. should appoint; and to the further use, that S., if he married with such consent, but not otherwise, might by deed or will charge the lands with £500 for portions for his younger children, payable in such shares as S. should appoint. In 1788, S. married with consent; and reciting his power, covenanted that his trustee should, if one or more younger children of that marriage survived him, raise £500 out of the lands; that sum to be divided in such shares amongst them as S. should by will appoint; for want of appointment; equally. There were three younger children of that marriage. S. married a second wife, and charged the lands with an annuity for her jointure. The second wife, four children of the second marriage, and the three younger children of the first marriage, survived S., who, by will, in 1842, appointed 1s. to each child of the first marriage, and the residue among the others. Held, that P.'s consent was necessary only to any marriage of S. which should happen during P.'s life; that the children of the second marriage were objects of the power; that the settlement of 1788 amounted to a contract, that so far as S. could bind his power, the children of the first marriage should take the fund equally amongst them, if he did not apportion it amongst them in other shares: that, upon issue born of the second marriage, S.'s power to appoint was gone: and that the children of both marriages were entitled, as one class, to the fund amongst them equally.—Greene v. G., 8 I. E. R. 473; 2 Jon. & L. 529. (C.)

4. A., having power to charge £500, and appoint it among his younger children, by articles on his first marriage, charged it for the benefit of the younger children thereof; and married again. There were younger children of both marriages. By will, A. appointed nominal shares to the children of the first marriage, and the bulk to those of the second. Held, that the power included all younger children; that therefore the articles became invalid, on the second marriage, as an appointment, and that the power might be re-exercised: but that the articles were a contract to exercise it substantially for the benefit of the younger children of the first marriage, and controlled the power; that the testamentary appointment also was therefore invalid; and that the fund should be divided equally amongst the younger children of both marriages, as a class. The costs of raising the family charge, but not of the suit to raise it, were given out of the estate.—Alleyne v. A., 8 I. E. R. 493; 2 Jon. & L. 544. (C.)

5. A father (tenant for life, with power to charge £500 for younger children), and his son (tenant in tail), re-settled the estate, to the use that the son should receive a rent-charge for their lives and that of the survivor, with powers of distress and entry for non-payment; then to the use of the father for life, with power to charge an additional £1000 for younger children; then to the son in tail. Held, that although, if it was the intent to give the annuity priority over the £1000, equity would not allow a legal merger to destroy it; yet, on the true construction it was not intended that it should exist after the father's death, though granted for the son's life; and that therefore the general rule, giving priority in family settlements to charges for younger children should prevail.—Mills v. M., 9 I. E. R. 299; 3 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)

XI. 2. How and when Raiseable.

1. By marriage articles, under seal, made between W., the intended husband, and M., his father, of the one part, and H., the intended wife, and T., her father, of the other part; M. covenanted that he would, at his death, leave and devise to W., his heirs, executors, &c., all such property, real and personal, as he should then be possessed of and entitled to, charged only with a jointure for his wife, and with pecuniary legacies not exceeding £1000. It was further agreed that H., if she survived her intended husband, should have and receive a jointure, charged and chargeable upon all and singular the property, real and personal, of both M. and W. That the eldest son of the marriage should have and become entitled to a perpetual annuity of £400 a-year, to issue out of and be charged upon all the real and personal estates which M., or W., or either of them, should be seized or possessed of or entitled to; subject, nevertheless, to such jointure as should be appointed for the wife of M., and to the jointure provided for H.; and subject to a further £2000 as a provision for the younger children of the intended marriage. Held, that the £2000 was not charged upon the rentcharge of £400 a-year; and that the proper fund for the payment of the £400 a-year and the £2000, was the residue of the real and personal estate of which M. and W., respectively, should die seized, after payment thereof of all their debts, whether by judgment, specialty, or simple contract.—Ennis v. Smith, Jon. & Ca. 400. (E.E.)

2. By deeds of settlement and appointment £15,000 were provided as portions for daughters, to bear interest from the death of the father. By a subsequent re-settlement, a sum of £6000 was provided for the daughters, in addition to the portions already secured for them; but there was no mention made of interest on this £6000. In the same deed provision was expressly made for payment of interest upon other sums thereby directed to be raised. Held (affirming the judgment of the M. R., 1 Fl. & K. 151, that interest was not payable

3. Testator having, by marriage settlement, a power of appointment and distribution over £5000, by will appointed same payable with interest from his death. He gave a further £3000 to be divided equally among his children, "subject to the same limitations, in all respects, as the said sum of £5000." Both sums were charged upon the same lands. Held, that the £3000 was not to bear interest.—Bredin v. B., 1 Dr. & War. 494. (C.)

4. By marriage settlement, a term of 500 years was limited to secure £1000 for younger children, to be paid in such shares and at such times as the settlor should appoint; in default of appointment, share and share alike; to be paid to the sons at twenty-one, and to the daughters at that age, or day of marriage. The trustees were empowered, after the decease of the settlor, to raise the interest of the portions at £6 per cent., and apply it for the maintenance of the children. At the death of the settlor some of the children had attained their age, and others were infants. Held, that as the portions were payable to such of the children as were of age, the whole sum should be raised.

That the portions of the minors should be invested, and transferred to their separate credit, with liberty to them to apply on their coming of age or marrying.—Leech v. L., 2 Dr. & War. 568. (C.)

5. By settlement on the marriage of J., lands to which his father, K., was entitled absolutely, were conveyed, upon trust to permit K., and his heirs and assigns, to take the rents until the death of J.; then to secure a jointure of £300 a-year for the intended wife of J., notwithstanding that K. might be living. There was a power to raise £4000 for younger children of the marriage, to be paid to the sons at twenty-one, and to the daughters at twenty-one or marriage, "if such respective times of payment happen after the death of J.; but if before, then within three months after the death of J., and not before, unless with the consent of K., if living, and if dead, of J. K., having died, and having devised the lands to his son A., J. appointed £3960 to a child, who had attained twenty-one. Held, that the appointee could, with J.'s consent, raise the portion in J.'s life.—Kiely v. K., 2 Con. & L. 334; 4 Dr. & War. 38; 5 I. E. R. 435. (C.)

6. A marriage settlement created a term of years upon trust to raise a sum, not exceeding £2000, for portions for younger children of that marriage. In default of appointment by the settlor, that sum was to be divided equally amongst such younger children, and to be payable to sons on attaining age, and to daughters at eighteen or marriage, whichever should first happen: proviso—that, if any younger child died under age and unmarried its share should go to the survivors; if but

"one younger child, son or daughter, the same should have and be entitled to the sum of £1000, and no more; and that, in that event, the sum of £1000, and no more, should be raised." There were two younger children. Both survived their parents, but one died under the age of eleven years. The representative of the survivor filed a bill claiming the whole £2000. Held, that, in the events which had happened, £1000 only was raiseable.—Clarke v. Jessop, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 301. (C.)

1. By marriage settlement the real estate of the husband was limited to him for life; at his death to trustees for a term of years; and subject thereto to the first and other sons of the marriage in tail male; remainder to the husband in fee. The trusts of the term were declared to be for raising portions for younger children of the marriage "in case there should be one or more child or children of the marriage, besides an eldest or only son." There were two daughters only, and no son, issue of the marriage. On the marriage of one of the daughters the father settled upon her, and her husband, and her children, an annuity of greater value than her share of the portions under his own marriage settlement, and charged that annuity upon the estate which had been subject to that settlement. Upon the marriage of the second daughter he made for her a pecuniary provision, which was declared to be in satisfaction of her portion under the settlement; and by will devised the estate which had been settled to his two daughters, in the same manner as it would have come to them if he had died intestate. Held, upon the construction of the settlement, that the portions were not raiseable in the events that had happened, there being no son of the marriage.

When children are entitled to portions, and the estate descends among them, none of them are entitled to claim their portions against the others.—Walcott v. Bloomfield, 6 I. E. R. 227. (C.)

2. Lands were settled to the use of A. and B., his wife, for their lives, and the life of the survivor of them; and, after the death of the survivor, to the use of the trustee, for 300 years, upon trust, if there should be (which happened) no children of A. and B. living at the death of A. other than X. and an eldest son, to raise £5000 as the portion of X., to be paid to her on attaining twenty-one or marriage, with interest in the meantime at the rate of £5 per cent., for her maintenance, &c.; but, if there should be any children of A. and B. living at the decease of A., other than an eldest son and X., to raise £10,000 (including the first-mentioned £5000) as portions for all the children of A. and B. (except as aforesaid) as A. and B., or the survivor, should by deed or will appoint; in default of such appointment, among all such children equally, at twenty-one or marriage; with interest from the decease of the survivor of A. and B. in the meantime; and until their portions should become payable, for their maintenance and education. A. died, leaving B. surviving. Held, that X. was entitled to have her portion raised, by sale of the reversionary term of 300 years, with interest from the time of A's death.—In re Aychoard's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 472. (L.E.C.)

XII. WIFE'S RIGHTS AND POWERS UNDER A SETTLEMENT: HOW THEY MAY BE LOST OR WAIVED.

3. By marriage articles, the husband was entitled to the wife's personal estate; he covenanting to secure her a jointure. Thirty years afterwards it appeared that, by reason of his want of property, the covenant had not been performed, and that it was not likely to be performed. A legacy bequeathed to the wife, and decreed in an administration suit to be paid to her and her husband, was in Court. On a bill filed by her—Held, that the articles were illusory, and that the money in Court should be transferred to her suit, and settled so as to secure a provision for her and her children.—Irvine v. I., 5 I. E. R. 373. (R.)

4. A., an infant, by ante-nuptial articles, covenanted to settle her real estate. After attaining age, and during coverture, she, in pursuance of the covenant, executed a settlement, but did not levy a fine. Held, that she was not bound either by the settlement, or by the articles.—Brown v. M'Clintock, 7 I. E. R. 347. (C.)

5. Marriage articles, containing a bare covenant that, if the husband should die in the wife's lifetime, without leaving issue, she should be entitled to one-half of whatever real or personal estate he should die seized or possessed of, and containing no provision in the event of his dying leaving issue. Held, from the general intent apparent on them, that they barred the widow of dower out of the remaining moiety of the husband's estates.

The effect of election against a will is, to give the property, which was devised to the party electing, to the devisees disappointed by the election. It never goes as if undisposed of by the will.—Hamilton v. Jackson, 8 I. E. R. 195; 2 Jon. & L. 295. (C.)

6. By marriage articles, money was vested, in trust, to permit the wife, during the joint lives of herself and her husband, to receive the interest to her separate use; and, after the death of the husband, in trust for her and her assigns during her life, if she survived him; and, after the death of the wife, as to one moiety, upon specified trusts, and as to the other moiety, in trust, for the sole absolute use of the wife, to be disposed of by her in such manner as she might appoint by any deed during her coverture, or by any will to be duly executed by her, notwithstanding her coverture. Held, that the wife could not dispose of her entire estate in the latter moiety of the fund, in the husband's lifetime; and therefore no valid release could be given for it.—Nixon v. N., 8 I. E. R. 264; 2 Jon. & L. 416. (C.)

1. A marriage settlement recited an agreement by the father of the intended wife, to grant the husband, as a marriage portion, annuities to be issuing out of distinct lands held on terminable leases. Testatum: that, in consideration of the marriage, and to grant a marriage portion to the husband, and to secure a jointure for the wife, if she survived, the settlor conveyed the lands, on trust, to suffer the husband, during the lives of himself and his wife, to receive to his use, out of the lands, nominatum, the several recited annuities; after his death, to suffer the children to receive them, in such shares as husband or wife should appoint; in default of appointment, equally; if the wife survived the husband, and none of their issue were then alive, to permit her to receive those annuities during life, with power to distrain for them: proviso, that, if she survived her husband, and there were children living at his death, the trustees should pay her, for life, out of all the lands, or suffer her to receive, out of the rents thereof, an annuity of £150, in bar of dower, with power to distrain for it. Held, that that annuity was in addition to the annuities granted to the trustees, and mentioned in the recitals, and was not payable out of them.—Blair v. Nugent, 3 Jon. & L. 668. (C.)

XIII. IN BAR OF DOWER, THIRDS, &c.

2. When property was, by an ante-nuptial settlement, settled upon a wife, "as and for her jointure, in full lieu, bar, and satisfaction of any dower or thirds, at common law, out of all or any of the estates, real, personal, or freehold, of which G. (the husband) now is, or at any time hereafter shall become possessed or entitled to"—Held, to bar the wife's right to any part of the personal estate of the husband dying intestate.—Gurly v. G., 2 Dr. & Wal. 463. (C.)—[Affid.: 8 Cl. & F. 743.]

3. Lands, the property of A., held under leases for lives renewable for ever, and for long terms, were, upon the marriage of A. with B., conveyed, upon trust, to receive the rents, &c., and pay them to A., for life, so long as he should continue solvent, and able to support B., and no longer; and from his death, or his becoming insolvent, failing in his trade, or being unable suitably and competently to support B., to pay the rents to B. for her life, and for her own sole and separate use. Held, that this settlement did not bar B. of her right to dower out of fee-simple estates acquired by A. since his marriage.—Fyan v. Henry, 2 Dr. & Wal. 556. (C.)

4. In marriage articles, a covenant by the husband to provide a jointure of £200 sterling per an., to be levied on the lands of D. and B., though the jointure be paid, will not bar the wife's right to her distributive share of the personal estate.—Creaqh v. C., 8 I. E. R. 68. (C.)

5. By marriage settlement, £400, the wife's fortune, was given to the husband. Some terminable interest was conveyed by his father to trustees, to pay the wife, if she survived, a jointure of £10 per an. The husband covenanted that, if these properties should fail or be deficient, all the real and personal estate of which he should die seized, &c., should be vested in the trustees, to raise £400, or buy an annuity of £40 for the wife. Held, sufficient to bar her right to dower.—Killen v. Campbell, 10 I. E. R. 461. (C.)

6. A marriage settlement contained a clause that the provision thereby made and intended for the wife, in the event of her viduity, should be accepted, in full lieu of dower or thirds, to which she might be entitled at common law, or otherwise howsoever. Held, that she was barred of her share of her husband's personal estate under the Statute of Distributions.—In re Burgess's Trusts, 11 I. C. R. 164; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 12. (R.)

SETTLEMENT.

— Of Family Disputes, and Family Arrangements.

7. In 1800, E. married the sister of his deceased wife, and had sons and daughters by her. His nephew, N., entitled in remainder to estates expectant on E.'s death without issue male, threatened to institute a suit to invalidate E.'s second marriage. To avert this suit, a compromise was entered into. Thereby N., for value, covenanted not to disturb the marriage. E. acted on that deed until his death in 1838. In 1840, ptf., E.'s executor and eldest son by the second marriage, filed a bill to have it set aside as against public policy. Held, that the bill should be dismissed, with costs.

When parties cannot be restored to their original rights, it requires a very strong case to induce the Court to interfere.

Family arrangements, to terminate litigation, especially on questions of legitimacy, are much favoured by the Court.—Westby v. W., 4 I. E. R. 585; 2 Dr. & War. 502; 1 Con. & L. 537. (C.)

8. Securities obtained from the ptf. for his wife, as a compromise of doubtful rights, but under the threat and apprehension of arrest, and without adequate consideration or advice, set aside.—Scott v. S., 11 I. E. R. 74. (C.)

9. The Court is not bound to make an order for sale under the I. E. Act, if it would not decree a sale in a plenary suit.

By deed between father and son, for large consideration from the son, his object being to preserve B. in the family, the lands of A. and B. were conveyed to a trustee in trust to sell A., in the first instance, to pay incumbrances and debts of the father; and as to

B., subject to so much of the debts and incumbrances as should remain unpaid by the sale of A., in trust to raise a sum to pay them, and subject thereto to the father for life, remainder to the son in fee. The Court refused to make an order for the sale of B. on the father's petition, a part of A. remaining unsold.—Ex parte Kennedy, 11 I. E. R. 171. (R.)

SHERIFF.

[As to his duty in summoning a jury for trial of an issue in the Court of Ch., see 21 & 22 Vic., c. 27, s. 3; Sheriffs Act, 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55.]

1. A sheriff, refusing to try to execute an attachment issued to compel an appearance in an equity suit, will be attached.—Morgan v. Copeland, 1 Jones, 248. (E.E.)

2. A deed of deputation, whereby a high sheriff appoints a sub-sheriff, and which provides that the first £2400 received by the sub-sheriff for fees in the office shall be paid to the high sheriff; the surplus, if any, to the amount of £800 to the sub-sheriff as a salary; and the further surplus, if any, to the high sheriff, is not illegal, or in violation of the 12 G. 1, c. 4.—Drummond v. Ponder, 1 I. E. R. 223. (C.)

3. A sheriff is entitled to full indemnity for all costs incurred by him in relation to a seizure under a fi. fa. issued out of this Court, including the costs of a motion to enlarge the return.—Bowyer v. Blair, Fl. & K. 586. (R.)

4. The recognizance of a tenant under the Court, and of his sureties, is not a debt due to the Crown. Upon the execution of a levari grounded on such recognizance, the sheriff is only entitled, under the equity of the 6 Anne, c. 7, to such fees as by that Act he should have upon the execution of a ca. sa., or fi. fa., at suit of a subject—i. e., to 1s. on the first £100, and 6d. on the residue of the sum levied by virtue of the writ, the 21 & 22 G. 3, c. 20, not applying to such an execution.

The levari having been marked for £944, the sheriff, on the 21st Dec. 1839, levied £319.

3s. on account; and on the 11th of June 1840 received the balance, £624. 17s., but did not pay over the amount until the 1st of May 1841. He had received from the debt. in execution £73. 10s. for his fees upon the execution; a further £50 for forbearance; and afterwards deducted from the sum levied £49. 14s., for fees upon the execution. The Court declared him entitled to £26. 2s., and no more, for fees, and ordered him, within ten days, to refund the £73. 10s. and the £50, and also the difference between £49. 14s. and £26. 2s., with interest at £6 per cent. from the time of the payments; and also to pay interest on the sum levied for the time he held it in his hands, and all the costs of the motion as between solicitor and client.

And he must further pay, as between solicitor and client, Mr. Creed's costs of this motion, and of all proceedings connected therewith. A sheriff or other officer of the Court may always be certain of its protection, so long as he acts in the proper discharge of his office; but when I find such officer abusing his authority for the purpose of oppression or fraud, I shall ever feel it my duty to visit him with the severest punishment of the Court.—Creed v. C., 4 I. E. R. 299; Fl. & K. 396. (R.)

5. A sheriff is not entitled to poundage under the 12 G. 1, c. 4, for executing a writ of levari against a receiver and his sureties bound by recognizance in the Court of Ch.

The sheriff is not entitled to fees under 6 Anne, c. 7, as between party and party, when the execution has no sum certified under the 1st sec. of that Act.—Reg. v. Phipps, 2 I. Jur. 73. (C.)

6. The sheriff ought not to be made a party to a cause petition for an injunction to restrain a sale by him of chattels which, after seizure, have been found to be the property of the execution debtor.—Jackson v. Rossiter, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 411. (R.)

7. The debt. in an execution being the registered proprietor of shares in a ship, a fi. fa. was delivered to the sheriff. The creditor's solicitor, by direction of the sheriff, procured the certificate of registry from the ship, and delivered it to the sheriff, who retained it, and was registered at the Custom-house, under the Merchant Shipping Act, as owner of the shares. They were sold by him, and transferred to the purchaser by bill of sale, which was registered. Held, that the seizure was effectual, although the sheriff had not gone on board the ship; and that the property in the shares was regularly transferred by the bill of sale.—Harley v. H., 11 I. C. R. 451. (R.)

8. When property is sold under a fi. fa., with notice to the execution creditor, of an act of bankruptcy committed by the debtor, the assignees are entitled to damages, besides the produce of the sale. The execution creditor must pay the damages, together with the costs, of which the sheriff must bear a portion.—Re Nolan, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 71. (B.)

1. The sheriff is not entitled to a fee of £3. 3s. for summoning a special jury for a trial in the Court of Pr.; and, having been paid that fee, under protest, by the ptf.'s attorney, was ordered to refund £2. 2s., with costs.—Richardson v. R., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 247. (P.)

2. Money in the sheriff's hands, levied under an attachment for costs awarded by a decree, remains in custodia legis, and is not, without further order, the property of the party who has issued the attachment.

An attachment for costs was issued by A. and B. (A.'s solicitor) against C., who paid the amount to the sheriff, and lodged with him a sequestration for a larger amount against A. Held, that the sheriff was not justified in paying the amount received on the attachment against C. to the sequestrators, without the order of the Court.

Costs are decreed to be paid by C. to A. or B., his solicitor. An attachment is delivered to the sheriff. C. who has a demand against A. issues a sequestration for it, pays the costs to the sheriff, and lodges the sequestration with him. Semle—If the money be paid into Court, B.'s lien for costs will prevail over C.'s sequestration.—Williams v. Reeves, 12 I. C. R. 173. (R.)

3. A party, having sued out a writ of fi. fa., declined to indemnify the sheriff against claims made to goods seized by him. The Court, therefore, extended the time for making a return to the writ, with liberty to the sheriff to apply to be discharged from making a return, if, before the extended period expired, the party did not give him an indemnity, or take proceedings to restrain actions by the claimants against the sheriff.—Marshall v. Letterkenny Ry. Co., 17 I. C. R. 152. (R.)

The creditor's solicitor, by the sheriff's direction, procured the certificate of registry from the ship, and delivered it to the sheriff, who retained it, and was registered at the Custom-house, under the Merchant Shipping Act, as owner of the shares. They were sold by him, and transferred to the purchaser by bill of sale, which was registered. Held, that the seizure was effectual, although the sheriff had not gone on board the ship; and that the property in the shares was regularly transferred by the bill of sale.—Harley v. H., 11 I. C. R. 451. (R.)

IV. MORTGAGE, HYPOTHECATION, LIEN, &c., ON SHIP'S FREIGHT, OR CARGO.

5. The mortgage of a ship, under the Merchant Shipping Act 1854, transferred the legal right to the freight. A mortgage of a ship was effected, with a power of sale, which was not to be exercised until the 11th of June 1858. The vessel was chartered on the 25th of March 1858, by the mortgagor, who on the 1st of May made an equitable assignment of the freight. The ship was sold under the power of sale. Held, that the purchaser was entitled to the freight.—Dobbyn v. Comerford 10 I. C. R. 327. (R.)

[See The Solicitors Act (12 & 13 Vic., c. 53); 29 & 30 Vic., c. 84.]

1. An attorney filed a bill in the name of the assignee of an insolvent, and obtained a decree to account. The nominal ptf. then applied to have the bill taken off the file, because the attorney had used his name without his knowledge or consent. At the bar, he only asked to be indemnified against costs, the suit being for the estate's benefit. The application was refused, with costs.—Bell v. Dawson, H. & J. 801. (E.E.)

2. An attorney, if not acting as such for his client on a particular occasion, may throw off that character, and exercise his independent rights.—Austin v. Chambers, 6 Cl. & F. 1.—[See also, 3 Dr. & War. 178; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 85. (C.)]

3. No person can be admitted an attorney who has not been bound. A. was admitted an attorney of this Court, having been bound for five years, but only served a few days; it appearing that he was fully qualified, and that inconvenience would otherwise result to the clients of his brother, who had been an attorney, and had recently died.—In re Symes, 7 I. E. R. 389. (E.E.)

4. The guardian in a minor matter may change his solicitor at his own discretion.—In re Balls, 10 I. E. R. 187. (C.)

5. A., having entered the Queen's Inns as a law student, and there kept five Terms, and afterwards, wishing to become an attorney, entered the office of a solicitor and served two Terms in his office prior to the execution of his indentures. Having served eighteen Terms afterwards, he applied, with the consent of the solicitor, to get credit for the five Terms kept by him as a law student, or for the two served in the office before the execution of his indentures, so as to make up the period of twenty Terms; and to be admitted an attorney of this Court. The application was refused.—In re Tierney, 10 I. E. R. 178. (E.E.)

6. Deft. in a cause, who is a solicitor, but has not taken out his license, is not entitled to sign his answer as solicitor.—Wildridge v. Whithorne, 2 I. Jur. 185. (C.)

7. A deft. in a cause, who is a solicitor, but has not taken out his license, is not entitled to sign an answer as solicitor.—Wildridge v. Whithorne, 2 I. Jur. 185. (R.)

II. PARTNERSHIP WITH UNQUALIFIED PERSONS.

III. STRIKING OFF THE ROLL.

8. A., agreeing to be bound to a solicitor paid to him the amount of the stamp-duty, Queen's Inns fees, &c., and shortly afterwards paid his apprentice fee, and made the usual affidavit before one of the Masters, under the impression that everything necessary to constitute him an apprentice had been performed. He served five years. The solicitor did not pay the stamp-duty or prepare any indenture of apprenticeship until after the five years had elapsed. Held, that A. had made a case to be admitted an attorney of this Court.

In granting the application the Court did not allow the conduct of its officer to pass unnoticed, but required him to show cause why he should not be struck off the roll.—In re Power, 10 I. E. R. 175. (E.E.)

IV. SUMMARY JURISDICTION OVER: ADMISSION OF.

9. An attorney who claims a lien for his costs on the title deeds of a freehold estate decreed to be sold, which lien was acquired before the institution of the suit, will be ordered to deposit them in Court, without prejudice to his lien, or to his making it available against the purchase-money of the lands; and, having established his claim, he is entitled to have it paid out of the purchase-money.

Quare—Is he so entitled to be paid in priority to the demand of a judgment creditor, whose judgment was acknowledged before the attorney acquired the lien?—Little v. L., 2 Jones, 270. (E.E.)

1. The solicitor, C., of a deceased client, D., having acted as such for D.'s executrix and devisee, was restrained at their instance from acting as solicitor for a creditor, J., in whose name he had filed a bill to raise the amount of a judgment debt out of D.'s estate, though J. had been C.'s client before C. became concerned for D., and though C. contended that he had been discharged, and insisted that it was not in his power to communicate anything which could injure the estate; all the material facts and documents having been, as C. alleged, put in issue by a bill previously filed by another creditor of D. Upon inspecting the two bills, it appeared, however, that a document, which C. had recommended to be kept secret, was stated more fully in the bill filed by C., than in the other bill; and that that further statement must have been made from inspecting the document. Held, that the Court would not permit a solicitor to disclose any communications made to him as such, nor would it speculate about their materiality: that the obligation to keep such communications secret does not cease on the client's death.

Semble—There is not any substantial distinction between the cases of a discharged solicitor and of one who refuses to act.

The application to restrain a solicitor may be made by motion in the cause in respect whereof the injunction is sought, and need not be made by petition.—Biggs v. Head, S. & Sc. 335. (R.)

2. R. had acted as family or assistant solicitor for defts. in a cause, from 1793 to 1817, when he was discharged by the deft. F., who immediately after filed a bill to impeach securities given by him to R. for services as a solicitor. This suit was compromised, and, in 1819, R. became solicitor for G., an adverse deft. in the cause, and acted as such for nearly 18 months against F., to the knowledge of F.'s law and land agent. On F.'s application, G. was restrained from R., who was restrained from being concerned for G., or giving him any advice or assistance in that or any other cause against F., the matter of which came to R.'s knowledge as solicitor for F., or upon which he had been consulted by or communicated with by F. in his capacity as solicitor.

This injunction was granted, although G. insisted on F.'s long acquiescence, and that he would suffer serious injury if it were granted after such delay; and although R. stated in his affidavit, that he had not obtained any information, the disclosure of which would prejudice F., and that he had not betrayed and did not intend to betray any confidence, or violate any trust reposed in him.—Hobhouse v. Hamilton, S. & Sc. 359, n. (R.)

3. B. filed a bill for the guardian of a female infant, and acted as the infant's solicitor until the cause abated by her marriage, when her husband peremptorily refused to revive it. B. then ceased to act as solicitor in the cause, though his name remained as such on record. He prepared the infant's marriage settlement; and, after the marriage, acted as the husband's solicitor, with a view to effect a loan to pay off all charges on the wife's estate. B. finally offered to take an assignment to himself of those charges, upon terms. The husband declined to accept the loan on the terms proposed. B. filed a bill in the name of C., a mortgagee, to foreclose a mortgage on the wife's estate. The statements therein greatly resembled those in the first bill, except that a charge was made directly contrary to counsel's opinion. C. had been a party to the first cause, in which his mortgage, disputed at first, was finally fully admitted. B. had been C.'s solicitor long before he became concerned for the husband and wife. At their instance, B. was restrained from acting as C.'s solicitor in the second cause, and C. was restrained from employing him.—Brady v. Lawless, S. & Sc. 365, n. (R.)

4. J. filed a bill in the name of W. and wife, and their children, charging gross breaches of trust by the trustees, C. and T., but chiefly by C. J. had been employed by W.'s wife, who told him that W. had gone to reside abroad, but the bill described W. as then of the city of Dublin. The wife having interfered with the proceedings in a manner which J. deemed improper, he intimated his indifference to being further employed as her solicitor; and he was accordingly changed. His costs were paid. Before any further step was taken, it was proposed to J. to become again solicitor for ptfs. He declined, and soon became solicitor for T., in whose name he served a notice calling upon ptfs. to give security for costs, because they resided in the United States. Ptfs. moved to restrain T. from employing J., and to restrain J. from acting for T. To oppose the motion, J. filed an affidavit stating (amongst other things), that he considered T.'s interests very like ptf.'s; and that there had not been any confidential communication made to him, nor was there any such in the case. He further relied upon being a discharged solicitor. Held, that the injunction should be granted.—Waller v. Fowler, S. & Sc. 369, n. (R.)

5. As a general rule, from which there will be no deviation unless under peculiar circumstances, the Court, in computing the period of apprenticeship to an attorney, will not allow credit for time elapsed before the payment of the stamp-duty upon the indentures.—Ex parte Sterne, 2 I. E. R. 378. (E.E.)

6. The Court will not, on motion, refuse to allow the usual fees payable on the swearing in of the attorneys to the Secondary, the Tipstaff, and the Deputy Crier. Those fees are now legally established.—In re Price, Long. & T. 584. (E.E.)

7. The Court will not exercise its discretion in relaxing the rule prescribed by the statute concerning the period of an attorney's apprenticeship, when the apprentice had been incapacitated by illness from serving five of the twenty Terms, though it be sworn that he had attended his master's office for three years before he was bound, and his master had consented to his being now sworn.

Semble—The Court will not take notice, in such cases, of the applicant's family affairs, except where a father has been an attorney, and there is danger of the business of the office being lost to the family.—In re Dease, Long. & T. 654. (E.E.)

1. Prima facie the Crier and the Tipstaff are entitled between them to the fee of one guinea upon the admission of attorneys, but the Court-keeper is not entitled to the fee of ten shillings and six pence. The Secondary is entitled to a fee of one guinea for swearing attorneys into office.—In re Admission of Attorneys, 4 I. E. R. 685. (R.E.)

2. The Court will not vacate the enrolment of an indenture of apprenticeship to an attorney, on the ground that the Benchers were deceived; and ought not to have admitted the party to become an apprentice.—In re M^cColgan, 5 I. E. R. 481. (E.E.)

3. The Court has jurisdiction, in a proper case, to vacate the enrolment of the indentures of apprenticeship of an attorney.

Neither the humbleness of the origin of the applicant, nor his having filled the office of a process-server of civil-bill process, nor his having been dismissed from that office for having violated a rule of the Assistant Barrister's Court, under the belief that it did not apply to him, nor his having on a particular occasion acted as bailiff in executing a fi. fa., will disqualify him from becoming apprentice to an attorney; his character and conduct being in other respects unimpeached.—In re M^cColgan, 6 I. E. R. 207. (R.E.)

4. An apprentice to an attorney had not attended any of the Courts in Dublin during any Term in the fifth year of his apprenticeship; but after the fifth year, his master being then dead, attended the Courts for two Terms without having any master. His application for admission was refused.

Semble—Indentures cannot be assigned after five years from their date.

Semble—The sickness and accidents provided for in the 13 & 14 G. 3, c. 23, refer to the apprentice, and not to the master.

The Terms for attendance must be in the three years next preceding the application for admission.—Ex parte Roberts, 8 I. E. R. 507. (E.E.)

5. A., agreeing to be bound to a solicitor, paid him the amount of the stamp-duty, Queen's Inns fees, &c., and shortly afterwards paid his apprentice fee, and made the usual affidavit before one of the Masters, under the impression that every thing necessary to constitute him an apprentice had been performed. He served five years. The Solicitor did not pay the stamp-duty or prepare any indenture of apprenticeship until after the five years had elapsed. Held, that A. had made a case to be admitted an attorney of this Court.

In granting the application the Court did not allow the conduct of its officer to pass unnoticed, but required him to show cause why he should not be struck off the roll.—In re Power, 10 I. E. R. 175. (E.E.)

6. This Court has not jurisdiction to order the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor to deliver up title deeds on which they claim a lien.—Allen v. Jervoise, 11 I. E. R. 583. (R.)

7. Any solicitor who nominates a solicitor's clerk or apprentice to the office of receiver will be suspended from practising in this Court.—Geale v. Nugent, 1 I. Jur. 319. (R.)

8. The Court has not discretion to dispense with the provisions respecting the period of a solicitor's apprenticeship, except, perhaps, in cases of fatality. Under the 1 & 2 G. 4, c. 48, s. 4, the Court refused to admit a graduate on a three years' apprenticeship, commenced more than four years after his degree had been obtained.—In the Matter of A. B., 12 I. E. R. 237. (C.)

9. It is a matter of course to restore to the roll a solicitor who had been struck off at his own request, if no opposition be made by the Law Society, after notice served on them.—In re M^cCormick, 3 I. C. R. 491. (C.)

10. F. acted as managing clerk in town, of C., a country solicitor, and afterwards became C.'s apprentice. C. died before the completion of F.'s apprenticeship. The affidavits in the case stated that F. was fully competent to discharge the duties of a solicitor, and that the interests of the clients of C. would suffer much if deprived of F.'s aid. Held, that a sufficient ground for abridging his apprenticeship had not been shown, as the cases had not gone further than shortening the term for a member of a deceased attorney's family.—In re Franklin, 5 I. C. R. 261. (C.)

11. The apprentice of a deceased attorney ought not in general to be admitted an attorney, without serving the full statutory period, even though skillful and competent, and though many of the deceased master's clients may be desirous of obtaining his services as an attorney. Such indulgence has only been granted to the members of the family of the deceased attorney.—Ex parte Carey, 6 I. C. R. 152; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (C.)

12. B., a graduate of Trinity College, was bound an apprentice to a solicitor. Before the term of apprenticeship expired, B.'s father died, leaving a widow and nine children, and a large arrear of business in his office. It was proved that B. was well acquainted with the business of a solicitor. An application that B. might be admitted a solicitor was granted; the Law Society not opposing the application, and the petitioner undertaking to carry on the business for the benefit of the family.—Ex parte Booth, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 281. (C.)

13. The Court has not jurisdiction to make any order respecting the admission, as a solicitor, of a person who has not been bound.—Ex parte Hilliard, 71 C. R. 63. (C.)

V. RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND PRIVILEGES OF SOLICITOR, PERSONALLY, AND ON BEHALF OF CLIENTS. RESPECTING HIS BILLS OF COSTS. See PRACTICE, COSTS. PRACTICE, PRIVILEGE FROM ARREST.

1. A solicitor is privileged from arrest, cundo, morando, et redeundo from Court, whilst in attendance on a motion or cause. The arresting party, being aware that the privilege exists, will be ordered to pay the costs of the solicitor's application to be discharged, besides any other costs which his detention has occasioned.—Re O'Neill, S. & Sc. 78. (R.)

2. A solicitor's privilege from arrest is not confined to those cases only in which his personal presence is indispensable.—In re Keane, S. & Sc. 81. (R.)

3. An attorney is not privileged from arrest in execution, when he comes to Court to perform an act for his client, which a clerk could do as well.—Salmon v. Ledwich; Salmon v. Kiernan, S. & Sc. 83. (E.E.)

4. An attorney, if not acting as such for his client on a particular occasion, may throw off that character, and exercise his independent rights.—Austin v. Chambers, 6 Cl. & F. 1.—[See also, 3 Dr. & War. 178; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 85. (C.)]

5. If a solicitor be bona fide attending a motion or other proceeding in Court for his client, he is privileged from arrest. But when he was merely looking in Court for his counsel to consult him respecting the course to be pursued in the cause—Held, that he was not privileged.—Longfield v. Carpenter, 1 I. E. R. 349. (C.)

6. R. devised his real estate, subject to his debts and legacies, to his only son, J., in tail; and died in 1773. In 1802, J. deposited the title deeds with his solicitor; and, before 1813, incurred costs to a large sum, in suffering a recovery, and in the causes of A., B., and C. (R.'s younger children), instituted to raise charges to which they were entitled under the will, &c. In 1813, M., a specialty creditor of R., on whose debt J. had paid interest until 1811, filed his bill against J., and against A., B., and C., &c., praying execution of the trust to pay debts, and that his demand might be deemed charged on R.'s real estate. J. suffered the bill to be taken pro confesso against him, and died insolvent before the final decree. Some time previously, J.'s solicitor became concerned in this cause for B.'s representatives, and now refused to bring in the deeds for a sale under the decree, until J.'s costs incurred between 1802 and 1813 should have been paid. A., B., and C. were reported in priority to M., for payment of whose demand the residue of the fund would be insufficient. Held, that these costs, if rendered necessary by the will, should have been claimed at the hearing, and been provided for by the decree; and that, therefore, the claim could not now be entertained; that, since it did not appear that any of these costs had been incurred before the title deeds came into the solicitor's possession, and since he had full notice of the will when they were incurred, he was bound by the trust, and had not any lien on the deeds as against M., R.'s specialty creditor, who had proceeded with due diligence and bona fide.—Morgan v. Scott, 2 I. E. R. 128. (R.)

7. A solicitor, who withdraws from conducting a suit because his client will not furnish the funds necessary to carry it on, has not such a lien for costs already incurred as entitles him to withhold from his client, and that client's new solicitor, such of the client's papers as are necessary to prosecute the cause effectually.—Rutledge v. R., 2 I. E. R. 290. (R.)

8. It is to be presumed that legal advisers, in discharge of their duty to their clients, investigate suspicious transactions; and, before approving them, satisfy themselves that it is for the client's benefit to confirm them. De Montmorency v. Devereux, 2 Dr. & Wal. 410; 7 Cl. & F. 188; West, 64; 4 Jur. 403.—[Affg. 1 Dr. & Wal. 119. (C.)]

9. Several children appeared, and proceeded jointly by one solicitor, for a sum to which they were entitled in equal shares; and incurred costs to a considerable amount. Two of them having died, and there being a continuing litigation respecting the persons entitled to their shares, the solicitor in the meantime allowed the surviving children to draw out their shares of the fund without any deduction for the costs for which they were jointly and severally liable. He now applied for payment out of the sum (namely, the shares of the two deceased children) in Court, of all the costs. Held, that, in the first instance, these two shares were liable for that portion only of the costs, which the dead children should have paid if the others had contributed equally; and that it was the solicitor's duty to have taken care that the costs were borne equally by the several younger children.—Crone v. O'Dell, 3 I. E. R. 12. (R.)

10. The Court will not allow a bill to be filed without a solicitor's name attached thereto.—O'Shea v. —, Fl. & K. 666. (R.)

11. As a general rule it is improper to introduce into counsel's briefs both the original and amended bills.—Higgins v. Bateman, 2 Dr. & War. 70. (C.)

12. It is the right as well of a prochein ami of an infant ptf., as of any other suitor, to change his solicitor when he pleases, and to enter the usual side-bar rule for that purpose.

The solicitor of a next friend must not have interests adverse to the minors, nor be professionally bound to support adverse interests. Subject to that restriction, a next friend may employ what solicitor he pleases.—Langford v. Little, 5 I. E. R. 343. (R.)

1. The Court would not enforce the terms of a contract, between two solicitors whereby the one, who was solicitor for minors in a matter and several causes, agreed, without notice to the Court or the friends of the minors, to hand over to the other, and the other agreed to undertake, the business on behalf of the minors, to be conducted by the latter in the name of the former, on the terms of getting half the profits; although the latter had, in pursuance of the contract, conducted the business for a year, and made large expenditures; such contract being at variance with the interests of minors and the policy of the Court. Both parties to such a contract being in pari delicto, the Court would not act for either of them.—Ex parte Leech, 5 I. E. R. 371. (R.)

2. O., a party and a solicitor in the cause, having been in attendance at the Master's office on a summons, left the office, and was arrested on a ca. sa. near Carlisle-bridge, which was out of the direction of, and beyond his residence in Jervis-street. Held, that the deviation had deprived him of his privilege from arrest.

In such cases, the question always is:—Whether the party was, at the time of the arrest, bona fide engaged in the business which he was required to execute?—Heron v. Stokes, 6 I. E. R. 125.

3. A consent to dismiss the bill without costs was signed by one of the ptf. on behalf of himself and another ptf. of imbecile understanding, and also by the third ptf.; but not by or with the privity of their solicitor. It was signed by the defts. and their solicitors. On a motion to make the consent a rule of Court—Held, that the signature of the solicitor was not essential to the validity of the consent, as the clients might compromise their claims without his assistance or privity; not however prejudicing any rights which the solicitor might have.

That the signature on behalf of the imbecile ptf. was a nullity, as he was not competent to authorise the act; and that the consent could not be made a rule of Court.

If a bill cannot be dismissed against all the ptf., it cannot be dismissed against any of them.

Semble—If one of the ptf. desire it, and the defts. assent, the Court will allow the bill to be amended by striking out the ptf.'s name; and then the other ptf. can make him a deft.—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

4. The solicitor for any person exercising a control over the minors' estate will not be appointed guardian of their persons.—In re Johnstons Minors, 2 Jon. & L. 222. (C.)

5. The Court has not jurisdiction in directing the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, to order any account of dealings between the parties, in which the solicitor did not act as such, even though he has given credit for such items in the bill of costs.—Sneyd v. Conroy, 8 I. E. R. 469. (R.)

6. Ptf.'s solicitor is entitled to give out briefs and fees to counsel upon the day on which he sets down the cause to be heard pro confesso.—Ivie v. Gahan, 9 I. E. R. 223.

7. A conditional order to appoint a receiver under the Sheriffs Act having been obtained in the Court of Exchequer, the solicitor for another judgment creditor, who had knowledge of the Exchequer order, presented to the Lord Chancellor a petition for a receiver, suppressing the fact of the Exchequer order. The Court dismissed the petition, and directed that the solicitor should not have the costs of the petition against his client.—Daly v. D., 9 I. E. R. 461. (R.)

8. An order to appoint a receiver should state that the Court has been informed by the petitioner's solicitor that no order for a receiver, over any part of the lands of the respondent, has been made either in this Court or the Court of Exchequer, unless a special case is made to appoint a second receiver.—Clarke petitioner, M'Mahon respondent, 9 I. E. R. 462. (R.)

9. The solicitor of a mortgagee obtained the carriage of the sale of the estate of a lunatic very soon after the investigation of the title for the purposes of the mortgage. Held, that he was not entitled to the costs of preparing the abstract, or for any matter performed before the investigation of the title.—In re Bell, 1 I. Jur. 349. (C.)

10. A solicitor is eligible to the office of Commissioner Extraordinary, but he will not be preferred if another competent person be found.—Anon., 2 I. Jur. 185. (C.)

11. A deft., by his answer, objected to an interrogatory, because by answering it he might subject himself to pains, &c.; and by a plea declined to answer a part of the same interrogatory, because the subject of it came to his knowledge as solicitor to the other deft. Held, that the answer, being equivalent to a demurrer, the case did not fall within the 66th G. Rule, and that the answer overruled the plea.

A bill to set aside leases for fraud made the solicitor who had prepared them a deft., charging him with being a party to the fraud, praying costs against him, and interrogating him as to his being privy to the fraud, and as to transactions regarding the preparation of the leases. The solicitor pleaded that he knew nothing as to the matters save as the attorney of the other deft., and therefore was privileged from giving discovery. The plea did not deny the fraud or the facts stated in the bill as evidence of it. Held, that the ptf., being entitled to relief, was entitled to the discovery as, incidental to the relief.

The privilege of a solicitor is confined to confidential communications with his client, and does not extend to his own acts, though done in the character of solicitor.

A solicitor may be made a party to a bill to set aside a deed for fraud if he be a party to the fraud, and costs are prayed against him.—Kelly v. Jackson, 13 I. E. R. 129. (R.)

1. A solicitor was arrested on the direct way from the Taxing Master's office, but it appeared that before his arrest he had deviated considerably from the direct way. Held, that he was not entitled to be discharged.—Walsh v. Wilson, 1 I. C. R. 610; 3 I. Jur. 275. (R.)

2. As a general rule, each party to a contract for the purchase of lands should employ a separate solicitor; the same solicitor should not act for both.—Meara v. Rogers, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 108. (R.)

3. The solicitor in a cause gave the papers to A. to draw costs, and died. A solicitor, to whom the conduct of the cause was given obtained the papers from A., without paying the costs due to the solicitor, or making any agreement with his personal representative. Held, that a cause petition was the proper mode to proceed against the new solicitor to compel him to produce the deeds and papers, for the purpose of allowing the costs of the first solicitor to be taxed; and that he was bound to produce them.—Worrall v. White, 3 I. Jur. 140. (C.)

4. The M. R. may, under special circumstances, appoint a solicitor receiver: 41st G. O., 1850.—Cromie v. Peyton, 5 I. Jur. 142. (R.)

5. The solicitor of an opposing creditor informed the insolvent's solicitor, on the morning of the hearing, of his intention to persist in his opposition. The case was called on in the momentary absence of the creditor's solicitor; and, no one being present to oppose, a discharge was pronounced by the Judge. The creditor's solicitor, coming in immediately after, asked for a re-hearing. Held, that a solicitor does not, by communicating with the solicitor on the other side, lay him under any obligation, or constitute him his agent, to convey such a communication to the Court; and that the Court cannot, in such a case, annul or review the adjudication under the 233rd sec. of the B. and I. Act, on the ground that it was improperly or fraudulently obtained.

The discharge pronounced by the Judge, under the 212th sec., is, in itself, a final and conclusive adjudication. It is not necessary to its completeness that the written order, and the warrant to the gaoler (under sec. 219) should be made out by the officer of the Court.

When such an adjudication has been pronounced by the lips of the Judge, he has no power to set it aside under the 236th sec., on the ground that the discharge was a mistake.—In re Logan, 9 I. C. R. 569; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (B.)

6. A solicitor, on the day next but one before the testator's death, prepared a draft will under which he, as residuary legatee, took a large pecuniary benefit. On that day of its preparation, the testator executed the will in the presence of two witnesses brought by the solicitor to witness the testator's signature. The will's validity having been questioned in a contested suit—Held, that the solicitor's evidence was admissible on his own behalf, but should be received with great jealousy and caution.—Keogh v. Barrington, Dr. Rep. temp. Nap. 1. (C.A.)

7. In suits to administer real and personal estate, when there are no specific incumbrances affecting the real estate, the petitioner is entitled to his costs out of the fund, in priority to all the creditors.

Semble—When two matters are consolidated, duplicate costs for carrying on the proceedings in them should not be allowed.

Observations on the practice of solicitors acting for several parties who have conflicting interests.—Farrell v. Murphy, 10 I. C. R. 42. (R.)

8. It was sought to deprive an attorney of his costs in insolvency, on the ground that he had not paid his license when the business was done. Held, that the fact of his license not having been during that period registered in the Insolvent Court, is not evidence that he was not duly qualified as an attorney of the Superior Courts within the meaning of the Act; and that permission to prove that fact by supplemental affidavit or viva voce testimony would not be granted.—Re Reynolds, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 356. (B.)

9. The solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings cannot act as solicitor for the purchaser in a claim for compensation against the funds; his duty in the one capacity being inconsistent with his duty in the other: his duty in the former character being to protect the estate from claims for compensation, and all similar demands.—In re O'Callaghan's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 86. (L.E.C.)

10. The rule of the Prerogative Court, that Proctors should not in any proceeding refer to private conversations, &c., had between them, remains in force, and applies to solicitors.—Goslin v. G., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 306. (P.)

11. When an administrator has recovered a chattel interest in lands, by a decree declaring his costs to be duly charged on the estate, his solicitor cannot file a petition in his own name to realise his own portion of those costs.—In re M'Allister's Estate, 16 I. C. R. 134. (L.E.C.)

12. The solicitor for the ptfs. in a mortgage suit—being, as the mortgagee's executor, a co-ptf.—was only allowed costs out of pocket.—Macartney v. Dickey, 16 I. C. R. 409. (R.)

13. A. devised real estate in trust for her husband for his life; and directed the trustees to sell and convey the property absolutely to him for a named sum, applicable to the purposes of the will, provided that he declared, within one year after her death, that he accepted the proposal.

Semble—The right of pre-emption to the husband was a gift. The trustees, therefore, were not bound to make out title to him, nor were they entitled to receive, out of A.'s assets, and to the prejudice of the persons entitled to the residue, the costs of making out title.

Solicitors having been employed by the trustees to make out the title, the costs were allowed against the trustees, personally, on taxation, under the Solicitors Act (12 & 13 Vic., c. 53), ss. 3, 4.—In re Davison & Torrens, 17 I. C. R. 7. (R.)

1. When a solicitor resides in the country, and carries on his Dublin business by an agent, special charges for attendances in Dublin may be allowed on taxation between solicitor and client, if the client knows that a special sum larger than that ordinarily chargeable is charged, and if the case was such as required the solicitor's personal attendance in Dublin.

Semble—Such a special charge should not be allowed for attending at the hearing, and the consultation before it.

On taxation between solicitor and client, there is not any inflexible rule against allowing a consultation or refresher fee of more than two guineas, if the larger fee was paid with the client's knowledge and authority.—Belfast Harbour Commissioners v. Lawther, 17 I. C. R. 147. (R.)

2. Order to amend (by striking out a mistakenly inserted item) a bill of costs which had been referred, but not lodged, for taxation.—In re Abbott & Moore, 17 I. C. R. 200. (R.)

VI. SOLICITOR'S LIABILITIES: WHEN PERSONALLY LIABLE FOR COSTS.

3. An attorney, who makes a person even a formal party, without his express consent, is himself liable for the costs incurred by the ptf.—Peed v. Cussen, Hayes, 66. (E.E.)

4. Semble—Deft.'s attorney, having given a written undertaking to pay ptf. whatever the deficit might be on a sale of the mortgaged premises under the decree in a foreclosure suit, will be compelled to perform it, notwithstanding his client's death.—Bailey v. Daniell, Hay. & J. 586. (E.E.)

5. After a decree for a sale, the solicitor for one deft., a mortgagee, who had been paid, but had not re-conveyed, having the mortgage deed in his possession, being made a party by a supplemental bill, and having admitted by his answer that he held the deed, having a lien thereon for costs incurred by the mortgagee, his client; on motion against him by ptf.; Held, that he must bring in the deed, without prejudice to his claim against his own client.—Plumptre v. O'Dell, 1 I. E. R. 118. (R.)

6. If the solicitor, upon whom has been served the subpoena to hear judgment, refuses to endorse on the original an admission of the service thereof, he will be ordered to pay the costs rendered necessary by his refusal.—Ross v. Wood, 2 Dr. & Wal. 490. (C.)

7. If, in the bill, ptf.'s attorney willfully describes ptf. as resident within the jurisdiction, when in fact he resides out of it, he will be ordered to pay the costs of the motion to stay proceedings until security for costs be given.—Knox v. O'Brien, 3 I. E. R. 62. (E.E.)

8. A ptf.'s solicitor, by neglecting to examine the tenants' leases lodged in the Master's office, caused a misdescription in the rental; and thereby necessitated a reference to the Master, to enquire and report whether the purchaser was entitled to any, and what compensation? Held, that the solicitor was personally liable to the costs of the reference.—Taylor v. Gorman, Fl. & K. 567; 4 I. E. R. 550. (R.)

9. Ptf.'s solicitor ordered to pay the costs of the day, in consequence of his non-attendance in Court when the cause was called on.—Courtney v. Stock, 2 Dr. & War. 251; 1 Con. & L. 366. (C.)

10. The costs of a suit to set aside a deed for fraud will not be given against a solicitor who was a party to the fraud, and is a party to the suit in respect of other liabilities, unless the bill prays them against him.—Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jon. & L. i. (C.)

11. Injunction against proceedings on a judgment granted, after premitting the opportunity of pleading at law, when the neglect to do so was accounted for by the creditor's solicitor having said that he would proceed no further, if the lands were not subject to the judgment.

Semble—It is good cause against the appointment of a receiver under the Judgment Acts, that the party against whom the judgment was obtained was only a trustee of the lands.—O'Neill v. Browne, 9 I. E. R. 131. (C.)

12. It is the duty of solicitors not to take office copies without being authenticated. When the copy of depositions proved to be very incorrect, but was taken and paid for before it was compared or attested, the solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of the day.—Morgan v. Roe, 12 I. E. R. 21. (C.)

13. If a married woman, having separate property, petition under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 38, as a femme sole, her attorney will be personally responsible for the costs of the proceedings.—In re Knox, 2 I. Jur. 147. (I. E. C.)

1. A petition for sale, presented by a person who has sought the benefit of the Acts for Relief of Insolvent Debtors in England, will be dismissed with costs, to be paid personally by the solicitor presenting such petition, when the facts connected with the insolvency are suppressed in the petition, although the insolvent has not been finally discharged under those Acts.—In re Nesbitt, 2 I. Jur. 252. (I.E.C.)

2. £500 was lodged to the credit of the cause; and £33 thereout had been directed to be paid to a third party. The owner's solicitor irregularly drew out the £500, and handed the whole sum to the owner. The Court directed the owner to pay the £33; and, in default, that the solicitor should make it good.—In re Devereux's Estate, 4 I. Jur. 16. (I.E.C.)

3. A., executrix and trustee of £400, lent it on unauthorised security. D., a solicitor, acted for A., in negotiating the loan. D. was aware of the nature of the fund, and that the loan was a breach of trust. The borrowers were D.'s clients. He omitted to disclose to A. facts within his knowledge, which showed that the loan was in danger of being lost. About one-fourth of the fund was received by D., for his own use, in part, as payment of money previously owed him by the borrowers; and in part as costs and commission in relation to the loan. The entire sum was lost by the insolvency of the borrower. Held, on a cause petition, filed by the c. q. t., that D., by his conduct, had incurred the liability of a trustee; and was bound to make good the fund.—Alleyne v. Darcy, 4 I. C. R. 199. (C.)

4. A solicitor who concurred with his client in obtaining payment to her of a sum, stated in the final schedule of incumbrances to be due to the representative of a deceased person, on an untrue representation to the officer of the Court that she was the party entitled, having, with knowledge of circumstances which should have led to enquiry, neglected to investigate his client's right, was ordered to replace the money, although no fraud or collusion was proved against him.—In re Keogh, 4 I. C. R. 288. (P.C.)

5. W., brother-in-law of L., a solicitor, having occasion to borrow £500, L. wrote to C., who had been his client, requesting a loan on the security of W.'s estate, which he described as of ample value. C. replied, "I can only lend the money on the condition of, first, a letter from you stating that you know Mr. W. to be good and valid security for £500; and, secondly, the bond to be witnessed by some respectable person with whom I am acquainted." L. answered; "I cannot have the least hesitation in undertaking that the security is good, and should not have mentioned it to you, but that I am perfectly satisfied on the subject." C. then sent the money to L., who forwarded it to W., and prepared a mortgage from W. to C., containing a covenant against incumbrances, save an annuity. There was also a collateral judgment to secure the sum lent. On the mortgage being sent to C., he complained to L. of the deficiency of the security taken. L. wrote a further letter, stating the particulars of W.'s property, and alleging it to be worth £830 a-year. Eventually the property turned out to be insufficient to pay charges prior to C.'s mortgage and judgment. Held, that L. was bound to make good to C. the loss sustained by this investment.

A solicitor who makes to his client untrue representations, respecting a property on which the client is about to advance money, may be compelled to make good those representations, even though he may have been himself misled.—Cleland v. Leech, 5 I. C. R. 478; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 193. (C.)

6. When a solicitor puts forward a party to be appointed assignee; misdescribes him in a way calculated to mislead the Court; and thereby procures his appointment, he will be personally liable for the consequences. If a solicitor makes a payment to an assignee, with a view to rid himself of liability, and the assignee is directed to lodge the money, but dies before the order is complied with, it will be transferred to the solicitor, who must bring in the money. If he receives the proceeds of an insolvent estate, and undertakes to administer it, he will be treated as if he had been actually appointed assignee himself, and not merely as solicitor, and will be directed to pay the costs personally of creditors who bring the matter before the Court.—In re Connery, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 23. (B.)

7. A tenant, claiming a lease of lands part of this estate, and not being in possession, the Court refused to recognise the lease, stating that he must first, at law, recover possession. To an action of ejectment then brought, two other tenants then took defence, as to part of the lands. As to the residue, no defence was taken; for it the tenant marked judgment. On his motion, the Court allowed the lease as to that portion; but held, that omitting to defend the action was a breach of duty by the petitioner's solicitor, who would be liable for the loss sustained by the estate, if the creditors applied to that effect.—In re Ronayne's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 318. (L.E.C.)

VII. CONSTITUTION OF THE RELATIONSHIP OF SOLICITOR AND CLIENT: HOW CLIENT IS BOUND BY SOLICITOR'S ACTS: WHEN SERVICE OF PROCESS ON THE SOLICITOR IS GOOD.

8. Practice respecting applications by attorneys to be paid costs out of the funds decreed to their clients.—Anon., 5 I. E. R. 38. (E.E.)

9. Taxation of costs between solicitor and client. Solicitor's fee for perusing and signing approbation of a draft deed submitted for his client's approbation, as an executing party.—Westby v. Greene, 5 I. E. R. 449. (R.)

10. The Court will not, on the application of the client, set aside an order made on a consent signed by his solicitor, on the allegation that he acted without authority; there being no case of fraud or misrepresentation.—Connally v. O'Reilly, 11 I. E. R. 333. (R.)

1. V., solicitor for X., ptf. in a suit to raise a charge on lands, purchased in a trustee's name those lands at a sale under the decree conducted by him in a manner that showed great negligence, or a design to depreciate the property. The proceeds were insufficient to discharge V.'s demand for costs, without paying anything to X. Sixteen years afterwards, on a bill filed by X., and without any proof of the sale having been at under-value, it was declared void.

V., on his son's marriage, settled the estate, having himself, for all parties, prepared the settlement which recited the documents connected with the purchase. Held, that although, when a solicitor, a vendor, acts for the vendee, his knowledge is not always constructive notice; yet that doctrine was inapplicable to this case, and that the son, his wife, and his children were bound, as purchasers with notice.—Atkins v. Delmege, 12 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

2. When there are several co-ptfs., it is irregular for some of them, without the consent of all, to change their solicitor by side-bar order. In such a case a special motion should be made.—Callaghan v. Blake, 2 I. Jur. 54. (R.)

3. When a solicitor appears for several defts., his undertaking in favour of one shall not prejudice another.—Dogherty v. D., 2 I. Jur. 110. (E.E.)

4. Actual notice to a solicitor is actual notice to his principal.—Richards v. Brereton, 5 I. Jur. 336. (C.)

5. A person who was properly an answering party in a cause, and is made a notice party, is not bound by the proceedings. A consent was signed by a solicitor, as solicitor on behalf of the ptf. He happened to be the general solicitor of a person so circumstanced. Held, that she was not bound by the consent, which did not purport to be signed on her behalf.—O'Grady v. Brady, 3 I. C. R. 439; 6 I. Jur. 321. (R.)

6. A client may at any time, during the progress of a suit in the L. E. Court, change his solicitor.—In re Bracken's Estate, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (C.A.)

VIII. SECURITIES TO, AND PURCHASES BY SOLICITOR FROM CLIENT: DEALINGS AND TRANSACTIONS BETWEEN THEM.

7. In a suit against an attorney to set aside a conveyance made as a security for untaxed costs, the Court refused to order the deed to be lodged in Court.—Carr v. Moulds, H. & J. 714. (E.E.)

8. An attorney obtained from his client a conveyance of his real estate (out of which his wife was dowable), in trust to pay himself and the client's other creditors; and also to secure future advances to be made by him to the client. The attorney afterwards became a party to a deed, prepared by himself, whereby his client's wife relinquished her dower, in consideration of a jointure to herself, and a charge on the lands for her younger children. The attorney did not communicate to her the existence of the former deed, or inform her of the effect of the borrowing clause therein. Held, that further advances made by him were not entitled, by virtue of the trust deed, to priority over the charge for the younger children; but that equity was administered for their benefit only.—Brown v. Lynch, 2 Jon. 706. (E.E.)

9. A.'s interest in leasehold lands having been set up for public sale, under writs of fi. fa., C., his attorney (being the real ptf. in one of the writs, but not pressing the sale), attended; made the largest bidding; was declared the purchaser; and paid the purchase money, which was not more than enough to satisfy the writs prior to his own, and the expenses. A., alleging that C. had bid as his agent, and had purchased in trust for him, claimed the benefit of the purchase. C. denied A.'s allegations, but offered to give up the purchase, if A. would pay him the purchase-money and the other demands which C. had on him. A. was not able to raise the purchase-money then, and C. dealt with the lands as his own, for ten years. At the expiration of that time, A. filed a bill charging that C. had bid for and purchased the lands as his agent, and in trust for him; that C., at and after the sale, said so in conversations with friends of A.; and that they, on that understanding, did not bid. All those allegations were positively denied by C. in his answer. Conversations, such as those charged in the bill, were proved by S., a witness for A., to have taken place between S. and C.

On C.'s undertaking to release A. from all demands, the Lord Ch. of Ireland pronounced a decree dismissing the bill; and afterwards pronounced another decree varying the former one, and directing an issue to ascertain the value of A.'s interest in the lands at the time of the sale. On appeal—Held, that both those decrees were erroneous.

That an enquiry concerning such value was immaterial; and that, the material question being whether C., in bidding for and purchasing the property, was acting on A.'s behalf, C. might take an issue to try that question; but that C., if he declined to take that issue, should be declared a trustee for A.

That A.'s equity against C., if C. had, in the transaction of the purchase, acted on his behalf, was not affected by the lapse of ten years; there not being any acquiescence by A., and C. having been aware of his rights.

That an attorney, if not acting as such for his client on a particular occasion, may throw off that character, and exercise his rights as an independent man.

That evidence cannot be received of admissions made by a party, if they have not been properly put in issue by the pleadings, so as to give him an opportunity of contradicting them.—Austin v. Chambers, 6 Cl. & F. 1.

[This case is not reported in the Court below, but see it in subsequent stages: 3 Dr. & War. 178; Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 85. (C.)]

1. M., solicitor and agent of L., having been paid all his costs, &c., as such, lent L. £500 on bond. M. was to repay himself this sum out of £600, a fine for abuse, which he was to receive for L. M. received the £600, and retained £500 thereof. L. dying soon after, M. entered judgment on the bond, and assigned it for the full amount. The assignee claimed that amount out of L.'s estate. The trustee of L.'s will produced a letter from M. stating the agreement respecting the loan, and praying that M. should be ordered to pay over the £500 retained by him. M. denied the genuineness of the letter. An issue was directed. The jury found that it was in M.'s handwriting. Held, that M. should pay the amount of the bond, with all costs of the issue, petitions, &c.—Bucke v. Murphy, 8 I. E. R. 373; Fl. & K. 173. (R.)

2. L., solicitor and land-agent of W., engaged in redeeming annuities charged upon the estate of W., took an assignment of one of them for his own benefit for a sum less than that agreed upon by the deed of annuity for its re-purchase. Held, that L. was a trustee for W., for the re-purchase of the annuity.

A solicitor had procured a loan of money on mortgage for his client. The mortgage deed contained mutual stipulations that there should be no redemption and no foreclosure, provided the interest was regularly paid for five years. The solicitor afterwards took from his client a mortgage, which did not contain this provision. Held, that he was not entitled to proceed upon this mortgage within the five years.

In impeaching settled accounts between solicitor and client, it is sufficient to allege generally that the accounts are erroneous, without specifying the particular items.

Bonds and bills given by a client to his solicitor are not sufficient evidence of the debt. If the accounts have been opened, the consideration for them must be proved.—Lawless v. Mansfield, 1 Dr. & War. 557; 4 I. E. R. 118. (C.)—[See Blagrove v. Routh, 2 Kaye & J., 509; 8 De Gex, M. & G. 620.]

3. When an attorney applies to be paid his costs out of a fund allocated to his client, he ought to state in his affidavit that he distinctly informed his client of his intention so to apply.—Redmond v. Gormley, 4 I. E. R. 698. (E.E.)

4. The solicitor of a deceased tenant for life, under the will of J., was restrained on motion of the remainderman under the will, from acting for an annuitant claiming by title paramount, in whose name he had filed a bill against the sole trustee and executor of the will, and his son; the remainderman alleging that the will was prepared by the trustee (law agent of the testator) not according to the testator's instructions; and further alleging that the trustee had, as such law agent, by gross misrepresentation and fraud, and without authority from the testator, procured from ptf. a release of the annuity, and praying that the release might be set aside, and the arrears of the annuity raised out of the testator's estate. It appearing that several of the statements in the bill were founded upon information confidentially acquired by the solicitor, as solicitor and agent of the deceased tenant for life, the Court declined to grant that part of the motion which sought to have the bill taken off the file.—M'Kiernan v. Kernan, 4 I. E. R. 255. (R.)

5. A client gave to his solicitor a mortgage to secure costs then incurred, and thereafter to be incurred, with interest thereon from the time of taxation. There were subsequent costs to a large amount. The solicitor died. On motion by the client that the personal representative of the late solicitor should be ordered to hand over the title-deeds, &c., to the new solicitor, the client offering to confirm the mortgage as to the subsequent costs,—Held, that a security for costs to be incurred is void, as being against public policy, and therefore incapable of confirmation after the subsequent costs have been incurred, although a valid security for such costs may then be given; that, in this case, the lien was not avoided; and the papers should not be taken by the client from the personal representative of his late solicitor (who preferred the lien to a new security), until the costs for which no valid security had been taken were paid.—Willins v. Tandy, 5 I. E. R. 1. (R.)

6. Semble—When a party, claiming by title paramount to the client, enforces the production of papers, the benefit thereby incidentally accruing to parties deriving under the client cannot be taken from them; and the solicitor's lien is lost.—Blunden v. Desart, 5 I. E. R. 221; 2 Dr. & War. 405; 2 Con. & L. 111. (C.)—[Rev. g: 5 I. E. R. 52; Fl. & K. 572. (R.)]

7. A deed executed by a client to his solicitor, in which the consideration is untruly stated, will not be permitted to stand.

The general proposition that a solicitor will not be permitted to take a security for costs to be incurred, is established beyond the reach of controversy.

Semble—That, if the security be taken for cash advances as well as for prospective costs, no distinction can be made in favour of the former.

Quare—Whether, when a security is given for past and future costs, it can be sustained as to the former, although void as to the latter?—Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dr. & War. 184; 1 Con. & L. 291. (C.)

1. £700 being claimed for costs for business done for the client between 1808 and 1819, and a suit in respect of them instituted between the parties, they were, in 1840, taxed by agreement before the Master to £500. The client having discovered, amongst his own papers, and in his own handwriting, memoranda specifying sums given by him to the solicitor, for which credit had not been given,—Held, that, in 1842, the client was not entitled to have the costs re-taxed.

Although an agent or solicitor, acting at the time as such for the vendor, cannot buy for his own benefit, yet, when it was denied that he was employed in the sale by the client, and it was urged that, being himself a judgment creditor, he had a right to be present, and buy at the sale,—Held, that he might, at that particular time, throw off his former character of solicitor, and exercise the right which belonged to him in another character.—Austin v. Chambers, 3 Dr. & War. 178. (C.)—[See 6 Cl. & F. 1; and Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 85.]

2. A testator, A., shortly before his death, said to B., who had for several years acted as his land-agent, that he would make him a present of £300; and having been suddenly taken ill, desired B. to retain that sum out of a larger balance then in his hands. No third person was present at this declaration. On the following day, A. died. B. was a solicitor, and, together with his partner, acted as such, for A. There was a suit pending against A. in the Exchequer, at his death. After A.'s death, in 1831, B. acted as solicitor for the executors, and made out for them an account of A.'s assets, in which the £300 was treated as a gift by A. in his life to B. The inventory returned by the executors contained a similar account of that sum. In 1832, B. furnished an account to the executors, stating all the circumstances under which he claimed credit for the £300; taking credit for it against the balance in his hands; and stating that he retained the residue of the balance to meet the costs due to him and his partner, the amount of which he was then unable to ascertain. That account was retained by the executors, without objection. In 1839, they filed a bill against the agent, for an account of the sum due by him to A.'s estate. Held, that B. was not entitled to retain the £300 at the death of A., and that the executors had not, by acquiescence, precluded themselves from disputing his right to it.—Walsh v. Studdart, 6 I. E. R. 161; 2 Con. & L. 423; 4 Dr. & War. 159. (C.)

3. In a question as to the carriage of a decree for a sale in two suits, when the solicitor in the first had taken an assignment of a charge, prior to the p^{ts}., which was in that cause reported at £1800, but in the second cause at £900 (explained by a difference in the accounts decreed)—Held, that the solicitor in the first cause having, by the assignment, an interest different from the p^{ts}., the carriage of the decree should be given to the

4. A solicitor may not deal with his client for a security for a debt due to him by a third person, without giving his client all his own information touching the debt, and the nature of the security.

The Court dismissed with costs a bill to enforce a security taken by a solicitor from his client on a sum charged upon the principal debtor's estate, and to recover which the client was then prosecuting a suit in Equity; the solicitor having omitted to disclose the circumstances connected with the estate, and particularly that he had other demands affecting it.—Higgins v. Joyce, 2 Jon. & L. 282. (C.)

5. Liberty given a client, V. to surcharge accounts settled between him and his solicitor, X., sixteen years before, and securities for the balances having been given; and to have the costs taxed; the relation of solicitor and client having continued up to a short period before the filing of the bill, and V. having been inops concilii when he settled the account. X. had sent it to V., with a letter desiring him to examine it attentively before signing it; but it having been settled on the basis of liability in, not gift by V., and containing items for costs due by, and advances made to third persons, which V. was not liable to, and against which it was X.'s duty to have protected V.—Jones v. Moffett, 3 Jon. & L. 636. (C.)

6. The heir-at-law, being also the personal representative of a deceased debtor, bought, for less than the sum due on foot thereof, an incumbrance on the estate. Held, that he was entitled to the full amount secured thereby, as against a subsequent incumbrancer, a solicitor, who had advised the purchase as a means of providing for the heir, but who had not disclosed that the purchase would enure to his own benefit.—Bayly v. Wilkins, 3 Jon. & L. 630. (C.)

7. When a trust deed did not authorise the solicitor to charge costs against his c. q. t., securities obtained by him from the c. q. t., for untaxed costs and advances, were set aside, and ordered to stand as securities for the sum really due, notwithstanding letters from the c. q. t. recognising the solicitor's right to charge those costs; the solicitor not having informed him that he was not entitled to any remuneration for his services in the trust, and the letters having been written under his influence. The rule, however, being hard, and the conduct of the c. q. t. exceptional, the relief was given without costs.—Gomley v. Wood, 9 I. E. R. 418; 3 Jon. & L. 678. (C.)

8. Semble—It is not an objection to an equitable mortgage given for costs due, that they were not ascertained or delivered.—Ex parte Bovill, 2 Mont. & A. 382 n., observed on. Bristow v. Warner, 10 I. E. R. 246. (C.)

1. Plaintiff was solicitor for D., who at his death, owed ptf. costs. After D.'s death, ptf. became solicitor for D.'s executor, the deft., who, being indebted to ptf. for D.'s costs, and for further costs as executor, handed ptf. the title-deeds of leaseholds of D. (which had been left on special trusts), together with a letter making an equitable mortgage. Funds, which were applicable to pay the costs, were misapplied. Held, that the executor having committed a breach of trust in mortgaging, the solicitor dealing with him was affected by it, and could not recover without an enquiry into the state of the assets.

Semble—He was in no better condition than the executor himself occupied. — Purcell v. Ruckley, 12 I. E. R. 55. (C.)

2. A. having effected a policy of insurance, by deed of the 1st of Nov. 1827, assigned it to B., in trust for his wife and children. B. assigned the policy to C., for value, by a deed falsely reciting that A., by deed of the 1st of Nov. 1827, had assigned the policy to B. for her own benefit. C. died, having bequeathed the policy to D., who assigned it to E., a solicitor, who acted in that transaction for B., by deed of the 4th of Feb. 1843, in which D. covenanted that he had full power, and lawful and absolute authority to execute the assignment. The life insured died. E. having received the amount of the policy, a bill was filed against him by the children of A., and he was obliged to compromise the suit by paying money. D. died, and a claim having been made by E.'s executor against his assets, on foot of the covenant for title, a cause petition was filed to administer his estate. It stated that E. was D.'s solicitor; that it was his duty to have limited the covenant to the acts of D.; and that he was entitled to no greater benefit than if he had only imposed the proper and usual covenant on D.; but prayed no relief as to that statement, nor to make E.'s executrix a respondent. The usual order having been made by the Lord Chancellor, under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, and E.'s executrix having filed a charge on foot of the covenant, which the Master disallowed, on the ground that E. was D.'s attorney, and ought not to have permitted him to enter into such a covenant—Held, on appeal, that the claim under the covenant being a legal claim, the Master had not jurisdiction to disallow it on that ground without a cross-petition.

Semble—Though E. had constructive notice of the trusts of the deed of the 1st of Nov. 1827, such notice could not qualify or control the covenant for title.

D. having directed that any claim on foot of any covenant should be paid out of a particular legacy, the legatees should be before the Court.—Ex parte Collins, 2 L. C. R. 618. (R.)

3. A solicitor purchased a leasehold interest from his client, and himself prepared the assignment, which contained no covenant to indemnify the vendor, but did contain the words "subject to the rent and covenants" in the lease. Held, that the executor of the solicitor was bound to indemnify the vendor against the rent and covenants.—Greenfield v. Bates, 5 I. C. R. 219. (C.)

4. A solicitor, failing to obtain from a stranger a loan for his client, lent him, in the stranger's name, the money on mortgage; and used that name to obtain from his client priority for the loan over two jointures payable out of the estate, and concealed the fact that he himself was the lender. Held, that such a transaction, coupled with the absence of independent advice by a solicitor to a client, rendered the mortgage deeds voidable, so far as they acquired priority over the jointures.—Radcliff v. Orme, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (C.A.)

5. A., who had been a ward of Court, within a few months after his discharge, being in embarrassed circumstances and sued by a creditor, confessed a judgment for £500 to B., a solicitor, his cousin-german and land agent, by whose advice he was entirely guided in the management of his affairs, although another attorney (employed through B.) defended A. against the creditor, and was also solicitor on record for A. in some proceedings in Ch. to which B. really attended. The judgment was soon after registered as a mortgage against A.'s estate. During subsequent proceedings by the creditor, A., under B.'s advice, made an affidavit stating that the judgment was given for full and valuable consideration received. In a suit by B.'s heir-at-law to set aside the judgment, alleging that it was given without consideration, in which it appeared to have been really intended merely to delay the creditor—Held, that the relation of solicitor and client had existed between A. and B. at the date of the judgment, and that the heir might have relief.

After the date of the judgment A. agreed to sell his estate, subject to its incumbrances, to B.; who was then in fact and on record A.'s solicitor; for £100, the value being considerably greater. After the sale was resolved upon, a solicitor, an intimate friend of B., was on his suggestion employed by A.; and went through the form of changing B. as A.'s solicitor, and on A.'s behalf examined the deed of conveyance, and submitted it to counsel, but did not in any other way advise or consult with A. Held, that A. had no sufficient and independent advice; and that the conveyance should be set aside, and was in no way the better for the relationship between the parties.

That A.'s letters to his mother could not be read to show the state of his mind or feelings towards B.—Low v. Holmes, 8 I. C. R. 53; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 290. (C.)

6. A., a solicitor, having a charge on real estate, caused a bill to raise the charge to be filed in his partner's name. A sale having been decreed, A., without obtaining the leave to the Court, purchased the lands in the name of B., to whom the conveyance was made. The fact that A. was the real purchaser was never disclosed to the Master or the parties in the cause; and several orders were made, on applications in the name of B., calculated to lead the Court to believe that he was the real purchaser, though the whole of the purchase-money was paid by A. The Court, after the expiration of nineteen years, and after the death of A. and his partner, set aside the sale, although it was not proved to have been fraudulent or at an undervalue.

It is a settled rule of the Court that the ptf. or his solicitor cannot, without the leave of the Court, bid at a sale under the decree. Non-compliance with that rule will vitiate the sale.

If a solicitor or trustee secretly purchase in the name of another at a sale under the Court the sale is void.

When there has been concealment, a violation of a rule of the Court, or a void sale, laches or lapse of time will not preclude relief.

Form of decree setting aside a purchase by a solicitor, and directing accounts, when no fraud or undervalue was proved.—Popham v. Exham, 10 I. C. R. 440. (R.)

1. Four judgments affecting B.'s estate were purchased by A., his solicitor, for less than the amounts due thereon. Two of them were assigned to A. by a deed in which B. joined. A. bought the third shortly after B.'s death; and the fourth, while he had carriage of the proceedings in a suit to administer B.'s estate, sold in the L. E. Court. On settlement of the final schedule—Held, that A. could not stand thereon as a creditor in respect of the judgments for more than he paid, with interest, and the costs of the assignments.—In re Johnstone's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 36. (L.E.C.)

IX. OF PROFESSIONAL CONFIDENCE.

2. When a bill charges that a debt. was connected with the preparation and execution of fraudulent leases, and seeks a discovery of the matters alleged to be fraudulent, he cannot by a plea of professional confidence, protect himself from discovery.—Kelly v. Jackson, 1 I. Jur. 233. (R.)

3. A debt., by answer, objected to an interrogatory because by answering it he might subject himself to pains, &c.; and by a plea declined to answer part of the same interrogatory because the subject of it came to his knowledge in the character of solicitor to the other debt. Held, that the answer, being equivalent to a demurrer, did not fall within the 66th G. Rule; and that the answer overruled the plea.

A bill to set aside leases for fraud made the solicitor who had prepared them a debt., charging him with being a party to the fraud, praying costs against him, and interrogating him as to his being privy to the fraud, and as to transactions regarding the preparation of the leases. The solicitor pleaded that he knew nothing as to the matters save as the attorney of the other debt., and therefore was privileged from giving discovery. The plea did not deny the fraud or the facts stated in the bill as evidence of it. Held, that the ptf., being entitled to relief, was entitled to the discovery as incidental to the relief.

The privilege of a solicitor is confined to confidential communications with his client, and does not extend to his own acts, though done in the character of solicitor.

A solicitor may be made a party to a bill to set aside a deed for fraud, if he be a party to the fraud, and costs are prayed against him.—Kelly v. Jackson, 13 I. E. R. 129. (R.)

4. The practice of a solicitor voluntarily making an affidavit revealing circumstances connected with the business of his former client, whereby that client may be rendered liable to an action, disapproved of.—Barton v. Sampson, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 361. (R.)

5. Confidential letters written before suit commenced, by one of the parties, to his solicitor in reference to the subject matter in dispute, are privileged; and cannot be given in evidence at the hearing by the opposite party.—Phibbs v. O'Donel, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (C.)

6. A solicitor prepared for a father a deed of release, whereby two of that father's children (then of full age) acknowledged, contrary to the fact, the receipt of a large sum of money, portion of a larger sum charged on fee-simple lands, which the father afterwards sold. The children received no consideration. The solicitor, seeing that they had been grossly defrauded, requested their father to repair the fraud by charging other lands in their favour. The father died without doing so. A petition was instituted to set aside the release. Held, that the solicitor's conversations with the father touching the deed, were not privileged.—De Burgh v. Chichester, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 182. (C.)

X. SOLICITOR'S LIEN.

1. In general.

2. How affected by Retirement or Withdrawal, Discharge, &c.

3. Effect of taking a Security; how Lien may be Lost or Extinguished.

X. 1. Solicitor's Lien; generally.

7. The mortgagor's attorney, to whom, pending a foreclosure suit, the mortgagor has delivered the title deeds, in order to procure a loan of money, has not, as against the mortgagee, a lien on them for his costs in that transaction.—Hutchinson v. Joyce, 2 Jones, 122. (E.E.)

8. The Court will not make an order ex directo, that the costs of an attorney be paid out of a fund in Court, upon which he has a lien. He must wait until his client applies to be paid the fund, and then insist upon his lien. The reason for not giving the costs to the attorney upon his own motion is, that there are not two litigant parties before the Court.—Crosbie v. Molloy, 2 Jones, 588. (E.E.)

1. A solicitor, having a lien upon a deed for his costs, will not be ordered to furnish them, or to deliver up the deed, without getting an express undertaking that his costs will be paid when taxed.—M'Kenny v. Chambers, Jon. & Ca. 105. (E.E.)

2. A., seized in quasi fee of an estate pur autre vie, conveyed it in mortgage in 1814. In 1824, A. obtained a renewal from the head landlord, and deposited the indenture of renewal with his solicitor. The renewed interest having been decreed to be a graft upon the former estate, and a bill filed to foreclose the mortgage—Held, that A.'s solicitor had no right to retain the indenture of renewal by virtue of a lien thereupon for costs incurred subsequent to 1814, as against the mortgagee.

A solicitor cannot by his lien have a better right to the client's title deeds, than the client himself had at the time when the costs were incurred.—Smith v. Chichester, 4 I. E. R. 580; 2 Dr. & War. 393; 1 Con. & L. 486. (C.)

3. A judgment was obtained against a client after the deposit of his title deeds with his solicitor, and costs had become due for professional services rendered to the client both before and after the entry of the judgment. Held, reversing the order of the M. R. (see Blunden v. Desart, Fl. & K. 572), that the solicitor's lien could not prevail against the judgment creditor for any portion of the costs incurred after the date of the judgment.

A solicitor's lien for his costs upon his client's deeds and papers, prevails generally for all costs, and is binding upon the representatives of the client.

The character of an incumbrance, the result of contract, does not belong to the solicitor's lien.

The solicitor's lien cannot prevail against a title to the deeds paramount to that of his client at the time when the costs were incurred.

A solicitor's lien may be lost by his taking another security, or by his proving the debt under a commission.

Although a solicitor may not take a security for future costs, he may acquire a legal lien over the papers for all costs incurred or to be incurred, and that without any special contract.

It requires a strong case to induce the Court to take the papers from a solicitor without payment to him of his demand.

This Court has authority to compel the production of the deeds, upon the money being brought into Court.

Semble—If a solicitor receives the deeds, pendente lite, his lien will not prevail against the rights which are the subject-matter of the suit.—Blunden v. Desart, 5 I. E. R. 221; 2 Dr. & War. 405, 423, 424; 2 Con. & L. 111. (C.)

4. A ptf. suing in forma pauperis, having obtained a final decree, entered a rule to change her solicitor. A motion by the solicitor, that the rule should be reviewed, and the carriage of the decree restored to him, or that ptf. should pay to him the costs incurred; refused without prejudice to any lien he might have upon the fund.—M'Ghee v. Mahon, Fl. & K. 93. (R.)

5. Bonds in penalties, payable with interest, taken by an attorney from his client, pendente lite, for untaxed costs, shall only stand as securities for such sum as shall, upon taxation, appear to be due, without interest thereon.—Fowler v. Moore, 2 Jones, 415. (E.E.)

6. The ptf.'s attorney, having withdrawn from the conduct of the cause, was ordered to deliver up to the new attorney all such documents as upon inspection the latter should deem necessary for the conduct of the cause; the latter undertaking to receive them, subject to the lien of the former attorney, and to speed the cause, and to re-deliver them within ten days after the final decree, or immediately, if counsel should not advise a prosecution of the suit; and the ptf. consenting that the former attorney should have a lien for his costs upon any fund recovered in the suit.

Semble—An attorney, by refusing to go on with a suit, does not lose his lien either upon documents or the fund.—Harman v. Strangways, Jon. & Ca. 257. (E.E.)

7. A solicitor having, pursuant to an order of the Court, answered the matter of a petition against him, is not entitled to move that the petition be dismissed with costs, for want of prosecution, until one clear Term has elapsed after notice of the answering affidavit.—Bucke v. Murphy, 3 I. E. R. 373; Fl. & K. 173. (R.)

8. The decree in an administration suit declared the solicitor for the inheritor entitled to be paid his costs out of the surplus, if any. It afterwards appeared by the Master's report, that those costs had been incurred in contesting unfounded claims, and thereby increasing the fund for those beneficially entitled, and that the inheritor was insolvent. Held, that although the fund was deficient, the solicitor for the inheritor was entitled to be paid, without waiting until there should be a surplus fund.—Grey v. Matthews, Fl. & K. 309; 3 I. E. R. 530. (R.)

9. The attorney for the ptf. died during the progress of the suit, and a new attorney was appointed. More than six years afterwards, funds were brought into Court by the receiver in the cause. Held, that the personal representative of the deceased attorney had a lien on the funds for the costs of the suit due to the attorney at his decease.

The simple principle upon which this case (of a lien for costs) has been rested, is most satisfactory. It is upon the distinction well known to the law since the enactment of the Statute of Limitations, between the debt and the remedy for the recovery of it. The debt may survive though the remedy is gone. The lien is a benefit attached to the debt, not to the remedy, it is an addition to the legal remedy; and, therefore, though the remedy be gone, so long as the debt exists, that which is attached to it remains; so long as the debt continues, the right to the lien continues. Upon that principle, the personal representative of the attorney is entitled in this case to the benefit of the lien for the recovery of his demand.

If a solicitor refuses to be any longer concerned for a client, because the client will not give him money for the prosecution of the suit, the solicitor has no lien on the fund; but if the client discharges his solicitor, the latter has a lien on the fund. Here the case is a middle one; for A. was discharged by the act of God, which prejudices no person. He cannot be considered as being in any default.—Kellett v. Kelly, 5 I. E. R. 84. (E.E.)

1. A solicitor's lien for costs incurred partly before and partly after the date of a judgment, confessed by the client to a third person, gives no priority to the solicitor over the judgment, even as to costs incurred after its date.—Blunden v. Desart, 5 I. E. R. 52; Fl. & K. 572. (R.)—[Rev'd.: 5 I. E. R. 221; 2 Dr. & War. 405; 2 Con. & L. 111. (C.)]

2. The owner of lands, subject to a mortgage of 1777, and to judgments confessed in and subsequent to 1820, deposited, in March 1819, the title deeds with his solicitor. In a suit instituted by the judgment creditors, it was decreed that those lands should be sold to pay off the mortgage; and that the title deeds should be lodged in the office, without prejudice to any lien which the solicitor might have thereon for costs. This was done. The lands were sold, and the deeds handed to the purchaser. Held, that the solicitor had no lien on the deeds, having no right to retain them, as against the mortgagee.

That his lien on the deeds was not transferred to the surplus funds of the sale, remaining after payment of the mortgage.—Taylor v. Gorman, 6 I. E. R. 330. (R.)—[Affirmed: 7 I. E. R. 259. (C.)]

3. An attorney, who had received money on account of costs, contended that a balance was still due, and threatened to file a bill for its recovery. Upon a reference obtained by the client on a petition praying, among other things, that the sum received by the attorney should be ascertained, and his costs taxed as between party and party; although the client was wrong as to the principle of the taxation, and also in praying repayment of the entire amount received by the attorney, and not merely of the balance overpaid—Held, that the attorney should pay all the costs of the reference and other proceedings in the matter, except the costs of so much of the petition and answering affidavit as were incidental to the principle of taxation.—Armstrong v. Pollock, 6 I. E. R. 663. (E.E.)

4. Ptf. in an ejectment at Law recovered against the defts. with costs, which they assigned to their attorney, ptf. in the suit in Equity, against the same defts. The assignment was not executed by all the parties. The bill in Equity was dismissed with costs, amounting to less than the costs at Law. Held, that the attorney was not entitled to set off the costs of dismissing the bill against so much of the costs of the action at Law, either in his character of attorney or of assignee of the ptf. at Law.

The solicitor's lien for costs is subordinate and to be postponed to the equities between the parties.—Gwynn v. Krous, 7 I. E. R. 274. (R.)

5. By settlement, £2500 were charged on an estate for lives renewable for ever, for the issue of the marriage, subject to appointment. Part was appointed to one of the children on her marriage, and then settled; the residue was never appointed. After the death of the first settlor, A., the solicitor of B., the other child of the marriage, acting under a power of attorney, obtained a renewal, and instituted a suit in his name to raise his portion of the unappointed charge; but did not prosecute it. On the death of B., A. obtained limited administration to him, and, with the parties entitled to the daughter's share of the charge, filed a bill to raise the charge, when a receiver was appointed and funds got in. The lands being sold in a creditor's suit, and the settlements lodged in the office by order, without prejudice to A.'s lien—Held, that A. had no lien for costs on the deeds, as B., through whom he got them, had no exclusive right to them; and that there could not be any lien transferred to the funds.—[Affirmed on appeal, 8 I. E. R. 223; 2 Jon. & L. 351. (C.)]

That A. was entitled out of the funds to the costs of procuring the renewal; and to the costs of the limited administration, out of the funds reported to B.'s representative; but that he was not entitled out of the funds in the cause to his costs of the suits instituted by him in B.'s lifetime, and as his administrator after his death.—Molesworth v. Robbins, 8 I. E. R. 1. (R.)

6. Form of enquiry in an incumbrancer's suit, when the deeds are in possession of a solicitor, a deft., who claims for costs a lien which is disputed.—Walcott v. Graves, 11 I. E. R. 396. (C.)

7. Bill filed to restrain execution for the full amount of a verdict and costs, and to get credit for money unavailable as a set-off at the trial below. Held, that the fact, that an amount, indisputably due, being unavailable as a legal set-off at the trial, formed a special equitable ground for relief, and warranted this Court's interference; but should not prejudice the solicitor's lien for costs.—Mahony v. M., 2 I. Jur. 129. (C.)

8. A deft., by answer, stated that a deed was in the possession of the personal representative of a solicitor, who claimed a lien on it. The Court ordered him to produce it, with liberty to apply, if production or inspection of the deed was refused by the party who had it, on payment of the costs due to him.—Monseel v. Lindsey, 18 I. E. R. 144. (R.)

1. When a solicitor, whom his client has ceased to employ, produces a deed of the client, upon which the solicitor claims a lien for antecedent costs, and thereby enables the client to recover a fund in a suit in which the solicitor has acted, his lien upon that fund is confined to the costs due to him in the suit in which the fund was so recovered.

H., solicitor of B., held possession of the title deeds of B.'s estate, and claimed a lien thereon for antecedent costs. H. then presented a petition, on behalf of B., for a sale of the estate in the L. E. Court. An order for sale having been made, B. changed her solicitor, and a Judge of the Court ordered that H. should lodge the title deeds, subject to lien. Held, that H.'s lien upon the fund realised in the L. E. Court was confined to his costs in that matter.—In re Bayly's Estate; ex parte Humphrey, 12 I. C. R. 315; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 25. (C.A.)

2. Lien for costs claimed by a solicitor, upon deeds lodged in Court; it not being intended to proceed with the petition for sale of lands. Notice of motion served by the solicitor for an order directing the Keeper of the Deeds to hand them back again. Held, that the proper course would have been, to have served notice of motion for an order declaring the solicitor entitled to a lien, and for liberty to file a claim, setting forth the particulars to be vouched before the Examiner; and, in the event of the sum found to be due not being paid, for an order to continue, and take the carriage of the proceedings.—Re Kelly's Estate, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 59. (L.E.C.)

3. A trader who, under the arrangement clauses, petitions the Court, obtains the usual protection, and procures an order for the assignee to receive and possess his estate, cannot, even by special arrangement with his attorney, lodge with, or transfer to him any portion of his assets, as security for his costs, so as to create a lien in the attorney's favour. An attorney who, in an arrangement matter, voluntarily hands over to the official assignee scrip or railway shares deposited with him by his client, the trader, will have no equitable claim on foot of them for costs due to him by his client. An attempt to establish a special lien, by special contract, on a trader's assets, of which the attorney has got possession, as security for his costs, those assets being bound by an order of the Court, procured by that attorney, must fail, since it would be against the rights and equities of the several creditors bound by the vesting order.

When proceedings are taken bona fide, without the Court's authority, or the assignee's sanction, the attorney is not entitled to any lien for costs; but, when the assignees concede the right of proving for them, the Court will sanction that course.—Re North, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (B.)

X. 2. How affected by Retirement or Withdrawal, Discharge, &c.

4. This Court has not jurisdiction to order the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor to deliver up title-deeds on which they claim a lien.—Allen v. Jervoise, 11 I. E. R. 588. (R.)

5. Though a solicitor discharge himself, he will not be directed to deliver to his client the documents upon which he claims a lien, unless a necessity be shown for that course, or danger of loss.—Link. & Wat. Ry. Co. v. O'Ferrall, 1 I. Jur. 198. (R.)

6. When a solicitor discharges himself, the Court will order him to hand over to his former client documents on which he has a lien, if a case of pressing necessity be made out. There is no distinction in this respect between documents necessary for the carrying on a suit, and documents unconnected with any suit.—Wat. & Link. Ry. Co. v. O'Farrell, 2 I. Jur. 67. (R.)

X. 3. Effect of Taking a Security: how Lien may be Lost or Extinguished.

7. A solicitor, having a lien for costs on title-deeds, took from his client a bond, conditioned for their amount, with interest at £5 per c., which he regularly received for several years, and still retained the deeds. In a general creditor's suit, instituted afterwards, it appeared that the client's whole estate would be insufficient to pay creditors whose securities were prior to the bond, but should have been postponed to the lien. The solicitor deposed that he took the bond only as a collateral security, but never intended to give up his lien. Held, that, having taken a security for the costs, with interest, his lien was gone.

Quære—Would the mere taking a security for the costs, without more, extinguish the lien?—Brownlow v. Keatinge, 2 I. E. R. 243. (R.)

8. A solicitor, to whom a judgment had been assigned in trust for his client, afterwards assigned it to a trustee of the marriage settlement of his client's daughter. Held, that he had parted with his lien upon all documents relating to the judgment of those claiming under the settlement.

A parol unwitnessed gift by a client is extremis, in lieu of a promise made when in good health to his solicitor, though for a long time known to, and unobjected to by the representative of the client, will not be allowed to stand.—Fitzgerald v. Birmingham, 1 Con. & L. 405. (C.)

9. G.'s judgment creditors, of whom T., his solicitor, was one, joined in a trust deed, the effect of which was, that they should be paid without priority. T. claimed a lien for costs on G.'s title deeds. In a suit to carry the trust deed into execution, which included mortgage creditors, who were to be first paid, and whose mortgage was prior to T.'s lien, the decree (under which G.'s priority was sold) ordered T. to bring in the title deeds, without prejudice to his lien. T. lodged them. The lien was prior to the claims of other judgment creditors. Held, that T. could not insist on his lien.—Taylor v. Gorman, 7 I. E. R. 259. (C.)—[Affg. 6 I. E. R. 330. (R.)]

1. An order having been made in 1847 superseding a commission of bankruptcy against a party, with costs, to be paid by the petitioning creditors, and before those costs were paid that party having been in 1849 discharged under the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors—Held, that the assignee in the insolvency matter, one of the petitioning creditors in the bankruptcy matter, took the costs under the order of 1847, subject to the lien of the solicitor who had obtained that order; and that the assignee could not be allowed to set off as against that lien a debt due to himself by the insolvent when those costs were incurred.

Upon motion, the Court varied the order of 1847, by directing the petitioning creditors to pay the solicitor the amount of the taxed costs.—In re Petticrew, 1 I. C. R. 102. (C.)

2. A solicitor, filing a petition for sale in the L. E. Court, and lodging deeds in Court under an order to do so, but without intimating to his client that he retains his lien upon them, loses it thereby, although the words "subject to lien" are in the order.—Humphrey v. Bayly, 12 I. C. R. 315; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 25. (C.A.)

I. STATUTES, GENERALLY: PRIVATE ACTS.

1. Generally.
2. Joint-stock Companies, Corporations, &c.
3. Private and Local Acts.

I. 1. Statutes, generally.

1. The 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, applies only to cases in which the creditor has not had the benefit of his execution. Therefore, when a judgment creditor filed an elegit bill, and got into possession of part of his debtor's estate by means of a receiver appointed under a decree in that suit, the Court would not appoint a receiver under this Act over other parts of the debtor's estate.—Davidson v. Langford, 2 Jon. 189. (E.E.)

2. Semble—A power to appoint amongst the objects "in such shares and proportions" as the apportioner thinks fit, will authorise the appointment of a remainder to one only of the objects. If such a power be executed by appointing the whole estate to one of the objects for life, with remainders over to persons not objects of the power, whereby an illusory share devolves, as in default of appointment, upon the other objects of the power, the case is not within the 1 W. 4, c. 46; and the whole appointment is bad.—Barron v. B., 2 Jon. 226. (E.E.)

3. The 6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 126, has not been repealed by the 3 & 4 Vic. c. 105.

Creditors by simple contract are within the proviso in 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, in favour of "purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors."

A prior statute may operate upon a subsequent one without express words.—In re Perin, 4 I. E. R. 89. (R).—[Affid.: 4 I. E. R. 362; 2 Dr. & War. 147; 1 Con. & L. 567. (C.)]

1. The 33 G. 2, c. 14, has not been repealed, either expressly or impliedly, by the 6 G. 4, c. 42

When there are two affirmative statutes made upon the same subject, as to all points in which they do not contradict one another, both shall stand.

General words in a later affirmative statute shall not be construed to revoke or alter a preceding statute when those words can have an operation without being so applied.—Fawcett v. Hodges, Fl. & K. 117; 3 I. E. R. 232. (R.)

2. A recognizance to the Crown is not within the 8 G. 1, c. 4.

The period, from which the twenty years specified in that Act are to be reckoned, is the issuing of the writ, not the day on which it bears teste.—Reg. v. Bayly, 4 I. E. R. 142; 1 Dr. & War. 213. (C.)

3. The first clause of the 48 G. 3, c. 47, s. 3, does not apply when the reversion first vests in a predecessor of G. 3.—Tuthill v. Rogers, 6 I. E. R. 429; 1 Jon. & L. 36. (C.)

4. Under the 5 & 6 Vic., c. 62, the Commissioners of Woods and Forests are bound to pay the costs of a reference to ascertain the rights of parties to the purchase-money of premises purchased under the Act, as expenses incidental to the purchase.—In re Commissioners of Woods and Forests, 7 I. E. R. 487. (R.)

5. A Roman Catholic entitled to real estate did not take the oath necessary under the statutes to qualify him to hold it; and was not in enjoyment of the lands, nor were proceedings taken to enforce his title until after the passing of the R. C. Relief Act (10 G. 4, c. 7). Held, that sec. 23 of that Act removed his former disability.

An objection to the ptf.'s title not noticed in the answer, but appearing from the ptf.'s own evidence, relied on at the hearing.—O'Connell v. O'Callaghan, 7 I. E. R. 596. (C.)

6. The 26 G. 3, c. 27, gave power to the Crown to grant letters patent to keep a theatre in D., and prohibited all persons from performing plays in D. for hire, under a penalty of £300 for each offence, to be recovered by action of debt, &c., by any person suing. Letters patent were granted to W., authorising him to establish a theatre, and perform plays in D., and containing a clause prohibiting all other persons from doing so, unless authorised. Held, that the patentee could not sustain a bill for an injunction to restrain unauthorised persons who opened a theatre and performed plays contrary to the statute and patent.

In such cases the right to bring an action on the case and a bill for an injunction are concurrent.—Calcraft v. West, 8 I. E. R. 74. (C.)

7. The conveyance, under the former English Insolvent Acts to the provisional assignee, is within the general Registry Act, and its registration is not dispensed with by the registration of the conveyance by the provisional to the creditors' assignees.—Battersby v. Rochfort, 8 I. E. R. 284; 2 Jon. & L. 431. (C.)

8. The 6 & 7 Vic., c. 85, has not altered the practice in relation to the examination of a deft. by the ptf.; and the order cannot be obtained to examine a deft. whose answer has been replied to, unless the replication be withdrawn as against him.—Walker v. Tilly, 9 I. E. R. 261. (R.)

9. The Court has authority, under the 5 & 6 Vic., c. 105, to permit the assignee of a judgment creditor to continue in his own name the proceedings of his assignor under the Judgment Creditors Acts.—Daly v. Blake, 10 I. E. R. 36. (R.)

10. A tenant's recognizance was executed at the same time as his lease, but was not enrolled for four years after. The tenant in the meantime became insolvent, and incumbered his property. Held, that the neglect to enrol the recognizance when the lease was executed did not discharge the surety.—Jephson v. Mansell, 10 I. E. R. 132. (C.)

11. A lease of corporate property granted under circumstances similar to those in the Attorney-General v. Ball, supported in favour of a purchaser for value.

If a deft. in his answer relies generally on his right as a purchaser for value without notice, but does not specifically deny notice of a particular matter, ex. gr., a private Act, with which he is charged in the bill, and which would invalidate his title, the ptf. not excepting to the answer is bound to prove notice.

A statute relating to the corporate property of a city, with the usual clause declaring that it shall be deemed a public Act, does not bind strangers with notice; and the mere probability of a purchaser knowing it, or precautions taken by him in a purchase of corporate property, will not fix him with constructive notice.—Attorney-General v. Marrett, 10 I. E. R. 167. (C.)

12. A deft. whose interest in the suit is so coincident with that of the ptf., that he might have been made a co-ptf., is nevertheless, under the 6 & 7 Vic., c. 85, a competent witness for the ptf.—Kelly v. Bennison, 11 I. E. R. 605. (C.)

13. The Court has not power under the 23 G. 3, c. 35, to order the Master to execute a conveyance in the name of a femme covert who is out of the jurisdiction.—Nugent v. Piers, 12 I. E. R. 188. (R.)

1. A submission to arbitration made a rule of Court, by consent, in a cause, is within the 10 W. 3, c. 14 (Ir.).—[Garde v. Garde, 4 Law Rec. N. S. 115, followed.—Dennis v. Deane, 6 Law Rec. N. S. 378, doubted.]—Goggin v. Downing, 13 I. E. R. 60. (R.)

2. A suit by a simple contract creditor, to attach a rentcharge on the separate estate of a married woman, is within the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82 (Service of Process Act).—Copperthwaite v. Tuile, 13 I. E. R. 68. (R.)

3. The M. G. W. Railway Co. purchased, under an Act, the R. Canal, and all the property belonging to it. They afterwards contracted with the G. Canal Co. to purchase the G. Canal and its property; and that until an Act could be obtained for the purpose a lease should be made by the G. Canal Co. to the M. G. W. Railway Co., under the Canal Carriers Act, 8 & 9 Vic., c. 42. The agreement was adopted at a meeting of the G. Canal Co., and a draft lease approved of, which comprised not only the tolls and duties of the canal, but also all the real estate and personal property belonging to the G. Canal Co. Held, on a petition filed by two shareholders of the G. Canal Co. to restrain the Co. from executing the lease that although the lease per se was within the Canal Carriers Act, as it was part of the arrangement for the transfer of the canal and its property to the Railway Co., it was illegal; and the Court granted an injunction to prevent its execution.

The R. Canal and the G. Canal run parallel to each other for a short distance; and then diverge, and fall into the river Shannon, at some distance from each other. Held, that as they communicate with each other by water, they are within the Canal Carriers Act, so as to enable the G. Canal Co. under that Act to make a lease of their tolls and duties to the M. G. W. Railway Co., who had become proprietors of the G. Canal.

The Court will not consider the quantum of interest of shareholders in a company who seek for an injunction, nor whether their interest would entitle them to vote at a committee of the company; but when the petitioners had purchased two shares for a nominal consideration, after the agreement which they complained of had been entered into, and with full notice of it, and for the purpose of preventing its completion, the Court refused an injunction.—M'Donnell and another v. The Grand Canal Co.; and M'Donnell v. Mid. Gt. W. Ry. Co., 3 I. C. R. 578; 5 I. Jur. 197, 198. (C.)

4. An attachment for £6. 17s. 7d., payable under an order of the Court of Ch., was issued in 1837, and renewed in 1848, but not afterwards, as it could not now be executed in consequence of the 11 & 12 Vic., c. 28. The Court gave liberty to issue a fi. fa. for the amount.—Fenton v. F., 7 I. Jur. 26. (R.)

5. A., by will, after charging his real and personal estate, which consisted chiefly of slaves in Jamaica, with payment of his debts, bequeathed to his executors £2000, in trust, to pay the interest thereon to his daughter (the petitioner) for life; after her death, the principal to go to her children; and directed that the principal and interest should be raised out of the yearly profits of the estate, and that the person for the time being in possession of the property should pay the charges. Subject to this and some other legacies, he devised his estate to his son T. and his assigns, for ever. T. entered into possession, and continued seized until his death, when he devised the property to his daughter, M., still subject to the above legacy. The respondent, having married M., became entitled to the estate in right of his wife, and wrote a letter to the petitioner on the subject of the legacy of £2000, containing the following language:—"The property owes you and your family £2000 currency; so long as I am in possession, you shall be paid your interest; and when the property yields it, the principal; as I wish never to pocket a farthing until everyone is paid." Under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37 (the Slave Compensation Act), the respondent had previously put in his claim for compensation, as owner of the estate in right of his wife, but not in any other character. No counter claims were lodged on behalf of the petitioner, or any person representing her charge; and a large sum was awarded to him as compensation. A petition having been presented for the purposes of establishing the charge of £2000 upon the estate, and of rendering the compensation money liable in the hands of the respondent to this demand—Held, that the act of the Compensation Commissioners, in awarding this sum to the respondent; did not conclude the rights of the petitioner as against the sum granted to the respondent in lieu of the estate originally liable to that charge.

That the letter written by the respondent to the petitioner amounted to a declaration of trust in reference to the rents and profits of the estate; and therefore that the respondent was liable to satisfy the demand of the petitioner, as to the legacy of £2000, out of the sum awarded to him as compensation money.—M'Kean v. Gray, 7 I. Jur. 817. (C.)

6. Statutes are to be construed as mandatory and imperative when they prescribe acts to be done by private parties; but are only directory when they require public officers to do the acts, in which case the default or mistake of the officers will not destroy the parties' rights.—Plunket v. Malley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 88. (M.O.)

I. 2. Joint-stock Companies, Corporations, &c.

7. An Act contained a clause declaring it a Public Act. It related merely to the affairs of the L. Corporation. Held, a Private Act as to the public; but that members of the corporation, dealing with corporate property affected by the Act, had notice of, and were bound by it.—Attorney-General v. Ball, 10 I. E. R. 146. (C.)

1. A statute relating to the corporate property of a city, with the usual clause declaring that it shall be deemed a public act, does not bind strangers with notice. The mere probability of a purchaser knowing of it, or precautions taken by him in purchasing corporate property, will not fix him with constructive notice.—Attorney-General v. Marrett, 10 I. E. R. 167. (C.)

2. A Railway Company, having a limited power under their original Act to borrow money, borrowed from A., on the security of quarries, the property of the directors. They subsequently obtained a second and a third Act, the latter of which recited that the company had occasion for more extensive borrowing powers; and that they had not borrowed money under the borrowing clause in their original Act. Held, that the latter recital was not such a misrepresentation as affected A.'s security, A. having made further advances to the company after the date of their third Act.—Hughes v. Belfast Harbour Commissioners, 5 I. Jur. 35. (R.)

3. An affirmative statute, which creates a new right, does not of itself, and necessarily, destroy a pre-existing right created by another statute not therein referred to; but will destroy that pre-existing right, if the legislature's intention appears to have been that the new and old rights should not co-exist. Thus, the 6 G. 4. c. 42, repealed the 33 G. 2. c. 14 (Ir.), so far as regards Irish Joint-stock Banks, although the former contains no mention of the latter statute; their provisions being incompatible.—O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469. (H.L.)—[S. c. 6 H. L. Cas. 142.]

4. A statute empowered a corporation to make leases of the corporate property under their common seal, for a certain term in possession, and at the highest rent; and provided that all leases made in any other manner should be null and void. Held, that the statute did not preclude them from entering into an agreement for a lease, provided it was without delay carried into effect by the execution of leases in compliance with the statute.—Stevens's Hospital v. Dyas, 15 I. C. R. 405. (R.)

I. 3. Private and Local Acts.

5. The Limerick Regulation Act (Loc. & Pers.) enacted that the Corporation property should be disposed of only for the public uses and charities of the city, subject to control and formalities mentioned in the Act; and that it should take effect from the 1st of Sept. 1823. It received the royal assent on the 18th of July 1823. At a corporate meeting on the 30th of August, property was leased not for public purposes to a member of the body, and without the control or formalities required by the Act. Held, that notwithstanding the clause deferring its operation, the Act bound the corporate property from the date of its passing; and that the lease was therefore void.

The Act contained a clause declaring it a public Act. It related merely to the affairs of the Limerick Corporation. Held, that it was a Private Act, as to the public at large, but that the persons dealing in the transaction in question, being members of the corporation, had notice of and were bound by it.

A lease void under the Act was attempted to be supported by a prior contract which was not under the corporate seal, but was a resolution of the Common Council, who were in the habit of managing the corporate property. The proof that the property had been held for public trusts was defective, but the profits had been for many years applied to public purposes. The resolution was made in favour of the Chamberlain of the Corporation by the Common Council, which consisted of persons under his influence; and the rent, though fixed by valuers appointed by the Common Council, was under the value. Held, that although Equity might enforce a contract or resolution, not under seal or binding at Law, against a Corporation, under circumstances, yet this resolution could not be enforced, and would not support the lease.—The Attorney-General v. Ball, 10 I. E. R. 146. (C.)

6. The trustees of a bridge were authorised by a Private Act of 1847, to raise by presentment out of the county cess, and by instalments, £10,000 to build a bridge. In 1851, when £1600 had been so raised, another Act was passed reciting that £1600 had been levied, and empowering the trustees to raise the entire unpaid balance of £8400 at the Spring Assizes of 1852. While the Act was passing through Parliament, and before it received the Royal assent, a further instalment of £1600 was presented by the grand jury under the Act of 1847. Held, that the Act of 1851 only authorised the levying of £6800, the unassessed and unpaid balance of the £10,000; the £8400 being an inaccurate calculation, by which the Court was not bound.

The entire £8400 having been levied, the Court ordered the trustees to bring in £1600 to the credit of a cause petition matter, by way of information and bill, and at the relation of one of the ratepayers. The trustees, with the approval, and in accordance with a resolution of the grand jury, brought into Parliament a bill to enable them to levy a further sum, which bill was thrown out by the Lords for non-compliance with the standing orders of the House. Held, that the trustees could not be allowed the costs of the bill.

A cause petition by way of information and bill should state, and proof should be given of, the individual interest of the person named as relator.

Quære—Whether the description of the relator as ratepayer, in the title of the petition and of the affidavit verifying the petition, is sufficient?—Att.-Gen. v. Le Hunte, 8 I. C. R. 743. (R.)

1. Worthington*, 14 I. C. R. 369. (C.A.)

II. 3. Annuity Act (53 G. 3, c. 141.)

2. A., residing at Brussels, by a deed prepared in England, executed there, and engrossed on English stamps; wherein he was described as of R. in Ireland; reciting that W. (an Englishman residing in England), had agreed to advance him £8000, in consideration of his paying W. £10,000, within six months after the death of A.'s father (then aged 76), if A.'s wife (then aged 41) survived A.'s father, and granting W. an annuity of £3000 a-year to commence from A.'s father's death; and that payment of the annuity and of the £10,000, should be secured on A.'s life estate discharge the Co.'s liabilities, and it not appearing that the shareholders have any liabilities other than those of their co-partnership.—Fawcett v. Hodges, 3 I. E. R. 282; Fl. & K. 100. (R.)—[Overruled: O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469. (H.L.)]

1. The Banking Act, 6 G. 4, c. 42, does not prevent a company from buying up the shares of an individual member. Although they dispense with the form of transfer prescribed by the Act, the sale will be binding as between them and the vendor.—Taylor v. Hughes, 7 I. E. R. 529; 2 Jon. & L. 24. (C.)

2. A., a stockbroker and notary-public, largely engaged in trade, received money from customers; paid it out upon their drafts; and occasionally discounted bills; but neither held himself out to the public as a banker, nor appeared to be considered one by them. In his books the entries of banking transactions were mixed up with those appertaining to his callings as a stockbroker and trader. Held, that he was not a banker within the 33 G. 2, c. 14.

Quære—Whether that statute applies to bankers who do not issue notes?—Stafford v. Henry, 12 I. E. R. 400. (E.E.)

3. A party trading openly as a banker found to be one within the 33 G. 2, c. 14, and 40 G. 3, c. 22, notwithstanding that he carried on another business more ostensible than that of banker. Held, that those Acts extended to all bankers—to those whose banks are not of issue, as well as to those whose banks are of issue.—In re Guinness, 1 I. Jur. 359. (M.O.)

4. Pending a petition for, but before the allowance by the Lord Ch. of a certificate under the Bankers Acts (33 G. 2, c. 14, and 40 G. 3, c. 22 (Ir.)), a banker not being entitled to be discharged from an arrest at law, cannot obtain an injunction to restrain a creditor from issuing execution against him.

But a creditor who had appeared on the hearing of the petition, and opposed the allowance of the certificate, and had filed a discharge under the order of reference, and thus made himself a party to the proceeding, was enjoined from issuing execution.—Guinness v. Fitzsimon, 13 I. E. R. 189. (R.)

5. The Crown is not bound by the Bankers Acts, 33 G. 2, c. 14 (Ir.); and 40 G. 3, c. 22 (Ir.).—The Queen v. Guinness, 3 I. C. R. 211. (C.)

6. An affirmative statute, which creates a new right, does not of itself and necessarily destroy a pre-existing right created by another statute not therein referred to; but will destroy that pre-existing right, if the Legislature's intention appears to have been that the new and old rights should not co-exist.

The 6 G. 4, c. 42, repealed the 33 G. 2, c. 14 (Ir.), so far as regards Irish Joint-stock Banks, although the former contains no mention of the latter statute, their provisions being incompatible.

A Joint-stock Banking Company in Ireland comes within the 8 & 9 Vic., c. 98.

A petition under the 33 G. 2, c. 14 (Ir.), on behalf of the petitioners and all the creditors of such a bank, to have assets administered under the trusts of that statute, is informal. The petition, if maintainable, should be on behalf of all the creditors of the persons constituting the bank; because the statute affords a remedy not confined to debts due by those persons in respect of the bank, but for their debts generally.

7. The Bankers Act, 33 G. 2, c. 14, does not apply to Joint-stock Banking Companies formed under the 6 G. 4, c. 42.—O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 I. C. R. 350; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 118. (C.)—[See 6 H. L. Cas. 142; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469. (H.L.)]

II. 9. Bankruptcy Acts.

[See 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60.]

8. A creditor, by judgment, entered pursuant to warrant of attorney, obtained an order for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, more than two calendar months before the issuing of a commission of bankruptcy against the respondent, the conusor. Held, that the assignee's execution was protected by sec. 95 from the operation of sec. 126 of the 6 W. 4, c. 14.—Read v. Davis, 3 I. E. R. 153. (R.)

9. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, s. 41, applies to ptfs. only. Therefore, when an assignee, a deft., dies, a supplemental bill is necessary to bring the new assignee before the Court.—Meagher v. O'Mara, 3 I. E. R. 471; Fl. & K. 269. (R.)

10. On March 8rd, 1841, petitioner obtained a conditional order for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, on a judgment entered in 1828, by warrant of attorney, against respondent, then a trader, and against whom a commission of bankruptcy issued within two months after that order was made absolute. On the assignee's motion,—Held, that this case came within the 6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 125, and that the receiver should be removed; that the proceedings in this matter having been, within one year after the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, became law, were not protected by its 22nd sec. It appearing that simple contract creditors of the respondent, who had been such before the 1st Nov. 1840, had proved under the commission,—Held, that they were entitled to the benefit of the proviso saving the right of purchasers, mortgagees, and creditors, and that the assignee was to be deemed entitled in their right.—Burt v. Bernard, 4 I. E. R. 328; Fl. & K. 414. (R.)—[Affd.: 5 I. E. R. 425. (C.)]

11. The 53 G. 3, c. 138, does not oust the jurisdiction of Chancery to entertain a bill by the assignee of a deceased insolvent, to administer his after-acquired property, on behalf of the unsatisfied creditors in the in-in remainder, after his father's death, in estates in Ireland; granted W. the annuity for A.'s wife's life, to be charged on those estates, and paid, at the dining hall of Lincoln's Inn, half-yearly; with clauses of distress and entry. A. demised the lands for 99 years, to secure the annuity and payment of the £10,000; and covenanted to pay that sum and the annuity. Semble, that the contract was an English one; and that the annuity deed not having been enrolled, was avoided by the English Annuity Act, 53 G. 3, c. 141.—Walker v. Lorton, 6 I. C. R. 329. (R.)

1. A. and B. being seized of lands in Ireland, and entitled to the interest on a mortgage of lands in Ireland, by deed of 1839, conveyed the lands and mortgage, to C. and D. during the lives of A. and B., and the life of the survivor, upon trust, by sale, mortgage, or grant of annuity, to raise a sum of money to pay off the debts of A. and B. By deed of the 15th of July 1840, A., B., C., and D. granted two annuities to E., to be charged upon, and issuing out of, the property comprised in the trust deed. A. and B., by this deed, covenanted to pay the annuities. By a deed of the 26th of June 1840, which recited the deed of the 15th of July 1840, as if it had been previously executed, A. and B. assigned their interest in a fund in the Court of Chancery in England, upon trust, among other things, to secure the annuities granted by the deed of the 15th of July. All the parties, except E., resided in England, and the preliminary agreement was made in Ireland, through an agent of C. and D., there resident. The deeds were executed by A., B., C., and D., in England, upon Irish stamps, but delivered to E. in Ireland, and warrants of attorney, to enter judgment in both countries against A. and B., further to secure the annuities, were also executed in England. The consideration for the annuities was paid in Ireland, in notes of the Bank of Ireland, and applied by the trustees on the trusts of the deed of 1839. Held, that the grant of these annuities came within the exception in the English Annuity Act, 53 G. 3, c. 141, s. 10, and was not voidable for want of compliance with the formalities imposed by that statute.

Held, further, that a puisne incumbrancer on A.'s interest could not impeach the annuities by a discharge in a suit to administer the fund (the produce of the mortgage) on which the annuities were a charge.—Bannatyne v. Barrington, 9 I. C. R. 406; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 459. (C.A.)

II. 4. Appointments (Illusory).

2. The statute (1 W. 4, c. 46) respecting illusory appointments validated in equity an appointment of a nominal or illusory share which was legally valid; but did not validate in equity an appointment which, because some of the power's objects were excluded, was invalid both at Law and in Equity.

When a power of appointment does not warrant the exclusion of any of its objects, an appointment to some of them; and, if they died under age and unmarried, to the others, is invalid.

A marriage settlement directed that a fund should be divided amongst children as the husband and wife, or the survivor of them should, by any deed or writing, or by his or her will appoint. The wife made an appointment by will, which the husband wrote and proved. Held, inoperative either as a joint appointment, or as an appointment by the survivor.—Minchin v. M., 3 I. C. R. 167. (R.)

II. 5. Arbitrations and Awards.

3. Semble—The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 63, does not apply to Courts of Equity.—Roche v. R., 8 I. E. R. 638. (R.)

4. A submission to arbitration, made a rule of Court by consent in a cause, is within the 10 W. 3, c. 14 (Ir.).—Goggin v. Downing, 13 I. E. R. 60. (R.)

5. The words "Money to become payable by the company under the award of the arbitrator," in the Railways Act (Ir.) 1860 (23 & 24 Vic., c. 97), s. 4, are to be construed as referring to an award not traversed.—In re Dublin Corp'n. Waterworks, 17 I. C. R. 16. (R.)

II. 6. Attorneys.

[See 29 & 30 Vic., c. 84.]

6. The rule to change an attorney on payment of costs is not an order under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 29.—Emmett v. Marnane, 8 I. E. R. 522. (E.E.)

II. 7. Bank of Ireland.

II. 8. Bankers.

[See 33 G. 2, c. 14.]

7. The 33 G. 2, c. 14 (Bankers Act), s. 3, applies to a conveyance made in favour of a child or grandchild unborn, as well as to a conveyance made in favour of a child or grandchild alive when the conveyance was executed.

Semble—The case of a jointure settled by a banker on his son's wife, on the son's marriage, is not within that sec.—Spearing v. Delacour, 1 Dr. & Wal. 591. (C.)

8. The Bankers Act, 33 G. 2, c. 14, was not repealed by the 6 G. 4, c. 42. Therefore, when a Joint-stock Banking Co., formed under the latter Act, stops payment, a trust is, under the Bankers Act, created in favour of the creditors, and affecting all the property of the shareholders, which this Court may administer at the suit of any creditor against the company's public officer; the suit being instituted without making the other creditors or the shareholders parties, and the bill stating that the co-partnership assets are sufficient to discharge the Co.'s liabilities, and it not appearing that the shareholders have any liabilities other than those of their co-partnership.—Fawcett v. Hodges, 8 I. E. R. 232; Fl. & K. 100. (R.)—[Overruled: O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469. (H.L.)]

1. The Banking Act, 6 G. 4, c. 42, does not prevent a company from buying up the shares of an individual member. Although they dispense with the form of transfer prescribed by the Act, the sale will be binding as between them and the vendor.—Taylor v. Hughes, 7 I. E. R. 529; 2 Jon. & L. 24. (C.)

In his books the entries of banking transactions were mixed up with those appertaining to his callings as a stockbroker and trader. Held, that he was not a banker within the 33 G. 2, c. 14.

Quære—Whether that statute applies to bankers who do not issue notes?—Stafford v. Henry, 12 I. E. R. 400. (E.E.)

3. 4. Pending a petition for, but before the allowance by the Lord Ch. of a certificate under the Bankers Acts (33 G. 2, c. 14, and 40 G. 3, c. 22 (Ir.)), a banker not being entitled to be discharged from an arrest at law, cannot obtain an injunction to restrain a creditor from issuing execution against him.

But a creditor who had appeared on the hearing of the petition, and opposed the allowance of the certificate, and had filed a discharge under the order of reference, and thus made himself a party to the proceeding, was enjoined from issuing execution.—Guinness v. Fitzsimon, 13 I. E. R. 189. (R.)

5. The Crown is not bound by the Bankers Acts, 33 G. 2, c. 14 (Ir.); and 40 G. 3, c. 22 (Ir.).—The Queen v. Guinness, 8 I. C. R. 211. (C.)

6. An affirmative statute, which creates a new right, does not of itself and necessarily destroy a pre-existing right created by another statute not therein referred to; but will destroy that pre-existing right, if the Legislature's intention appears to have been that the new and old rights should not co-exist.

The 6 G. 4, c. 42, repealed the 33 G. 2, c. 14 (Ir.), so far as regards Irish Joint-stock Banks, although the former contains no mention of the latter statute, their provisions being incompatible.

A Joint-stock Banking Company in Ireland comes within the 8 & 9 Vic., c. 98.

A petition under the 33 G. 2, c. 14 (Ir.), on behalf of the petitioners and all the creditors of such a bank, to have assets administered under the trusts of that statute, is informal. II. 9. Bankruptcy Acts.

[See 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60.]

8. A creditor, by judgment, entered pursuant to warrant of attorney, obtained an order for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, more than two calendar months before the issuing of a commission of bankruptcy against the respondent, the consor. Held, that the assignee's execution was protected by sec. 95 from the operation of sec. 126 of the 6 W. 4, c. 14.—*Read v. 9. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, s. 41, applies to ptfs. only. Therefore, when an assignee, a deft., dies, a supplemental bill is necessary to bring the new assignee before the Court.—Meagher v. O'Mara, 8 I. E. R. 471; Fl. & K. 269. (R.)

11. The 58 G. 3, c. 188, does not oust the jurisdiction of Chancery to entertain a bill by the assignee of a deceased insolvent, to administer his after-acquired property, on behalf of the unsatisfied creditors in the in-

solvent matter.—Byrne v. B., Fl. & K. 483. (R.)—[Affd.: 2 Dr. & War. 71; 1 Con. & L. 189; 4 I. E. R. 621. (C.)]

1. The 6 G. 4, c. 14, s. 126, which deprived creditors, who have obtained judgments by confession against their debtor, of preference in bankruptcy, has not been repealed by the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105.

Creditors by simple contract come within the terms of the proviso in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, which enacts "that, as regards purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors, who shall have become such before the time appointed for the commencement of this Act, such judgment shall not affect lands, &c., otherwise than as the same would have been affected by such judgments if this Act had not passed."—In re Perrin, 4 I. E. R. 362; 2 Dr. & War. 147; 1 Con. & L. 567. (C.)—[Affg.: 4 I. E. R. 89. (R.)]

2. A. having contracted to buy an estate, obtained a conveyance from the tenant for life, in 1835, in which the remainderman in fee did not join. In M. T. 1835, A. confessed a judgment to W. for £4000. In Feb. 1836, A. mortgaged the estate to E. for £5000. In June 1836, on a further advance of £2000 by W., A. mortgaged to W. for £6000. In March 1837, A. became bankrupt. The estate was deficient to pay both mortgages. Held, that the 6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 126, did not apply, and that W.'s judgment had priority over C.'s mortgage.—Balchwin v. Belcher, 6 I. E. R. 424; 1 Jon. & L. 18. (C.)

3. By the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, s. 20, the property vests in the assignee upon the making, not on the entering of record the vesting order.—Irwin v. I., 8 I. E. R. 9. (R.)

4. Statute 10 Car. 1. c. 6, s. 10, Ir. (13 Eliz., c. 5, Eng.), in favour of creditors, avoids only debts which would deprive them of such property as they could make available without their debtors' aid. A settlement by a tenant in tail in 1836, by which he opened and resettled his estate on himself for life, with remainder over, is not within it.

The solvency or insolvency of the debtor affords no certain test whether a deed is void under that Act; each case must be judged by all its circumstances.

The 6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 87 (6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 73, Eng.), is retrospective as to conveyances made before the Act.

Semble—It is not so touching commissions before the Act.—Clements v. Eccles, 11 I. E. R. 229. (C.)

5. A bankrupt, travelling from London to Dublin, learned at Liverpool that a commission had issued against him. On the 21st March, he proceeded to Dublin to surrender; but, finding that he was not bound to do so until the 24th, deferred it until then. Meanwhile he was arrested. Held, that he was not entitled, as being on his way to surrender, to be discharged under the 6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 136.

A commission of bankruptcy was issued pending a motion to set aside a verdict in an action against the bankrupt, the petitioning creditor being the plaintiff's clerk, and having bought up bills for the purpose of creating a petitioning creditor's debt, and the bankrupt's own conduct was suspicious. Held, that although the commission may have been collusively issued to prevent the bankrupt resisting the action, yet, as there were other creditors for whose benefit it could be worked, it should not be superseded.

The fact that a commission of bankruptcy is issued for an indirect and improper object, is not a ground for superseding it, if that be not the sole object.—In re Wall, 12 I. E. R. 285. (C.)

6. Under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, s. 85, the Insolvent Court had not jurisdiction to order that an insolvent be re-heard upon the matter of his petition and schedule before an Assistant-Barrister, who, in adjudicating upon the case, pursuant to the 14 & 15 Vic., c. 57, s. 119, has fallen into a mistake in law.—In re G—, 2 I. C. R. 361; 3 I. Jur. 136, 279. (I.C.)

7. The 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, repeals the 6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 126.—In re Ryan, 3 I. C. R. 83. (B.)

8. By the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 107, s. 108, a judgment against a bankrupt is reduced to the rank of a simple contract debt.—Jones v. Stokes, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (R.)

9. When an insolvent is in custody, and has made a pauper declaration (s. 240), and has not made satisfaction for the debt, &c., the detaining creditor may forthwith, after notice in the Gazette, file a petition of insolvency under sec. 241, and is not bound, and ought not, to wait until the expiration of the twenty-one days mentioned in sec. 183.—In re Pratt, 8 I. C. R. 386. (B.)

11. When a trader debtor summons has been served on a debtor who subsequently files a petition for arrangement, the enlargement of the time given by the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, s. 11, to answer it is entirely in the discretion of the Court, which will be influenced by considering whether or not the arrangement will probably be sanctioned by it.—In re Dobson, 8 I. C. R. 388. (B.)

12. A petition of arrangement was presented under sec. 343. The petitioner was a member of a subsisting trading co-partnership, and a large proportion of the debts for which the petitioner proposed to arrange were partnership debts. It did not appear that any agreement had been made between the petitioner and the remaining partners whereby the latter were to take on themselves the payment of the partnership debts. The Court refused to grant the prayer of the petitioner, and left the trader to proceed in Bankruptcy.—In re Parrott, 8 I. C. R. 391.

1. After an order for protection under the arrangement clauses of the Irish B. and I. Act, 1857, has been made, the Court has not jurisdiction to dismiss the petition, except for the causes mentioned in sec. 353 of that Act. The Judge of the Bankrupt Court having dismissed a petition presented under those clauses, for a reason not mentioned in that section, one of the Assistant Registrars of the Court, by the direction of the Judge, attended on the hearing of an appeal against the order dismissing the petition, to inform the Court of Appeal that no question of jurisdiction had been raised in the Court below. Held, that the petition had been improperly dismissed, and that the order dismissing it ought to be reversed.—In re Craig, 8 I. C. R. 393; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 394. (C.A.)

2. In a bankruptcy of long standing (commission dated 1814), a portion of the estate was unexpectedly realised in the I. E. Court in 1853. Dividends were struck on the separate estates of three partners of the bankrupt firm on the 30th October 1855. A number of the creditors did not appear to claim their dividends. In 1859 an application was made on the part of a creditor, who had appeared, for a re-distribution of the unclaimed dividends. Held, that since the repeal of the 6 W. 4, c. 16, by the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, the Court has not jurisdiction to order such re-distribution. The right to such dividends remains in the non-claiming creditors, or their representatives. The present Act does not provide for the disposal of such unclaimed dividends. The principle that non-claimers for three years affords a reasonable presumption that the debts have been satisfied has no application in an old bankruptcy. In such a case the Court, if it had jurisdiction to order a re-distribution, would not exercise it.—In re French, 9 I. C. R. 1. (B.)

3. Under the trader debtor sections of the Irish Bankrupt Act, the Court may enquire into all the facts of the case, and not permit the trader to make an affidavit of a good defence on the merits. Under the sections of the English Act, the Court must receive the affidavit.—Re Fivey, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 22. (B.)

4. An Assistant Barrister, having ascertained the merits of an insolvent's case, adjourned it to the next Q. Sessions, and directed the protection to be withdrawn. This Court refused to entertain an application for a bail rule, or for liberty to apply to the Court of Q. B. for a writ of habeas corpus to bring up the insolvent to be heard in Dublin. To such a case the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, s. 202, does not apply.—In re Paul, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 20. (B.)—[A writ of h. c. refused by the Q. B.; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 152.]

5. The 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, is not an unqualified repeal of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107. It is rather a re-enactment of portions of that Act, so far as relates to proceedings pending at the time of the passing of the present Act. The 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, s. 217, does not in all cases operate retrospectively.

When proceedings were pending in Insolvency at the passing of the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, and creditors had then incurred liabilities and acquired rights, those liabilities and rights were regulated by the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107. The rule as to election in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, s. 71, still prevails.

The creditor is not bound to elect, until he has an opportunity of seeing which fund is most productive.—In re Browne, 9 I. C. R. 271. (B.)

6. A., to secure £160 due from him to B., assigned articles by a bill of sale, which provided that A. was to pay the £160, with interest, by instalments, and that, if he paid the £160, with interest, the bill of sale should be void; and that A. should have the use of the furniture so long as he continued to pay the instalments regularly. The first and second instalments were paid. Before the third fell due, A. filed a declaration of insolvency, upon which he was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt. Held, that the furniture passed to the assignees under the order and disposition clause, 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, s. 313.—In re Murray, 9 I. C. R. 281. (B.)

7. A. and B., partners in trade, became bankrupt. C. proved upon the joint estate. D., another creditor, upon an affidavit that the debt for which C. proved was "not justly due," it being the private debt of one of the partners, applied, ex parte, under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, s. 263, for an order to examine witnesses, with the view of having the proof expunged, and a dividend, received by C., refunded.

Notice of the application directed to be served on the trade assignee and upon C. Motions under the 263rd sec. must, upon the practice of the Court, be upon such notice.

Semble—When the joint estate of a partnership firm is being administered, the private debt of one of the partners is a debt "not justly due" within sec. 263.—In re Ferrar, 9 I. C. R. 289. (B.)

8. On the morning of the hearing the solicitor of an opposing creditor informed the insolvent's solicitor of his intention to persist in his opposition. In the momentary absence of the creditor's solicitor the case was called on; and, no one being present to oppose, a discharge was pronounced by the Judge. Immediately after, the creditor's solicitor coming in, asked for a re-hearing. Held, that a solicitor does not, by communicating with the solicitor on the other side, lay him under any obligation, or constitute him his agent to convey such a communication to the Court; and, therefore, that the Court cannot in such a case annul or review the adjudication under the 233rd sec. of the Bankrupt and Insolvent Act, on the ground that it was improperly or fraudulently obtained.

The discharge pronounced by the Judge under the 212th sec. is a final and conclusive adjudication; it is not necessary to its completeness that the written order and the warrant to the gaoler (under sec. 219) should be made out by the officer of the Court.

When such an adjudication has been pronounced by the lips of the Judge, he has no power to set it aside under the 236th sec., on the ground that the discharge was a mistake.—In re Logan, 9 I. C. R. 569; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (B.)

1. A. employed B., a builder, to take down the front wall of his house, and execute some other repairs. While the works were in progress, C., the occupier of the adjoining house, served a notice upon A., that injury was likely result to his house from the repairs, and that he would hold A. responsible. B. upon this being mentioned to him, wrote on the estimate of the works the following memorandum:—

"In carrying out the foregoing work, I hereby undertake to hold myself responsible for any injury done to the adjoining houses."

Some works in addition to these in the estimate were done, the contract was completed, and B. paid in full for all. C. brought an action against A., averring negligence, and alleging various injuries to his house from the works. B., upon being called upon to settle or defend the action, made no reply, and soon after became bankrupt and absconded. A., having had to pay £191. 7s. 11d., damages and costs, and £60, his own expenses in the action, sought to prove for £251. 7s. 11d. Held, that (supposing the memorandum to constitute a contract upon a valuable consideration) the damages which C. might recover against A. were not necessarily identical with those contemplated by the guarantee; and that A. could not prove for the above sum, either as for a debt payable upon a contingency, within s. 257, or as for a liability to pay money upon a contingency, within s. 258.—In re Quin, 11 I. C. R. 57. (B.)

2. Under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, s. 267, the adjudication in Ireland vests, so far as the law of this country is concerned, in the assignees the bankrupt's property situate in a foreign state.—In re Robinson, 11 I. C. R. 385; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (B.)

3. P. & Co. sold to the bankrupt several parcels of whiskey in bond. Delivery orders were made out by P. & Co., their store-keeper, to deliver the whiskey to H. or order. The payment was by bills. H. endorsed some of the delivery orders to C. for value before bankruptcy, and C. presented these orders to the store-keeper of H. Some formalities were required to be gone through at the Custom-house, and the whiskey was not immediately delivered to C. Nothing remained to be done by P. & Co., in order to complete the sale to H.

Under these circumstances, P. & Co. claimed the whiskey, as unpaid vendors having a right of stoppage in transitu. C. claimed it as endorsee for value of the delivery order, and the assignees in bankruptcy claimed it under the order and disposition clause. Held, that the transitus was complete on the receipt of the delivery order by H., and therefore no right of stoppage in transitu remained in P. & Co.

That the whiskey was not in the order and disposition of H. at the date of the bankruptcy, and therefore the assignees had no title.

That C. was entitled to the whiskey.—In re Hughes, 12 I. C. R. 450 and 463; 6 I. Jur. N. S., 260 and 7 I. Jur. N. S. 336. (B.)

4. R., of the firm of L. & Co., was made a bankrupt in Ireland. The other member of the firm was made bankrupt in England. R. having obtained his certificate, applied for an allowance under sec. 302. Held, that the allowance should be calculated on his separate estate, and on his share of the joint estate; but not on the whole joint estate.—[Ex parte Lomas, 4 Dea & Ch. 240, approved of.]—In re Lunham, 12 I. C. R. 471; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 403. (B.)

5. The 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, s. 268, does not vest a bankrupt's lease in his assignees so as to make them liable to its covenants and conditions before election, even though in possession; and the 23 & 24 Vic., c. 154, ss. 14, 15, are inapplicable; and sec. 271, regulating the bankrupt's liabilities, recognises also the obligation of the assignees, and protects the landlord.—Re E. Ellis, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 19. (B.)

6. A Ry. Co. is "a Joint-stock Company" within the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, and, as such, is liable to be made bankrupt.—In re Bagnallstown and Wexford Railway Co., 15 I. C. R. 491. (C.A.)

II. 10. Baths and Wash-houses Act.

7. By the Baths and Wash-houses Act, 9 & 10 Vic., c. 87, the town council of a borough, or the commissioners of a city or town, are empowered from time to time to contract for the purchasing or renting of any lands necessary for the purposes of the Act, and to contract for the purchase or lease of any baths and wash-houses already or thereafter to be built and provided in any such borough or such city or town, and appropriate the same to the purposes of the Act; and it was provided that the baths and wash-houses so purchased or leased should be deemed to be within the provisions of the Act as fully as if they had been built or provided by the said council or town commissioners. "Lands" are defined by the Act to mean lands, tenements, or hereditaments, of whatsoever nature or tenure.

The town council of a borough contracted to purchase baths and wash-houses which had been commenced by a private society, and were held under a sub-lease of a portion of lands comprised in a lease of lands demised by the owner of the fee, and which were thus subject to a rent, in addition to the rent reserved in the sub-lease, and to the covenants and conditions in the original lease. Held (affirming the decision of the M. R.), that it would be a breach of trust for the town council to purchase lands, the interest in which might be lost by the default of others, and that specific performance ought not to be enforced.—[Dissentiente, the Lord Chancellor,

II. 11. Bills pro Confesso, and others.

1. The 25 G. 3, c. 51, s. 3, applies to cases in which the ptf. dismisses his bill by rule in the office; not to cases in which it is dismissed by the act of the Court.—Bunbury v. O'Brien, H. & J. 808. (E.E.)

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44. See also PRACTICE, XX, a. 1; Ch. Reg. Ir. Act.]

2. A cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act is open to an objection for multifariousness.—Cuming v. Taylor, 1 I. C. R. 25; 3 I. Jur. 65. (C.)

3. When a petition, in the nature of a special case, is presented under the Court of Ch. Reg. Act, s. 11, it is not necessary to the maintenance of such a petition that all the parties interested in the question for adjudication should concur in the statement of facts put forward in the petition.—In re O'Reilly, 1 I. C. R. 208; 3 I. Jur. 205. (C.)

4. It may be observed, that previously to the Court of Ch. (Ir.) Reg. Act 1850, no step could have been taken in a minor matter without a petition. Under that statute minors may be made wards of Court by cause petition; and if they are now made wards of Court by a cause petition, instead of an ordinary petition, all subsequent orders may be made on motion and without petition, and expense will thus be saved to minors' estates.—Hart v. Carleton, 1 I. C. R. 231; 3 I. Jur. 181. (R.)

5. When a petition is referred summarily under the 15th sec., the Master has power to deal with all questions of multifariousness in the absence of parties.—Taylor v. Young, 1 I. C. R. 650; 4 I. Jur. 88. (C.)

6. A petition to take partnership accounts comes within the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, even though it prays for a dissolution of the partnership, or the respondent denies the existence of the partnership.

Object of bringing petitions under that sec. before the Court, in the first instance.—Walsh v. Kinnelly, 4 I. C. R. 510. (C.)

7. On an appeal from an order of the M. R., in a matter referred to the Master, under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, the appellant begins.—Dunlevie v. Hort, 6 I. C. R. 82, reversed.

The cases of Thomas v. Pinnell, 15 Beav. 148, and In re Moylan, 16 Beav. 220, held, not to be inconsistent with the former authorities, and approved of.—Dunlevie v. Hort, 6 I. C. R. 99; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 293. (C.A.)

8. Orders under the 1st sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act and the 32nd Order of July 1851, should state the character and right in which the parties to them are to be bound.—Swan v. Doak, 6 I. C. R. 55. (R.)

9. A minor may be bound by an order under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 1, and 32nd Order of July 1851. Form of such order.—Fry v. Johnson, 6 I. C. R. 56. (R.)

10. The jurisdiction given by the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, does not extend to a petition to appoint a new trustee, when it prays the removal of an existing trustee.—Mills v. O'Loughlin, 6 I. C. R. 565. (C.)

II. 16. Charge and Charging Order.

[See CHARGING ORDER.]

11. The 6 W. 4, c. 14, s. 126, has not been repealed by the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105.

Creditors by simple contract are within the proviso in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, in favour of "purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors."

A statute may operate upon a subsequent statute, without express words.—In re Perrin, 4 I. E. R. 89. (R.)—[Affd.: 4 I. E. R. 362; 2 Dr. & War. 147; 1 Con. & L. 567. (C.)]

12. A judgment creditor, seeking to have his debt charged under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, upon a fund, impounded and standing in the name of the Acct.-Gen. of the Court of Ch., ought to present his petition to that Court in the first instance. If he resorts to a Court of Law for the charging order, he must afterwards obtain from this Court liberty for the Acct.-Gen. to act under it, so as to prevent a clashing of jurisdiction. The Acct.-Gen. of this Court has not any right to attend to an order inconsistent with or varying an order of this Court, without its special direction so to do.—Gore v. G., 4 I. E. R. 164. (R.)

13. In a foreclosure suit a surplus remained after payment of the reported incumbrances. The mortgagor being dead, a pulse judgment creditor sought, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 23, 24, an order to charge, with the amount of his judgment, that surplus, which was the residue of the price of real estate sold under the decree. Held, that that surplus must be deemed either real estate belonging to the judgment debtor's heir-at-law, or personality belonging to his personal representatives; and that the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, does not empower the Court to attach by charging order a deceased debtor's property in the hands of his representative.

Semble—It is very questionable whether the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, extends to money.—Wallace v. McCann, 4 I. E. R. 522; Fl. & K. 570. (R.)—[See McAllister v. Murray, 5 I. L. R. 92.]

1. A married woman was entitled during the joint lives of herself and her husband to the interest of specified stock to her sole use, without power of anticipation. There were limitations over respecting the principal in favour of herself and her husband. Upon petition by a judgment creditor of both, the Court made an order under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, charging the judgment on the stock, without prejudice to her right to receive the interest during coverture.—Carter v. Mahon, 4 I. E. R. 305; Fl. & K. 342. (R.)

2. The exception in the latter part of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, applies as well to cases in which the judgment creditor proceeds by petition, as to those in which he files a bill.—McDermott v. Moylan, Long. & T. 555. (E.E.)

3. The Court has jurisdiction to direct satisfaction to be entered upon the registry of an order under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105.

The Court made the order upon an affidavit of payment, and a consent signed by the party in whose favour the original order to pay the money had been made.—O'Neill v. Bass, 6 I. E. R. 307. (R.)

4. When a charging order has been obtained by a judgment creditor upon funds reported to his debtor in the cause, the Court will, after the expiration of the six months from the date of the order, direct the funds to be transferred to the creditor on motion, without a bill being filed.—Burke v. B., 7 I. E. R. 174. (R.)

5. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 23, 24, are to be read in connection. The charging order under that statute is first a conditional order ex parte to be made absolute, which last is the order contemplated by sec. 23.—In re Dunscombe, 9 I. E. R. 4. (R.)

6. This Court has jurisdiction to set aside a fraudulent sale in the Insolvent Court; but it will not be exercised if there be a remedy in the latter Court.

A judgment creditor of 1843, during the life of the conuzor, filed a bill to redeem a judgment of 1842, obtained for a debt which was also secured by a lease to the creditor, reserving a rent which was to be retained until the debt was paid; and for a sale, to pay the sum advanced for redemption and his own debt. Held, that he was entitled to redeem, and to have an assignment of the prior creditor's security; but not to a sale, there being creditors before Nov. 1840.

Semble—A detaining creditor of an insolvent cannot file a bill for a sale on foot of his judgment, under 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105.—Maguire v. O'Reilly, 9 I. E. R. 335; 3 Jon. & L. 224. (C.)

7. A decree against several, for payment of costs is joint and several; and, a receiver may be appointed over the lands of one of them, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, without making the others parties to the petition.—Archbp. of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 13 I. E. R. 98. (R.)

8. To obtain a charging order under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, it is not necessary to revive the judgment. Therefore, the Court granted an order on the petition of husband and wife on a judgment obtained by the wife dum sola, without its having been revived.—Irwin v. Nesbit, 13 I. E. R. 125. (R.)

9. When a charging order has been obtained by a judgment creditor upon funds reported to a creditor in a cause, the Court, when there is no controversy as to the right to the fund charged, will direct it to be paid to the petitioner, without bill.—Fulton v. Farran; Blake v. French, 1 I. Jur. 66. (R.)

10. Although the exact amount of a share to which a party is entitled in government stock, standing in the names of trustees, or in the books of the Acct.-General, to the credit of a cause, is unascertained; yet, if it be ascertained by decree that that party is entitled to a share of such stock, that share may be charged under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 23, 24.—White v. O'Grady, 2 I. C. R. 333. (R.)

11. A., judgment debtor of B., was entitled to an annuity payable by C., who drew a cheque in A.'s favour for a gale of the annuity; and wrote to B., that the cheque was in his (C.'s) hands. Held, that this cheque could not be attached under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 20.—Ex parte Smythe; in re Cottrell a minor, 5 I. Jur. 41. (R.)

12. A policy of insurance is not a "security for money" which the sheriff can seize under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 20.—Alleyne v. Darcy, 5 I. C. R. 56. (C.)

13. An equitable mortgagee, by deposit of railway shares, is entitled to priority over a prior judgment creditor of the mortgagor who has obtained an order charging the shares, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, subsequently to the mortgage.

Quære—Whether the doctrine of Dearle v. Hall, 3 Russ. 1, applies to an equitable assignment of railway shares?—Dunster v. Gleggall, 3 I. C. R. 47; 5 I. Jur. 337. (R.)

14. Funds in Court in an administration suit were decreed to be paid to A., as "administrator of his late wife;" but the Master's report had not been made showing what money was payable to A., or whether he was entitled to any sum in his own right. B., a judgment creditor of A., sought to obtain a charging order, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 23, 24, upon the funds in Court to the credit of the suit, or whatever portion thereof A. should be found entitled to. Held, that A. had not such an interest in the goods in Court as that they could be charged by an order under that Act.—Burns v. Owen, 6 I. Jur. 192. (R.)

1. A., who had a charge upon lands, became an insolvent, but afterwards had his petition dismissed upon the consent of the assignee. The lands were sold in the Landed Estates Court. Creditors of A. obtained charging orders upon his interest in the proceeds, and A. assigned his claim to B. for an insufficient amount. Held, that the creditors of A., who had charging orders, were entitled to avoid the assignment to B., and that in any event it could only stand as security for the amount paid by B.—Roche v. Hassard, 5 I. C. R. 14; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 246. (C.)

2. On the 30th June, F. obtained a conditional order under the C. L. P. Act, to attach a fund in Ch. It was served on the judgment debtor on the 11th July, was made absolute on the 8th August, and was lodged with the Acct.-General on the 14th Nov.

On the 1st August another creditor obtained a conditional order in Ch. against the same fund, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105. That order was lodged with the Acct.-General on the 7th August, was served on the judgment creditor on the 21st August, and made absolute on the 13th Nov. Held, that the order made in Ch. was the first charge upon the fund.—French v. Balfie, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 48. (C.A.)—[Affg. Rolls decision, 6 I. C. R. 63; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 299. (R.)]

3. J., entitled to a charge upon land, died under age, unmarried, and intestate, leaving her father P. her sole next-of-kin, who before her death had been discharged under the Insolvent Act. C., a son of P., took out administration to J. The amount of the charge was realised in the I. E. Court, and paid into the Court of Ch., where it was transferred in the Accountant-General's books to the separate credit of the administrator of J. Held, that P. had an interest in that fund, which could be attached by a charging order.

Semle—Per Lord Justice of Appeal, that the administrator of J. could not rely on the insolvency as an objection to the charging order.—Brownrigg v. Colclough, 7 I. C. R. 524; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 329. (C.)

4. The owner of an estate sold in the L. E. Ct. was held to be estopped from objecting, upon the settlement of the final schedule of incumbrances, to a claim which he had admitted, in his affidavit filed as an answer to the conditional order for sale, to be a charge upon the estate. He had also suffered the conditional order to be made absolute, and a sale to be had, without disputing the claim in question.

An incumbrancer cannot avail himself of an objection filed by another party to the validity of a claim, to which he has not himself filed an objection.—In re Power's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 295. (C.A.)

5. The Court has not jurisdiction under 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 23, 24, to make a charging order against cash standing to the credit of the Sutors' Fee-fund, and ordered to be paid to a judgment debtor, on account of his pension as a retired Registrar of the Court of Chancery in Ireland.

Semle—Such a pension should be paid out of the Consolidated Fund, if the Sutors' Fee-fund proves insufficient, and is not a government annuity within the meaning of that Act.—Quin v. O'Keeffe, 9 I. C. R. 331; 4 I. Jur. N. S. 167. (R.)

6. A judgment debtor was a retired officer of the Court of Ch., and thus entitled to a pension charged upon the sutors' fee-fund, by virtue of the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 135. A quarterly instalment of the pension having become due, the judgment creditor obtained a charging order in the Court of Q. B., under the C. L. P. Act 1853, against it. Held, that the Court of Ch. had not jurisdiction to enforce such charging order.

Semle—That such an instalment was not liable to be attached under the last mentioned statute, not being money in Court in a suit in a matter under the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court.—Quin v. O'Keeffe, 10 I. C. R. 151; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 65. (C.)

[This decision was appealed from, and argued before the Court of Appeal; and having stood over for judgment, was directed to be re-argued; when a compromise was entered into.—10 I. C. R. 262. (C.A.)]

II. 17. Charities and Mortmain.

7. On a petition presented under the 52 G. 3, c. 101, the Court has jurisdiction to authorise the establishment of a charity cy-pres.—In re Lady Belvidere's Charity, 2 I. E. R. 354. (E.E.)

8. All the English Statutes of Mortmain, earlier than the 10 H. 7, c. 22 (Poyning's Law), are in force in Ireland. A license by the Crown to a corporation to hold lands in mortmain, granted before the passing of the 32 G. 3, c. 31, is good and sufficient.—Incorporated Society v. Richards, 4 I. E. R. 177; 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58. (C.)

9. Charities are bound by the Statute of Limitations.—Commrs. of Ch. Don. & Beg. v. Wybrants, 7 I. E. R. 580; 2 Jon. & L. 182. (C.)

10. To bring a case within the exception in the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 45, s. 2 (Dissenters Chapel Bill), the instrument declaring the trust, or some book or other document referred to in it, must contain in express terms the particular religious doctrines or opinions, or mode of worship required or forbidden. A general gift of money in trust to be applied towards building a new meeting-house of the Protestant Dissenting Congregation then of New-row, for the service and worship of God in that way—Held, not within the exception.—Att.-General v. Hutton, 7 I. E. R. 612. (C.)

11. Quære—Are trusts for charitable purposes within the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27?—Att.-Gen. v. Persse, 2 Dr. & War. 67. (C.)

12. The Charitable Bequests Act, 7 & 8 Vic., c. 97, authorising the Commissioners of Ch.

Don. to sue for devises or bequests, withheld, concealed, or misapplied; and to apply them according to the devisor's intention; gives them an interest which entitles them to file a bill to remove a testamentary trustee for a charity, and appoint new trustees. The proceeding need not be by information.

Relief will be granted because of the mere personal unfitness of the trustee.—Comms. of Ch. Don. v. Archbold, 11 I. E. R. 187. (C.)—[Reversed: 2 H. Lds. Cas. 440.]

1. The doctrine of civil death by profession ceased to be law at the Reformation, and was not revived by the R. C. E. Act (10 G. 4, c. 7). Therefore the Court granted a receiver, on a bill filed to raise the arrears of an annuity devised in trust for a lady, who afterwards became a nun, during such period of her natural life as she should continue unmarried.—Evans v. Cassidy, 11 I. E. R. 243. (R.)

2. The Court has not power to set aside the valuation of all livings, &c., made by the Eccl. Comms., in pursuance of the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37.

The 11 & 12 Vic., c. 80, reciting that doubts had arisen whether the Eccl. Comms. were authorised to allow any sum for poor-rate under the words "other charges" in the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37, enacted that it should be lawful for them to deduct the poor-rate from any valuation made or to be made. Held, that the Act was not declaratory, and did not apply to a tax made on a valuation, and due before the Act.—Eccl. Comms. v. Armstrong, 12 I. E. R. 445. (R.)

3. Town Commissioners constituted by 3 & 4 Vic., c. 108, represent the Sovereign and old Corporation of the Hospital of Holy Trinity and New Ross.—Att.-Gen. v. Tottenham, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 107.

4. A bequest of money to build a church in Ireland is not within the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 97, s. 16; and is therefore valid, though the will be made within three months of the testator's death.—Pollock v. Day, 14 I. C. R. 297. (R.)—[Affirmed: ibid, 371. (C.A.)]

II. 18. Church Temporalities Act.

[See ECCLESIASTICAL PERSONS, II, ante, p. 245. For list of Statutes, see p. 241.]

5. The immediate lessee of an ecclesiastical landlord purchasing the perpetuity under statute 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37, on conveying the perpetuity to a sub-tenant, is not entitled to interest on the purchase-money, though a considerable time may have elapsed from the date of his own purchase, and although he may have secured the purchase-money by mortgage under section 155, and so have been paying interest on it himself.

Semble—In petition matters under the 158rd section, on the return of the Master's report, the Court is confined to such an order as could be made under the original reference, or on objections to the report.—Brabazon v. Lord Lucan, 9 I. E. R. 540. (C.)

II. 19. Clergy.

[See ECCLESIASTICAL PERSONS, ante, p. 243—as to their Property, see ib. II, ante, p. 245.]

6. The 10 Car. 1, sess. 3, c. 1, extends only to Archbishops and Bishops, and applies only to conveyances other than by will.—Att.-Gen. v. Flood, Hayes, 611. (E.E.)

II. 20. Companies Clauses Consolidation Act (8 & 9 Vic., c. 16.)

[See also JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES, ante, p. 440; RAILWAYS, ante, p. 1164.]

7. Held, affirming the decision of the Commissioner of Bankrupts, I. C. R. 236, that a Railway Co., proving against the estate of a bankrupt for calls, must deduct the price or value of the shares from the amount of their claim, or give up the shares for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt.

Held, in reversal of the decision, that railway calls payable by instalments may be enforced.

That the day appointed for payment of the last instalment may be deemed the day upon which the call is payable; and that twenty-one days' notice previous thereto is a valid notice within the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, s. 22.

Semble—The non-subscription of the prescribed capital is not a good defence to an action for calls.—In re Jennings, 1 I. C. R. 654. (C.)

II. 21. Contempt.

[See 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16.]

8. Rule 10 of the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16, applies to cases in which the debt, in contempt has been turned over to the Marshal's custody.

Its 9th Rule does not apply to a case in which the discovery is not sought for the purposes of the suit, but with reference to future litigation.—Creagh v. Mahony, 2 Jones, 842. (E.E.)

II. 27. Decrees: Enrolment, &c.

[See also PRACTICE, XXXIV--DECREE, ante, p. 893.]

2. A writ of fi. fa., sued out under a decree or order of the Court, by virtue of the 4 & 5 Vic., c. 105, s. 27, must correspond with the decree or order.—Money Penny v. De Massy, 1 I. C. R. 597. (R.)

3. If a decree directs a sum of money, ascertained by a report made or to be made, to be paid, the report is, by reference, to be considered incorporated in the decree; and the report and decree may be enrolled under the 41 G. 3, c. 90, s. 36.—Rosborough v. Boyse, 8 I. C. R. 540. (R.)

II. 28. Dower.

[See DOWER, ante, p. 237; 10 Car. 1, s. 2, c. 1; 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 105; 12 & 13 Vic., c. 105, s. 9; 14 & 15 Vic., c. 120.]

II. 29. Drainage and Draining.

[See DRAINAGE ACTS, ante, p. 240.]

4. The Irish Drainage Act (5 & 6 Vic., c. 89, ss. 76, 79) gives the costs of the investment, in gov. stock, of the purchase-money of lands taken by the Commissioners of Public Works, as well as the costs of a subsequent purchase of lands.

The Court will not refer it to a Master to approve of a purchase, unless a particular purchase is stated.—King v. The Commrs. of Public Works, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 76. (R.)

5. The Commissioners of Drainage, without exceeding their jurisdiction, carried on works in a manner so negligent and expensive that the sum stated in their award very largely exceeded that stated in their engineer's estimate, on the faith of which the proprietors of the lands had assented to the works. Held, that (assuming that the facts stated in the petition were proved), an action would lie by those proprietors against the Commissioners; and that the Court had power, and was bound to grant an injunction against the signing and enrolling of the award until the action, which the petitioners undertook to bring, had been determined.—Stubber v. Hornsby, 2 I. C. R. 449; 5 I. Jur. 281. (R.)

6. Quit rent is a debt or incumbrance affecting the land in payment of which money lodged in Court, and awarded as compensation for damages occasioned by works carried on by the Commissioners of Public Works, may be applied under the 69th sec. of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act.

Advances to a tenant for life, under the Drainage Act (5 & 6 Vic., c. 89), should not be paid out of the fund so lodged in Court; such fund representing the corpus of the estate; and the tenant for life being bound to pay the annual instalments which fall due during his lifetime; it being possible that all instalments may become payable during his life.—In re Commrs. of Public Works, ex parte Studdert, 6 I. C. R. 53. (R.)

7. By the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 51, transferring the equitable jurisdiction of the Court of Exchequer to the Court of Ch., recognizances entered into in a cause depending in the Exchequer are transferred to Ch., and may be sued upon at the Petty-bag side.—The Queen v. Jones, 4 I. Jur. 265. (C.)

8. Recognizances enrolled in the Court of Exchequer in Ireland were, by the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 51, transferred to the Court of Ch. in Ireland, and may be sued upon at the Petty-bag side.—The Queen v. Jones, 5 I. Jur. 287. (C.)

9. Specialty debts, in which heirs are not bound, have not priority over simple contract debts in the administration of real estate under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 104.—Cummins v. C., 8 I. E. R. 723; 3 Jon. & L. 64. (C.)

10. Nothing short of an actual renunciation will come within the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 84.—In the Goods of Usher, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 72. (P.)

11. There is not any Irish statute corresponding with the 21 H. 8, c. 4 (Eng.). Therefore, if two executors have a power to sell real estates, and one of them renounces, the power cannot be exercised by the other.—Thompson v. Todd, 15 I. C. R. 887. (R.)

II. 36. Factors Act.

1. In a composition, after bankruptcy, a manager was appointed by resolution of the creditors, with a definite duty in managing a grazing and farming estate. He wrote to the auctioneer stating that the auctioneer could deduct from the proceeds of the auction the amount due on his (the writer's) promissory note. The auctioneer knew that the writer was then acting as manager of the estate. Held, that the auctioneer could not, under the Factors Act, or in any other way, make title to the proceeds of the sale of all the bankrupt's stock taken possession of under colour of the authority given by the manager's letter.—Re P. Grehan, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 40. (B.)

II. 37. Fines and Recoveries.

[See 21 G. 2, c. 11: abolished by 3 & 4 W., 4, c. 74. See ESTATE, II.]

II. 38. Forfeiture for Treason and Felony.

II. 39. Frauds.

[See also FRAUD, ante, p. 346.]

2. The purchaser of lands by auction signed a memorandum of agreement annexed to the conditions of sale, stating the purchase, and that he paid into the vendor's hands £300 deposit. The vendor's name did not appear, either in the conditions of sale, or on the face of the agreement. Subsequently the vendor's name was fully disclosed in several written communications. Held, that they might be connected with the memorandum of agreement signed by the purchaser; and, taken together, constituted a sufficient note in writing binding both parties under the Statute of Frauds, although neither the original agreement, nor the conditions of sale contained the vendor's name.—Irvine v. Deane, 2 I. Jur. 209. (C.)

3. The separate estate of a femme covert is liable in equity when she has obtained goods upon credit, though there be no written contract, nor any reference to her separate estate. If it be an interest in realty, the Statute of Frauds prevents the enforcement of that liability, if there be not any writing.—Burke v. Tuite, 10 I. C. R. 467. (C.)

II. 40. Fraudulent Conveyances and Devises.

[See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF; 13 Car. 1, c. 6 (Ir.); 13 Eliz., c. 5 (Eng.).]

4. Semble—The protection, given to a purchaser under the statute against fraudulent conveyances, is not to be confined to cases in which the first and second conveyances are made by the same person.—Blake v. Hyland, 2 Dr. & Wal. 397. (C.)

5. The 10 Car. 1, c. 6, s. 10 (13 Eliz., c. 5, Eng.), in favour of creditors, avoids only deeds which would deprive them of property which they could, without their debtor's aid, make available. The debtor's solvency or insolvency affords no test whether the deed is void under that Act. Each case must be judged by its own circumstances.—Clements v. Eccles, 11 I. E. R. 229; 2 I. Jur. 286. (C.)

6. The Statute of Voluntary Conveyances applies to a conveyance to evade the creditors of a third person, as well as to a conveyance to evade the creditors of the debtor himself.—Blennerhassett v. Monsell, 4 I. Jur. 177. (C.)

7. Rents falling due after the leasee's death, under a covenant for himself, his heirs, executors, &c., to pay it, is not a debt which can, under the Statute of Fraudulent Devises (4 Anne, c. 5, Ir.) be enforced against his real estate in the hands of his devisee.—Macnamara v. Vincent, 2 I. C. R. 481; 4 I. Jur. 197. (C.)

8. The respondent owed to the petitioner £625, secured by judgment, and wrote to him as follows:—"You having a judgment against me, I undertake that if I do not pay the sum secured thereby on or before the 10th of Oct. 1852, I will give you a legal mortgage on all my landed property." The petitioner filed a petition in I. E. Court to raise the amount of the judgment, before the 10th of Oct. 1852. He afterwards filed the petition in this cause, for specific performance of the agreement to grant a mortgage. Held, either that the above document did not disclose any consideration, and was consequently invalid within the Statute of Frauds, or that if there were any implied consideration it had failed.

An antecedent debt is not, in contemplation of a Court of Equity, consideration for an agreement to mortgage.—Crofts v. Feuge, 4 I. C. R. 316; 6 I. Jur. 160. (C.)

9. W. assigned a leasehold house to J., upon trusts, leaving to W. a resulting interest in the residue of the rents. W. afterwards gave to R., a creditor, the following letter:—"I have handed to you a policy of insurance as a collateral security for my debt; the premiums on said policy to be paid out of the balance of the profit rent arising from the house assigned to J." On this letter J. wrote an endorsement:—"I agree to pay the premium of the within-mentioned policy to R., out of the profit rent arising from the said house." Held, that these documents amounted to a complete declaration of trust, and that no consideration was required to give them validity.

Semble—That if consideration were required, the first letter did not amount to an agreement sufficient to satisfy the provisions of the Statute of Frauds.

Semble—An antecedent debt is not, in the contemplation of a Court of Equity, a consideration for a security upon lands.—Woodroffe Johnston, 4 I. C. R. 319. (C.)

1. A father, previously to his second marriage in 1833, executed three bonds, with warrants of attorney to confess judgments to trustees, as provisions for his three daughters of his first marriage. Judgments were not entered on the bonds until after the second marriage took place, although it was stated in the settlement executed prior to that marriage, that judgments had been entered on them, and that the object of them was to make a provision for the children of the first marriage. In 1843, the father mortgaged the lands in settlement, and in 1844 he granted annuity out of them. In 1853, on the marriages of two of the daughters, their judgments were settled for valuable consideration. Held, first, that the judgments were voluntary. Secondly, that although they became judgments for value on the execution of the daughters' marriage settlements, they did not become by relation valid against the mortgagee and annuitant.

Judgments prior to the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, were incumbrances, and as such within the Irish Statute against voluntary conveyances.—O'Donovan v. Rogers, 7 I. C. R. 1. (R.)—[Affirmed: ibid, 496. (C.A.)]

2. A written proposal, for a lease for 31 years or three lives, at a rent, was sent to a tenant for life, who replied that he had not power to execute such a lease; but "if you choose to take the lease in the usual way I will allow you £20 to get up a cottage, and a lease for your own life." Held, that the answer not being a simple acceptance, the proposal and answer were not a sufficient agreement within the Statute of Frauds.—O'Fay v. Burke, 8 I. C. R. 225. (R.)—[Affirmed: ibid, 511. (C.A.)]

3. The separate estate of a femme coverte is liable in Equity when she has obtained goods upon credit, though there be no contract in writing, nor reference to her separate estate. But if the separate estate be an interest in realty, the provisions of the Statute of Frauds prevent such liability being enforced if there be no writing.—Burke v. Tuite, 10 I. C. R. 467. (C.)

[See BANK, ante, p. 72; JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES, ante, p. 438; WINDING-UP ACT, ante, p. 440.]

II. 42. Habeas Corpus.

[See HABEAS CORPUS, ante, p. 370; 21 & 22 G. 3, c. 11.]

4. A solicitor being in custody under an attachment, the Court granted a writ of habeas corpus, directed to the Marshal, to bring him before the Taxing Master to enable him to attend the taxation of bills of costs.—Walsh v. Wilson, 2 I. C. R. 79. (C.)

5. A R. C. father, married to a Protestant, had all his children, eight in number, baptised by R. C. clergymen, but permitted the children, when of sufficient age, to receive instruction and attend divine service as Protestants. They did not receive any religious instruction as R. Catholics, nor attend the Catholic worship. The father died in the life of the mother, who afterwards was obliged to enter the workhouse, and there registered the children as Protestants. The mother died, leaving the eldest child about twelve years of age, and the youngest about one. Her wish was that the children should be brought up as Protestants. The husband on his death-bed was attended by a R. C. priest, and it was alleged that he had expressed a wish that the children should be brought up as R. Catholics; but evidence was given that he had subsequently expressed a different wish. Held, that the children were to be brought up as Protestants.

The children had no property whatever, but an undertaking to invest a sum for their benefit was given. Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to direct who should have the custody of the children.—In re O'Malley's Minors, 8 I. C. R. 291; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 358; 4 I. Jur. N. S. 192. (C.)

6. In order to discharge a bankrupt, the Court before which he is brought up on habeas corpus must be fully satisfied that the Judge below was wrong in committing him.—In re Courtney, 11 I. C. R. 410. (B.)

II. 44. Infant's Estate and Person.

[See INFANT, I, ante, p. 395; INFANT TRUSTEE, see 13 & 14 Vic., c. 10, and 15 & 16 Vic., c. 65.]

7. The infant tenant in tail of lands decreed to be sold for an equitable charge is a trustee within the 8th and 18th secs. of the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60.—Peyton v. M'Dermott, 6 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

8. When lands are decreed to be sold in a mortgage suit, the mortgagor's infant heir-at-law is not a trustee within the 8th or 18th sec. of the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60.

Semble—Under the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 11, the Court has jurisdiction to order such infant heir to execute a conveyance.

He is not within the 28 G. 3, c. 35; nor is he a necessary party to the conveyance to the purchaser.—Goddard v. Macaulay, 6 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

9. The Court will make an order under the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 11, that the infant shall execute the deed of conveyance to the purchaser.—Clinton v. Bernard, 6 I. E. R. 355. (C.)

10. Semble—That a mother, whose children are in her custody, is not enabled by the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 54, to resist their father's right to have them delivered over to him.—Corsellis v. C., 1 Dr. & War. 235. (C.)

1. An order was obtained on petition against a minor, not a party to the cause, to execute the conveyance. The minor refused to obey the order. It was necessary to present a further petition to obtain an order that an attachment should issue against the minor, or that a person appointed by the Court should execute in his name.

Seemle—Statute 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, does not apply to minors.—Moore v. Grogan, 9 I. E. R. 472. (R.)

2. The Court has not power under the 28 G. 3, c. 35, to direct the Master to execute a conveyance in the name of an infant resident out of the jurisdiction.

An application to the Court for that purpose, under the 1 W. 4, c. 47, or 1 W. 4, c. 60, must be made by petition, unless at the hearing of the cause the minor is ordered to convey.—M'Geehan v. Rankin, 12 I. E. R. 182. (R.)

3. The 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 7, authorises the Lord Chancellor of Ireland to appoint a receiver over a minor's estate, upon petition, and without the filing of a bill for that purpose.—In re Goode, 1 I. C. R. 256; 3 I. Jur. 50. (C.)

4. A father, by will, appointed a guardian, and expressly directed that his children should be removed from their mother's custody. The Court refused to make an order under the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 54, that the mother should obtain the custody of the children.—In re Cornwallis minors, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 148. (R.)—[Affd.: ibid., 458. (C.A.)]

5. In a settlement made under the 18 & 19 Vic., c. 43, there ought not to be any limitation to collaterals, or any benefit conferred upon the guardian of the minor whose property is settled.

The words "Court of Chancery" in an Act of Parliament do not per se refer to the Court of Ch. in Ireland.

Under the 18 & 19 Vic., c. 43, the Court of Ch. in Ireland has not jurisdiction to order a settlement to be made of a minor's estate.—In re M'Clintock, 10 I. C. R. 469; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 209. (C.)

[See the 23 & 24 Vic., c. 83, conferring upon the Court of Ch. in Ireland the same powers which the 18 & 19 Vic., c. 43, conferred upon that in England.]

II. 45. Infant Lessee.

[See INFANT, I, 3; HIS ESTATE, &c.]

II. 49. *Infant, Lunatic, and other Trustees. See infra, 42.

[See TRUSTEE.]

6. This Court will not appoint a new trustee under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22, instead of one who appears never to have accepted the trust, and who refuses to act.—Mitchell v. Nizon, 1 I. E. R. 155. (R.)

7. The Court will not, on motion, amend minutes of a decree by striking out the day thereby given to minor defts. to show cause.

Quære—Whether the old practice, of giving a minor deft. a day to show cause, has been affected by the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 47.—Esmonde Cooke, 1 Dr. & Wal. 250. (C.)

8. A petition under the 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 11, should state the minor's age.

Seemle—That Act applies to suits instituted before it passed.—Jones v. Ham, 3 I. E. R. 65. (E.E.)

9. C. devised his real and personal estate to trustees to pay debts; then to G. for life; remainder to G.'s issue; remainder to W. for life; remainder to such of her children as should be living at her death, in equal shares. G. died without issue. W. had several children. In a creditor's suit to pay C.'s debts, and for sale of the real estate, the purchaser objected to title. Held, that the 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 12, did not apply to this case.—Oldham v. Wilkins, 1 I. E. R. 59. (R.)

10. On demurrer to a bill filed by the assignee of a deceased insolvent, discharged under the 53 G. 3, c. 138—Held, that the Court has jurisdiction to administer the after-acquired property on behalf of the unsatisfied creditors in the insolvent matter.

The provisions in the Insolvent Acts, enabling the Insolvent Court to direct proceedings to be taken against the property of insolvents acquired after their discharge, do not deprive the Courts of Equity of their jurisdiction to administer the assets of such persons.—Byrne v. B., Fl. & K. 435. (R.)—[Affd.: 4 I. E. R. 621; 2 Dr. & War. 71; 1 Con. & L. 189. (C.)]

11. Real estate having been applied for 150 years on trusts specified by will, the Court assumed that the will created a trust, and that the testator's heir became a trustee; and, the present heir not being known, Held, that the case came within the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 23.—In re Gore's Charities, 4 Dr. & War. 270; 2 Con. & L. 411. (C.)

12. The infant tenant in tail, of lands decreed to be sold for an equitable charge, is a trustee under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, ss. 8, 18; and, if he refuses to execute, the Master will be directed under that Act to execute in his name.

Seemle—The 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 8, does not apply to infants.—Peyton v. M'Dermott, 6 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

13. When lands are decreed to be sold in a mortgage suit, the mortgagor's infant heir-at-law is not a trustee within the 1 W. 4, c. 60, ss. 8, 18.

Seemle—Under the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 11, the Court has jurisdiction to order the infant heir to execute the conveyance.

The infant heir is not within the 28 G. 4, c. 35; nor is he a necessary party to the conveyance to the purchaser.—Goddard v. Macaulay, 6 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

1. Under the 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 11, the Court will order the infant to execute the deed of conveyance to the purchaser.—Clinton v. Bernard, 6 I. E. R. 355. (C.)

2. The heir of a trustee of a lessee's interest in a lease for lives renewable for ever, having been applied to to accept a renewal to him, refused to execute the conveyance.—Held, that the Trustees Act (11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60), s. 8, did not extend to such a case.—Lewis v. FitzGibbon, 6 I. E. R. 560. (C.)

3. A petition under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, stated that, in 1823, the testator devised real estate to a trustee to pay debts; and, after payment thereof, in trust for petitioner; that testator died in 1824, and thereupon petitioner entered; that, many years ago, petitioner and the trustee sold part of the estate, and paid all the debts; that the trustee had died, and that his heir was a minor: and prayed a conveyance of the real estate.

The Court directed enquiries whether the minor was a trustee for the petitioner alone, discharged of debts and the trusts of the will.—In re Barry, 2 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

4. B. was entitled to a rentcharge for life, and legal estate for life in remainder in lands decreed to be sold to pay paramount incumbrances. After decree he became lunatic, but no commission issued. A conveyance by him to a purchaser was ordered under sec. 5 of the Trustee Act.—Blake v. B., 9 I. E. R. 592. (C.)

5. The Court has not power under the 1 W. 4, c. 65, s. 14, to give the landlord the costs of appearing on a petition under the 12th sec. for liberty to the guardian of an infant to accept the renewal of a lease.—In re Leech, 9 I. E. R. 318; 3 Jon. & L. 189. (C.)

6. The heir-at-law of a mortgagee, who had never been in possession, was out of the jurisdiction; and the produce of the sale of the mortgaged lands under a decree was insufficient to pay off the mortgage, by reason of prior incumbrances. Held, that the Court had not jurisdiction to make an order to convey the legal estate to the purchaser either under 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 8, or 1 Vic., c. 69, s. 1. In re Thompson, 12 Sim. 392, disapproved of.—Spunner v. Walsh, 10 I. E. R. 214. (R.)

II. 47. Insolvent. [See ante, STATUTES, II, 7.]

II. 48. Insurance.

7. An Act incorporating an Insurance Co., provided that actions against it should be brought against the secretary, but that execution might issue against any member or members, who should be reimbursed out of the funds of the Co. "all such damages, sum and sums of money, costs, charges, and expenses, as, by the event of any such proceedings, he or they should be put unto, or become chargeable with."

A judgment was obtained against the secretary, and execution issued against ptf., a member of the Co. He resisted it unsuccessfully, and incurred a considerable amount of costs. Held, that he was entitled to be reimbursed, not merely the sum paid on foot of the execution, but also all the costs incurred at law in resisting it.—M^r Owen v. Hunter, 1 Dr. & Wal. 347. (C.)

II. 49. Irish Tenantry Acts.

[See 19 & 20 G. 3, c. 30.]

8. V., lessee for lives renewable for ever, settled his estate, making himself tenant for life. The lives dropped. In 1809, the landlord, X., brought an ejectment. The summonses were served on V., and on the trustees of his marriage settlement. V. taking defence, X. abandoned the action, and filed against V., alone, a bill praying that V. should be compelled to elect whether he would accept a renewal or not; and, if he did not elect to accept it, might be compelled to surrender possession to X., who obtained a conditional order on sequestration, and, in 1811, was put by injunction into possession. X., though a lessee for lives, had not renewed from a period anterior to 1809. His right to a renewal being disputed, he obtained one only after a suit, in 1812, in which year V. died. The remaindermen tendered the arrears of rent, and sought a renewal; the fine being nominal. Held, that they were entitled to a renewal; the delay having been excused, and the decree in 1811 not having operated as a demand under the Tenantry Act, even if it applied; but that it was inapplicable, there not being any fine payable.—Armstrong v. Jessop, Beat. Rep. 515. (C.)

9. The Irish Tenantry Act, 19 & 20 G. 3, c. 30, considered.—Butler v. Earl of Portarlington, 4 I. E. R. 1; 1 Dr. & War. 20; 1 Con. & L. 1. (C.)

10. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 21, does not authorise the appointment of a receiver in a case of constructive trust. The Court refused to appoint a receiver when the interest of the conuzor of a judgment in a lease had been evicted for non-payment of rent, and a new lease had been granted to a third party under circumstances which constituted the new lease a graft.

Leave given to show cause after the appointment of a receiver, on an affidavit stating that the respondent had been informed and believed that the ten days for showing cause, mentioned in the conditional order to appoint the receiver, were sitting days in Term; the respondent paying the costs of the absolute order, and the costs consequential thereto.—Cassidy v. Hopkins, 10 I. E. R. 208. (R.)

11. In the Sub-letting Act, 7 G. 4, c. 29, s. 2, the word "void" means "voidable" only.—Strickland v. M^r Nicholas, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 258. (C.)

II. 52. Landed Estates Court.

(I. E. Court Act, 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77; L. E. Court Act, 21 & 22 Vic., c. 72.)

[See PRACTICE, LANDED ESTATES COURT, ante, p. 993.]II. 53. Landed Security. (2 & 3 Vic., c. 27.)[See ESTATE, VIII, 2; CHARGES ON LAND, ante, p. 292.]

1. G., seized of lands, borrowed various sums of money from S. On the occasion of each loan, G. gave S. possession of a piece of the land; and a memorandum was executed, that S. should hold the land rent-free until the loan was repaid. Two of the memoranda provided that G. should not pay interest for the loan while S. retained the land. Held, that the transaction amounted to a security upon land within the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 27; and that the annual value of the land beyond legal interest should go to reduce the principal.—Gore v. Spotten, 7 I. C. R. 508. (C.)

II. 54. Landlord and Tenant.[See also LANDLORD & TENANT, ante, p. 489.]

2. A purchaser, who has agreed to take an assignment of premises held under a lease for years, cannot object to the title upon the grounds of the discovery, that such lease is an under-lease; because the sub-lessee is now placed by the 23 & 24 Vic., c. 154, s. 21, in privity with the head landlord.—Balfour v. Macneill, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 8. (C.)

3. The 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60, s. 268, does not, before election by the assignees, vest in them the bankrupt's lease so as to make them, though in possession, liable to its covenants and conditions. Sec. 271, regulating the bankrupt's liability, recognises the assignees' obligation, and protects the landlord.

The 23 & 24 Vic., c. 154, ss. 14, 15, does not apply.—Re Ellis, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 19. (B.)

II. 55. Lands Clauses Consolidation Act (8 & 9 Vic., c. 18.)[See RAILWAYS, ante, p. 1164.]

4. When in a petition matter under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, a party seeks the costs given by its 82nd sec., the order made should specify those costs; it is not sufficient that it states generally that the party is entitled to the costs properly payable under that Act.—Macrory v. The Belfast Commissioners of Customs, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (R.)

II. 56. Lease by Tenant in Tail.

[See ESTATE. See also Leases and Sales of Settled Estates Act, 19 & 20 Vic., c. 120: G. O. of May 22, 1867: Gam. Ch. Or. 336.]

II. 57. Limitations (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27.)[See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, ante, p. 578.]

5. A judgment is not a sum of money charged upon or payable out of land within the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42. Therefore an application to discharge an order for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, on payment of the principal due on the judgment, with six years' interest, was refused.—Kealy v. Bodkin, S. & Sc. 211. (R.)

6. The 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, is not retrospective.—Peyton v. McDermott, 1 Dr. & Wal. 198. (C.)

7. Quare—Does the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, apply to defendants?—Murphy v. Sterne, 1 Dr. & Wal. 236. (C.)

8. The 9 G. 4, c. 35, s. 2, applies as well to purchases made before, as to those made after it became law.—Knox v. Kelly, 1 Dr. & Wal. 542. (C.)

9. The 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42, applies to portions charged on lands under a power in a settlement, and six years' interest thereon is recoverable.—Burne v. Robinson, 1 Dr. & Wal. 688. (C.)

10. In 1790, N. entered into possession of lands as assignee of an incumbrancer, and purchaser from A., B., C., and D., each of whom was tenant for life of one-fourth. A. died in 1819, and B. in 1836. The next remaindermen of their shares, who were tenants in tail, filed against the devisees of N. a bill to redeem the premises. Held, that ptfs. were within the very terms of, and bound by the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 28. That its provisions are entirely independent of those of sec. 15, which relate to the title to the lands so affected by the provisions of the preceding sections, whereas sec. 28 relates exclusively to mortgagees.—Browne v. Bishop of Cork, 1 Dr. & Wal. 700. (C.)

11. Upon the true construction of the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42, more than six years' interest cannot be charged upon land in respect of a sum of money secured by judgment. O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 2 I. E. R. 361. (E.E.)

12. The 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42, applies as well to judgments upon which interest is recoverable by virtue of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 26, as to any other.—Henry v. Smith, 4 I. E. R. 502, 510; 2 Dr. & War. 381; 1 Con. & L. 506. (C.)

13. An annuity charged on land by will, comes within the meaning of the word "rent" in the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42. No more than six years' arrears are recoverable. When on the face of the bill the time which operates as a statutable bar appears to have elapsed, the Statute of Limitations may be relied on by demurrer.—Ferguson v. Livingston, 9 I. E. R. 202. (R.)

1. A decree on sequestration is only a conditional decree, and will not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations, or of the 81st G. O.—Young v. Wilton, 10 I. E. R. 265. (C.)

2. A., entitled to a jointure of £480 a year, charged on lands producing only £240 a year, went into possession of the lands in 1800. In 1815, the rental was increased, so as to leave a large surplus after paying the jointure. She continued in possession. Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not apply, and that she was entitled to all the arrears accumulating since 1800.—Battersby v. Rochfort, 10 I. E. R. 489. (C.)

3. A payment of principal and interest of a sum of money charged upon lands by a person expressly or impliedly authorised to make it, is equivalent to a payment by the party liable, so as to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 40); but a payment by a stranger will not.

Parties seized of the lands of A. and B., subject to a term to pay off incumbrances, conveyed A. to a purchaser, and B. to trustees to indemnify and protect A. from all charges and incumbrances. By a subsequent deed, W., owner of B., subject to the trust to indemnify, covenanted to pay the interest of one of the charges. Held, that it being W.'s duty to pay the charges, payments of interest by him were payments by an agent, to save the bar of the statute as against the purchaser of A. But Seem, the payment of interest by the owner of the indemnity lands, after the expiration of twenty years, would not revive the right to proceed against the purchased lands.—Homan v. Andrews, 1 I. C. R. 106. (R.)

4. The 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 2, applies only to adverse claimants of a rent, and cannot be set up by an occupier of land against an owner of tithe rentcharge as a defence to a suit by the latter for such tithe rentcharge.—Incorporated Society v. Sheil, 10 I. E. R. 411, confirmed. Netterville v. Power, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 123. (R.)

5. The 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 24, bars equitable rights only so far as they would have been barred if they had been legal rights.—[Lord Cranworth.]—Archbold v. Scully, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (H. L.); 9 H. Lds. Cas. 360.

6. An agent's written acknowledgment, made after the passing of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 19 & 20 Vic., c. 97, suffices to save from the bar of the Statute of Limitations a debt contracted before that Act passed.—Leland v. Murphy, 16 I. C. R. 500. (R.)

II. 58. Lunatic's Estate.

[See LUNACY AND IDIOTCY, ante, p. 608.]

II. 59. Marriage Acts: Marriage of Infants.

(58 G. 3, c. 81; 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 102; 5 & 6 Vic., c. 28, s. 1; 7 & 8 Vic., c. 81; 9 & 10 Vic., c. 72; 10 & 11 Vic., c. 58; 12 & 13 Vic., c. 99; 21 & 22 Vic., c. 3; 23 & 24 Vic., c. 18; 26 & 27 Vic., c. 90.)

[See also MARRIAGE, ante, p. 614.]

7. Purchase for value without notice is not a defence to a suit instituted to enforce a mere legal right, such as dower. A purchaser, in 1840, obtained possession of the deed creating an attendant term, but did not procure an assignment of the term. Held, that he could not rely on this term as a bar to a claim for dower.

The Act for the Confirmation of Marriages in Ireland (5 & 6 Vic., c. 118) confirms marriages theretofore solemnized by persons who had been Protestant Dissenting Ministers, even though at the time of the marriage they had been degraded or suspended.

A purchase made for a minor ward of the Court, under a power given by an Act of Parliament, is an act done under the authority of the Court within the meaning of the 8rd sec. of the same Act. A statement of an admission in the petitioner's affidavit in reply is not a compliance with the rules of equity pleading requiring admissions to be put in issue.—Corry v. Cremorne, 12 I. C. R. 136; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 21. (C.)

8. An agent's written acknowledgment, made since the passing of the 19 & 20 Vic., c. 97, saves from the bar of the Statute of Limitations a debt contracted before that Act passed.—Leland v. Murphy, 16 I. C. R. 500. (R.)

II. 62. Mortgages and Judgments.

[See also MORTGAGE, ante, p. 621.]

9. An order, dismissing a bill with costs for want of prosecution, is an order within the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27.—Madden v. Davis, Fl. & K. 475. (R.)

10. The exception contained in the latter part of the 22nd sec. of 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, applies as well to cases in which the judgment creditor proceeds by petition, as in which he files a bill.—M'Dermott v. Moylan, Long. & T. 555. (E.E.)

1. A., indebted to B., by deed of 1819, granted lands to C. as trustee for B. to discharge the debt, &c., with specified powers; and, after discharging the other trusts, then to reconvey to A. After B.'s death, C. being his executor, a bill was filed to carry into execution the trusts of his will, and to sell his estate to pay debts. The produce of the sale proving insufficient to pay all B.'s reported creditors, C., as trustee and executor of B., assigned to ptf. by deed, in 1834, the benefit of the deed of 1819, as part of B.'s assets, on trust to apply the produce of the sale thereof in further paying B.'s creditors. In pursuance of the last deed, a bill was filed against A., and a decretal order referred it to the Master to take the accounts. The Master reported that D., assignee of a judgment obtained in 1811 against A., filed a charge on foot thereof; but that the judgment was void against ptf., a purchaser for value under the two deeds, since the judgment had not been revived or re-docketed pursuant to the 9 G. 4, c. 35. Upon exceptions—Held, that the Master was right in postponing the judgment, and that the report should accordingly be confirmed. That the latter deed was one for value within the 9 G. 4, c. 35. That its 2nd sec. applies as well to purchases made before, as to those made after that Act passed.—Knox v. Kelly, 1 Dr. & Wal. 542; 1 I. E. R. 87, n. (C).—[S. P.:—Blake v. D'Arcy, 1 Dr. & Wal. 559, n.; 1 I. E. R. 84.]

2. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 33, does not repeal the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42. Those two sections are to be construed together.—Hughes v. Kelly, 5 I. E. R. 286; 3 Dr. & War. 482. (C.)

3. The dominion of a tenant in tail in possession over the estates of remaindermen and reversioners enabling him of his own will, and by his own act, without anybody's assent, to extinguish those estates, and acquire the fee-simple for his own benefit, is not "a disposing power" within the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105. Its 22nd sec., making a judgment binding, not only as against the debtor, but "also against the issue of his body, and all other persons whom he might, without the assent of any other person, cut off and debar from any remainder, reversion, or other interest," creates an equitable charge only, which cannot be enforced save by a suit in equity.—Fletcher v. Steele, 6 I. E. R. 376. (R.)

4. A judgment was entered on a bond executed by two sureties for a land agent. Held, that interest on the balance due by him could not be claimed under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 26.—Lord Templeton v. Murdock, 7 I. E. R. 470. (C.)

5. As a general rule, there can be no revivor for untaxed costs, whether the abatement is occasioned by the death of the party who is to pay the costs, or by the death of the party who is to receive them.

That rule is not affected by the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27.

Cases of Morgan v. Scudamore, 3 Ves. jun. 313; 3 Ves. 195; and Barry v. Stauell, 3 I. E. R. 18, 146, considered and commented on.—Bowyer v. Beamish, 8 I. E. R. 63. (C.)

6. The rule to change an attorney on payment of costs is not an order under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 29.—Emmett v. Marnane, 8 I. E. R. 522. (E.E.)

7. The 7 & 8 Vic., c. 93, s. 10, which requires that a lis pendens shall be registered, to affect a purchaser, does not apply to a purchase made before that Act passed.—Jennings v. Bond, 8 I. E. R. 755; 2 Jon. & L. 720. (C.)

8. Semble—The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 63, does not apply to Courts of Equity.—Roche v. R., 8 I. E. R. 638. (R.)

9. The Docketing Acts, 7 W. 3, c. 13, and 3 G. 2, c. 7, apply only between purchasers and judgment creditors, and give no priority to judgments inter se.—Abbott v. Stratton, 9 I. E. R. 233; 3 Jon. & L. 603. (C.)

10. Semble—A detaining creditor of an insolvent cannot file a bill for a sale on foot of his judgment, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105.—Maguire v. O'Reilly, 9 I. E. R. 335; 3 Jon. & L. 224. (C.)

11. In a petition matter under the Mortgage Act, the Court will not decide equities between owners of different parts of the mortgaged premises.—Lane v. Lynch, 9 I. E. R. 501. (C.)

12. The pendency of a suit, when the 9 G. 4, c. 35, passed, does not dispense with the necessity of redocketing or reviving a judgment under its 3rd sec.—Joyce v. J., 10 I. E. R. 128. (C.)

13. The assignee of an insolvent is not a purchaser within the meaning of the Acts for Redocketing or Registering Judgments.—Baylee v. Browne, 10 I. E. R. 180. (R.)

14. The 2nd sec., as well as the 1st, of the Redocketing Act, 9 G. 4, c. 35, only avoids judgments in favour of purchasers becoming such after twenty years from their entry. A judgment of M. T. 1818 was not rendered void under the 2nd sec. in favour of a purchaser under a conveyance of 1831, though not revived or redocketed either within twenty years of its entry or five years of the passing of the Act (June 1828).

Hickson v. Collis, 6 I. E. R., reversed on re-hearing.—Hickson v. Collis, 10 I. E. R. 447. (C.)

15. Since the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, judgments of the same Term, entered after its passing, have priority inter se as charges on lands, according to the true dates of their entries.

Quare—As to the priority inter se of such judgments entered before the passing of that Act?

A. devised to his sons, to be disposed of as after mentioned, all his estate in W., and to the survivor, &c., of his sons, with all his estate in P., subject to his proportion of the head-rent; and also subject to and in trust to pay out of the rents thereof an annuity to his daughter, and the remainder of the rents until she should be paid £500. Then followed a bequest of an annuity of £40 charged on parts of W. There was a residuary devise to the three sons. Held, that the bequest to his daughter was charged only on P., and not on W.—Borough v. Williamson, 11 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

1. A. obtained a judgment in T. Term 1845. B. obtained a judgment in T. Term 1846. A. sued out an elegit, the inquisition on which was returned and filed on the 20th July 1846, and went into possession of the lands extended. B.'s judgment was registered in Sept. 1846; A.'s in Feb. 1847. Held, that A.'s judgment had priority.

Semble—The registration of a judgment under the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 90, gives no priority as between judgment creditors, except for the protection of heirs and personal representatives in the administration of assets.—O'Brien v. Scott, 11 I. E. R. 63. (R.)—[Ibid, 459. (C.)]

2 Orders in lunacy giving the receiver liberty to pay money are not within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27, so as to bear interest.—Hoops v. Lord Kingston, 11 I. E. R. 469. (C.)

3. The saving in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, of the rights of incumbrancers before the 1st of Nov. 1840, is solely for their protection. Therefore in a suit by a judgment creditor for a sale of the conuzor's lands in his lifetime, he cannot rely on the existence of such incumbrances if their owners do not object to the sale.

Semble—This Court will sell an estate subject to incumbrances.—Kieran v. Corr, 11 I. E. R. 514. (C.)

4. In future it will not be necessary to present a petition in order to show cause against an order for a receiver under the Mortgage Act; and all applications under that Act, after an order made on the first petition, may be by motion.—Hart v. Carleton, 1 I. C. R. 231; 3 I. Jur. 131. (R.)

5. A plea of confession is not included within the meaning of the terms "warrant of attorney" or "cognovit" in the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 95, s. 2.—Gibbon v. Magan, 2 I. Jur. 60. (R.)

6. The writ of feri facias sued out under a decree or order of the Court by virtue of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27, must correspond with the decree or order. Therefore where a separate fi. fa. against one issued on a joint order for payment of costs against several, the Court set aside the writ as irregular, but without costs, and paid back the money levied, on the party undertaking not to bring an action in respect of the seizure and sale by the sheriff.—Money Penny v. De Massy, 1 I. C. R. 597. (R.)

7. The 11 & 12 Vic., c. 48, s. 72, enacting that the release of any portion of lands in Ireland, from any judgment affecting it, shall not nullify or affect the force of such judgment as regards the residue of such lands, or any other property not specially released, does not apply to releases executed before that Act passed.—Handcock v. H., 1 I. C. R. 444. (C.)

8. The 12 & 13 Vic., c. 95, s. 2, applies to all judgments, whether recovered in an adverse action or entered upon a warrant of attorney. The Court therefore refused to appoint a receiver, on petition, in a judgment in case recovered in 1850 for £120 exclusive of costs.—McDonnell v. Malone, 2 I. C. R. 108; 4 I. Jur. 124. (R.)

9. In order to constitute a fraudulent preference, it is not sufficient that a payment or security was voluntary, and made at a time when the trader was in insolvent circumstances. It is necessary to show that it was made in contemplation of bankruptcy.

A judgment obtained against a bankrupt, and registered as a mortgage under the 6th and 7th sections of the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, before the issuing of the commission, is a charge on the bankrupt's lands, in priority to his simple contract debts.

The 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, repeals the 6 W. 4 c. 14, s. 126, the leading Irish Bankrupt Act.

Quære—Whether an affidavit made by one only of several conuzees is a sufficient compliance with the terms of the 6th sec. ?—In re Ryan, 3 I. C. R. 83. (B.)

10. Quære—Whether judgments entered, within twenty years before the passing of the Redocking Act, 9 G. 4, c. 35, and not redocketed within twenty years from their entry, or within five years from the passing of the Act, are void as against a purchaser (a mortgagee of 1825), who became such before the passing of the Act?

Held, that such judgments were void as against a sub-mortgage (made in 1841) of the mortgage of 1825.—Walcott v. Condon, 3 I. C. R. 1; 5 I. Jur. 49. (C.)

11. Neither the suing out of an elegit nor the appointment of a receiver on a judgment not redocketed or revived, as required by the 9 G. 4, c. 35, will render it valid against a subsequent purchaser for value.—In re Judge, 3 I. C. R. 152. (P.C.)

12. Under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, a judgment is a good charge upon an ecclesiastical benefice in Ireland, the 13 Eliz., c. 20, not extending to Ireland, where there is no corresponding enactment.—Winter v. Homan, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 899. (C.)

13. A judgment was obtained for poor-rates in 1848 against the owner of the land. In 1850 he took the benefit of the Insolvent Act. In 1855 the judgment was registered. Held, that the judgment did not, by reason of the registration, take priority as a charge over a mortgage of 1832, under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 104, s. 18.—In re Malley, 5 I. C. R. 342. (P.C.)

1. The proviso at the end of the 17 & 18 Vic., c. 113, that it shall not affect the rights of any person claiming under any deed or document made before the 1st of Jan. 1855, does not save a right to the heir to be exonerated from the mortgage debt out of the personal estate bequeathed to a legatee by a will made before that date.

In 1834, A. devised to B. all his right, title, and interest to real estate; and also devised and bequeathed to B. all his personal property, together with all other real, freehold, and chattel property of every nature and kind whatsoever, of which he might be seized or possessed at his death, and appointed C. his executor. After making his will, A. granted mortgages, to secure which he executed a disentailing deed, which was held to be a revocation of the will, as to the real estate. A. died in 1856.

Quære—Whether the bequest of the personal estate was specific, so as to exonerate it from the mortgage debts?

Held, that the 17 & 18 Vic., c. 113, applied, and that the heir was not entitled, as against the legatee of the personal estate, to be exonerated from the mortgage.—Power v. P., 8 I. C. R. 340. (R.)

2. In 1851, B. obtained a judgment against A. In 1855, a decree on consent was made in an administration suit, declaring A. a trustee for himself and his brothers and sisters, as to lands in which he had the legal estate. In 1856, the judgment creditor registered his judgment as a mortgage, under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, against the lands. Held, that the registration of the judgment affected that portion only of the lands in which A. was beneficially interested.

The registration of a judgment as a mortgage under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, operates in equity to pass the beneficial interest of the debtor only. If the debtor has a legal estate, it is transferred to the creditor, subject to the same equities as it was liable to before the registration.—M'Auley v. Clarendon, 8 I. C. R. 568; Dru. Rep. temp. Napier, 433. (C.A.)

3. A. having two estates mortgaged with judgments collateral to the mortgage, by will, made after 1854, devised them in strict settlement to two of his sons; bequeathed several pecuniary and specific legacies, and directed that his debts and legacies should be paid out of the residue of his personal estate and property which he bequeathed to his sons. Held, that the mortgage debts should be paid out of the personal estate in preference to the pecuniary legacies.—Smith v. S., 10 I. C. R. 89; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 88. (R.)—[Affid.: 10 I. C. R. 461; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 201. (C.A.)]

4. A creditor, having obtained a judgment against the official manager of a banking company, registered an affidavit of the judgment against the real estate of a former shareholder in the company, without having issued a sci. fa. against him. Held, that a Court of Equity ought to give relief against that registration, as being a cloud on the shareholder's title to his lands.—Hone v. O'Flahertie, 9 I. C. R. 119; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 505. (C.)

5. In an affidavit filed under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, s. 6, for the purpose of converting a judgment into a mortgage, a description of the deft.'s last known place of abode, as "late of the town of Galway, but now of the county of Dublin," was held insufficient, as being too vague.

The same affidavit stated the amount of the judgment to be £894, and £3. 2s. 8d. for costs; whereas the sum mentioned for costs on the record was £2. 2s. 8d.; the fee of £1 for registration having been added to the costs in the affidavit. Held, to be such a variance as invalidated the affidavit.—In re Fitzgerald's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 278; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 204. (C.A.)

6. If an affidavit filed for the purpose of registering a judgment as a mortgage, under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, substantially complies with the requirements of its 6th section, it is sufficient. When such an affidavit was entitled in the same words as the record of the judgment, and stated (inter alia) that "J. T., the ptf., by the name and description of J. T., of 116 Grafton-street, in the city of Dublin, solicitor, did, on the 15th of July 1858, obtain a judgment in the Court of Exchequer against the deft. in this cause, by the name and description of E. S. P., of, &c., that the usual or last-known place of abode of the said E. S. P., the deft. in this cause, the person whose estate is intended to be affected by the registration of this affidavit, is at, &c.; that, to the best of deponent's knowledge and belief, the said E. S. P., the deft. in this cause, is, at the time of swearing this affidavit, seized or possessed of," &c. &c. Held, that that affidavit contained a sufficient statement of the title of the cause. That it sufficiently identified the deft. in the judgment with the person whose estate was sought to be affected by the registration of the affidavit.—In re Power's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 288. (C.A.)

7. An affidavit registered under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, s. 6, stated that the sum recovered by the judgment was £265, with £3. 2s. 8d. for costs. The record of the judgment stated that the sum recovered was £265, besides £2. 2s. 8d. for damages, and £1 for registry. Held, that the variance did not invalidate the affidavit.—In re Edgeworth's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 293; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 11. (C.A.)

8. In an affidavit registered under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, s. 6, a statement "that deponent was, and still is a gentleman," was held to be a sufficient description of the ptf., when he had not any trade or profession.—In re Edgeworth's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 294. (C.A.)

1. An affidavit filed for the purpose of registering a judgment, as a mortgage, under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, was entitled in the margin "J. M. of D., in the county of W., farmer, ptf., T. J. F. of B., in the county of W., Esq., deft.," and stated that J. M. of, &c., &c., had recovered a judgment against the deft. in this cause, by the name and description of Thomas Joseph Fitzgerald of Ballinapark, in the county of Waterford, Esq. Held, a sufficient description of the name, and usual or last known place of abode of the deft.

Semble—That a supplemental affidavit under the 21 & 22 Vic., c. 105, may be filed after the death of the conuzor.—In re Fitzgerald's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 356. (C.A.)

2. Statements in the title of a judgment mortgage affidavit may be incorporated, by reference, in the affidavit itself. A description of the residence of the parties, in an affidavit to register a judgment as a mortgage, will be sufficient, if it be their ordinary trade residence. The description must be substantially contained within the affidavit itself. Such affidavits need not be construed with strict grammatical accuracy. [M'Dowell v. Wheately commented on and distinguished.]—In re Smith & Ross, 11 I. C. R. 394; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 72. (B.)

3. The 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, s. 10, is to be read as an exception to the concluding portion of its 1st sec.

The words "anything in this Act notwithstanding," in the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, s. 10, are equivalent to "anything to the contrary in this Act notwithstanding," and refer to that clause of the 1st sec. of the Act, which abolishes execution against all interests in lands.—In re Gerrard's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 466; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 21. (C.A.)

4. Although the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, uses the word "person," as owner of property to be affected by a judgment mortgage, yet, all the Judgment Acts being in pari materia, to be read as one code, the property of a body corporate is, as regards a judgment mortgage, to be treated as the property of an individual.—In re Bagnalstown Ry. Co., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 156. (B.)

5. The affidavit to register a judgment under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, described the deft., as "formerly of B. in the county of W., but now of the city of Dublin, Esq." Held, following In re Fitzgerald's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 278, that the judgment was not duly registered.

Semble—The statute's object was to identify the parties to the judgment; and therefore the judgment is duly registered, if it describes them in a manner not calculated to mislead.

The supplemental affidavit filed under the 21 & 22 Vic., c. 105, can only supply a defect in the original affidavit, by stating positively that which had been stated only by way of recital; but cannot supply a defect in the description itself.—Thorpe v. Browne, 16 I. C.

R. 365; 10 I. Jur. N. S. 166. (R.)—[Revd.: L. R., 2 H. L., 220.]

6. A reversioner in fee, expectant on a lease for lives renewable for ever, is a proprietor within the 5 G. 2, c. 9, and must be served with a copy of the petition to divide a bog.—Kelly v. Skelton, 1 Jones, 555. (E.E.)

7. A., being possessed of land, presented a petition under the 5 G. 2, c. 9, to ascertain the boundaries of an adjoining bog to which his title was disputed by the respondent. The Court would not dismiss the petition, but retained it till the petitioner established his right at law.

Semble—Though no jurisdiction be given to the Court by the statute under which the proceedings are taken, to direct an issue, or an enquiry as to the facts, yet the Court, to satisfy itself, will exercise its inherent powers by either of those methods.—Lahiffe v. Gregory, 4 I. Jur. 97. (C.)

8. When lands, forming the subject of a proposed partition, are held by different tenures, or under several leases, each estate must be separately partitioned. The Court will not sanction a partition which gives the freehold lands to one owner, and the leaseholds to another. Each owner must receive a portion of each estate.

In the partition of leaseholds the Court will not allow one lease to be given to one owner, and another lease to the other owner. Each lease must be partitioned separately. The Court will not allow the entire rent reserved by a lease to be thrown on a single owner.

These rules apply equally to a partition by consent without a sale by the Court under sec. 81 of the L. E. Court Act, as to partition under sec. 80, when the petition prays for a partition and sale.—In re Foley's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 402. (L.E.C.)

1. The conversion of lands into a cemetery is waste. Demise of lands for lives and years, with a covenant to yield them up in repair at the expiration of the lease. The lessees' assignee agreed with Poor-law Guardians, with the Poor-law Commissioners' assent, not under seal, to let a portion of the lands to the Guardians as a cemetery. The land was so used for many years. The reversion was sold in the L. E. Court, and conveyed subject to the lease to the petitioner, who before the conveyance had notice of the cemetery's existence. Held, that the agreement with the Guardians was not a "purchase or hiring" by the Commissioners within the 10 Vic., c. 31, s. 20.

Semble—Such a "purchase or hiring" must be by deed from or with the concurrence of the owner of the fee.

C. did not reside there, and died before the making of this motion for an injunction by the present tenant in quasi fee. No written notice of the obstruction had been served on C. Held, that the Court would presume notice, which need not be in writing to bring it within the 2 & 3 W. 4., c. 71, s. 4 (21 & 22 Vic., c. 42, Ireland).—*Dockrell v. 6. The G. S. & W. Ry. Co. having purchased settled land, the tenant for life conveyed to them under their Act. He and the tenant in tail applied to draw the purchase-money out of Court. No disentailing deed had been executed. Held, that the money was to be considered bound by the limitations affecting the land, and to be dealt with as subject to be invested in lands, to be settled to the same uses as the sold lands; and that a disentailing deed was necessary to enable the parties to draw the money.—G. S. & W. Ry. Co. v. Leinster, 7 I. E. R. 482. (R.)

1. A Railway Company having taken lands occupied by D.'s tenants, and the parties not agreeing to the compensation offered, steps were taken for holding an inquisition, in which one solicitor acted for D. and the tenants. The company afterwards acceded to the valuation made for the tenants; a verdict was taken by consent for D.; and the company gave a written undertaking to pay any sum to which the solicitor was entitled as solicitor for D. and his tenants, when ascertained by the proper officer under their Act. They took from D. a conveyance the costs of which, and of making title, were taxable in Ch. under their Act. The costs of ascertaining the compensation for the tenants should properly under it have been settled with their claim by Justices of the Peace; the costs of an inquisition were taxable in a Law Court. The solicitor, having furnished separate bills of costs for D. and the tenants, to which the Company objected, petitioned for taxation and to enforce payment. Held, that the costs of D. only could be taxed or enforced in this Court, and that the undertaking gave no jurisdiction as to the costs of the tenants.—Marquis of Drogheda v. H., 1 I. C. R. 444. (C.)

II. 76. Renewable Leasehold Conv. Act, 12 & 13 Vic., c. 105.

[See LANDLORD AND TENANT, V, 4—RENEWABLE, LEASEHOLD CONVERSION ACT, ante, p. 503—LEASE, VIII—RENEWAL, ante, p. 524.]

4. An original lease and the renewal thereof contained a reservation of £5 yearly for every acre on the premises that should be ploughed &c., without the consent of the lessor, and so for a lesser quantity, except for the planting of trees; and £5 for every acre of the premises which should be let to any person who should hold any part of adjacent lands; and forty shillings yearly for every tenant or undertenant inhabiting on the premises that should be a Papist, or so reputed; and covenants to fence the lands and to pay the rents and penalties. Held, on a petition under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 105 (Ren. Lease. Conv. Act), that the lessee was entitled to have the reservation as to the meadow commuted under sec. 3, and that "meadow" meant meadow at the date of the last renewal.

The reservation letting to persons for holding the adjacent lands could not be omitted from the f.f. grant, or commuted, as it was not a covenant interfering with the proper cultivation of the land within sec. 3.

That the reservation for every Papist tenant was not illegal; was a subsisting clause within the 1st sec., and did not interfere with the proper cultivation of the land; and therefore could neither be omitted nor commuted.—Mahony v. Tynte, 1 I. C. R. 577. (R.)

5. The R. L. Conversion Act provided for compensating the owner of the reversion for the rent and fines, but gave the landlord no general right to compensation for the depreciation in value of his estate by reason of such compulsory conversion of the reversion into a f.f. rent. However, s. 5 provided that where the conversion would not afford full compensation for the loss of the original reversion, or of any power of benefit or advantage incident thereto, he should be entitled to compensation for such loss. Held, that this sec. did not include the general case of a compensation to all landlords for any depreciation caused by the conversion; and was either insensible, or referred to some special cause external to the leasehold estate.—The Marquis of Donegal v. Layard, 5 I. J. N. S. 401. (H. L.)—[S. c. 8 H. Lds. Cas. 460.]

6. A contract—to grant a lease for the same term, namely, for lives renewable for ever, as the contractor holds—does not, when made after the passing of the Ren. Lease. Conv. Act, operate as an agreement for a f.f. grant.—Forde v. Brew, 17 I. C. R. 1. (R.)

II. 77. Rents, Apportionment of.

[See APPORTIONMENT, ante, p. 59.]

7. The 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 22, does not apply to rents reserved on tenancies from year to year, without writing.

B., seized in fee subject to tenancies from year to year, by will, in 1840, devised to A., for life, remainder over. A. lived for some years, without determining the tenancies. Held, that the rents were not apportionable under the 23 & 24 G. 3, c. 46 (Ir.)—In re Alexander, 4 I. C. R. 257. (R.)

8. The power given to the L. E. Court by the 21 & 22 Vic., c. 72, s. 72, is discretionary, and exists both in the case of an incumbered, and of an unincumbered estate. The landlord's consent is not necessary; but the Court requires clear proof that his interest is not made in any appreciable degree less secure, less enjoyable, or less marketable.

If there is any reason to believe that the petition has been presented, not for a b. f. sale, but to obtain an apportionment, the Court will make an order which will apportion the rent only if the proceedings be duly prosecuted, and the sale had.—In re Comyn's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 330. (L.E.C.)

1. When a landlord dies between two gale days, the rents payable by his tenants are made by the L. & T. Act (23 & 24 Vic., c. 154), apportionable between his executor, and his devisee — Hall v. H., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 244. (R.)

II. 78. Rentcharge.

2. A rentcharge granted, to secure a loan to an owner in fee subject to a rent, by a grant before the 14 & 15 Vic., c. 20, has priority over the rent under the Land Improvement Act, 10 Vic., c. 32, s. 38.

Semle—When the loan is made to a tenant the rentcharge has not priority over the rent reserved by his lease, such rent not being a charge or incumbrance within sec. 38 of that Act.—Att.-Gen. v. Evans, 11 I. C. R. 171. (R.)

II. 79. Settlement of Poor.

[See STATUTES, POOR-LAW ACTS.]

II. 80. Settled Estates Act (19 & 20 Vic., c. 120.)

[See STATUTES, LEASES.]

3. The Court has not power under the Settled Estates Act to grant a power to lease in reversion.

The order of the Court, granting leasing powers under the Settled Estates Act, does not dispense with the necessity of the party, who takes a lease, investigating title.—Ex parte Henchy, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 73. (R.)

4. Under the Settled Estates Act, the Court will not grant a power to make such a lease of a minor's estate as is tantamount to an entire alienation thereof.—In re Blood's Estate, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 336. (R.)

II. 81. Sheriffs.

[See CHARGING ORDER, ante, p. 119.]

(56 G. 3, c. 68 : 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55).

[SHERIFFS ACT. See PRACTICE, LXXVIII, RECEIVER, ante, p. 1050.]

5. A party in possession under an elegit must abandon the proceedings which he has taken thereunder before the Court will grant him a receiver under the Sheriffs Act.—Mahon v. Fitzgibbon, 1 I. E. R. 6. (C.)

6. Tenant for life confesses a judgment; is discharged as an insolvent; and dies. Under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the Court has jurisdiction, after his death, to make absolute, as against his assignees, a conditional order to extend a receiver obtained during the insolvent's life upon a petition against him, so far as to give effect to the petitioner's lien on the life estate, and the rents received by the receiver thereout, and the purposes necessarily connected therewith.—Barry v. Wilkinson, 3 I. E. R. 121. (E.E.)—[See ibid, p. 564.]

7. Under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, a judgment creditor is entitled to a receiver in every case in which he could, at law, issue an elegit.—Walsh v. Keane, 3 I. E. R. 426. (R.)

II. 82. Ships.

[18 & 19 Vic., c. 96; 24 & 25 Vic., c. 96. Wrecked vessels, 17 & 18 Vic., c. 104; 18 & 19 Vic., c. 91; 25 & 26 Vic., c. 63.]

8. The M. Sh. Act Am. Act 1862 (25 & 26 Vic. c. 63) applies only to the case of a lien for freight claimed by the shipowner against the owner of the cargo; not to a case of conflicting claims between the mortgagor and mortgagee of the vessel touching ownership of the freight.—B. H. Commrs. v. Lawther, 17 I. C. R. 54. (C.)

II. 83. Solicitors.

[See SOLICITOR, ante, 1203.]

9. When an apprentice to an attorney had not attended any of the Courts in Dublin during any Term in the fifth year of his apprenticeship, but after that year, his master being then dead, attended the Courts for two Terms without having any master, his application for admission was refused.

Semle—Indentures cannot be assigned after five years from the date thereof.

Semle—The sickness and accidents, provided for in 13 & 14 G. 3, c. 23, refer to the apprentice, and not to the master.

The Terms for attendance must be in the three years next preceding the application for admission.—Ex parte Roberts, 8 I. E. R. 507. (E.E.)

10. The Court has not discretion to dispense with the provisions respecting the period of a solicitor's apprenticeship, except, perhaps, in cases of fatality. Therefore, under the 1 & 2 G. 4, c. 48, s. 4, the Court refused to admit a graduate on a three years' apprenticeship, commenced more than four years after his degree had been obtained.—In the Matter of A. B., 12 I. E. R. 237. (C.)

II. 84. Stock and Stock-jobbing.

II. 85. Sub-letting Acts.

[See ante, 49; IRISH TENANTRY ACTS.]

II. 86. Tenant in Tail and for Life: Money to be laid out in Land: Conveyance by Tenant for Life.

[See ESTATE, II, ante, p. 273.]

1. The 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 12 (authorising the conveyance of estates devised in settlement by tenants for life, &c., under decrees), extends to a decree for a mortgage, as well as to one for an absolute sale.—Holmes v. H., 7 I. E. R. 390. (C.)

2. In the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 92, s. 68, the phrase "money subject to be invested in lands," means "money directed" to be so invested.—Smithwick v. S., 12 I. C. R. 181; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 282. (R.)

II. 87. Timber.

[See also TIMBER, post.]

3. A lease, made in 1821, for three lives or 41 years, excepted and reserved all timber trees, or trees likely to be timber, then growing or being on, or which should thereafter grow or be on the demised premises, with liberty of ingress, &c., for the lessor to cut and carry away them. It also contained a covenant by the lessee, to repair, preserve, &c., the premises, with all buildings, plantations, improvements, timber, and other trees, that then were, or might at any time thereafter be, erected or planted thereupon, in good and tenantable order, repair, and condition; and at the determination of the demise to deliver up peaceable possession of the premises, together with all improvements as then (1821) were or should thereafter be made thereon, in like good tenantable order, repair, and condition. The lessee, in 1828, planted a large quantity of timber trees, and within a year afterwards duly registered them pursuant to the 23 & 24 G. 3, c. 39 (Ir.), having previously given notice of his intention to his lessor, who offered no opposition to the registration. By divers deeds of assignment, not registered under that statute, the lessee's interest in the lands became vested in A. A cause petition (to which the lessee was not made a respondent), filed in 1851, by the lessor against A., praying that A. might be restrained by injunction from cutting the timber trees planted by the lessee, was dismissed, with costs, but without prejudice to such other proceedings as the lessor might be advised to adopt.

Semble—That by the registry of the trees in 1829, the lessee acquired the absolute property in them; and that by the deeds of assignment under which A. claimed, that property, as well as the lessee's estate in the lands, passed to A.

Semble—That the decision in Herbert v. Jameson (2 Law Rec. N. S. 92), cannot be upheld.—Standish v. Murphy, 2 I. C. R. 264; 4 I. Jur. 297. (C.)

4. Tenants for lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, are, by the 5 G. 3, c. 17 (Ir.), rendered unimpeachable of waste in respect of trees planted by them since the passing of that Act, whether the trees be or be not registered, and whether the leases, under which the tenants claim, are of a date prior or subsequent to the passing of that Act.

Semble—That by a special covenant tenants for lives renewable for ever, whose leases are of a date subsequent to the passing of that statute, may render themselves impeachable of waste in respect of trees planted by themselves.

A lease for lives renewable for ever, made in 1791, reserved and excepted from the demise all timber trees, woods, and underwoods, with liberty of ingress, egress, and regress for the lessor to cut and carry away the same. Held, that he was entitled only to trees standing at the date of the lease, or to trees growing from the stocks of trees then standing.

Tenant for lives renewable for ever, though unimpeachable of waste, will be restrained from felling ornamental timber, or timber too young for cutting, or from felling timber in an unhusbandlike manner; but an intention on the part of the tenant to commit such acts must be shown to the Court, in order to induce it to interfere by injunction.—Pentland v. Somerville, 2 I. C. R. 289; 4 I. Jur. 4, and 335. (C.)

5. In 1813, lands were conveyed to the use that A. and B. should have for ever a yearly rentcharge, with a clause of distress, if it should be in arrear for twenty-one days; and if no sufficient distress or distresses could or might be had or found in or upon the premises for forty-one days next after the days appointed for payment, it should and might be lawful for A. and B., their heirs and assigns, to enter the premises, and to take and seize upon the rents and profits, and to detain and keep them, &c., for payment and satisfaction of the rentcharge, and all arrears. A. and B., their heirs and assigns, were empowered, by sale or mortgage of the lands, or out of the rents and profits, to raise such sum or sums as should for ever thereafter be sufficient to pay and discharge the rentcharge. In 1842, the portion of the arrears due from Nov. 1834 to Nov. 1840 were assigned to the petitioner, who, in 1853, filed a petition to raise it out of the lands charged. A. died, leaving B. surviving.

Semble—That an ejectment could not be sustained on the clause of re-entry, unless it was proved that no sufficient distress could be had on the premises to answer the arrears.

Held, that the question whether the petitioner was or was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, sec. 25, depended on B.'s right to recover in the ejectment; and there being no evidence of want of sufficient distress on the premises, the Court gave liberty to bring an ejectment.

Quere—Whether the clause of re-entry, being conditional, and in the nature of a power of distress, could be made available to recover an arrear of rent, where the right to distrain is barred by the 42nd sec.?

Held, that the power of sale or mortgage could not be exercised by the surviving trustee to raise arrears, the recovery of which by distress or action was barred by sec. 42.

Quære—Whether the surviving trustee could in any case exercise the power?

Held—That an acknowledgment by a tenant for life of lands charged with a rent will bind the remainderman, so as to take the case out of sec. 42, where the right to recover the arrears is not barred; but such an acknowledgment will not revive a demand already barred.—Smith v. S., 5 I. C. R. 88. (R.)

1. Under the Irish Acts 5 & 6 G. 3, c. 17, and 23 & 24 G. 3, c. 39, a tenant, having twelve or more years of his lease to run, is entitled to the property of any trees which he plants. A demise reserved "all wood and underwood, timber and timber trees, standing, growing, or being on the demised premises, or at any time thereafter to stand or grow thereon, with full and free liberty of ingress and egress to take and carry away the same." Held, that this clause secured to the owner of the inheritance the benefit of such trees as were upon the premises at the date of the demise, but did not transfer to him the property in trees planted under those statutes. The property in those trees was vested in the lessee.—Galwey v. Baker, 7 Cl. & F. 379; West, 467.

II. 88. Tithes.

[See also PRACTICE, TITHES.]

2. The 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 30, applies only to cases of compositions for tithes made between the tithe owner and the tithe payer.—Knox v. Potter, 2 Jones, 276. (E.E.)

3. A person, having a clear equitable estate in the lands, greater than a tenancy from year to year, is liable to the tithe composition, within the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 12.—Stewart v. Alexander, 2 Jones, 534. (E.E.)

4. Although a direct covenant by the tenant to pay the tithe would be void by the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 13, there is not anything to prevent a landlord from reserving, and a tenant from agreeing to pay, a larger rent in consideration of the tithe.—Davies v. Fitton, 4 I. E. R. 612; 2 Dr. & War. 225. (C.)

5. The 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37, enacted that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners should make or cause to be made a valuation of all livings, &c., from which they were to deduct all rents, synodals, proxies, and other charges; and levy therefrom a yearly tax computed and imposed on such valuation, to be paid on the 1st July, and 1st January; and that, if the tax should be in arrear and unpaid more than a reasonable time after demand, the Commissioners might apply to the Court in a summary way by petition for relief in that behalf. Held, that the Court had not power to set aside or alter the valuation; and, the tax being fixed in respect of the valuation, was bound to make an order for payment.

Quære—Whether poor-rate imposed by a subsequent statute (1 & 2 Vic., c. 56), is a charge which should be deducted from the valuation?

The 11 & 12 Vic., c. 80, after reciting that doubts had arisen whether the Commissioners were authorised to allow any sum for poor-rate, enacted that it should be lawful for them to deduct the poor-rate from any valuation made or to be made. Held, that the Act was not declaratory, and did not apply to a tax made on a valuation and due prior to the Act.

That the tax became due on the gale day, though no demand was made.—Eccl. Commrs. v. Armstrong, 12 I. E. R. 445. (R.)

6. The Earl of A., being seized in fee under a grant to his ancestor by James II, with a license to alien, to be held of the grantee and his heirs, non obstante the Statute of Quia Emptores, conveyed the lands to P. and his heirs in 1834. Held, that no reversion being left in the Earl, the lands were not let, set, or demised, within the meaning of the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119 (Stanley's Act); and that therefore P.'s estate was liable to the tithe rent-charge.—Verschöyle v. Perkins, 13 I. E. R. 72. (R.)

7. When lands were not formerly in the possession of the dissolved monasteries, unity of possession of the lands and tithe will not extinguish the tithe. Therefore when the petitioner derived title under a lease for lives renewable for ever of lands, and the tithes thereof, made in 1700, the Court refused to declare the lands tithe free (on a petition presented under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16), though no tithe had been paid since 1700, there being no proof that the lands were Abbey lands, and no notice of the proceedings having been given to the reversioner.—Denny v. Duke of Devonshire, 1 I. C. R. 401; 4 I. Jur. 245. (R.)

8. The 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 20, enacting that the provisions thereinbefore contained "with respect to the establishment of exemption, &c., from tithes, shall not extend to any case where the tithes of any land shall have been demised by deed for any term of life or years, or where any composition for tithes shall have been made by deed or writing, by the person entitled to such tithes, with the owner or occupier of the lands, for any such term for life or years, and such demise or composition shall be subsisting at the time of the passing of the Act, nor to any suit for establishing a claim to tithes then pending," means that the exempting clauses of the statute are not applicable to the case of the owner of tithes demising them to the owner or occupier of the land chargeable with those tithes; but a person actually entitled to the common ownership both of lands and the tithes thereof is not, merely because he has derived his title under a lease making separate demises of each, disentitled by that section to hold the lands tithe free.—Denny v. Duke of Devonshire, 1 I. C. R. 657. (C.)—[Varying, 1 I. C. R. 401. (R.)]

1. A lease by the owner of tithe-free lands, demising "both land and tithe," is not a conveyance by the owner of the land and tithe to the occupier within the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 20; but is a mode of leasing the land tithe free.—Denny v. Duke of Devonshire, 5 I. Jur. 357. (C.)

2. A lease, made in 1832, contained a covenant by the tenant to pay the rent reserved "over and above all taxes, tithes, charges, and impositions whatsoever, quit-rent and crown-rent only excepted." For many years the tenant paid the reserved rent, without claiming to deduct the tithe composition. The lessor mortgaged the lands; the mortgage vested in the tenant against whom was filed a petition for an account. Held, that he was entitled to deduct the tithe composition from the rent with which the lessor was to be credited.

The 4 G. 4, c. 99, contains an implied negative respecting any such covenant.—Usher v. Boyd, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 274. (C.)

[Election of, 4 G. 4, c. 33; 5 G. 4, c. 29, s. 93; 6 G. 4, c. 52; 7 W. 4 & 1 Vic., c. 54; 1 & 2 Vic., c. 53; 6 & 7 Vic., c. 78, s. 3; 9 & 10 Vic., c. 37; 13 & 14 Vic., c. 51, s. 23; 19 & 20 Vic., c. 68.)

3. The 1 Vic. c. 54, s. 12, enabling a county treasurer to apply to the Court of Ch. by motion to vacate the recognizances of himself and his sureties, upon his investing in govt. securities a sum equal to that secured by the recognizances, applies only to those cases in which the party continues to be treasurer when the application is made. Therefore, a petition presented under that sec., by one who had resigned that office before the Act passed, was dismissed.

In cases of principal and surety, circumstances may arise in which payment of the whole sum by the principal would not discharge the sureties.—In re O'Callaghan, 1 I. E. R. 448, n.; 450, n. (R.)

5. A rentcharge was granted to A. and his heirs, charged on land held for lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal. A. died intestate and without an heir. Held, that his administratrix was entitled to the rentcharge under the 1 Vic., c. 26, s. 6.—Plunket v. Reilly, 2 I. C. R. 585. (R.)

6. One of the attesting witnesses subscribed the will in the presence of the others, and after the testator's signature; but before execution. Held, a bad execution under the 1st Vic., c. 26.

That witness should sign again.—Mitchell v. Huffington, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 40. (P.)

7. A., by will dated the 29th of May 1836 bequeathed to his illegitimate son, R., leaseholds; and, if R. should die without "heirs or issue," over. Held, that, as the 29th sec. of the Wills Act is expressly confined to the word "issue," it makes no change in the meaning of the expression "die without heirs of the body;" and therefore ("without heirs" in the will meaning "without heirs of the body," and R., being illegitimate), the will did not confer the absolute interest on R., with an executory devise over if he died without issue living at his death, but an estate tail; and, the property being leasehold, the absolute interest.—In re Sallery, 11 I. C. R. 236. (L.E.C.)

8. A., having a power to appoint real estate and £4000 to all or any, or one or more of the children, or more remote issue of his marriage, made his will before any child was born, but while the wife was enceinte, bequeathing all his property in trust, that if he left one child, it should inherit all his landed and personal property; but if he left a son and daughter, he devised and bequeathed all his landed and personal property to his son, save and except £4000 to his daughter. He afterwards died, having no real estate except what was the subject of the power, but considerable personal estate, and leaving two sons and two daughters. Held, that the will did not operate as an execution of the power over the real estate, as the devise was either void for uncertainty, or conditional on events which had not happened.

That the will did not operate as an execution of the power over the £4000, the Statute of Wills (1 Vic., c. 26, s. 27) applying to general powers and not to special powers in favour of particular objects.—Russell v. R., 12 I. C. R. 377. (R.)

1. A lease contained a covenant against turning up the ground "under a penalty of £5 per acre." Held, that, strictly, this was a penalty, not in the nature of liquidated damages; and that the Court might interfere by injunction to stay waste.—Carden v. Butler, Hay. & J. 112. (E.E.)

2. A lessee covenanted not to do a specified act "under the penalty of double the yearly rent herein reserved, same to be recovered by distress, or otherwise, the same as the said yearly rent." Held, liquidated damages, not a penalty.—*Gerrard v. 4. Stock was invested in the names of two persons in trust, as was alleged, for the petitioners. The sole evidence of the trust consisted of statements, contained in the petition and verifying affidavits, of a letter written by the donor for the purposes of the application. One of the alleged trustees being resident in some unknown place, out of the jurisdiction, a petition was presented, praying that the stock might be transferred to the petitioners. The Court refused to make that order in the trustee's absence, though it was stated that he declined to act, and though the co-trustee submitted to act as the Court should direct.—In re Dunbar, 8 I. SUIT: CIRCUITY OF.

1. By R.'s marriage settlement in 1767, £1500 were secured for portions for the younger children; that sum to be apportioned as R. might think fit. In 1806, R.'s daughter (a younger child) married G. Then R. executed two bonds to secure two sums (£1000 and £500) payable on his death; interest to be borne by the latter from its date, by the former from R.'s death. Warrants of attorney, upon which, however, judgment was not ever entered up, accompanied those bonds. A marriage settlement, of even date therewith, vested the bonds in B. (son and heir-at-law of R.) and J., as trustees (described as such in the bonds), on trust to pay the interest to G. and his wife during their lives; then in trust for their children, in such shares as G. should appoint; otherwise equally. No appointment was made. In 1807, B. married. A settlement, then executed, conveyed R.'s estates to trustees for 300 years, on trusts, whereof one was to raise £5000, and apply that money, first, in paying the £1500, the portions for R.'s younger children; then to apply the balance in paying such specialty debts as "are now due and owing" by R.; and to pay the residue, if any, to R. Subject to this term, the estates were conveyed to R. for life; to B. for life; to B.'s first and other sons in t. m. In 1816, R. died. B. entered into possession of the estates. R.'s widow took out probate of his will, and received general assets to the amount of £7500. In 1836, B. died. Interest on the money secured to G. was paid to him during B.'s life, by his agent, and also during the life of C., B.'s son, who had succeeded to the estates, under the settlement of 1807. In 1844, part of the £500 was raised. The £1500 secured by the settlement of 1767 were paid, but the £1500 secured by the bonds were not raised. In 1846, G. died. There was not any evidence that interest had been paid after his death. In 1848, G.'s children filed their bill against C. and F. (one of their brothers, who, for the purposes of the suit, had taken out administration de bonis non to R.), and against the possessor of the term. The bill prayed that the money secured by the bonds might be paid out of the term, &c. An enquiry and accounts were directed; and a report was made, and confirmed on further directions. On appeal against the original decree, and against the decree on further directions—Held, that, under the special circumstances, the suit was maintainable; that, though R.'s personal representative was primarily liable, yet, since the trustees of the bond debt could only sue the actual possessor of the term; since he must then sue C., as holder of the estate subject to the term; and since C., besides being the holder of that estate, was also representative of B., the surviving trustee of the bond debt under the settlement of 1806, a Court of Equity, seeing that all the really interested parties were before it, would not, especially after an enquiry and report, dismiss the bill for matter of form, and thus create a necessity for such a multiplicity of needless suits.—Burrowes v. Gore, 6 H. L. Cas. 907.—[Affg. decrees of the Court of Ch. in Ir.]

1. Bequest of personal estate in equal shares to each and every of my children and their issue, whether sons or daughters, "with benefit of survivorship." Held, that the period of survivorship was the death of the testator.—Caulfield v. Giles, 12 I. E. R. 427. (R.)

2. A testator bequeathed to his four children, A., B., C., and D., £8000, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, but with benefit of survivorship; the same to be paid and payable to them respectively upon their attaining the age of twenty-one years; the interest thereof in the meantime, or so much as by his executors should be considered sufficient, to be applied to their maintenance and education. He left to B. and C. all the residue of his personal estate; and in case of their decease before twenty-one, he bequeathed the residue to A. and D., or the survivor of them, share and share alike; and in case of the decease of all his before-named children before twenty-one, he gave the residue, including his lapsed legacies, to his brother. By a codicil he gave to his children, E., F., G., and H. (who were born after the will) £4000 in equal shares, with benefit of survivorship, not only as to them, but as to the rest of the children named in the will, payable at twenty-one. Maintenance to be granted by the Court of Ch. Held, that the share of G., who died under twenty-one, went to all his surviving brothers and sisters, and not to his widow and child.

2. A. being possessed of a term of 1000 years in Y., bequeathed it to K., charged with an annuity of £182 for M. K. mortgaged Y., subject to the annuity, and afterwards purchased the fee. There was not any declaration of trust that the fee should attend the inheritance. Held, that the term, though mortgaged, became attendant on the inheritance, though there was not any express declaration to that effect.—Scott v. Knox, 4 I. E. R. 397; Long & T. 381. (E.E.)

II. 3. When, and against what, a Protection.

3. Purchase for value, without notice, is not a defence to a suit instituted to enforce a mere legal right, such as dower.

A purchaser, in 1840, obtained possession of the deed creating an attendant term, but did not procure an assignment of the term. Held, that he could not rely on this term as a bar to a claim for dower.

The Act for the Confirmation of Marriages in Ireland (5 & 6 Vic., c. 113), confirms marriages theretofore solemnized by persons who had been Protestant Dissenting Ministers, even though at the time of the marriage they had been degraded or suspended.

A purchase made for a minor ward of the Court, under a power given by that Act of Parliament, is an act done under the authority of the Court, within the meaning of the 3rd sec. of that Act.

A statement of an admission, in the petitioner's affidavit in reply, is not a compliance with the rules of Equity pleading, requiring admissions to be put in issue.—Corry v. Cremorne, 12 I. C. R. 136; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 21. (C.)

4. Practice as to timber trees blown down on an estate over which a receiver had been appointed.—Crofts v. Poe, Jon. & Car. 193. (E.E.)

5. A lease made in 1821, for three lives or 41 years, excepted and reserved all timber trees, or trees likely to be timber, then growing or being on, or which should thereafter grow or be on the demised premises, with liberty of ingress, &c., for the lessor to cut and carry away the same. It also contained a covenant by the lessee, at all times during the continuance of the demise, to repair, &c., the premises, with all buildings, plantations, improvements, timber and other trees, that then were, or might at any time thereafter be, erected or planted thereupon, in good and te-nantable order, &c., and at the determination of the demise to deliver up peaceable possession of the premises, together with all improvements as then (1821) were or should thereafter be made thereon, in like good tenantable order, &c. The lessee, in 1828, planted a large quantity of timber trees, and within a year duly registered them, pursuant to the 23 & 24 G. 3, c. 39 (Ir.), having previously given notice of his intention to his lessor, who offered no opposition to the registration. By deeds of assignment, not registered under that statute, the lessee's interest in the lands vested in B. A cause petition (to which the lessee was not made a respondent), filed in 1851, by the lessor against B., praying that B. might be restrained by injunction from cutting the timber trees planted by the lessee, was dismissed with costs; but without prejudice to such other proceedings as the lessor might be advised to adopt.

Semble—That, by the registry of the trees, the lessee acquired the absolute property in them; and that, by the deeds of assignment under which B. claimed, that property, as well as the lessee's estate in the lands, passed to B.

Semble also—That the decision in Herbert v. Jameson, 2 Law Rec. N. S. 92, cannot be upheld.—Standish v. Murphy, 2 I. C. R. 264; 4 I. Jur. 297. (C.)

1. Tenants for lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, are, by the 5 G. 3, c. 17 (Ir.), rendered unimpeachable of waste in respect of trees planted by them since the passing of that Act, whether the trees be or be not registered, and whether the leases, under which the tenants claim, are of a date prior or subsequent to the passing of that Act.

Semble—That by a special covenant, tenants for lives renewable for ever, whose leases are of a date after the passing of the 5 G. 3, c. 17 (Ir.), may render themselves impeachable of waste in respect of trees planted by themselves.

Tenants for lives renewable for ever, though unimpeachable of waste, will be restrained from felling ornamental timber, or timber too young for cutting, or from felling timber in an unhusbandlike manner; but an intention on the part of the tenant to commit such acts must be shown to the Court, in order to induce it to interfere by injunction.—Pentland v. Somerville, 2 I. C. R. 289; 4 I. Jur. 4, and 335. (C.)

2. A lease for lives renewable for ever, made before the 5 G. 3, c. 17 (Ir.), contained an exception of all timber trees then standing, growing, or being, or which at any time thereafter should be standing, growing, or being on the demised premises. Held, that in a f.-f. grant under the Ren. Lease. Conv. Act, the exception should not be inserted in those terms, but should be altered, having regard to the rights of the tenant under that statute.—Ex parte Armstrong, 8 I. C. R. 30. (R.)

8. Upon the application of a tithe owner, under the 4 G. 4, c. 99, s. 38, a receiver in a minor's cause was directed to pay over one year's arrear of tithe composition out of the proceeds of a distress for rent made by him upon a tenant, who was primarily liable to pay the tithe composition.

The tenant ought to have notice of such an application.

When the amount is small, the tithe owner will not be compelled to apply to be examined pro interesse suo.—Hawkes v. Smith, S. & Sc. 326. (R.)

1. In a tithe suit in which the disputed sum was only £6. 1s. 5d., the deft. moved at the Rolls that, on paying this sum, ptf. should be stayed from taking any further proceedings. That motion was granted. On appeal—Held, that the Rolls order should be affirmed; and that since there was not, in this case, an allegation of any special circumstances arising either from combination, or from any right, to be ascertained; nor any difficulty in the way of proceeding at law; the bill might have been demurred to, or dismissed at the hearing, with costs.

Semble—The tithe composition might have been recovered in any county in which the deft. resided, even though the lands, out of which the tithe issued, were situated in a different county.—Disney v. Taaffe, 1 Dr. & Wal. 94. (C.)—[Affg. S. & Sc. 105. (R.)]

2. A receiver appointed over a renewable leasehold, subject to a heavy head rent, and to the payment of tithe rentcharge, will be required to pay the rentcharge in priority to the head rent.—Madden v. Wilson, 6 I. Jur. 129. (R.)

3. The 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 27, s. 2, applies only to adverse claimants of a rent; and the occupier of land cannot set it up as a defence against an owner of tithe rentcharge in a suit for it.—[Incorporated Society v. Sheil, 10 I. E. R. 411, confirmed.]—Netterville v. Power, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 123. (R.)

II. TITLE TO TITHES: ENDOWMENT OF VICARAGE.

4. King James I. granted by letters patent the rectorial churches and chapels of T. and K., and two parts of the tithes and altarages of the rectory or chapel of C., parcel of the possessions of the late abbey or monastery of T.; the grantee maintaining and repairing the chancel of the churches, rectory, and chapels, at his cost, from time to time for ever; and supporting annually, and from time to time paying the stipend of the curates, and all other the rents and services issuing or payable out of or from the premises. In 1641 the church of K. was destroyed, and was not afterwards re-built. By an order of the Lord Deputy and Council, in 1618 the parish of K. was united with the parish of A. In 1855 the bishop of the diocese, by deed executed under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 72, erected the ancient parish of K., and a part of the parish of A., into a new district or parish, to be called by the name of the parish of K., and constituted the district or new parish of K. into a perpetual cure, and declared that the curate thereof, and his successors, should be perpetual curates thenceforth and for ever, of the new parish; and appointed a salary for the perpetual curates. In 1856 a new church was erected in the old parish of K. Held, that the curate of the new parish of K. was not entitled to any stipend from the owner of the tithes of K.

That the owner of the tithes was not bound to repair the chancel of the new church of K.

A solicitor, who claimed a lien on deeds, was summoned as a witness, with a subpoena duces tecum. He brought the deeds into Court, but refused to produce them. Held, that secondary evidence of their contents was not admissible, the person proposing to give secondary evidence being liable to pay the costs of the solicitor.—Att.-General v. Ashe, 10 I. C. R. 309. (R.)

III. OF WHAT, PAYABLE.

5. Where lands were not formerly in the possession of the dissolved monasteries, unity of possession of the lands and tithe will not extinguish the tithe. Therefore where the petitioner derived title under a lease made in 1700, for lives renewable for ever of lands, and the tithes thereof, the Court refused to declare the lands tithe free (on a petition presented under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16), though no tithe had been paid since 1700, there being no proof that the lands were abbey lands, and no notice of the proceedings having been given to the reversioner.—Denny v. Duke of Devonshire, 1 I. C. R. 401; 4 I. Jur. 245. (R.)—[Varied on appeal: next case.]

6. A demise of lands and the tithes thereof does not necessarily mean a demise of lands and a demise of tithes as separate and independent properties; but may, if the circumstances warrant such an interpretation, be construed to mean a demise of lands tithe free. [Varying the decision 1 I. C. R. 401.]

The 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 20, enacting that the provisions thereinbefore contained, "with respect to the establishment of exemption, &c., from tithes, shall not extend to any case where the tithes of any land shall have been demised by deed for any term of life or years, or where any composition for tithes shall have been made by deed or writing, by the person entitled to such tithes, with the owner or occupier of the lands, for any such term for life or years, and such demise or composition shall be subsisting at the time of the passing of the Act, nor to any suit for establishing a claim to tithes then pending," means that the exempting clauses of the statute are not applicable to the case of the owner of tithes demising them to the owner or occupier of the land chargeable with those tithes; but a person actually entitled to the common ownership both of lands and the tithes thereof is not, merely because he has derived his title under a lease making separate demises of each, disentitled by that sec. to hold the lands tithe free.

When petitioners under the statute 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16, praying that W. should be declared tithe free, alleged that W. had constituted part of the possessions of the monastery of D. and were held by the friars and abbots free from tithes; and that under a commission issued in the 18 Eliz. an inquisition was held, and the jury found that 150 acres of land in W., with their tithes, formed parcel of the possessions of the monastery of D., and had been concealed from the Queen and her progenitors; and the petitioners also alleged that by letters patent in the 19 Eliz. 150 acres of land in W. and their tithes were granted to H., under whom the petitioners alleged that they derived by lease made in 1700, demising W. and the tithes thereof for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal; and stated a composition made in 1833, and a certificate of the commissioner certifying the composition of the parish in which W. was situate (of which £47 was assessed on W.), and certifying that it was payable to the respondent; and the petitioners also alleged that for sixty years anterior to the composition, W. was held by the owner and the tenants thereof tithe free. The respondent denied that W. was part of the possessions of the monastery, and insisted that even admitting the statement of the petitioners as to the 150 acres to be true, it only led to the conclusion that to that extent alone were the lands of W. tithe free. The Court referred it to the Master to enquire whether W. was rightly charged with tithe composition if the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, had not passed, or if such composition had not been suspended. Evidence was entered into on both sides, and tendered to the Master, who declined to consider it; and as it appeared on the petition and the charge that the lands and tithes were separately demised by the lease of 1700, he found that W. would have been rightfully charged with tithe composition if the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, had not passed, or if such composition had not been suspended. The Court (being of opinion that the lease of 1700 was susceptible of being construed to mean a demise of W. tithe free, and as the respondent had not in his discharge rested his defence upon the view adopted by the Master, but had denied the title of H., the lessor of the petitioners) directed the Master to review his report; but ordered that notice of all further proceedings should be given to the person entitled to the reversion on the lease of 1700, who had not previously been made a party in the matter.—Denny v. Devonshire, 1 I. C. R. 657; 5 I. Jur. 357. (C.)

IV. SETTING OUT: HOW PAYABLE: CARRYING AWAY.

V. WHETHER GREAT OR SMALL.

VI. SUITS FOR: PLEADING AND EVIDENCE RELATING THERETO.

[See 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 74.]

1. Deft., in a tithe suit, said by his answer that he heard and believed that ptf. was instituted and inducted into the rectory of A.; that he had ever since continued, and then was, rector of A., and as such was entitled to the tithes of A.; "but for greater certainty as to the truth and legality of said several matters, deft. begs leave to refer to such proof of same as complainant may adduce." It was proved that ptf. had been in the receipt of tithes for several years, and had been paid tithes by deft. Held, that ptf. was not bound to prove his title by producing the certificate of his collation, pre-entation, or donation.—Jones v. Waller, 1 Jones, 300. (E.E.)

2. The ptf. sued as vicar for tithe composition; and in his bill set out the certificate in which he was named as vicar, and the applotment charging the deft. as occupier. The deft. in his answer said that he believed the commissioners did make and sign such certificate as in bill stated; but whether the same was duly prepared and signed, he referred to such proof as the ptf. should produce thereof. Upon hearing upon bill and answer—Held, that the certificate sufficiently proved the title of the ptf.—Crowley v. Flood, 2 Jones, 555. (E.E.)

3. When the Remembrancer has allocated a sum to be paid by a receiver, as the tithe rentcharge due out of the lands over which he has been appointed, and his certificate has been served upon the receiver, and a personal demand made for the amount of such rentcharge, upon non-payment of same, the party entitled will obtain an attachment against the receiver. The G. O. of the Court, directing the receiver to pay the tithe rentcharge, amounts to an order to pay it in each particular case.—Brown v. B., 2 I. E. R. 409. (E.E.)

4. A sequestrator, appointed over a parish, at the suit of judgment creditors of the incumbent, presented a memorial, under 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, for arrears of tithe composition, due before the sequestration issued; and a sum was accordingly lodged in the Treasury on account of those arrears. Before the payment the incumbent died, and the memorial having stated, by mistake, as was alleged, that he was the person entitled to the arrears, his personal representative claimed the money in the Treasury against the sequestrator, and the officer refused to pay either party without the order of the Court of Ch. Whereupon, a bill was filed in the names of the sequestrator and the judgment creditors in whose behalf he was appointed, as co-ptfs., against the personal representative of the incumbent, stating the foregoing facts, and praying that the sequestrator might be decreed to be the person entitled to receive the money in the Treasury. Held, that a general demurrer should be allowed to the bill, on two grounds: first, that the sequestration was not retrospective, but attached the future accruing tithe only, and therefore did not entitle the ptfs. to the money in the Treasury; secondly, that at any rate the sequestrator could have had no interest or title in this suit, and should not have been made a co-ptf.—Egan v. Heenan, 3 I. E. R. 50. (R.)

1. Under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 32, upon application by three or more persons in any parish, each charged with payment of £3 or upwards in respect of the tithe rentcharge, and who have given notice in the manner specified by the Act, Quarter Sessions may vary the rentcharge according to the price of corn. An order reducing the rentcharge recited that—whereas, due notice having been first by them given, three owners and occupiers of land in the parish of F., &c., each charged with payment of £3 and upwards in respect of the rentcharge payable in lieu of the composition for tithes made by certificate of, &c., applied to the Justices of the Peace at Quarter Sessions, &c. Afterwards the incumbent proceeded by petitions under the 30th sec. of the Act, to recover the rentcharge which accrued from the gale day after the order of Sessions, as if no reduction had taken place; and, a rule nisi for a receiver having been obtained, the respondent came in to show cause against it, relying upon the order of the Quarter Sessions. Held, that the recitals in the order were not evidence of the facts thereby stated.—Thompson v. Sheil, 3 I. E. R. 135. (R.)

2. Proceedings stayed against one of several debts in a tithe suit, upon payment of the sums decreed against him, and the costs of the cause and motion, save so far as the costs of the cause related exclusively to the other debts.—Ould v. Griffin, 8 I. E. R. 512. (E.E.)

3. The petitioner, as rector and vicar of a parish, claimed by his petition one year's tithe rentcharge from the owner of the first estate of inheritance in lands. Held, that the petition was properly framed within the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, and the 9th G. O., 1851.

The applotment of tithe rentcharge made by commissioners under the 4 G. 4, c. 99, is not in every case conclusive evidence of the amount payable by the tithe-payer.

Statutes are to be construed as mandatory and imperative when they prescribe acts to be done by private parties; but are only directory when they require public officers to do the acts; in which case the default or mistake of the officers will not destroy the rights of the parties.—Plunket v. Malley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 83. (M.O.)

IX. EXEMPTION AND DISCHARGE FROM: PRESCRIPTION DE NON DECIMANDO.

4. In 1731, the lands of B. and M., with so much of the tithes as were vested in the lessor, were demised for 51 years. In 1764, F. became entitled to the interest in the lease, and so continued until 1782, when it expired. The lands of B., C., and M. were demised to F., for lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal, in 1751.

In 1766, the tithes of B., C., and M. were demised for lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal. In 1813 and 1832, renewals of the lease were granted, the interest of which was vested in A. In 1834, a tithe composition was made in the parish where the lands were situate, and the commissioners certified that a certain proportion of the tithes was payable to those claiming under the lease of 1766, and the remainder to the vicar. There was no evidence of the payment of tithes for sixty years previous to 1834. Held, overruling objections to the Master's report, that the right of exemption from the payment of tithes, under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 18, was not established, the case falling within the exception in sec. 20.

The exception in the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 20, is not confined to the case of a demise of tithes to the owner or occupier of the lands in respect of which tithes are payable.—Ellis v. O'Neill, 3 I. C. R. 280. (R.)—[See next case.]

5. When there is no evidence of the payment of tithes from a particular denomination for 60 years next preceding the establishment of a composition in lieu of tithes in the parish, the presumptive bar thus created under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 18, is not avoided by showing that the tithes of the lands in question had, amongst others, been demised to a person not in privity with the lands, for a term which was subsisting at the passing of the Act.—Ellis v. O'Neill, 3 I. C. R. 609. (C.)

6. When upon hearing a petition under the Tithe Acts, lands are declared to have been exempt from tithes and tithe rentcharge, the order will be made without prejudice to the amount of tithe rentcharge or composition (from which those lands are declared to be exempted) being re-applotted upon the other lands in the parish, which are not tithe free; and to the certificate of tithe composition being amended accordingly.—Sherlock v. Daly, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 225. (R.)

X. MODUS.

1. Validity.

2. Suits and Evidence thereon in Establishing Modus by Bill, or as a Defence by Plea, &c.

XI. CUSTOM RESPECTING.

7. The 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, does not create any new grounds of exemption from payment of the rentcharge in lieu of tithe, or establish exemptions in cases in which they could not have existed independently of the Act; and the 18th sec. relates to cases of the possession or enjoyment of exemption, and to the evidence to be required of such possession or enjoyment. In order to show an exemption, two things are necessary: first, the title to the lands giving a legal capability of exemption, e. g., being derived from an ancient monastery; and, secondly, the enjoyment of the exemption for the period specified in the Act. Therefore, a petition claiming exemption exclusively on the ground of non-payment of tithe, &c., for sixty years next before the signing of the certificate of tithe composition, was dismissed, with costs—the Court, after argument, holding that it had jurisdiction so to dismiss it, although the statute is silent as to costs.—Chambers v. The Earl of Shannon, 5 I. E. R. 835. (R.)

XII. TITHE COMPOSITION.

1. A demise of lands and the tithes thereof does not necessarily mean a demise of lands and a demise of tithes as separate and independent properties, but may, if the circumstances warrant such an interpretation, be construed to mean a demise of lands tithe free.

The 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 201, enacting that the provisions thereinbefore contained "with respect to the establishment of exemption, &c., from tithes, shall not extend to any case where the tithes of any land shall have been demised by deed for any term of life or years, or where any composition for tithes shall have been made by deed or writing, by the person entitled to such tithes, with the owner or occupier of the land, for any such term for life or years, and such demise or composition shall be subsisting at the time of the passing of the Act, nor to any suit for establishing a claim to tithes then pending," means that the exempting clauses of the statute are not applicable to the case of the owner of tithes demising them to the owner or occupier of the land chargeable with those tithes; but a person actually entitled to the common ownership both of lands and the tithes thereof is not, merely because he has derived his title under a lease making separate demises of each, disentitled by that sec. to hold the lands tithe free.

When petitioners under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16, praying that W. should be declared tithe free, alleged that those lands had constituted part of the possessions of the monastery of D. and were held by the friars and abbots free from tithes; and that under a commission issued in the 18 Eliz. an inquisition was held, and the jury found that 150 acres in W., and their tithes, formed parcel of the possessions of the monastery of D., and had been concealed from the Queen and her progenitors; and the petitioners also alleged that by letters patent in the 19 Eliz., 150 acres in W., and their tithes, were granted to H., under whom the petitioners alleged that they derived by lease made in 1700, demising W. and the tithes thereof for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal; and stated a composition made in 1833, and a certificate of the commissioner certifying the composition of the parish in which W. was situate (of which £47 was assessed on W.), and certifying that it was payable to the respondent; and the petitioners alleged that for sixty years anterior to the composition, W. was held by the owner and the tenants thereof tithe free. The respondent denied that W. was part of the possessions of the monastery; and insisted that, even admitting the statement of the petitioners as to the 150 acres to be true, it only led to the conclusion that to that extent alone were the lands of W. tithe free. The Court referred it to the Master to enquire whether W. would have been rightfully charged with tithe composition if the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, had not passed, or if such composition had not been suspended? Evidence was entered into on both sides, and tendered to the Master, who declined to consider it; and, as it appeared on the petition and the charge that the lands and tithes were separately demised by the lease of 1700, he found that W. would have been rightfully charged with tithe composition if the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, had not been passed, or if such composition had not been suspended. The Court (being of opinion that the lease of 1700 was susceptible of being construed to mean a demise of W. tithe free, as the respondent had not in his discharge rested his defence upon the view adopted by the Master, but had denied the title of H., the lessor of the petitioners) directed the Master to review his report, but ordered that notice of all further proceedings should be given to the person entitled to the reversion on the lease of 1700, who had not previously been made a party in the matter.—Denny v. Devonshire, 1 I. C. R. 657; 5 I. Jur. 357. (C.)—[Varying, 1 I. C. R. 401; 4 I. Jur. 245. (R.)]

XIII. COMMUTATION AND RENTCHARGE.

[See 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119; 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109.]

2. Service of subpoena, to appear and answer a bill for tithe composition, may be effected out of the jurisdiction, under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82.—Anon., 1 Jones, 561. (E.E.)

3. The owner of a tithe composition, effected under the 4 G. 3, c. 99, may sue for it by a bill in Equity, though he might have distrained deft. for the amount.

The jurisdiction of the Superior Court is not taken away in cases in which the amount of the tithe composition demanded is within the Civil-bill Court's jurisdiction.—Ryan v. Maher, 1 Jones, 595. (E.E.)

4. A lessee of tithes may maintain a bill to recover tithe composition effected under the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119.—Kane v. Potter, 2 Jones, 276. (E.E.)

5. In answer to a petition for a receiver to pay tithe composition under the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 15, respondent cannot set up as a defence that the lands are occupied by his undertenants, who held under unstamped accepted proposals in writing, executed before the 16th August 1832.—Orpen v. Allen, 2 Jones, 434. (E.E.)

6. Semble—A person in possession of lands under a contract for a lease for a term greater than three years, but on which an action at law could not be maintained, is not a person having an estate or interest therein greater than a tenancy from year to year, within the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 12, though a Court of Equity would decree specific execution of the contract, on the ground of part performance.—Orpen v. Moore, 2 Jones, 435. (E.E.)

1. A purchaser of an estate, sold under a decree of the Court of Ch., who confirmed his sale on the 28th April, but whose purchase deed was not executed until the 8th Dec. following, is liable for the tithe composition which accrued due on the 1st Nov.; the lands being in the occupation of tenants from year to year.

A person having in the lands a clear equitable estate, greater than a tenancy from year to year, is a person liable to the tithe composition, within the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 12.—Stewart v. Alexander, 2 Jones, 530. (E.E.)

2. Under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 1, a ptf. is entitled to dismiss his bill without paying costs, though it was filed to recover not only the tithe composition due for 1834, 1835, and 1836, but also the arrears or additions recoverable therewith, under the Million Act. He may dismiss the bill as against one of several defts., and retain it as to the others.

As a general rule, the costs in a Court of Equity follow the result.—Burgh v. Kenny, 1 I. E. R. 264. (E.E.)

3. On a summary petition, under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16, the Court has not jurisdiction to declare a certificate null and void: it can only amend the certificate of applotment as to the charge on the petitioner's land.

On such a petition, the Court has not jurisdiction to decide between the two conflicting certificates.—Connor v. Devonshire, 1 I. E. R. 328. (E.E.)

4. On a petition under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16, claiming a partial exemption on the ground of a modus decimandi, it was referred to the Remembrancer to enquire and report whether those lands were rightfully charged with tithe or tithe composition. On the report of a modus decimandi, as contemplated by the Act, they were declared not chargeable with tithe composition; and the applotment book was directed to be altered accordingly by the proper officer, without prejudice to the previous liabilities of the applicants. A copy of the order and summons to proceed thereunder, to be served, one month previously, on the churchwardens of the parish, and on twelve of the tithe payers, and to be posted on the usual places for posting notices of road sessions; with liberty to the tithe payers to appear on such reference.—Houston v. Kinahan, 1 I. E. R. 470; Patterson v. Kinahan, 1 I. E. R. 478. (E.E.)

5. In a suit for arrears of tithe composition in the names of a sequestrator of the parish, and of the Bishop, who died, deft. may, nevertheless, proceed with a motion for costs.—Egan v. Doherty, 2 I. E. R. 68. (E.E.)

6. Lands were applotted with tithe composition for two parishes. On a petition presented under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16, the Court referred it to the Remembrancer to enquire and report in which parish the lands were situated, and whether they were doubly charged with the rentcharge; and, if so, for which parish they had been rightfully charged therewith.—Armstrong v. Pepper, 2 I. E. R. 89. (E.E.)

7. The mode of service required by the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109 (Tithe Rentcharge Act), s. 30, respecting the ten days' notice of a party's intention to apply for a receiver under that Act, does not apply to service of the order appointing the receiver. That order must be served in the usual manner required by the Court for serving its orders.—Mangun v. Massy, 2 I. E. R. 106. (E.E.)

8. A receiver appointed under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 30, to pay the tithe rentcharge, is bound to apply, in the first instance, the sums received in discharging the rentcharge and costs, and has nothing to do with paying the head rent to which the land is liable.—Saunderson v. Stoney, 2 I. E. R. 153. (R.)

9. The Registrar of the Diocese is the proper officer to amend the tithe certificate and applotment, pursuant to an order made under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109.—Adair v. Johnson, 3 I. E. R. 61. (E.E.)

10. Under 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 32, upon application by three or more persons in any parish, each charged with payment of £3 or upwards, in respect of the tithe rentcharge, and who have given notice in the manner specified by the Act, the Q. Sessions may vary the rentcharge, according to the price of corn. An order reducing the rentcharge recited, that "Whereas due notice having been first by them given, three owners and occupiers of land, in the parish of T., &c., each charged with payment of £3 and upwards in respect of the rentcharge payable in lieu of the composition for tithes made by certificate of, &c., applied to the Justices of the Peace at Q. Sessions," &c. Afterwards the incumbent proceeded by petition under the 30th sec. of the Act, to recover the rentcharge which accrued from the gale day after the order of Sessions, as if no reduction had taken place; and a rule nisi for a receiver having been obtained, the respondents came in to show cause against it, relying upon the order of the Q. Sessions. Held, that the recitals in the order were not evidence of the facts thereby stated; and as it now appeared that one of the three persons who signed the notice, and upon whose application the order was made, was not an owner or occupier of land in the parish, nor charged with payment of any portion of the rentcharge—Held, that the Q. Sessions had not jurisdiction, and that the order was a nullity.—Thompson v. Shield, 3 I. E. R. 135; Fl. & K. 53. (R.)

11. Semble—That when an agreement has been entered into since the passing of Stanley's Act, for granting a lease at a rent, over and above the tithe rentcharge, the Court will perform the agreement, by adding the amount of the rentcharge to the rent agreed on.—Davies v. Fitton, 4 I. E. R. 612; 2 Dr. & War. 225. (C.)

1. The affidavit verifying a petition under 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 30 (Tithe Rentcharge Act), may be, in a proper case, made by the agent of the petitioner, as, when the agent has peculiar knowledge of the fact.—Kellett v. Sturgeon, 5 I. E. R. 159. (E.E.)

2. If the person liable to pay tithe rentcharge fail to do so, within ten days after service of notice, as prescribed by 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, the rentcharger is then entitled to prepare his petition, and is justified in refusing to receive the arrears without the costs incurred in preparing his petition and incidental thereto.

What are reasonable costs in such case.—Macartney v. Graydon, 8 I. E. R. 99. (R.)

3. The Court has a discretion to grant or to withhold a receiver under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 20 (Tithe Rentcharge Act). Therefore, though the petition states a prima facie title, if the answering affidavit casts a fair doubt on it, the Court will not appoint a receiver.

Semble—A certificate by the commissioners under the Tithe Composition Act, 4 G. 4, c. 90, s. 25, is valid, though it only finds generally that tithes are payable to a lay impropriator, without giving his name.

Semble—The certificate does not conclude the title to the tithes.

A receiver refused to a lay impropriator to get in the tithe rentcharge, there being a contest in the parish, and the affidavit stating merely that he was lay impropriator.—Greville v. Fleming, 8 I. E. R. 201; 2 Jon. & L. 335. (C.)

4. The Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 2) applies only between adverse claimants of estates in tithe rentcharge, and not as between the owner of the tithe rentcharge and the occupier and owner of the land.

The Dean of Ely v. Bliss (5 Beav. 581), disapproved of.

Quere—Whether a lay landowner can establish an exemption from tithe rentcharge by proof of non-payment for one of the periods mentioned in the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 18, without other proof of the legal origin of the exemption?—Sheil v. The Incorporated Society, 10 I. E. R. 411. (R.)

5. The Earl of A., being seized in fee under a grant to his ancestor by James II, with a license to alien, to be held of the grantee and his heirs, non obstante the Statute of Quia Emptores, conveyed the lands to P. and his heirs in 1834. Held, that, no reversion being left in the Earl, the lands were not let, set, or demised within the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 119, s. 13 (Stanley's Act), and that therefore the estate of P. was liable to the tithe rentcharge.—Verschoyle v. Perkins, 18 I. E. R. 72. (R.)

6. When the petitioners under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 16, praying that W. should be declared tithe free, alleged that those lands had constituted part of the possessions of the monastery of D., and were held by the friars and abbots free from tithes; and that under a commission issued in the 18 Eliz., an inquisition was held, and the jury found that 150 acres of land in W., with the tithes of the same, formed parcel of the possessions of the monastery of D., and had been concealed from the Queen and her progenitors; and the petitioners also alleged that by letters patent in the 19 Eliz., 150 acres of land in W., and the tithes of the same, were granted to H., under whom the petitioners alleged that they derived by lease made in 1700, demising W. and the tithes thereof for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal: and stated a composition made in 1833, and a certificate of the commissioners certifying the composition (of which £47 was assessed on W.) of the parish in which W. was situate and also certifying that it was payable to the respondent; and the petitioners also alleged that for sixty years anterior to the composition, W. was held by the owner and the tenants thereof tithe free. The respondent denied that W. was part of the possessions of the monastery, and insisted that, even admitting the statement of the petitioners as to the 150 acres to be true, it only led to the conclusion that to that extent alone was W. tithe free. The Court referred it to the Master to enquire whether W. was rightly charged with tithe composition if the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, had not passed, or if such composition had not been suspended. Evidence was entered into on both sides, and tendered to the Master, who declined to consider it; and inasmuch as it appeared on the petition and the charge that the lands and tithes were separately demised by the lease of 1700, he found that W. would have been rightfully charged with tithe composition if the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, had not been passed, or if such composition had not been suspended. The Court (being of opinion that the lease of 1700 was susceptible of being construed to mean a demise of W. tithe free, and inasmuch as the respondent had not in his discharge rested his defence upon the view adopted by the Master, but had denied the title of H., the lessor of the petitioners) directed the Master to review his report; but ordered that notice of all further proceedings should be given to the person entitled to the reversion on the lease of 1700, who had not previously been made a party in the matter.—Denny v. Duke of Devonshire, 1 I. C. R. 657; 5 I. Jur. 357. (C.)—[Varying, 1 I. C. R. 401; 4 I. Jur. 245. (R.)]

7. When there is no evidence of the payment of tithes from a particular denomination for sixty years next preceding the establishment of a composition in lieu of tithes in the parish, the presumptive bar thus created under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 18, is not avoided by showing that the tithes of the lands in question had, amongst others, been demised to a person not in privity with the lands, for a term which was subsisting at the date of the passing of the said Act.—Ellis v. O'Neill, 5 I. C. R. 609; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 847. (C.)—[See s. c., 3 I. C. R. 280. (R.)]

There was evidence that the rent had not been paid by, or demanded from the owners of one of the denominations for upwards of a century. There was not any evidence that the rent had not been regularly paid out of the other denominations. Held, that the Court would not presume, either that the redemption-money had been paid, or that that denomination had been released.—*Warren v. I. TRUSTS, GENERALLY.

1. A settlement contained a power to appoint new trustees if any of the trustees therein named "should become incapable, or unfit to act in the trust thereof." Held, that bankruptcy rendered a trustee unfit to act within the meaning of that power.

Such a power directed the property to be vested in the new trustees jointly with those continuing. The continuing trustee happened to be a bankrupt. Held that, nevertheless, a valid appointment of, and transfer of the estate to the new trustee might be made under the power.

The Court never appoints a new trustee without a reference to the Master.—*In re
Roche*, 2 Dr. & War. 287; 1 Con. & L. 306. (C.)

2. The Corporation of B., having power to borrow money to a limited amount, and to purchase lands for improving their town, borrowed a larger sum. The Lands Cl. Cons.
Acts were incorporated with their Acts. K., being served by the Corporation with notice to treat for the sale of lands in the borough, agreed to sell, but allowed the price to remain unpaid. An information, to which K. was not a party, was filed against the Corporation.
They were restrained from applying the borough funds to pay specified debts, of which the petitioner's claim formed part. He obtained a decree for specific performance, and for payment of the sum due to him in respect of the lands sold by him. Held, that he was not entitled to enforce that decree against chattel property of the Corporation, purchased out of the borough fund, and which, if sold, must, for the purposes of the Corporation, have been replaced thereout.

The creditor of a Municipal Corporation has not a right to have execution against property of the Corporation subject to a specific trust for municipal purposes.—Keyland v. Corporation of Belfast, 6 L. C. R. 161; 2 L. Jur.
N. S. 189. (C.)

3. The Bankers Act, 33 G. 2, c. 14, is not repealed by the 6 G. 4, c. 42. Therefore, upon the stoppage of payment by a Joint-stock Banking Company, formed under the latter statute, a trust is created in favour of the creditors, and affecting all the property of the shareholders, under the Bankers Act, which may be administered by this Court at the suit of any creditor against the public officer of the company, instituted without making the other creditors or shareholders parties; it being stated in the bill that the co-partnership assets are sufficient to discharge the liabilities of the company; and it not appearing that the shareholders have any other liabilities than those of their co-partnership.—Fawcett v. Hodges, 3 I. E. R. 232; Fl. & K. 100. (R.)—[Overruled: O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469; (H.L.); 6 Il. Lds. Cas. 142.]

1. By marriage articles, the intended husband covenanted with the trustees, that a sum of money should be vested in the trustees, and the survivor of them, and the executors, &c., of such survivor, for ever, upon trusts specified in the articles. The marriage was celebrated; and the husband, with the assent of the trustees, obtained possession of the money. Held, in a suit to administer the husband's assets, that the trustees were entitled to rank as specialty creditors of the husband in regard of that sum.—Jameson v. Furrer, 3 I. E. R. 846. (E.E.)

2. In 1230, M., Archbishop of Cashel, with the consent of the Dean and Chapter, granted to the Corporation of C. the town of C., and also granted to them, and their tenants, and all the inhabitants of the town, free pasture in all his lands, except meadows. Subsequently the Corporation became seized in fee of the soil of the lands, over which free pasture had been so granted. There was no evidence to show the time at, or the manner in which the Corporation became seized of the soil. Held, that as the old right of pasturage in the lands of the Corporation was affected with a trust for the benefit of the inhabitants of C., so the soil of the lands which were substituted for that right was bound by the same trust; and that whether a new right was acquired by usurpation or otherwise.

When lands were held by a Corporation aggregate, upon trusts, and they granted a lease thereof to one of their own body, at a great undervalue, and in derogation of the trust, the lease was decreed to be set aside, and an account of the mesne profits of the lands directed to be taken from the time of the grant of the lease; being less than twenty years.—Att.-Gen. v. Corp'n. of Cashel, 3 Dr. & War. 294; 2 Con. & L. 1. (C.)

3. Trusts for an illegal purpose were created upwards of a century and a-half ago; the subject-matter of the trust was enjoyed by the objects of it; and statutes had been since passed authorising the creation of such trusts at the present day; the Court made a decree confirmatory of them.—Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 1 Dr. & War. 379; 1 Con. & L. 210. (C.)

4. When there is a devise of lands to a Corporation, for the purposes of the Corporation, although the devise is void at Law, it will be supported in Equity, on the ground, that a trust will not be permitted to be nullified for want of a trustee.

Semble—That a limitation to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, not expressly confined to the life-time of the tenant for life, will not be cut down to that life if there are contingent remainders which may require protection for a longer period.—Incorporated Society v. Richards, 4 I. E. R. 177; 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58. (C.)

5. Real estate having been applied for 150 years on trusts specified by a will which named a trustee, the Court assumed that the will had created an express trust in the heir-at-law.—In re Gore's Charities, 4 Dr. & War. 270; 2 Con. & L. 411. (C.)

6. Bequest of personalty to "A. and B., to be divided equally," with a request to A. that, "should he die without lawful issue, the property which I bequeath him shall revert back to the sons of B., provided they are prudent and well-conducted." Held, that these words were not merely precatory but sufficiently imperative to create a trust in favour of the sons of B.—In re O'Beirne, 1 Jon. & L. 352; 7 I. E. R. 171. (C.)

7. Charities are bound by the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27.

A. devised his estate on trust to convey it to W. and his sons in strict settlement, subject to and charged and chargeable with annuities for charities, giving a joint leasing power to the trustees; and a direction, applicable to them, to pay the annuities. W. went into possession, and continued so for nearly thirty years after the annuities became payable, without any payment being made on account of them. He and his eldest son re-settled and mortgaged the estate. No conveyance was ever made by the trustees. Held, that the legal estate being still in the trustees, there was an express trust for the benefit of the charities within the 25th sec. of the Act; and that, even if the case was to be considered as if the trustees had conveyed, the charge created an express trust within that sec., and therefore time was no bar.

The question when a charge creates an express trust considered.—Comrs. of Ch. Don. & Beg. v. Wybrants, 7 I. E. R. 580; 2 Jon. & L. 182. (C.)

8. A sum was lodged in bank in the names of trustees, in trust to manage it during the minorities of A. and B., in such manner as the trustees should think fit for their benefit; and to pay the principal in equal shares on their respectively attaining 21. A. & B. attained 21. One of the trustees being out of the jurisdiction, and having declined to act, a petition was presented that the other trustee might transfer the fund to A. and B. There was no evidence of the trust, save the statement in the petition and verifying affidavit. Held, that the Court had not jurisdiction to order the transfer of the fund.—In re Dunbar, 8 I. E. R. 71; 2 Jon. & L. 120. (C.)

9. A person having become tenant under the Court, in trust for another, afterwards denied the trust. Motion for an injunction to put the c. q. t. into possession of the lands, refused.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 8 I. E. R. 519. (E.E.)

1. In 1786, an estate was assigned to trustees, on trust, to raise by sale or mortgage, £500 for children's portions; and, subject thereto, in trust for the settlor, C. In 1792, C., by a conveyance expressly referring to the settlement, conveyed to A., who paid C. the purchase-money, except £500, for which A. confessed a judgment to the trustees; which sum was not to be called in till the trusts of the settlement were fulfilled. In 1805, A., on his daughter's marriage, secured for her a jointure on the lands. He died, having devised them on trust to pay his debts; and, subject thereto, to a devisee, who, becoming insolvent, acknowledged the £500 as a debt in his schedule. In 1812, the trustees assigned the judgment to X., who had become entitled to the £500 under the settlement. In 1845, A.'s daughter relied on the Statute of Limitations in bar of the £500 as against her jointure. Held, that it continued secured by an express trust, and was not barred.—Blair v. Nugent, 9 I. E. R. 400; 3 Jon. & L. 658. (C.)

2. A devise of lands to A. for life, subject to all the testator's just debts, legacies, and funeral expenses, with a bequest of his personal property to A., the better to enable her to pay his debts, &c., does not prevent a judgment debt of the testator from being barred by the 40th sec. of 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, or create a trust for the creditor within the 25th sec.

The distinction between charges on lands and trusts for debts considered; and the several cases on their effect in reference to the Statute of Limitations reviewed.

Counsel for an incumbrancer, whose charge is stated in the bill, but not proved in the cause, will not be heard against the ptf.'s rights.—Dundas v. Blake, 11 I. E. R. 138. (C.)

3. By marriage articles between O., the intended husband; B., the intended wife; and J. and T., the trustees; O. covenanted to grant and convey, when requested, to the trustees, all that, &c., chargeable with an annuity of £100 a-year to E., and £300 a-year jointure for B. The articles recited a policy of insurance for £3000 on W.'s life, payable to O., who covenanted that it should be liable to secure the annuities; and that he would within two years effect on his own life an insurance for £5000. He agreed that, if he survived a reversionary interest, these lands should be partitioned amongst the children; and that the amount of the policies should be payable to them; with a general covenant to the same effect. On exceptions to the Master's report—Held, that although the words were executory, an express trust was created by the covenants in favour of the issue, to the exclusion of creditors; and that, the amount of the £3000 policy, and the interest in the £5000 policy being bound by the covenants, the Master was right in not treating them as assets, and liable to the claims of the widow and children as specialty creditors.—Hedges v. O'Sullivan, 3 I. Jur. 61. (C.)

4. A widow lodged her late husband's money in bank, with the intent of preserving it for the benefit of her children. Held, that a trust was fastened upon it for their benefit; and that she could not recover possession of the money, though, when dealing with it, she had not administered to the intestate.—Quinn v. Q., 4 I. Jur. 178. (C.)

5. By R.'s marriage settlement in 1767, £1500 were secured for portions for the younger children, that sum to be apportioned as R. might think fit. In 1806, R.'s daughter (a younger child) married G. Upon that marriage, R. executed two bonds to secure two sums (£1000 and £500), payable on his death: the former not to bear interest till his death; the latter to bear interest from the date of the bonds. These bonds were accompanied by warrants of attorney, upon which, however, judgments were not ever entered up. A marriage settlement, of even date with the bonds, vested them in B. (son and heir-at-law of R.), and J., as trustees (they being so described in the bonds) on trust, to pay the interest to G. and his wife during their lives, and after their deaths in trust for their children, in such shares as G. should appoint: otherwise equally. No appointment was made. In 1807, B. married. A settlement, then executed, conveyed R.'s estates to trustees for 300 years, on trusts, whereof one was to raise £5000, and apply that sum, first in paying the £1500, the portions for R.'s younger children; then to apply the balance in paying such specialty debts as "are now due and owing" by R.; and to pay the residue, if any, to R. Subject to this term, the estates were conveyed to R. for life; to B. for life; to B.'s first and other sons in t. m. R. died in 1816, and B. entered into possession of the estates. R.'s widow took out probate of his will, and received general assets to the amount of £7500. B. died in 1836. Interest on the money secured to G. was paid during B.'s life, by his agent, and during the life of C., B.'s son, who had succeeded under the settlement of 1807, to the estates. Part of the £5000 was raised in 1844. The £1500, secured by the settlement of 1767, were paid, but the £1500 secured by the bonds were not raised. In 1846 G. died. There was not any evidence that interest had been paid after his death. In 1848 G.'s children filed their bill against C., F. (one of their brothers, who for the purposes of the suit had taken out administration de bonis non to R.), and against the possessor of the term. The bill prayed that the money secured by the bonds might be paid out of the term, &c. An enquiry and accounts were directed, and a report made, and confirmed on further directions. On appeal against the original decree and against the decree on further directions—Held, that under the special circumstances the suit was maintainable; that, though the personal representative of R. was primarily liable, yet, since the trustees of the bond debt could only sue the actual possessor of the term, since he must then sue C. as holder of the estate, which was subject to the term, and since C. besides being the holder of that estate, was also representative of B., the surviving trustee of the bond debt under the settlement of 1806, a Court of Equity, seeing that all the parties really interested were before it, would not, especially after an enquiry and report, dismiss the bill for matter of form, and thus create a necessity for such a multiplicity of needless suits.

That the settlement of 1806 created a trust in respect of the bond debt: that that debt was not, within the words of the settlement of 1807, a debt of R. then "due and owing;" but that it would have been so had the trustees performed their duty by entering judgment on the warrants of attorney; and that C., as owner of the estate, could not set up their neglect in this respect as a defence, C. himself being also representative of the surviving trustee, and, as such, bound to obtain payment of the money secured by the bonds. [By Lord Wensleydale].—That these bonds constituted equitable charges on the lands.

That the Statute of Limitations did not bar this suit, an express trust of a charge on land being, by the true construction of that Act, as much saved from its operation as an express trust of the land itself; and, as C. represented his father (the surviving trustee of the bonds), and himself owned the estate out of the term in which these bonds were, under the deed of 1807, to be satisfied, he was at once the hand to pay and the hand to receive, and therefore could not set up the Statute of Limitations as his defence for not performing the trust.

That the right of the c. q. t. did not arise till the death of G.; and that that Act did not, in fact, apply to them, because they had brought their suit within two years afterwards. —Burrows v. Gore, 6 H. L. Cas. 907. — [Affg. decrees of the Court of Ch. in Ir.]

1. The debt, V., had acted gratuitously as agent of the ptf. D., transmitting to her the interest of charges to which she was entitled. One charge was paid to V., which D. directed him to invest on a specified real security. He was unable to do so; but, without her authority, lent it to L., for whom he was agent, and who was indebted to him, on the security of a bond, and warrant of attorney to enter judgment. He enclosed the bond and warrant to D. in a letter, in which he stated, contrary to the fact, that the money had been applied to pay off a charge on his estate. L. afterwards, on his son's marriage, conveyed a part of the estate in trust to pay off charges on his estate, another part to the use of his son and his issue; and the lands of C. in trust to secure his debt to V., who in several letters, offered to give D.'s claim priority over his demand on C. L. died, leaving no assets to pay D.'s claim. The Court, on a bill filed by her, declared her entitled to a specific performance of the contract contained in the letters; and that V. was a trustee for her, as to so much of his security on C. as would be sufficient to pay her claim; and ordered that he should execute a deed declaring the trust. — O'Beirne v. Cornwall, 3 I. C. R. 180; 5 I. Jur. 13. (C.)

2. When a policy of insurance is assigned upon trusts, even though the deed contains no express power to the trustee to give receipts, the insurer is not compellable to see to the application of the sum assigned. Payment to the trustee will sufficiently discharge him. — Ford v. Ryan, 4 I. C. R. 342. (C.)

3. A., by will, after charging his real and personal estate, which consisted chiefly of slaves in Jamaica, with payment of his debts, bequeathed to executors £2000, in trust to pay the interest thereon to his daughter, M. (the petitioner), for life, after her death the principal to go to her children. He directed that the principal and interest should be raised out of the yearly profits of the estate, and that the person for the time being in possession of the property should pay the charge. Subject to this and some other legacies, he devised his estate to his son, S., and his assigns for ever. S. entered into possession, and continued seized until his death, when he devised the property to his daughter, K., still subject to the above legacy. The respondent having married K., became entitled to the estate in right of his wife, and wrote to the petitioner on the subject of the legacy of £2000, a letter containing the following language: "The property owes you and your family £2000 currency. So long as I am in possession you shall be paid your interest, and when the property yields it, the principal; as I wish never to pocket a farthing till every one is paid." Under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37 (the Slave Compensation Act), the respondent had previously put in his claim for compensation, as owner of the estate in right of his wife, but not in any other character. No counter claims were lodged on behalf of the petitioner, or any person representing her charge, and a large sum of money was awarded to him as compensation. A petition having been presented to establish the charge of £2000 upon the estate, and render the compensation money liable in the hands of the respondent to this demand—Held, that the act of the Compensation Commissioners, in awarding this sum to the respondent, did not conclude the rights of the petitioner as against the sum granted to the respondent in lieu of the estate originally liable to that charge.

That the letter written by the respondent to the petitioner amounted to a declaration of trust in reference to the rents and profits of the estate; and that therefore the respondent was liable to satisfy the demand of the petitioner as to the legacy of £2000 out of the sum awarded to him as compensation money. — M'Kean v. Gray, 7 I. Jur. 317. (C.)

4. In 1810, two judgments on a joint and several bond against D. and B., to secure £2200, and in 1812 another judgment to secure £1000, against D., were entered by X., as trustee for the M. Infirmary. In 1819, a joint and several bond to secure £3200, was executed by D. and

B. to X., who gave warrants to satisfy the judgments. In 1823, two deeds were executed by D. and B. By the first they conveyed lands in trust to sell with their consent, or the consent of the survivor, and to stand possessed of the purchase-money, on trusts declared by the second deed, viz., to apply £8275 as D. and B. should appoint; in default of appointment, to pay £3200 due to X. (party to the deed, but not as trustee), "on a judgment against the said D. and B.;" and to pay the surplus after payment of legacies, to B. and his heirs; and, until the sale took place, to pay the rents as D. and B. should jointly appoint; in default of appointment, to keep down the interest on the £3200 and legacies, and to pay the surplus to D. for life, and after his death to B., his executors, &c. No sale was had. In 1826, D. died. In 1827, X. died, without entering judgment on the bond of 1819, and before the judgments of 1810 and 1812 were satisfied. In 1832, B., and the trustees of the deed of 1821, mortgaged to the ptf., who had notice of the deed of 1823, but not of the bond of 1819, and who, without enquiring whether the £3200 had been paid to the M. Infirmary, merely required the judgments of 1810 and 1812, which they supposed to be the judgment referred to by the deed of 1823 to be satisfied. Judgment was entered on the bond of 1819 in 1838, and assigned to A. in trust for the M. Infirmary. A., in a foreclosure suit filed by the ptf., proved the judgment, and was by the final decree decreed to be paid. The executor of X., after the decree, was allowed to prove his claim under the deed of 1823, on the usual terms of making up a report at his own expense.

Held, on objections to the report under that order—That the order was irregular; and that the report could not be confirmed on motion, as the effect would be to vary the final decree by reporting to the executor of X., as trustee of the M. Infirmary, in the priority of 1823, the same demand which had been decreed to A., as trustee of the M. Infirmary, in the priority of 1838.—[Reversed: 5 I. C. R. 436; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 442. (C.)]

That a trust was created by the deed of 1823 in favour of X., on which the £3200 was charged on the lands.

That the ptf. had notice that the £3200 was due to the M. Infirmary, under the deed of 1823; and, having neglected to enquire whether it had been paid, could not ward off the claim by reason of the inaccuracy in the description of the security under which it arose.

That X. having executed the deed, though not made a party thereto as trustee for the M. Infirmary, the doctrine of Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale (3 Sim. 1) did not apply; and he might have enforced the trust created for him.—[Last three propositions affirmed; 5 I. C. R. 436; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 442. (C.)]—Gurney v. Lord Oranmore, 4 I. C. R. 470. (R.)

II. 2. By Precatory or Recommendaory Words.

a. When such Words raise a valid Trust: Requisites to raise it.

b. When they do not.

II. 2. a. By Precatory or Recommendaory Words: When they raise a valid Trust: Requisites to raise it.

1. In 1839 T. bequeathed the residue of his property to his brothers, A. and B., to be divided equally; with a request to A. that "should he die without lawful issue the property which I bequeath him shall revert back to my nephews, sons of my brother, B." Held, that A. was entitled to the interest of the fund during his life only, and that the sons of B. were entitled to the principal.—In re O'Leirne, 7 I. E. R. 171; 1 Jon. & L. 352. (C.)

2. V., having bequeathed a farm to P., with a direction in the will that his widow should have her diet and lodging in the house—Held, that on refusal by P., the widow could enforce the direction by bill in equity against P.

A bequest to a widow of diet and lodging provided she wished to remain in a certain house—Held, not forfeited by her leaving the house. She was entitled subsequently only from the time of demand made.—Ryan v. R., 12 I. E. R. 226. (C.)

3. V. having, under his marriage settlement, a power of appointing £1500 amongst his children (which sum was, in default of appointment, to be divided amongst them equally), and having only two sons, H. and W., appointed to H. £1, and to W. £1, and appointed the residue to W., adding, "I request him to have the same invested on mortgage, or in the purchase of lands, and settled on himself for life, with remainder to his child or children as he may appoint; with remainder to such child or children of my son H. as he may appoint; with remainder to my own right heirs." V., out of his own property, conferred by will other benefits upon W. Held, that W. was bound to elect between his rights under the settlement and his rights under the will.

W. having, during his lifetime, done acts which amounted to an election to take under the will, and having died without children—Held, that the precatory words constituted a valid trust in favour of the children of H., although they were not objects of the power contained in the settlement.—[Blacket v. Lamb, 16 Jur. 142; s. c., 21 L. J. N. S. 46, and 14 Beav. 482, commented on; Carver v. Bowles, 2 Russ. & Myl. 304, considered.]—Moriarty v. Martin, 3 I. C. R. 26; 4 I. Jur. 321. (C.)

4. W. assigned a leasehold house to J., upon trusts, leaving to W. a resulting interest in the residue of the rents. W. afterwards gave R., a creditor, the following letter:—"I have handed you a policy of insurance as a collateral security for my debt; the premiums on said policy to be paid out of the balance of the profit rent arising from the house assigned to J." On this letter J. endorsed:—"I agree to pay the premium of the within-mentioned policy to R., out of the profit rent arising from the said house." Held, that these documents amounted to a complete declaration of trust, and that no consideration was required to give them validity.

Semble—That, if consideration were required, the first letter did not amount to an agreement sufficient to satisfy the provisions of the Statute of Frauds.

Semble—An antecedent debt is not, in the contemplation of a Court of Equity, a consideration for a security upon lands.—Woodroffe v. Johnson, 4 I. C. R. 319. (C.)

1. R., claiming a charge upon the lands of L., took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act. R. afterwards made several applications to the Insolvent Debtors Court to have his petition dismissed. They were founded on affidavits which stated his intention to apply all his property for the benefit of his creditors. Eventually, the petition was dismissed on the consent of R.'s assignee, and not in any way referring to the affidavits. L. was sold in the I. E. Court; but the creditors of R. did not take any steps to realise out of the proceeds the amount of R.'s claims. R. afterwards assigned his claims to H., for money; H. having no notice of the statements in R.'s affidavits, though he had of the pendency of the insolvent proceedings. Held, that he could not be treated as constructively a trustee for R.'s creditors.

The amount paid by H. for R.'s claims was completely inadequate. Some of R.'s creditors obtained charging orders against his claims on the proceeds of L. Held, that the creditors who had obtained charging orders were, under the Statute of Fraudulent Conveyances, entitled to avoid the assignment to H., and that at the utmost it could only stand as a security for so much as had been actually paid by him.—Roche v. Hassard, 5 I. C. R. 14; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 246. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed to his two sons all his property, real and personal, to have and to hold, in the most absolute manner; and declared his will to be, that they should, at their discretion, and according to their own judgment, allocate to the other members of his family, being his lawfully begotten children, such portions of the property and goods, be the same more or less, as to them should seem fit and suitable, and appointed his sons his executors. Held, that, coupling the will with an admission in the petition by the sons of A.'s intention, a trust had been created; and that they were trustees for the other children, as to A.'s entire property, both real and personal.—Gray v. G., 11 I. C. R. 218. (R.)

3. V. bequeathed to his daughters A. and C. £1000 each, to be left at interest by his executors and trustees, and the interest regularly paid to them, and should they marry, it must be with the consent of their brother. Even in that case, their husbands were to have no control over principal or interest. The receipt of his daughters was to be a sufficient discharge of the interest. Should either or both of his daughters die without issue, they might by will dispose of £500 each of the £2000 to any of their brothers or sisters, or nephews or nieces, but to no other person; the remaining £1000 to be divided amongst his surviving children, share and share alike; and should his daughters, or either of them, wish to purchase an annuity with their share of the £2000, for their life or lives, with the consent, or under the direction and advice of their guardians, they were allowed to do so. C. died intestate, and without issue. Held, that the daughters took life interests only in the £1000. That, as to £500 of C.'s share, a trust was created for the brothers and sisters, and nephews and nieces living at her death, and that they were entitled equally to the £500, in default of appointment. That the brothers of C. who survived her were entitled to the remaining £500; her sisters having pre-deceased her.—O'Neill v. Montgomery, 12 I. C. R. 163; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 351. (R.)

4. A testator, being possessed of a chattel reversion and profit rent in a house which he had leased to a tenant, with an option to redeem the rent by payment of £400, bequeathed all his real and personal property to his son and mother, whom he appointed executors, upon trust, to pay £25 a-year to his wife for life out of the profit rent of the house; and directed that if the tenant paid the £400, his executors should place it, together with whatever sum or sums of money might be in the Bank of Ireland to his credit, and whatever sum or sums might appear entered in his name, or in his grandchildren's names, in the Savings Bank, together with whatever cash might be had after paying his just debts, funeral expenses, and legacies, at interest, and pay it to his wife for life, and at her decease divide the principal sum between two of his grand-daughters. The tenant did not pay the £400. Held, that the profit-rent of the house, after the wife's death, was cash applicable to the trusts of the will.

Semble—The testator's interest in the house was devised to the executors upon the trusts of the will.—Taylor v. Bunne, 13 I. C. R. 383; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 26. (R.)

5. When a discretionary trust is vested in trustees, the Court will not interfere with the exercise of the discretion, if it be not capricious or improper, though a suit be instituted to administer the trust funds.

If the trustees do not concur, the Court will distribute the trust funds among the parties equally.

When one of two trustees, in whom a discretionary trust is vested, was resident in Australia, the Court would not act on a scheme for the distribution of the fund approved of by his solicitor in the suit, and the other trustee.—Gray v. G. 13 I. C. R. 404. (R.)

II. 2. b. When they do not.

6. V., seized in fee, devised the lands to W., for life; remainders over, and expressed his particular desire that his executors, while managing his affairs, and W., when he entered into receipt and management of the rents, should continue B. in the receipt and management thereof, and should likewise retain and employ him in the receipt, agency, and management of the rents of such other lands as should be purchased in pursuance of the directions in his will, at the fees usually allowed to agents. Held, not a trust for B.; and that the devisees were not bound to retain him as agent at the usual fees.—Shaw v. Lawless, 1 Dr. & Wal. 512; 5 Cl. & F. 129; Ld. & G. temp. Plunket, 538.—[Rev. on this point, Ld. & G. temp. Sug. 154. (C.)]

1. F. was seized of real estate, subject to a mortgage of £4000, over which J., F.'s daughter, had a power of appointment amongst her children. F. was also possessed of large personal estate; and, by will, desired that all his debts, which he stated to be very trifling, should be paid out of his assets by his executrix. He then bequeathed all his property, real and personal, to J.; and earnestly recommended that if S., the son of J., should, during his life, adopt and follow such line of conduct as should merit her full approbation, she should appoint the £4000 to him, and should add £16,000 from F.'s personal property, also all his landed property; all of which he wished her to grant to S., by deed, or by will, conditionally, and if he conducted himself, so as to merit and possess her full approbation, and pursued her advice, but not otherwise. If he should misconduct himself, and not merit her entire approbation, and not obey her as his mother and guardian, she might dispose of all the properties in such manner, and to whom she thought fit. Held, that upon the true construction of the whole will, which was very lengthy and informal, the words of recommendation did not create an absolute trust in favour of S.

The rule with respect to precatory words in a will is, that there must be a complete withdrawal of discretionary power from the legatees, or there is no trust created. Held, that F. intended the £4000 to be continued on the security of his estate, and not to be paid off out of the personalty.—Lefroy v. Flood, 4 I. C. R. 1; 6 I. Jur. 273. (C.)

2. V. devised to his wife his house at G., and declared it to be "his earnest wish that his sister should reside at G., with his wife, during her life." Held, that there was not any trust created in favour of V.'s sister.—Graves v. G., 13 I. C. R. 182. (C.)

II. 3. By Parol.

3. Circumstances under which a parol trust of real estate will be enforced. A., B., and C. were tenants of lands. A. took a lease of the entire in the common form, describing them as in possession of A., B., and C. It was alleged that he took the lease upon trust for the benefit of B. and C. as to the portions in their possession. He sub-leased to B. his portion, subject to special covenants; and allowed C. and his representatives to continue in possession, paying him the same acreable rent which he was himself subject to. They paid the tithe rentcharge. Parol acknowledgments were proved by A., that he would execute a lease to C. when called on; and that the original lease was as good for the occupiers as for himself. He devised the profit rents of the other parts, but did not notice the part in possession of C.'s representatives. They were evicted by his heir. Held, that there was no trust or contract to give C. an estate in the lands, which could be enforced in equity.—Donohoe v. Conraby, 8 I. E. R. 679; 2 Jon. & L. 688. (C.)

4. A. being about to leave this country, endorsed a promissory note not yet due to B., and directed B. to recover the sum thereby secured, and to hold it until A. should write for it; but if A. should die before the amount was recovered, then to hold the amount in trust for M. It was subsequently arranged between A. and B., that B. should retain out of the sum secured by the note the amount of a debt due from A. to B. A. died before the amount was paid to B. Held, that an irrevocable trust was not created in favour of M.

That A.'s personal representative was entitled to recover at Law, but not in Equity, from B., the amount recovered by B. on foot of the note, subject to a deduction for the debt due by A. to B.

Principles relating to the creation by parol of trusts of personalty.—Maguire v. Dodd, 9 I. C. R. 452; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 604. (C.)

5. A testator having declared, by parol, to his residuary legatee, trusts, to which he wished £2000 to be applied, afterwards by codicil, stated that he had instructed the residuary legatee as to the disposition of his property. Held, that the parol trusts could be enforced against the personal representative of the residuary legatee.—Attorney-General v. Dillon, 13 I. C. R. 127; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 251. (C.A.)

III. EXECUTORY TRUSTS.

6. On petition, the Court will not remove a trustee who, having accepted the trust, refuses to act. A bill must be filed, of which the costs will be cast on the trustee, if it appears that his refusal was improper.—Anon., 4 I. E. R. 700. (E.E.)

7. Executory trusts defined, and the principles laid down on which Courts of Equity act in cases of executory trusts.—Boswell v. Dillon, 6 I. E. R. 389; Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 291. (C.)

IV. IMPLIED TRUSTS.

8. Real estate having been applied, for a century and a half, upon trusts specified by will, the Court assumed that the will created a trust, and that the heir of the testator became a trustee; and, the present heir not being known, the case was held to be within the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 23.—In re Gore's Charities, 2 Con. & L. 411. (C.)

1. H., being entitled to a lease for years determinable on three lives, of the lands of K., devised it to his wife for life, and, after her death, to his son, W., and his grandson, G., and the longest liver of them. Shortly afterwards he surrendered the lease and took a new lease of K. By a codicil made after the surrender and acceptance of the new lease, he directed his executors to pay out of a fund the head rent of P., and fulfil any payment he might thereafter appoint; and "relinquished the settlement made on G. on that occasion." By a second codicil of the same date he vested £4500, in trust to pay the head rent of K., during his wife's life, and after her death to extend the interest in K., if that could be accomplished. The trustees took no steps to extend the interest, although it could have been accomplished, until after the expiration of the lease, when it could not be done. Held, that the first codicil did not revoke the devise of K.; that W. and G. were entitled to the £4500; and that it did not go to the next-of-kin of H.—O'Shea v. Howley, 7 I. E. R. 56; 1 Job. & L. 391. (C.)

2. S. was entitled, with her brother and four sisters, to a lease for 31 years, as one of the next-of-kin to her mother, one of whose personal representatives she was. The landlord made a lease for 51 years, expressed to be made in consideration of the surrender of the former lease. It described the lands as late in the possession of the mother, and then in the possession of S. and one of her sisters, her co-administratrix. An endorsement on the lease stated that it was made in trust for herself and her brother and sisters. S. married, and the landlord leased to her husband the same lands for 40 years, to commence after the expiration of the 51 years. Held, that the new lease was a graft.

Although a ptf. is bound to prove his whole case at the hearing, yet, if there be no failure of title, but an omission in the proof of it, the Court may, in its discretion, direct a reference to the Master to enquire into it.—M'Alister v. Walsh, 8 I. E. R. 250. (C.)

3. A father, by lease and release, conveyed lands to his son in consideration of natural love, and, "to entitle him to a wife and fortune now in contemplation," to hold "to the separate use" of the son, "his heirs and assigns for ever." It was not proved that any particular marriage was then contemplated. The son survived the father, but died unmarried. Held, that the deed vested the fee-simple absolutely in the son.

The deed was executed by both father and son, but was kept by the father alone, and found among his papers when he died. It was registered by him nine months after its date, he being an attorney. The son and he lived on good terms. The father received the profits of the estate, and alone made new leases, of which the son was cognizant, and to which he assented. The son occasionally received money from tenants, which the father allowed credit for. The father made a power of attorney to third persons to collect the rents.

Held, that the deed being originally an advancement, none of these circumstances affected the son's title, and that it was not inoperative either as a secret conveyance, or as creating a trust by implication for the father.—Alleyne v. A., 8 I. E. R. 493; 2 Jon. & L. 544. (C.)

4. Ptf.'s bill stated that A., by deed, conveyed lands to trustees to the use of B., for life; remainder to his issue male: that those lands were held "under leases or agreements for leases, for lives renewable for ever, or on terminable leases, or agreements for terminable leases," the dates and particulars of which ptf. could not set forth, because they and the other muniments of title were lost, or were in possession of deft., to whom B. delivered them on selling his interest therein to him. Ptf., as first tenant in tail, sought a discovery of the deeds; that renewals, obtained by B. in his own name, might be decreed a graft on the original leases; and for an injunction to stay waste. On demurrer: Held, that the reasonable construction of the statement was, that the lands were held by A., when the deed was executed; and that the statement of A.'s title was not open to demurrer, because the principle, which excuses a ptf. from setting out a deft.'s title, ought to excuse him from setting out the title of the party under whom ptf. derives, so long as deft. wrongfully withholds from him possession of the title deeds.

Semle—Such an objection cannot be made on a general demurrer for want of equity.

Held, that the surviving trustee was not a necessary party.—Hill v. Mill, 9 I. E. R. 164. (C.)

5. V. devised lands of Q., in trust, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, to sell and dispose of them, and that the money arising from the sale, together with the rents and profits of the lands, until sold, should be considered as part of his personal estate, and should be applied and disposed of in the same manner as his personal estate. He gave his personal estate upon trust, to pay his funeral expenses, debts, and legacies, and, in the next place, that the yearly amount of his personal estate thereby directed to be laid out in the purchase of lands, and the yearly rents and profits of the lands which should be purchased with such personal estate, or any part thereof, should be applied for the payment of his debts and legacies, until paid off and satisfied. As to the residue of his personal estate, upon trust, to lay out in purchasing lands of inheritance in fee-simple, to be conveyed and assured to his grandson T. and his heirs, subject to a charge for renewing chattel leases; and directed a term for years to be created of such purchased lands for that purpose: and upon trust, that until a proper purchase could be had, the trust-money should be laid out at interest, and be applied towards discharging the purchase: and directed his trustees to renew his chattel leases, which he bequeathed to T. for life. V. died in 1771, and from that to 1837 T. continued in possession of Q. and V. of the chattel leases. From 1820 to 1837 he paid large sums for renewal fines. Held, that the accumulation of the rents of Q. was to cease at the end of a year from V.'s death, and that the rents from that period to 1820, when the trust to raise the renewal fines arose, belonged to T.; but that, subsequently to 1820, the rents were to be set off against the renewal fines.—Smith v. Dugannon, 3 I. C. R. 316; 5 I. Jur. 137. (C.)

1. In 1840, C., having a charge by judgment for £1500 upon the lands of X., applied to B. for £1500, to enable him to purchase said lands in Chancery. B. consented, on the terms of a conveyance being made to R. as a trustee for B. as well as for C. R. became the purchaser for £3000, of which £1500 were paid by B. in cash; R.'s promissory note was given for the remainder. By deed of the 2nd June 1840, X. was conveyed to R., without any declaration of trust on the face of the deed.

C., having got R.'s promissory note accepted as cash, subsequently, by sundry payments, reduced his debt of £1500 to B. to £900.

By deed of the 9th July 1844, reciting the deed of the 2nd June 1840, and that C. purchased X. from B., save so far as it should stand as a security to B. for £900, it was declared that X. was vested in R., in trust, in the first instance, by sale or mortgage, to pay B. £900, with interest and costs; then in trust for C., his heirs and assigns, for ever. This deed was not registered until the 2nd Dec. 1852.

In 1852, L. obtained a judgment against C., for £60, and registered it as a mortgage against X. on the 13th Nov. 1852.

In 1843, a judgment obtained against C., in 1836, was assigned to W., and by him duly re-docketed in 1844, and afterwards registered in 1850.

In 1854, the lands were sold in the I. E. Court, on the petition of L.; and on the settlement of the final schedule of incumbrances the Commissioners placed B.'s claim of £900 after the claims of L. and W., on foot of their respective judgments. Held, on appeal, that the original transaction should be regarded as C.'s own purchase, B. lending him £1500; that R. was trustee for C., and for no other person; and that the judgments obtained against C. became, in the order of their priority, available against the trust estate; that B.'s claim to priority, founded on the recitals in the deed of 1844, could not be sustained; that B. was entitled to such priority only as was given him by the deed of 1844, and its subsequent registration in Dec. 1852; and that his claims should be postponed to the claims of L. and W.—In re Cooke, 6 I. C. R. 430. (C.A.)

2. A Purchase by a receiver, of a jointure charged upon the lands over which he was receiver, declared a trust for the benefit of those entitled to the estate.

The receiver over the estates of L. purchased from L.'s widow a jointure charged on the estate. In a suit instituted by an incumbrancer on the estate to set aside this purchase, the widow declaring herself satisfied with the terms of the arrangement, the purchase was upheld as regarded her; but was declared a trust for those beneficially entitled to the estate. Form of decree.—Boddington v. Langford, 15 I. C. R. 558, note. (C.)

3. For the Next-of-kin, &c.

VI. 1. In general: what amounts to.

3. Lands held for lives renewable for ever were conveyed, for all the estate of the tenant, to trustees, their heirs and assigns, for the lives in the lease. The deed contained a declaration that the names of the trustees were made use of as trustees for B., and that the grants therein contained were for his sole use and benefit, and for no other use, intent, or purpose.—Held, that B. took the entire equitable interest in quasi fee.—M'Clintock v. Irvine, 10 I. C. R. 480; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 317. (C.)

4. By marriage settlement, two sums of £1000; one the property of the husband, the other that of the wife, were vested, in trust to pay the interest from time to time, as received, or to permit the wife to receive and take "the said two several sums of £1000 respectively, and all interest, benefit, and advantage arising, or to arise therefrom," to her separate use; the two several sums to be so received and taken in full for her jointure, and in bar of dower; and if the husband survived her, to permit him, during life, to receive the two several sums, and all interest, &c., derivable therefrom, with power of appointing them among the issue of the marriage, to the husband; in default of appointment, to such issue, in equal shares; in default of issue surviving at the husband's death, those sums were to be disposed of as he should appoint, provided that when the husband acquired property in lands producing £200 a-year, and settled a jointure of £200 a-year on the wife, subject to the same limitations as those sums were declared subject to, it should be lawful for him to receive those sums for his own use. No issue of the marriage survived the husband. He predeceased the wife, without having settled any jointure, or made any appointment of the fund. Held, that the wife took only the interest of the fund for her life.

That the husband was entitled to the interest of the fund for his life, with a general power of appointment over the principal.

That no appointment having been made by him, there was a resulting trust in favour of the administrator of the husband as to £1000, and a similar trust to the wife's executor as to the other £1000.—In re Lane's Trusts, 14 I. C. R. 523. (R.)

5. By a marriage settlement, reciting that the intended wife was entitled to the lands of X., and to part of the lands of Y., and of the lands of Z. in remainder, and was also entitled to £600; and that it had been agreed that these properties should be vested in a trustee upon trusts, first, to secure a jointure for her; the intended wife conveyed the lands of X. and Y. to the use, as to X., of the husband for life; remainder to her own use for life; remainder in trust for the issue of the marriage; and it was agreed that she was to have, during her natural life, all the property that the husband might have or be entitled to, and that he would not sell or mortgage any of the properties during her life without her consent first had and obtained under her signature. Held, that there was a resulting trust, as to the lands of Y., for both husband and wife, in her right.

That the husband was entitled to the lands of Z. for life, with remainder to the wife for life.—Elliott v. Kempston, 15 I. C. R. 120. (R.)

VI. 2. For the Heir-at-law.

VI. 3. For the Next-of-kin, &c.

1. C., a Roman Catholic lady, residing in Dublin, transferred a sum of stock, equivalent to about half of her property, to the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, and the superior of the Order of Jesuits in Ireland, upon trust, for the ladies of the convent of N. One of these trustees had been C.'s confessor until within two years before the transfer. Her confessor at that period was under the religious control of that trustee. The trustees took no personal benefit from the transaction. The affidavits in answer denied all exercise of spiritual influence over C. Held, that the Court would not, in favour of the administrator of C., declare such transfer affected with a resulting trust.

That the trust was declared with sufficient precision.—Kirwan v. Cullen, 4 I. C. R. 322. (C.)

VII. VOID OR FRAUDULENT: LAPSED OR SUBSISTING.

2. In all cases of direct trust, the rule is settled, that length of time does not bar.

Nor is this case within the exception stated by counsel for the ptf. to the rule, that time does not bar as between trustee and c. q. t.—viz., that it does not apply to cases of constructive trusts. The true meaning of that exception is, that where, as in cases of fraud, the interposition and decree of a Court of Equity are necessary to declare the trust; there, lapse of time, without preferring a suit for the purpose, will bar the claim. It is so stated, and the true ground of the exception put by Lord Redesdale, in the case of Hovenden v. Lord Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 633.—Scott v. Knox, 4 I. E. R. 410, 411. (C.)

3. V., by will, bearing date the 12th Feb. 1862, bequeathed to F., and E. his wife, all her property, "trusting to their charitable and pious recollection of the spiritual wants of me and mine." On behalf of the Crown, it was contended that this was a valid disposition of the property for charitable purposes, and that a scheme should be settled by the Court for that purpose. By the next-of-kin it was insisted that the trust was uncertain and void. Held, that the trust was void for uncertainty, and that the next-of-kin was entitled to the property.—McCarthy v. The Att.-Gen., 9 I. Jur. N. S. 4. (M.O.)

4. V. bequeathed £500 to two R. C. priests, or their survivor, to be applied as they should deem best for the maintenance and education of two priests of the order of St. D. in Ireland. Held, that the bequest was null and void, as being opposed to the 10 G. 4, c. 74; and should accrue to the residue of V.'s personal estate.

V. bequeathed £500 to another R. C. priest, on a secret trust disclosed to him by V. during his life. The trust was—to apply that sum towards redeeming the rent of the church of the D. Friars in Cork. Held, that the bequest, being given on an invalid trust, was void; and could not be carried out cy-pres.—Simms v. Quinlan, 17 I. C. R. 43; 10 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (C.A.)—[Varying the Rolls decision, 16 I. C. R. 191; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 404.]

VIII. DECLARATION OF.

5. A party having been expressly named a trustee in a will under which a question existed whether he was not beneficially interested—Held, that his representatives were trustees within the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 27, s. 25; and that, though a constructive trust would be barred by this statute, and might, before the statute, have been barred by length of time, yet that principle only applied to cases in which the trust did not arise on the face of the instrument, but was to be made out by evidence.—Salter v. Cavanagh, 1 Dr. & Wal. 668. (R.)

IX. CONSTRUCTION OF.

7. Testator bequeathed a leasehold for years, upon trusts, and gave money to his executor to extend the interest in the lands, if it could be accomplished. The executor did not make any attempt, during the continuance of the term, to obtain an extension of the lease. After it had expired, the Master reported that an extension of the interest could have been obtained. Held, that the money should go according to the trusts of the land.—O'Shea v. Howley, 1 Jon. & L. 391; 7 I. E. R. 56. (C.)

1. A power to trustees to lay out money "in the public stocks or funds in Great Britain, or on any mortgage of freehold or leasehold estates, or any other real securities in England, Wales, or Ireland," does not authorise them to lend it on the security of a judgment, since the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22.—Johnston v. Lloyd, 7 I. E. R. 252. (C.)

2. V. devised the lands of A., of which he was seized in fee, to his nephew, R., for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; remainder to his daughters in tail; and left the fee undisposed of. He gave the residue of his properties, freehold and personal, of whatever nature and kind he might die possessed of, to his brother T.; and if his brother T. should survive him, requested and desired that he should convert all the personal property into fee-simple property, and at his decease leave the same entailed on his son R., in the same manner as he had himself entailed A. Held, that the freehold, as well as the personal property undisposed of, was bound by the direction in the residuary clause.

Rules as to construing wills from presumed intention.—[On re-hearing, Tennent v. T., 7 I. E. R. 361; 1 Jon. & L. 379. (C.)]—[On hearing, Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 161. (C.)]

3. £800 due to C. were in 1814 secured by an annuity of £100, issuable out of the lands of D., habendum, till the debt and interest should have been paid. In 1815, C. assigned the annuity, together with the balance then due of the annuity; and, being entitled to £2000, charged upon lands of which he was tenant for life, as a further security, assigned £800, part of the £2000, upon trust, if the annuity should be unpaid for 41 days, to call in from time to time, and receive such parts of the £2000 as should suffice to satisfy the arrears, and apply the same in payment thereof; after payment, in trust for C. Held, a continuing trust—not one to be executed once for all; and that, upon non-payment of the annuity for 41 days, a present right to receive the £800 did not accrue within the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 40.—Heenan v. Berry, 2 Jon. & L. 303. (C.)

4. A. being indebted, by debts which did not affect his real estates, conveyed by deed poll real estates, upon trust, to raise money "for the purpose of paying all debts due by him to any person whatsoever, and which then affected his said estates thereby conveyed." A. was then indebted upon bonds, with warrants, &c.; but no judgments had been entered. Held, that the trust included his bond debts, but not those of simple contract.

Parties' acts cannot be allowed to affect the construction of deeds.—Douglas v. Allen, 2 Dr. & War. 213; 1 Con. & L. 367. (C.)

5. The ptf. was attorney for T. and H. in two actions, brought by them against G. and his son. P. owed £3000 to another son of G. The actions were compromised on the terms mentioned in the following deed. The deed recited that, for P.'s accommodation, it was agreed that T. and H. should accept £1000 in full for their demand, with the costs of the actions, and that P. should set off the £1000 against so much of the £3000 debt; that T. and H. should accept a security for the £1000 on estates in W. of another member of the G. family, who was indebted to P., and a collateral security by mortgage of P.'s own property; and that P. should pay T.'s and H.'s costs of the actions, amounting to about £400, which should be secured by his bills, and collaterally by the last-mentioned mortgage; and recited mortgages of the W. property for £1000 to X. in trust for T. and H., and of P.'s property for £1400 to H., and that the £1400 secured by the latter was intended as a further security for the sum secured by the mortgage to X., and for the costs of T. and H., and of getting X.'s mortgage executed. It was declared that H. should be possessed of the £1400 on trust, first, to better secure the £1000 to X.; secondly, to secure to the ptf., described as "E. S., gentleman, attorney for the ptf.s. in said actions," the costs of them, £100 to be paid in three months, and the rest after taxation; thirdly, the expense of executing X.'s mortgage. The ptf. was not a party to, and did not execute the deed. P. gave a promissory note to T. and H. for £100, which they endorsed to the ptf., and P. paid. The rest of the costs not being paid, the ptf. filed the bill to recover them, by enforcing the trusts of the deed. Held, that he was not a c. q. t., and could not sustain such a bill.

The cases to which the doctrines of Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale, 2 R. & M. 451, and Ellison v. E., 6 Ves., 656, are respectively applicable, defined, and distinguished.—Simmonds v. Palles, 8 I. E. R. 335; 2 Jon. & L. 489. (C.)

6. Damages for breach of a lessor's covenant for quiet enjoyment broken after the lessor's death. Held, a debt within a trust in his will to pay "all such just debts of every kind as he should happen to owe at his decease;" the context showing an intent to include any debt payable out of his personality. Seamble—Even without the latter circumstance.—Bermingham v. Burke, 9 I. E. R. 86; 2 Jon. & L. 699. (C.)

7. When a testator, in the introductory part of his will, directs that all his just debts shall be paid, and then devises his lands, subject to that payment, to trustees, to convey, &c., a trust is created by the will, for payment of debts; the lands being vested in the trustees to raise their amount, by the execution of a trust. The right of a judgment creditor is not affected by the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 40; or, if it be, is taken out of that sec. by the saving of the 25th sec.

Aliter—If a mere charge upon lands, in the hands of the owner beneficially entitled, creating a liability, but not a trust.—Hunt v. Bateman, 10 I. E. R. 360. (E.E.)

8. By deed of family settlement, in 1794, lands in D. were settled upon A. for life; remainder to B. for life; remainder to C. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail. E. was the eldest son of C.

By deed of family settlement, in 1818, lands in L., including a terminable lease of S., were conveyed to trustees for 1000 years, subject thereto, as to the freeholds, to A. for life; remainder to C. for life; remainder to E. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail. The chattels were to be held on analogous trusts. The trusts of the term were declared to be, first, to pay scheduled debts, and subject thereto until the expiration of the lease of S., or the end of 99 years from the date of the deed, if seven persons therein named should so long live, whichever should first happen, to raise £3500 per annum, and accumulate it by compound interest; and, at the end of the trust for accumulation, to invest the proceeds in lands, to be settled to the like uses as the freeholds. The deed provided that if the lease of S. should expire before the end of the 99 years, one moiety of the produce of the accumulations should be accumulated till the end of the 99 years; and provided that if, at the expiration of the lease of S., or at any time thereafter, and before the end of the 99 years, the person who, for the time being, should be entitled to L., should be also, under the limitations of the deed of 1794, entitled to D., the trustees immediately thereupon should raise £2000 per annum, and accumulate that, and the whole produce of the accumulations, till the end of the 99 years. The deed further contained a power for A., B., and C., to revoke all the uses and trusts therein, except the 1000 years' term, and the trusts for paying debts; and to limit new uses and trusts. By deed of 1819, executed on the marriage of C. with V., the uses of the deed of 1818 were varied, by introducing, before all the limitations of the deed of 1818, except the 1000 years' term, and the trust for paying debts, a term of 1200 years, to raise £20,000, for a specified purpose; a trust to raise a jointure of £1000 per annum for V., and a term to raise portions for younger children. A. died; B. died without issue; C. and E. joined in suffering a recovery of D.; and eventually this property was, by a deed of 1846, to which C. and E. were parties, limited to raise debts incurred by them, subject thereto to provide an annuity of £3000 per annum for E., subject thereto to C. for life; remainder to E. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; remainders over. The S. lease expired in 1853, in the life of C. and E. Held, that the jointure and portions provided by the deed of 1819 were charges upon the accumulations provided by the deed of 1818.

That, notwithstanding the re-settlement of D. by the deed of 1846, C. was, at the time of the expiry of the S. lease, seized of D. under the deed of 1794; and that the trust for raising £2000, and for accumulating the produce of the accumulations, took effect.—Londonderry v. L., 4 I. C. R. 361. (C.)

1. V., seized in fee of three estates, devised one of them, called the Tempo estate, to his daughter L. for life; remainder to her issue in tail; in default of such issue, to his nephew Robert James; remainder to Robert James's issue in tail; with several remainders over. The ultimate reversion in fee remained undisposed of. V. then devised his other two estates to his other daughters in strict settlement, but made no disposition of the ultimate reversion in fee. V., being seized of divers freehold lands, and possessed of considerable personal property, devised various parts of the former to different persons; and, bequeathing some pecuniary legacies, concluded his will thus:—"I leave and bequeath the rest, residue and remainder of my properties, both freehold and personal, of whatsoever nature and kind, I may die possessed of, to my brother Robert; and, if my said brother Robert shall survive, I request and desire that he shall convert all the personal property into fee-simple property, and at his decease leave the same entailed on his son Robert James, in the same manner as I have myself entailed the Tempo estate." Held, that the freehold estates which passed under the residuary devise, as well as the residuary personal property, were within the trust to entail. That this trust should be executed, by giving a life estate to Robert James; with remainder to his sons and daughters in tail, according to the limitations of the Tempo estate.—Tennent v. T., Dr. Rep., temp Sugden, 161. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed his real and personal property in trust to sell, and, after payment of his debts, &c., to invest the produce in bank shares, and pay annuities; and bequeathed the residue of his property upon trust to pay the interest to A. for life. The decree in a suit to administer the assets directed that the trustee should hold the bank shares (subject to payment of the annuities), upon trust, from time to time, to invest the dividends in the purchase of other bank shares or of government stock, &c., and accumulate them, from time to time, in the nature of compound interest, until a fund was created which (with other property specified) would be sufficient to pay V.'s outstanding liabilities and debts, and should yield an annual sum sufficient to pay a contingent liability which the assets might be subject to, by reason of a breach of trust committed by V.; and that the trustee should be possessed of the residue, and such accumulation, upon trust, to pay the annuities, &c., and subject thereto to pay the dividends to A. Held, that the decree was erroneous in directing the accumulation of the dividends of the residue.

Semble—The proper decree would have been to have directed the sale of so much of the bank shares as would have been sufficient to answer the breach of trust, and to have invested the produce in £3 per cent. stock, and transferred it to a separate credit, and that the dividends should be paid to A. for life; and that so much of the dividends of the unsold bank shares as would be equivalent to the amount of the annuities should be paid to the respective annuitants, and the surplus dividends to A.; and if the dividends of the bank shares should be insufficient to pay the annuities, that the dividends of the stock should be applied for that purpose during A.'s life, and the surplus dividends, if any, should be paid to him.—Abrahall v. Hamilton, 10 I. C. R. 51. (R.)

1. L., on his marriage, gave a bond and warrant to the trustees of his settlement, upon trust, "when the trustees should think fit and expedient so to do," to levy the amount, and hold it for the uses of his settlement. No judgment on the bond was ever entered, and the amount of the bond was lost. Held, that the discretion conferred upon the trustees was not absolute, but to be controlled by the Court; and that the circumstance, that enforcing the bond might have been injurious to L.'s credit as a trader, and have lost him various situations, did not justify them in omitting to enforce the bond.—Luther v. Bianconi, 10 I. C. R. 194; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 138. (C.)

2. By marriage settlement executed in 1797, reciting that W., the intended husband, was entitled to real estate on the decease of his father, and to sums in the English funds, and sums, &c., as residuary legatee of his grandmother, W. covenanted with the trustees that he would, as soon as he could after the execution of the settlement, transfer to them the sums of money, and invest in such funds as should be thought most advisable, in the names of the trustees, such further sum, the interest of which should amount to £600 a-year, free from all deductions, in trust for W., for life; after his death, upon trust, to pay the interest to A., his intended wife, as a jointure; with power to W. to revoke the trust of the fund so to be invested, on conveying to the trustees real estate of the value of £600 a-year, to be held on the same trusts. W. died in 1798, leaving one son, who died in 1812. In 1799 and 1801 W.'s executors transferred to the trustees of the settlement £4 per cent. stock, then producing £600 a-year, which was, by Acts of Parliament, ultimately reduced to £3 per cent. stock, and became insufficient to pay the £600 a-year. Held, that A. was not entitled to have the deficiency made good out of the assets of W., the covenant having been performed by the transfer of stock, which, in 1801, produced £600 a-year.

W., by will, after directing his debts to be paid and bequeathing legacies, left all the residue of his estate to his executors, in trust, to pay the interest to his wife, A., for life. Held, that the reversionary interest in the stock transferred to the trustees to answer the jointure passed by the residuary bequest, no intention to exclude it appearing by the will.

Held also, that A. was entitled to have the reversionary interest sold at the end of one year from W.'s death, and the proceeds invested, and the dividends paid to her for life.

That not having been done, the Court directed an enquiry to ascertain what sum in stock could have been purchased with the value of the reversionary interest of that period; and that so much of the assets should be set apart, and the dividends which would have been payable to A., if the investment had been made, should be paid to her. Held, that A. was not barred in 1859 by the Statute of Limitations, or by laches, there being a subsisting fund liable to her demand.

A portion of the residuary property consisted of stock which was set apart to meet a life annuity, which determined in 1829. In a suit to administer the assets of W., the dividends of the stock which accrued after the death of the annuitant were decreed to be paid to A. and her second husband. Held, that A. was not entitled to any relief against the assets by reason of the stock not having been sold a year after the death of W.—Napier v. Staples, 10 I. C. R. 344. (R.)

3. Lands, held for lives renewable for ever, were conveyed for all the estate of the tenant, to trustees, their heirs and assigns, for the lives in the lease. The deed contained a declaration that the names of the trustees were made use of as trustees for B., and that the grants therein contained were for his sole use and benefit, and for no other use, intent, or purpose. Held, that B. took the entire equitable interest in quasi fee.—M'Clintock v. Irvine, 10 I. C. R. 480; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 317. (C.)

4. By marriage settlement of 1794, A. conveyed specified lands of which he was seized in tail in remainder, together with all other lands, &c., which he was then or thereafter might be possessed of or entitled to, in reversion, remainder, or otherwise howsoever, to trustees, to the use of himself for life, remainder as he should appoint among the issue male of the marriage, remainder over; and covenanted to do any act, or execute any conveyance, if required, of and concerning the specified lands, or any other lands or premises of which he should at any time thereafter be possessed or entitled unto, &c., for the further, better, more perfect, and absolute carrying out the settlement, and the true intent and meaning of the parties thereto, into full legal and perfect execution. In 1819 a judgment was recovered against A. In 1839 he became entitled, as heir-at-law of his brother, to other lands not specified in the settlement. In 1859 A. died. Held, that the trusts of the deed of 1794 attached to the latter lands on their acquisition by A., without any further act by him, and that his eldest son, claiming under that deed, was entitled to hold them discharged of the judgment.

The case of Britton v. M'Donald, 5 I. E. R. disapproved of and qualified.—Stack v. Royse, 12 I. C. R. 246; 7 I. Jur. 114. (R.)—[Affirmed: 13 I. C. R. 212; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 249. (C.A.)]

5. Marriage articles recited that the intended wife was entitled to legacies, which though not reduced into possession, were computed to amount to £2000. It was agreed that, in consideration of the wife's fortune, the husband should execute a bond, conditioned for the payment of £2000, with warrant of attorney to confess judgment, which should be vested in trustees, in trust that they should, when they thought fit, call in the amount, and invest the sum so realised in the funds or on mortgage, and permit the husband to receive the interest for life, or until he should become bankrupt or insolvent, or enter into a composition with his creditors; and after his decease, or on his becoming bankrupt, &c., permit the wife to receive the interest for her separate use for life; after her decease, in trust for the issue of the marriage. The articles contained a covenant with the trustees, that if, at any time during the coverture, any real or personal estate or property should descend to, or devolve on, or become vested beneficially in the wife, or any person in trust for her, the husband would do all necessary acts to vest same in the trustees, upon the aforesaid trusts. The trustees paid two of the legacies recited in the articles, which came to their hands, to the husband, who was a trader, while he was solvent; but did not enter judgment on the bond until three years after the marriage, when he was insolvent, though they registered the warrant of attorney. Held, that the covenant did not apply to the legacies recited in the articles; and therefore the trustees were not guilty of a breach of trust in paying them to the husband.

That as the husband had no land on which the judgment could be attached, the trustees were not guilty of a breach of trust by not entering the judgment forthwith.—Macken v. Hogan, 14 I. C. R. 285. (R.)

X. THEIR INCIDENTS.

1. In a vast variety of cases, Courts of Equity, in dealing with titles, and in the rules regulating their proceedings in suits respecting real estates, decline to recognise the legal rights of judgment creditors as a fixed criterion of title; and regard the trusts of the legal estate as affording a protection against that legal power, and an answer to any objection resting on the possible exercise of it. All trust estates are exempt, in the view and according to the rules of a Court of Equity, from the judgments of the trustee. His charges and incumbrances, however they may affect the legal estate, are in this Court of no value, and there is but one class of persons who, by dealing with a trustee, can retain what they acquire, that is, purchasers for valuable consideration without notice.—Leake v. L., 5 I. E. R. 366. (R.)

2. C. q. trusts under an invalid devise, who remain in possession without acknowledgment of title for more than twenty years, and thus bar the right of the heir-at-law, do not thereby acquire the legal estate in the devised lands, which vests in the trustees, subject to the trusts of the devise.—Kernaghan v. M'Nally, 12 I. C. R. 89. (C.A.)

3. In a marriage settlement of 1812, the husband covenanted with the trustees that his heirs, executors, &c., would, from and after his death, pay to his widow, if she survived him, an annuity of £40, and pay the trustees a sum of £400 for the children of the marriage. The husband became indebted to one of the trustees, who, in 1828, entered up judgment against him for £600, and effected a policy of insurance upon the husband's life, for a similar amount. The judgment was subsequently assigned to B., who also became the purchaser of a judgment, obtained against the husband in 1834 for £200; on which occasion a policy of insurance had been effected on the life of the husband.

In 1860 the property comprised in the settlement was sold in the L. E. Court. Upon settling the final schedule of incumbrances, a Judge of that Court declared that the jointure of £40 per annum, and the sum of £400 for the children, were entitled to priority over the judgment of 1828, and that the judgment of 1834 had been satisfied by the payment of the amount reserved by the second policy above mentioned. Held, upon appeal, that both the judgments should have precedence of the jointure and of the £400.

That the provision made in the settlement for the widow and children was only to affect such property as the settlor should leave after payment of his just debts.

That the trustee was not, as a trustee, disqualified from dealing with the settlor, even though such dealing might have the effect of injuring the provision for the widow and children.

And that, where such transactions have been, with full knowledge of the state of facts, acquiesced in by c. q. trusts, for a long period, it would be dangerous, and against public policy, to allow them to be re-opened.—In re M'Kenna's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 239. (C.A.)

XI. ASSIGNMENT OF.

XII. EXECUTION AND SATISFACTION OF TRUSTS.

4. Testator bequeathed a leasehold for years, upon trusts, and gave a sum to his executor to extend the interest in the lands, if that could be accomplished. The executor did not make any attempt, during the continuance of the term, to obtain an extension of the lease. After it had expired, the Master reported that an extension of the interest could have been obtained. Held, that the money should go according to the trusts of the term.—O'Shea v. Howley, 1 Jon. & L. 391; 7 I. E. R. 56. (C.)

5. When two or more persons are appointed trustees, and one or more renounce and disclaim, the trust may be executed by the others.

Semble—Legatees, whose legacies are charged on real estate, are necessary parties to a bill for a sale of such estate in cases not provided for by the 24th, 25th, and 26th G. O.

Semble—A deft. who has answered the original bill may demur to the whole amended bill, if the objection for the first time appears on the bill as amended.

V. directed three trustees named in his will, out of the residue of his real and freehold estates, in aid of his personal estate, by sale, mortgage, or perception of the rents and profits, to levy legacies for his children, A., B., and C. One trustee renounced. A bill was filed for an administration of the real and personal estates of V., and to make them liable for a breach of trust, to which the two acting trustees were parties, and which charged A., B., and C. to be out of the jurisdiction, but did not pray process against them. On a demurrer for want of parties—Held, that the legal estate being in the two acting trustees, the case was within the 24th G. O., and that A., B., and C. were not necessary parties to the suit.—Bayly v. Cumming, 10 I. E. R. 405. (R.)

1. A., in consideration of £2632 advanced by B., his son, in pursuance of an agreement entered into previously, by deed, dated the 21st Nov. 1844, settled his fee-simple estates in strict settlement, and conveyed the lands of C. and K., which he held under a f.-f. grant, to trustees, to sell, and apply the proceeds to pay debts affecting the fee-simple estates, incurred before T. Term 1842; and to take an assignment of those debts, to secure £6000 for A.'s younger children.

The £2632 were secured by a judgment entered up immediately before the execution of the deed of 1844. A schedule to that deed contained a considerable number of judgment debts, entered up after T. Term 1842, but before the judgment securing B.'s advance. Held, that upon the construction of the deed of 1844, the trusts of the deed were intended to have priority to B.'s judgment. [Hargreave, C., dissenting.]

C. and K. were held under a f.-f. grant, subject, as to K., to a lease for three lives, all of which, at the execution of the deed of 1844, were alleged to be dead. The deed provided that B. should take proceedings to recover actual possession of K. B. took proceedings for that purpose; but on investigation it appeared that one life was still in being. Held (Hargreave, C., dubitante), that the proviso was a condition precedent to the carrying out of the contract intended by the deed of 1844; and that, as it had never been fulfilled, B. was not bound to carry out the trusts of the deed.—In re Blake, 7 I. C. R. 65. (I.E.C.)

2. When a discretionary trust is vested in trustees, the Court will not interfere with the exercise of the discretion, if it be not capricious or improper, though a suit be instituted to administer the trust funds.

If the trustees do not concur, the Court will distribute the trust fund among the parties equally.

When one of two trustees in whom a discretionary trust was vested resided in Australia, the Court would not act on a scheme for distributing the fund, approved of by his solicitor in the suit and by the other trustee.—Gray v. G., 13 I. C. R. 404. (R.)

XIII BREACH OF TRUST.

3. Trustee of married woman's separate property, without power of anticipation, joining in a lease, for which a fine was paid, and received by a third person—Held, a breach of trust, although the femme covert (then a minor) joined in the lease.—Booth v. Parker, 1 I. E. R. 34. (C.)

4. A trustee of a money fund, in violation of his duty, lent the trust-money to F. upon the security of a judgment; F. at the time not being aware that it was trust-money. Subsequently F., at the request of the c. q. t., and by direction of the trustee, paid the interest to the c. q. t., who was entitled to it during her life. The trustee afterwards threatened to issue execution on the judgment. F. stated to the c. q. t. that if she did not interfere to protect him against the demand of the trustee, he would be obliged to pay him; and she not having done so, F., as he alleged, paid the money to the trustee, who thereupon satisfied the judgment on record. Upon a bill against F. and the trustee, filed after the decease of the tenant for life, by the person entitled absolutely to the trust fund, it was decreed that F. should pay the money with interest.

The moment a borrower of money becomes aware that it is trust-money, he becomes a trustee of it.—Sheridan v. Joyce, 7 I. E. R. 115; 1 Jon. & L. 401. (C.)

5. When a renewable lease is vested in trustees, upon trust to pay the rent and renewal fines, they are guilty of a breach of trust if they permit the tenant for life to take and use the rents, and neglect to take out renewals as the lives fall in.

When, under the provisions of a settlement, the trustees are to renew, and pay the renewal fines out of the rents and profits, and they neglect to renew, and the tenant for life takes the rents, he will be liable to the trustees for any damages they sustain in consequence of their breach of trust.—Townley v. Bond, 4 Dr. & War. 240; 2 Con. & L. 393. (C.)

6. A creditor on foot of a paramount charge, went into possession of the debtor's estate under his will, of which she was a trustee, and by which she took some benefit. The will directed the payment of a puisne mortgage out of another fund. She did not pay it, and paid the rents to and for the benefit of the c. q. trusts, without paying it or other puisne incumbrances. In a creditor's suit—Held, that she could not be charged with anything beyond the sums appropriated to her own use, as against the principal or interest of her own demand, for the benefit of a puisne creditor, especially as he had been a solicitor, and had advised her, though as a friend and without payment, in the application of the rents.—Boyd v. Murdock, 7 I. E. R. 607; 2 Jon. & L. 203. (C.)

7. The ptf. was solicitor for D. At the time of his death D. was indebted to him for costs. On D.'s death he became solicitor for his executor, the deft., who being indebted to the ptf. for the costs of D., and further costs as executor, handed over to him the title deeds of leasehold premises of D. which had been left on special trusts, together with a letter making an equitable mortgage. There were applicable to the costs funds, which were misapplied. Held, that the executor having committed a breach of trust in mortgaging, the solicitor dealing with him was affected by it, and could not recover without an enquiry as to the state of the assets.

Semble—He was in no better condition than the executor himself would be.

After a decree to account, a minor deft. attained his age. On a re-hearing, at his application, new enquiries were directed, though there was no new answer filed, and the minor, after coming of age, had contested the case under the former decree.—Purcell v. Ruckley, 12 I. E. R. 55. (C.)

1. By settlement on the marriage of A. a power of appointing a trust fund in favour of children was limited to him. A. having a daughter, B., appointed portion of the fund to her. C., a trustee of the settlement, transferred the money into the name of B., who, in the presence of C., transferred it into the name of A. A bill was filed by another c. q. t. under the settlement, against the personal representative of C., praying that C. might be charged with a breach of trust in having abetted a fraud on the power of appointment. Held, that C. was not responsible.—Balfe v. Colgan, 3 I. Jur. 149. (C.)

2. An executor lent £4100 of his testator's assets, on the security of a property, worth then between £60,000 and £70,000, and incumbered to the amount of £27,000. The solicitor for the borrower was employed for the executor. No opinion of counsel was taken on the title, and no searches were made, as these measures had been taken on two occasions within seven years, on other loans. The security having turned out defective in value, the executor was decreed to bring in the money.

Observations on the impropriety of the same solicitor being employed for lender and borrower, in loan transactions.—Waring v. W., 3 I. C. R. 331; 5 I. Jur. 85. (C.)

3. In 1811, H. executed a bond, in which his heirs were not bound, and on which he paid interest until his death in 1820. H., by will, left all his property to W., and directed that all his just debts, legacies, and funeral expenses should be paid by W., whom he appointed executor. W. proved the will, and aliened the lands in 1821, without receiving a pecuniary equivalent. He paid interest up to 1849, under a mistaken belief of their liability. A cause petition was filed in 1853, to recover the amount of the bond, from the representatives of W. Held (affirming the order of the M. R., 2 I. C. R. 648), that the claim against W., being founded on a breach of a trust created without a specialty executed by him, was a simple contract debt, and as such barred by the Statute of Limitations, 10 Car. 1, sess. 2, c. 6, s. 3 (Ir.)—[Dunne v. Doran, 13 I. E. R. 546, supported.]—Brereton v. Hutchinson, 3 I. C. R. 361. (C.)

4. The executor of a trustee having been ordered to invest a sum in stock, to the credit of a cause, and having neglected to do so for two years, during which the funds fell—Held (affirming the Master's order) that he was bound to pay the price of the sum in stock on the day on which he was ordered to invest it, with interest, at £3½ per cent. only, from that day.—Geraghty v. G., 3 I. C. R. 414; 6 I. Jur. 385. (R.)

5. When a trustee, at the instance and with the concurrence of one of his c. q. trusts, invests trust funds in an unauthorised security, whereby loss occurs, the trustee cannot compel the concurring c. q. t. to indemnify him from that loss, unless so far as the c. q. trust's interest in the trust fund may extend; or unless there be a special contract to indemnify the trustee.—[Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 440, explained.]—Browne v. Maunsell, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 197; 5 I. C. R. 351. (C.)

6. When trustees, in good faith, invest on a security not in strictness justified by the instrument creating the trust, but which is practically secure, and from which no loss to the trust fund occurs, they will not be decreed to pay the costs of a suit to compel them to bring in the fund so invested.

In this case the Court refused the trustees their costs, and directed the petitioner's costs to be paid out of the fund.—Fitzgerald v. F., 6 I. C. R. 145; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (C.)

7. An unregistered judgment of 1847 was, by deed of 1849, assigned to a trustee upon trusts declared by a marriage settlement of equal date. The c. q. t. having wished for some further security, the judgment of 1847 was in 1851 registered as a mortgage against lands belonging to the conuzor, before the passing of the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29. Neither the c. q. t. nor the trustee was aware of the want of proper registration. The judgment was not properly registered until 1854. Held, that the trustee was liable to make good any loss occasioned by the want of due registration.—Lester v. L., 6 I. C. R. 513; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 313. (C.)

8. A. was trustee of a settlement, part of the trust fund being secured by bond. B., the executor of the obligor, with the assent of A., lent the sum secured by the bond, and all the assets of his testator, on mortgage of an estate, which, in consequence of the depreciation of property at the time, was sold in the I. E. Court for a sum insufficient to reach the mortgage. In a suit by the c. q. t. of the settlement and the legatees of the testator, A. and B. were ordered to bring into Court the amount secured by the bond, in equal shares; and B. was ordered to bring in the remainder of the assets, without prejudice to any proceeding by A. against B. on foot of the bond. Held, that A. could not in Equity recover from B. the moiety of the sum secured by the bond, which he had paid into Court under the decree.—Montgomery v. Waring, 6 I. C. R. 533. (R.)

9. By the Baths and Wash-houses Act, 9 & 10 Vic., c. 87, the Town Council of a borough, or the Commissioners of a city or town, are empowered from time to time to contract for the purchasing or renting of any lands necessary for the purposes of the Act, and to contract for the purchase or lease of any baths already or thereafter to be built and provided in any such borough, or such city or town, and appropriate them to the purposes of the Act. It provided that the baths and wash-houses so purchased or leased should be deemed to be within the Act as fully as if they had been built or provided by the said Council or Town Commissioners. "Lands" are defined by the Act to mean lands, tenements, or hereditaments, of whatsoever nature or tenure. The Town Council of a borough contracted to purchase baths and wash-houses which had been commenced by a private society, and were held under a sub-lease of a portion of lands comprised in a lease of a portion of lands demised by the owner of the fee, and which were thus subject to two rents in addition to the rent reserved by the sub-lease. Held, that the Town Council were empowered to purchase such an interest, if the title were good; but, the title being bad, the Court refused to enforce specific performance of the contract, which would be a breach of trust by the Town Council.—Mulholland v. Mayor of Belfast, 9 I. C. R. 204. (R.)—[Affd.: 9 I. C. R. 292; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 539. (C.A.)]

1. L., on his marriage, gave a bond and warrant to the trustees of his settlement, upon trust, "when the trustees should think fit and expedient so to do," to levy the amount, and hold it for the uses of his settlement. No judgment on the bond was ever entered; and the amount of the bond was lost. Held, that the discretion conferred upon the trustees was not absolute, but to be controlled by the Court; and that the circumstance that enforcing the bond might have been injurious to L.'s credit as a trader, and have lost him various situations, did not justify them in omitting to enforce the bond.—Luther v. Bianconi, 10 I. C. R. 194; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 138. (C.)

2. In order to let in evidence of wilful default by a trustee, there must be specific allegations of default.

A general charge of wilful omission to let lands is not sufficient to lay ground for evidence of any particular omission.—Lambert v. L., 10 I. C. R. 500. (C.)

3. An insolvent having committed a breach of trust, the c. q. trustent made with him an arrangement whereby they were paid part of their debt, and received for the remainder the best security he could give. Held, a condonation of the breach of trust; and that they should not be allowed to oppose.—In re Lynch, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 143. (B.)

4. In Ireland, a loan of trust funds, on a second mortgage, is not of itself, and in the absence of other incumbrances, a breach of trust.

A sum charged upon lands was, by marriage settlement, assigned upon trust, to pay the interest to A., the husband, for his life, and, after his death, in trust, to pay the wife, B., a jointure of £200 a-year, provided that it should be lawful for A., with the written consent of the trustees, to call in the trust fund, and lay out and dispose of the same in the purchase of an estate of inheritance or freehold for a term of at least three lives, or of a lease for a term of years, whereof 99 years should be unexpired, or otherwise advantageously; which purchase or disposal, when so made, should be settled and vested to the several uses, &c., thereinbefore mentioned, in respect to said sums. Portion of the fund was paid to the surviving trustee, who lent it to A., on a release being executed by A., B., and C., their son, and acknowledged and enrolled under the Act Abolishing Fines and Recoveries. Held, after the death of A., in a suit by B. to replace the trust fund, that the release as to her was inoperative.

Money, subject to be invested in lands, in the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 92, s. 68, means money directed to be so invested.—Smithwick v. S., 12 I. C. R. 181; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 282. (R.)

5. Personal estate was by settlement vested upon trust, for R., a married woman, for life, without power of anticipation; if no issue, and M., the husband, survived her, as R. should appoint; if R. survived, for her absolutely. W., acting trustee at the instance of R., applied the settled property in discharge of M.'s liabilities. M. died. By R.'s request, W. took no steps to realise M.'s assets. R. married again, after the lapse of some years. Her settlement recited her wish to give credit to W. for all payments made by the trustees at her request, in breach of trust. Held, that R. had lost her right to make the trustee liable.—Rutherford v. Maziere, 13 I. C. R. 205; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 210. (C.)

6. Executors are not relieved from the consequences of a breach of trust, by presenting a petition under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 11.

A special case should be framed thus:—A statement of the facts, followed by a series of interrogatories, signed by a counsel on each side.—In re Trusts of Guinness's Will, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (R.)

7. Marriage articles recited that the intended wife was entitled to legacies, which had not been reduced into possession, but were computed to amount to £2000. It was agreed that, in consideration of the wife's fortune, the husband should execute a bond, conditioned to pay £2000, with warrant of attorney to confess judgment, which should be vested in trustees, in trust, that they should, when they should think fit, call in the amount secured, and invest the sum so realised in the funds or on mortgage, and permit the husband to receive the interest for life, or until he should become bankrupt or insolvent, or enter into a composition with his creditors; and after his decease, or on his becoming bankrupt, &c., to permit the wife to receive the interest for her separate use for life, and, after her decease, in trust, for the issue of the marriage. The articles contained a covenant with the trustees that if, at any time during the coverture, any real or personal estate or property should descend or devolve, or become vested beneficially in the wife, or any person in trust for her, the husband should do all necessary acts to vest same in the trustees, upon the aforesaid trusts. The trustees paid two of the legacies recited in the articles, which came to their hands, to the husband, who was a trader, while he was solvent, but did not enter judgment on the bond until three years after the marriage, when he was insolvent, though they registered the warrant of attorney. Held, that the covenant did not apply to the legacies recited in the articles, and therefore the trustees were not guilty of a breach of trust in paying them to the husband.

That, as the husband had no land on which the judgment could be attached, the trustees were not guilty of a breach of trust by not entering the judgment forthwith.—Macken v. Hogan, 14 I. C. R. 285. (R.)

1. A will directed that no part of the testator's property, except the interest in a house, should be sold or disposed of for ten years only, if thought advisable by the executors, and bequeathed his property to his son, a minor. The executor sold the interest in the house to the respondent, who had notice of some restriction on the executor's power to sell. There were not any debts. In a suit to impeach the sale—Held, that the respondent was bound to prove that the sale, being a breach of trust, was at full value.—M'Mullen v. O'Reilly, 15 I. C. R. 251. (R.)

2. A fund was vested in trust for A. for life; and, after his death, in trust, for his son B. The trustees allowed A. to receive it. A. died, leaving assets, and bequeathing personal property, far exceeding in value the trust fund, to B., subject, nevertheless, to life interests, and having devised to B. real property, expressly in satisfaction of the trust fund claimed by him. B. filed a petition against the trustees, to compel them to replace the fund, and claiming a right to elect to take it against the devise. Held, that A.'s personal representative was a necessary party to the suit.

In a suit to compel trustees to replace a fund wrongfully paid to a person entitled to a life interest in it, he or his personal representative is a necessary party, notwithstanding the 28th G. O. of the 27th March 1843.—Burrows v. O'Brien, 15 I. C. R. 423. (R.)

3. It is a breach of trust for a trustee of a term in a settlement to secure portions to assign the term for the principal, unless he, at the same time, receives all arrears of interest then due.—Cox v. Leigh, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 185. (R.)

4. Moneys clothed with trusts were lodged by the trustee in the hands of his banker, who was fully aware that they were trust-moneys. The trustee afterwards withdrew them, in order to apply them to purposes foreign to, and in breach of the trusts; the bankers having knowledge that a breach of trust was contemplated when they paid out the moneys. Held, that the bankers participated in the breach of trust, and must replace the moneys.—Johnson v. Gray, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 81. (C.)—[Rev'd: L. R. 3 H. L. (E. & I. App.) 1.]

5. In a suit against an executor for a breach of trust committed by his testator, a decree declared him liable for the breach of trust, and directed an account of the assets. The executor was reported a creditor against the assets for a debt of a firm of which the testator had been a member. After the filing of the bill, but before decree pronounced, the executor assigned the debt. The final decree ordered him to pay the sum found due in respect of the breach of trust; and afterwards a sequestration was obtained to attach a sum carried to his separate credit on account of the debt reported due to him. Held, that the debt having been assigned pendente lite, the ptf. was entitled on the final allocation to be paid the sum decreed to him in preference to the executor's assignee.

A judgment at law was obtained against the endorsee of a bill of exchange. In a suit to administer the acceptor's assets, the report found the full amount of the debt. Afterwards, the endorsee paid several sums on account of the debt. The assets proving deficient, the debts were decreed to be paid rateably. Held, that the sums paid by the endorsee should be deducted from the amount reported, in calculating the rateable proportion of the assets to which the creditor was entitled.—Cummins v. C., 16 I. C. R. 156. (B.)

XIV. NOTICE OF BREACH OF TRUST: ITS EFFECT.

[See NOTICE, ante, p. 641.]

6. A purchaser, with notice implied or constructive, from a trustee, will be bound by the trust, although there has been a fine levied to him, and five years' non-claim.—Thompson v. Simpson, 2 Dr. & War. 459, 486. (C.)

7. T., a trustee, lent trust-money on mortgage to M. By an arrangement, on the marriage of M.'s daughter, a valuable leasehold interest was granted by M. out of the mortgaged premises, and put into settlement, T. being the person who managed it, and being the solicitor who prepared the lease and settlement. Neither husband nor wife was informed of the mortgage. Afterwards, T., with his co-trustee and their c. g. t., filed a bill to foreclose the mortgage, and sell, discharged of the lease, if necessary. Held, that the parties deriving under the settlement must be fixed with notice of the mortgage and trust; and could not, even as against T., rely on his conduct as a defence, or object to his being a co-ptf.

Quære—If notice had not been shown, would such an equity against a trustee be a defence?—Twycross v. Moore, 13 L. E. R. 250. (C.)

XV. TRUST TO SELL, AND PAY DEBTS.

1. The execution of a trust-deed for (amongst other purposes) paying creditors, does not constitute a creditor, who became so after its execution, and who was not a party thereto, a c. g. t. entitled to require the trustee to execute the trusts.

A. executed a trust-deed, appointing B. trustee for specified purposes, one of which was to pay creditors; another was to raise a sum by mortgage to satisfy a claim for rent due in respect of A.'s lands, and payment of which was then about to be enforced by ejectment. C. advanced money to B., who therewith satisfied this claim. B. afterwards gave C.'s solicitor a letter written subsequently to, but dated before the day on which the advance had been made. In that letter, B., appearing to ask for an advance, stated:—"I will consider such advance as raised by me under the power given me, and will, whenever you please, exercise that power by securing such advance in the best manner I am empowered by the deed." B. never executed a security. C. filed a bill against him to carry the trusts into execution, and charge the estates under the deeds with payment of his advance. Held, that the bill was unsustainable, since C., not being a party to the deeds, could not enforce execution. That the letter could not make him a c. g. t. under the deeds, as it purported only to give him a mortgage of the estates for the life of the tenant for life, whose death had prevented the mortgage being effected.—La Touche v. Earl of Lucan, 2 Dr. & Wal. 432; 7 Cl. & F. 772; West, 477.—[Rev. 2 Dr. & Wal. 271. (C.)]

2. When a party creates a trust by deed to pay debts, which deed is executed by some of the creditors, the estates thereby conveyed become so bound by the trust, that the Court will execute them at the suit of a creditor who has not signed the deed; provided he has not by his acts repudiated it, but has acquiesced in it.—Field v. Lord Donoughmore, 1 Dr. & War. 227. (C.)—[Rev. on re-hearing the decree of Lord Plunket, reported 2 Dr. & Wal. 630. (C.)]

3. A. was indebted, but none of his debts affected real property. By deed poll he conveyed some of his real estates, on trust, to raise money "for the purpose of paying all debts due by him to any person whatsoever, and which then affected his said estates thereby conveyed." A. was then indebted on bonds with which he had given warrants of attorney. No judgments had been entered. Held, that the trust included his bond, but not his simple contract debts.

The parties' acts cannot be allowed to affect the construction of deeds.—Douglas v. Allen, 2 Dr. & War. 213; 1 Con. & L. 367. (C.)

4. In 1793, C. executed his bond with warrant of attorney, and in 1779 devised his real estates in trust to sell and pay his debts, and subject thereto to his co-heiresses and their heirs. He died in Feb. 1804, and in March 1804 the obligee in the bond caused judgment to be entered on it as of the preceding Term. In 1826, the co-heiresses of C., for value, conveyed his real estate, subject to his debts, to W. and his heirs. The judgment of 1804 was not revived or redocketed pursuant to the 9 G. 4, c. 35. Held, nevertheless, that it was a valid charge affecting the real estate of C. in the hands of W.—Cockburne v. Wright, 6 L. E. R. 1; Long. & T. 443. (E.E.)

5. A person who had borrowed money from a trustee without notice of the trust, and after notice of the trust repaid it, as alleged, under threat of legal proceedings, to the trustee, decreed under the circumstances to pay it to the c. g. t. notwithstanding the alleged previous payment.

A witness proved a letter to have been duly posted, and properly directed. The receipt of it was positively denied in the answer. The copy tendered in evidence had a defective direction at the foot of it.

Quære—How far admissible in evidence?—Sheridan v. Joyce, 7 L. E. R. 115; 1 Jon. & L. 401. (C.)

6. A. being seized for life of estates X. and Y., remainder to his son B. in tail, they joined in suffering a recovery, and conveyed the estates to trustees as to Y. in fee, on trust to sell, and out of the proceeds to pay incumbrances affecting the estates and debts of A., and subject thereto to the use of A. in fee, and as to X. to uses which were revocable. P. was a judgment creditor of A., but neither he nor any other creditor was a party to the deed. C. being himself a creditor of A., agreed to purchase Y., the purchase-money to be applied by him in payment of the debts. By a deed, to which the trustees and A. and B. were named parties, it was conveyed to him in fee in consideration of the purchase-money, to be paid and applied by him in discharge of the scheduled debts, among which was P.'s judgment. The uses of X. were revoked by A. and B., and it was conveyed to indemnify C. The trustees not having executed the purchase-deed afterwards conveyed the legal estate to C., but it was declared that they should not be answerable for the title or application of the purchase-money. P.'s judgment was not paid; but a sum which had been retained to meet it was afterwards paid by C. to A. with the consent of B. Held, that P., not having been a party to any of the deeds, could not sustain a bill to raise the judgment under the trusts of them.

That the conveyance to C. was substantially an execution of the trusts of the first deed, and therefore defeated the ultimate fee limited to A., and consequently the judgment never was a lien on more than A.'s life estate.

Semble—That the purchaser of an equitable estate, who got a transfer of the legal estate before execution issued on a judgment, would not (before the 3 & 4 Vic.) be subject to the judgment, although he had express notice.—Broune v. Cavendish, 7 I. E. R. 369; 1 Jon. & L. 606. (C.)

1. A debtor assigned his house and business, in trust, to pay his debts; retaining to himself the management of the business under the superintendence of the trustees, who, on his failing to perform his covenants in the trust-deed, were thereby empowered, after giving him three months' notice, to sell the house and business. Such a notice was given, but waived by consent of the creditors and trustees assembled at a general meeting. Afterwards, without further notice, the trustees sold the house and business. Held, that the sale was unlawful and unauthorised.—Tomney v. White, 3 H. L. Cas. 49.

2. V. devised all his property, real and personal, to X., Y., and Z., on trusts therein-after mentioned. He then directed that his just debts should be paid by his executors thereinafter named, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, and nominated X., Y., and Z. his executors. Held, that there was a trust created to pay debts.

Two counsel only are to be heard on each side in this Court.—Bentley v. Robinson, 10 I. C. R. 287; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 7. (C.A.)

3. V., tenant for life of his estate, bequeathed to a trustee, whom he named one of his executors, all rent, and arrears of rent, which might be due to him at his death, upon trusts, and, as to the residue, in trust for minors, who were afterwards made wards of Court. He authorised his executor or executors to pay and satisfy any debts owing, or claimed to be owing, by and from him or his estate, and any liabilities to which he or his estate might be subject, and to accept any compensation or any security, real or personal, for any debt or debts owing to him or his estate, and to allow such time for the payment of any such debt, or compensation for a debt, either with or without taking security for it, as should be reasonable, and also to compromise and compound or submit to arbitration, and settle all debts, &c., and, generally, to act in relation to the premises in such manner as he or they should think expedient, without being liable for any loss which might be occasioned thereby; and gave power to his trustee to give receipts, and exempted him from liability for involuntary loss. Held, that the trustee or the executors were not authorised by the will to sell the arrears of rent.—[Affirmed: 13 I. C. R. 137; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (C.A.)]

The executors sold the arrears, which amounted to £49,709. 9s. 6d., to the remainderman for £20,000, payable in four annual instalments. Held, having regard to the circumstances of the estate, and the remedies which the executors and the remainderman respectively had to recover the arrears and the accruing rent, that the executors were not chargeable with the entire amount of the arrears recovered by the remainderman.—[Reversed: 13 I. C. R. 137; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (C.A.)]

The executors, having acted improvidently, and without the sanction of the Court, were charged with £25,000, the sum for which it would have sanctioned the sale of the arrears at the time when it was made. Executors are not to be charged with debts which there is reasonable ground for believing they would not have recovered.

Semble—The remainderman should have been a party to a suit to charge the executors of the tenant for life with the arrears of rent sold to him.—Alexander v. A., 12 I. C. R. 1. (R.)

[Surviving or continuing trustee may appoint new trustee; 23 & 24 Vic., c. 145, s. 27. 53rd G. O., Oct. 8, 1848, and May 2, 1853.]

1. The Court will not appoint a new trustee under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22, in the place of a person who, though named as trustee, has not accepted the trust.—In re Quindlan, 1 Jones, 549. (E.E.)

2. The Court would not appoint a new trustee under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22, when the old trustee had acted and was within the jurisdiction, but refused to act any longer.—In re Hossford, 1 Jones, 550. (E.E.)

3. A's interest in leasehold lands having been set up for public sale under writs of fi. fa., C., his attorney (being the real ptf. in one of the writs, but not pressing the sale), attended; made the largest bidding; was declared the purchaser; and paid the purchase-money, which was not more than enough to satisfy the writs prior to his own, and the expenses. A., alleging that C. had bid as his agent, and had purchased in trust for him, claimed the benefit of the purchase. C. denied A.'s allegations; but offered to give up the purchase, if A. would pay him the purchase-money, and the other demands which C. had on him. A. was not able to raise the purchase-money then, and C. dealt with the lands as his own for ten years. At the expiration of that time, A. filed a bill charging that C. had bid for and purchased the lands as his agent, and in trust for him: that C., at and after the sale, said so in conversations with friends of A.; and that they, on that understanding, did not bid. All these allegations were positively denied by C. in his answer. Conversations, such as those charged in the bill, were proved by S., a witness for A., to have taken place between S. and C.

On C.'s undertaking to release A. from all demands, the Ld. Ch. of Ireland pronounced a decree dismissing the bill; and afterwards pronounced another decree varying the former one, and directing an issue to ascertain the value of A.'s interest in the lands at the time of the sale. On appeal—Held, that both those decrees were erroneous.

That an enquiry concerning such value was immaterial; and that, the material question being whether C., in bidding for and purchasing the property, was acting on A.'s behalf, C. might take an issue to try that question but that C., if he declined to take that issue, should be declared a trustee for A.

That A.'s equity against C., if C. had, in the transaction of the purchase, acted on his behalf, was not affected by the lapse of ten years: there not being any acquiescence by A., and C. having been aware of his rights.

That an attorney, if not acting as such for his client on a particular occasion, may throw off that character, and exercise his rights as an independent man.—Austin v. Chambers, 6 Cl. & F. 1.—[This case is not reported in the Court below; but see it, in subsequent stages:—3 Dr. & War. 178; Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 85. (C.)]

4. This Court will not appoint a new trustee under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22, instead of a person who appears never to have accepted the trust, and who refuses to act.—Mitchell v. Nixon, 1 I. E. R. 155. (R.)

5. The Court made the usual order of reference to a Master to appoint new trustees of the will under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22, the devise to the trustees being to them and the survivors of them, and the heirs and assigns of such survivor; and it appearing that the trustees named were both dead: that they had not acted, but had not declined: that they had not been called on to act: and that the survivor's heir-at-law was resident in Canada.—In re Legg, 1 I. E. R. 374. (R.)

6. The Court has not power to appoint new trustees under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, unless a case of disability in the present trustees is established.—In re Pennesfather, 2 Dr. & War. 292. (C.)—Harte v. Lord French. Ibid, 292.

7. The mere refusal of the trustee to act in the trusts will not bring the case within the 1 W. 4, c. 60.—In re Hartford, 1 Con. & L. 394; 2 Dr. & War. 292. (C.)

8. The 1 W. 4, c. 40, does not apply to a case in which the event upon which the appointment of new trustees is sought has been provided for by the settlement.—In re Laffan, 1 Con. & L. 395. (C.)

1. It will not be directed by the Court, that in a deed appointing new trustees under the Court, a power to appoint new trustees when required shall be inserted.—Att.-Gen. v. Madden, 2 Con. & L. 519. (C.)

2. The interest of a money fund, vested in two trustees, was payable to H. and his wife, for their lives, remainder, as to the principal sum, to F. and his wife. The deed contained a power to appoint a new trustee in case of the death of one of the trustees. One of them died. Held, that a bill by F. and his wife, to appoint a new trustee, was maintainable, although there was no proof that the other parties had refused to appoint under the power.—Finlay v. Howard, 2 Dr. & War. 490. (C.)

3. The infant tenant in tail of lands decreed to be sold for an equitable charge is a trustee under the 8th and 18th sections of the 1 W. 4, c. 60.—Peyton v. M'Dermott, 6 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

4. When lands are decreed to be sold in a mortgage suit, the mortgagor's infant heir-at-law is not a trustee within the 8th or 18 section of the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60.—Goddard v. Macaulay, 6 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

5. When it did not appear that the old trustee, though incapable of managing his affairs, was a lunatic, the Court would not appoint a new trustee under the 22nd sec. of the 1 W. 4, c. 63.—In re Wakeford, 1 Jon. & L. 2. (C.)

6. In petition cases, under the Trustees Act, arising from trustees being out of the jurisdiction, it should be sworn where the trustee is, as service will be required when the absence is only in England.—Ex parte Hughes, 6 I. E. R. 559; 1 Jon. & L. 32. (C.)

7. The heir of a trustee of the lessee's interest in a lease for lives renewable for ever, having been applied to to accept a renewal to him, refused to execute the conveyance. Held, that the 8th sec. of the Trustees Act, 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60, did not extend to such a case.—Fitzgibbon v. Lewis, 6 I. E. R. 560. (C.)

8. A fund, consisting of govt. stock, was vested upon trusts, for a husband and wife, and their issue. One of the trustees, J., had left this country in 1821, and had not been heard of since 1822; it was, on the petition of the other trustee, referred to the trustee to enquire and report whether J. was possessed of the trust fund, alone or jointly with any person, and upon what trusts, within the 1 W. 4, c. 60; and if so, whether J. was within the jurisdiction; or whether there is any power in the settlement to appoint new trustees: and in case of the Master's reporting in the negative as to the two last matters, then to approve of a fit person to be a trustee in the room of J.; and of a person in the room of J. to convey to such new trustee, upon the trusts of the settlement. Costs were refused to the petitioner.—In re Chambers, 3 Dr. & War. 476. (C.)

9. When a deed gives the power of appointing new trustees to a particular person, the Court is bound to adopt his nominee, unless he refuses to nominate any but a person wholly unfit. Therefore, when the power of appointing trustees was given to H. and J., and the survivor of them, and J. died, and H. nominated new trustees, but in consequence of the interference of R., who had become entitled to J.'s interest under the deed, it was necessary to file a bill to procure a conveyance of the legal estate; and the Master, under the reference made at the hearing, entered into a general enquiry as to the relative fitness of the nominees of H. and R., and selected the nominee of the latter—Held, that he was wrong, although the reference had been made in general terms to select a proper person as trustee.

Rules of the Court as to controlling the appointment of trustees in such cases.—Kennedy v. Turnley, 6 I. E. R. 399; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 415. (C.)

10. When trustees have presented a petition for the purpose of lodging money in Court under the 11 & 12 Vic., c. 68, it is not necessary to present a second petition to have the costs ascertained. The trustees should retain the probable amount of the costs; and, if upon taxation any balance remains in their hands, it may be lodged in Court by side-bar order.—In re Desmond, 2 I. Jur. 21. (R.)

11. The Court will appoint a person to execute a conveyance of premises vested in a lunatic trustee, pursuant to 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 5; but where any trusts remain to be discharged, will require the report of a Master on the subject.—In re Coffey, 2 I. Jur. 139. (C.)

12. The Court has not power to order service of a notice of a petition, under the Trustee Relief Act out of the jurisdiction. When the parties interested resided abroad, the Court ordered the petition to stand over until a cause petition should be filed.—Ex parte Crawford, 2 I. C. R. 573. (R.)

13. If A., executor and residuary legatee, promises to pay legacies directed by the testator to be paid, and consequently omitted from the will, Equity will enforce the undertaking, and declare A. a trustee for the legatees.—Sharry v. Garty, 2 I. Jur. 137. (C.)

14. The practice of the I. E. Court is, to recognise only the actual bidder when he bids in his own name. When he bids, with consent, in another person's name, the Court holds both accountable, unless the bidder has previously declared to the Court that he bids only as a trustee.—In re Stirling's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 229. (I.E.C.)

1. One who gets into his possession trust money, which he knows to be such, becomes a trustee, and must account for it.—Bowen v. Lindsay, 5 I. Jur. 129. (C.)

2. A trustee, seeking to lodge money in Court under the Trustee Relief Act, must in all cases set forth in his affidavits a succinct account of his reasons for so doing, at the peril of costs.—Ex parte Hillis, 6 I. Jur. 26. (R.)

3. A petition to appoint new trustees should be entitled in the matter of the trusts of the settlement and of the Act.—Therry v. T., 6 I. Jur. 61. (R.)

4. A testator bequeathed stocks, shares, and funds to trustees, for E. for life, and then for her children. A suit was instituted to administer the will; the assets were lodged in Court. E. had three children, A., B., and C. In 1837, B. by marriage settlement conveyed £3000 as her one-third share of the trust funds to trustees for her children. The funds in Court were apportioned in 1848, and £1795. 10s. 11d. were transferred to B. as her share, and the respective portions of the different stock and shares were set out in the order. The trustees of the settlement of 1837 declined to act. The Master's certificate found the foregoing facts, and that it was advisable to appoint new trustees, and to vest in them the portions of stocks and shares so apportioned, amounting to £1955. 10s. 11d., and the right to sue for same; that these stocks and shares were subject to the settlement of 1837; and annexed to his certificate the form of an order which he approved of for that purpose. Held, that the Court could not vest in the new trustees the specified portions of stocks and shares so apportioned, amounting to £1955. 10s. 11d., or the right to sue therefor. An order was made appointing new trustees under the Act, and vesting in them the right to sue for the £3000, or the one-third share of the securities mentioned in the settlement of 1837.—In re Grant's Trusts, 6 I. Jur. 197. (R.)

5. Parties having, by order of the Court, been declared trustees for others within the Trustee Acts of 1850 and 1852, the Court subsequently made an order vesting their interest in those others.

Semble—That the Court will not, under 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, order the Master to execute a deed, conveying real property, for a married woman.

A notice of motion must be properly entitled in the matter of the statute under which the application is made.—Foster v. Higgins, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 75. (R.)

6. A. devised the lands of G., whereof he was seized in fee, to P., B., and H., successively in strict settlement; and the lands of C., whereof he was seized in tail, to M. Upon the deaths of P. and B., H. entered into receipt of the rents of both properties. The will had appointed P. guardian of M. But

M., when H. entered into receipt of the rents of both properties, continued to reside with, and to be maintained by him. In a correspondence she was described as being "in his possession." Held, that H. had made himself a trustee for her, of one or other of the properties, and was bound to exercise for her the right of election.—Morgan v. M., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 166. (C.)

7. The respondent alleged that the petitioner, who was the respondent's uncle, in consideration of the respondent's continuing his studies for the bar, and not returning to literary pursuits, as he wished to do; gave him this cheque:—"Strabane, Oct. 3rd, 1857. To the managers of the Bank of Ireland. Pay to Thomas Neilson Underwood, Esq., the sum of £1701. 8s. 2d., placed to my credit by Messrs. Arbuthnot, Latham & Co., merchants, London.—Thos. Neilson." The respondent handed this cheque to his aunt to keep; and the petitioner added that he would give respondent another sum to invest in land, for the use of the respondent and his aunt. On the 17th March 1858, the petitioner placed to the respondent's credit £6200, which satisfied him touching the sincerity of the petitioner's promises. In order, as the respondent alleged, that the purpose for which those moneys were given might be known, in the event of anything happening to him during the petitioner's lifetime, the respondent prepared, and the petitioner signed, this memorandum:—"Having given to my nephew, Thos. Neilson Underwood, a cheque for £1701, and also put to his credit there a sum of, in all, about £8000, I expect him, and he has agreed to invest the same in profitable land, paying at the least £5 per cent., with a house in which I can reside with my sister, if she wishes to leave Strabane, and with him, when he pleases; and until he obtains what I wish and require, he is to put the money now in his own name in some safe place, which will give him interest, to supply his house, and enable him to prosecute his studies for the Profession in London, as is my wish and desire.—Strabane, April 24th 1858.—Thos. Neilson."

The respondent, on the 21st Jan. 1859, invested these sums, in his own name, in the purchase of £8330. 12s. 8d. consols, in reliance on the above memorandum, and made several abortive attempts to purchase land.

The petition prayed that the respondent should be declared possessed of the moneys in trust for the petitioner, to whom they should be transferred; and for an injunction to restrain any other transfer, and to prevent the respondent receiving the dividends, and to set aside the memorandum as obtained by surprise, fraud, and undue influence. The respondent's case was, that the moneys were gifts to him. Held, that neither of the sums was a gift.—Neilson v. Underwood, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 255. (C.)

8. When the personal representative of a mortgagor assigns the mortgage, the heir of the mortgagee being out of the jurisdiction, the assignee may, under the 19th sec. of the Trustee Act, 1850, obtain an order vesting the legal estate. The relief given by that section is not confined to the case of re-conveyance to the mortgagor.—In re Quinlan's Trusts, 9 I. C. R. 306. (C.A.)

1. When an executor parts with any portion of his testator's assets, under circumstances which must be reasonably taken to make the purchaser aware that they were sold, not for the benefit of the estate, but for that of the executor, the purchaser holds them as if, respecting them, he himself was the executor.—Walker v. Taylor, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 376. (H.L.)

2. Four judgments affecting B.'s estate were purchased by A., his solicitor, for less than the amounts due thereon. Two of them were assigned to A. by a deed, in which B. joined. A., shortly after B.'s death, bought the third; and the fourth, while he had carriage of the proceedings in a suit to administer B.'s estate, sold in the I. E. Court. On settlement of the final schedule—Held, that A. could not stand thereon as a creditor respecting the judgments for more than he paid, with interest, and the costs of the assignments.—In re Johnstone's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 36. (L.E.C.)

3. Right of executrix's husband, out of the jurisdiction, to execute an assignment, vested in another person under the Trustee Relief Act, 1850, s. 22.—In re Trusts of Tisdall's Will, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 139. (R.)

4. Costs of appearing by counsel at the argument are not allowed to a trustee who has brought in the fund under the Trustee Relief Act, when all the beneficiaries are free from disability, and the case has been fully argued on their behalf, although the contrary practice prevails in England.

The costs of lodgment, and of the motion for costs, will be given.—Lockhart's Trusts; ex parte Lady Lockhart, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (R.)

5. When, in the inception of a trust, the funds are vested in two trustees, one of whom then dies, the survivor is entitled to have the advice and co-operation of a new trustee, before dealing with the principal of the trust funds in any way which involves a question of discretion.—Livesay v. O'Hara, 14 I. C. R. 12. (C.)

6. A tenant applying for a f.-f. grant or renewal is bound to pay rent and fines due before his landlord's title to the reversion accrued. As to such rent and fines, the landlord is a trustee for those entitled.—Courtenay v. Parker, 16 I. C. R. 320. (R.)

7. In 1818, J., by will, reciting that he was possessed of lands held under an agreement for a lease for 999 years, and called Waters's lot, devised them in trust for the sole use of his daughter H. (then unmarried), and her assigns. In 1822, H. married; but Waters's lot was not affected by the settlement then executed. In 1823, J. died. A lease was afterwards made to H.'s husband, and his executors, &c., of Waters's lot, for the residue of the 999 years. In 1864, the husband died, having devised Waters's lot to parties other than H., who survived him. Held, that the interposition by J., of trustees in the devise for H.'s sole benefit, excluded her husband's marital right, and that he was a trustee of the lease for H.—Massy v. Hayes, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 241. (C.)

I. 2 By the Court.

[Power of the Court to appoint new trustees; 13 & 14 Vic., c. 60, s. 32, &c.; 15 & 16 Vic., c. 55, ss. 8, 9, 10.]

8. A trustee of chattels real and of stock, having acted in the trusts, died, and appointed executors resident within the jurisdiction, who proved his will, but never acted, and refused to act in the trusts, which were still continuing. Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to appoint new trustees under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22.

The original trustee having committed a breach of trust, the Court appointed new trustees; the executors of the old trustee undertaking to replace the trust fund.—Muley v. Smith, 4 I. E. R. 497; Long. & T. 241. (E.E.)

9. The Court never appoints a new trustee without a reference to the Master.—In re Roche, 2 Dr. & War. 287; 1 Con. & L. 306. (C.)

10. Form of order for the appointment of a new trustee under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, in the room of a trustee who resided out of the jurisdiction, and the trust fund consisting merely of government stock in the Bank of Ireland.—In re Chambers, 3 Dr. & War. 498. (C.)

11. A person was named as a trustee in a marriage settlement of 1821, but did not execute or act in the trusts of it. After the death of his co-trustee, he, in 1844, refused to act in the trusts. The Court, upon the petition of the tenant for life, under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22, refused to appoint a new trustee in his place. After such a lapse of time, it must, in a petition matter, be presumed that the trustee accepted the trust.—In re Uniacke, 1 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

12. The petitioner's marriage settlement authorised the appointment of new trustees in case of the death of either or both of the old ones. One trustee died. The petition prayed the appointment of two new trustees. This prayer was supported by a medical certificate that the surviving trustee was not capable of managing his own affairs; and by an affidavit, that he could not act in executing the trusts, or execute a deed assigning the trust-property to himself and a new trustee, jointly. It did not appear that his illness amounted to lunacy. Held, that the Court had not jurisdiction to do so.—In re Wakeford, 1 Jon. & L. 2. (C.)

1. Stock was vested in the names of three trustees in trust for the benefit of a lunatic for life; after her death, for her children. The last surviving trustee having died, his widow and executrix refused to prove the will. On petition, the Court appointed new trustees, and directed that they should obtain a limited administration to him in order to procure a transfer of the stock to themselves.—In re Needham a lunatic, 6 I. E. R. 557; 1 Jon. & L. 34. (C.)

2. When a deed declaring trusts contained a power to appoint new trustees in case of death, desire to be discharged, or refusal to act of the trustees, and one trustee went to America, and his residence could not be discovered—Held, that a new trustee might be appointed under the 11 G. 4 & W. 4, c. 60, s. 22, on petition.—In re Ledwich, 6 I. E. R. 561. (C.)

3. Stock was vested in trust to pay the dividends to persons successively entitled for life. One of the trustees had acted by joining in a power of attorney to receive the dividends, but a new power of attorney being necessary, he refused to join in giving it, or in receiving the dividends. There was a power to appoint new trustees vested in the acting trustee of the deed. A petition was presented by the person entitled to the first life interest, to have a trustee appointed to receive and pay over the dividends. Held, not a case within the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 10.—In re Byrne, 6 I. E. R. 563; 1 Jon. & L. 535. (C.)

4. When a bill is filed to appoint new trustees, the amount of the property being small, the Court will order the Master to appoint the trustees at once under the reference, without the necessity of coming back to the Court.—Clinton v. Watkins, 7 I. E. R. 489. (B.)

5. A marriage settlement vested a judgment in trustees, and declared that if the wife should, with her husband's consent, think it advisable to call in the sum thereby secured, the trustees should permit her to use her discretion respecting its re-investment.

One trustee having died, and the other being out of the jurisdiction, the wife, with her husband's consent, called in the money. They assigned the judgment to the lender. The surviving trustee refused to execute the assignment, and desired to be discharged from the trusts.

The Court, thinking that the parties' real object was, not to continue the money in settlement; but, under colour of the power, to get it out of settlement, refused to appoint new trustees.—In re Molony, 2 Jon. & L. 391. (C.)

6. When a trustee, who did not labour under any disability, declined to act, an application by petition for a new trustee was granted, although some of the c. q. t. were minors, the funds being small.—Plunket v. Smith, 8 I. E. R. 523. (E.E.)

7. The Court refused to appoint a new trustee on petition, when the parties' object was to convey an estate to a purchaser pursuant to a contract for sale to which the old trustee ought to have been, but was not a party.—In re Lloyd and Wife, 3 Jon. & L. 255. (C.)

8. In considering whether mixed trustees, or trustees of a particular religious denomination or class, of charity estates vested in a Municipal Corporation, should be appointed under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 108, s. 11, the Court will regard the constitution of the trust, and how it has been exercised, and how matters stood when the Act came into operation in the borough. When the usage has been to apply the charity estate exclusively for the benefit of persons of a particular religious denomination, and such application is not clearly inconsistent with the constitution of the trust, the Court will appoint trustees of that religious denomination only.

Upon a petition to appoint trustees under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 108, s. 112, the Court has jurisdiction to determine the charity's character only so far as is necessary for the purpose of appointing the trustees; but not conclusively.—In re The Charity Estates of Drogheda, 3 Jon. & L. 422. (C.)

9. V., a member of the Church of England, bequeathed money to educate the poor; and appointed two executors, members of his own church, to carry the trusts of the will into execution. Held (per Brooke, Master in Chancery), that under an order of reference to him to appoint new trustees, he was bound, acting for V., to appoint trustees of the church to which V. belonged.

The other four Masters in Ch. concur in the abstract point, that the Masters in Ch., under an order of reference to appoint new trustees to execute a trust in favour of a charitable object, under the will of a Christian testator, should, if possible, appoint those who are of the same church as that to which the testator belonged.—The Attorney-General v. Fitzgerald, 3 I. Jur. 37. (C.)

10. Under the Ch. Reg. Act, the Court will not entertain a petition solely to appoint trustees.—Gabbett v. Lloyd, 3 I. Jur. 286. (C.)

11. A., the personal representative of the surviving trustee of a judgment, permitted proceedings to revive the judgment to be taken in his name; but afterwards refused to join in any receipt for the money due on foot of the judgment. The c. q. t. of the judgment served on A. a notice, calling on him either to act in the trust, or to resign the trusteeship. A. gave no answer to this notice. On petition filed to remove A. and appoint a new trustee. Held, that A. must pay the costs of the suit.—Wren v. Swanton, 6 I. C. B. 233. (C.)

1. The Court will not sanction the appointment of a person as trustee of a settlement, when that person takes an interest as c. g. t. under the settlement.—In re M'Cook's Trusts, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 74. (R.)

2. In a partition suit, the parties' shares being very minute and complicated, the Court, to save expense, instead of directing mutual conveyances, declared each party trustee as to the shares allotted to the others; and then vested the entire trust estate in one new trustee under the Trustee Act, with directions to pay each party his allotted share.—Boyce v. Woodroffe, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 57. (C.)

3. The Court of Ch. has not jurisdiction to relieve the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests from the trusts imposed upon them by Act of Parliament, and to appoint new trustees in their stead.

Quære—Has the Court power to frame rules for the management of a charitable institution under the control of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, when a scheme framed by the Commissioners for the administration of the charity is already in operation?—In re Fanning's Charity, 15 I. C. R. 384. (C.)

4. Two trustees of real estate appointed under the Trustee Acts, instead of three named in the will creating the trust, under special circumstances, the will not containing a power to appoint new trustees.—In re Boyle's Trusts, 17 I. C. R. 247. (R.)

II. ACCEPTANCE OR DISCLAIMER OF TRUST BY.

5. A person, to whom, with others, a term of years had, in 1810, been bequeathed in trust, and who was appointed, with the other trustee, an executor of the will, was, in 1844, presumed to have accepted the trust, though he had never acted in it, the will having been proved by the other trustees, saving his right, and he never having disclaimed.—In re Needham, 1 Jon. & L. 34; 6 I. E. R. 557. (C.)

6. When, stock being invested in the Bank of Ireland in the name of a trustee who declines to act, new trustees are appointed whom the order of appointment declares entitled to a transfer; Semble—The former trustee must, without further order, make the transfer.—Burgh v. Hickman, 3 I. Jur. 198. (C.)

III. RELEASE, REMOVAL, AND DISCHARGE OF.

[See 11 & 12 Vic., c. 68; enabling trustees to get rid of a trust by lodging trust funds in Court; also 15 & 16 Vic., c. 60; 15 & 16 Vic., c. 55. Gen. Orders, Oct. 8, 1848; Feb. 24, 1853, and May 2, 1853. Reilly on Summary Petitions, 417, 421, and 424.]

7. Quære—Can a trustee, who has accepted the trust, and has not committed any breach of trust, get discharged by filing a bill, if no other fit person can be found to act, and the c. g. t. will not consent to his discharge?—Ardill v. Savage, 1 I. E. R. 79. (C.)

8. A. was nominated trustee and executor of a will. Upon a petition presented for his removal, under 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22, stating that the will had been produced and shown to A., and read by him previously to its having been executed by the testator in his lifetime; and that A. had thereupon approved thereof and consented to act as such trustee, but that, subsequently to the testator's death, he had declined to interfere in the trusts of the will, the Court made an order for his removal, and referred it to the Remembrancer to approve of a proper person to be appointed trustee in his place.—Crook v. Ingoldsbys, 2 I. E. R. 375. (E.E.)

9. In a suit concerning trust property, no prayer for the removal of trustees is necessary to give the Court jurisdiction to remove them.—Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 2 Con. & L. 98; 3 Dr. & War. 162. (C.)

10. A release to one trustee in respect of a breach of trust committed in the investment of part of the trust funds—Held, to be a release to the other trustee, the release operating as an acceptance of the securities upon which the funds had been invested.—Blackwood v. Burrows, 2 Con. & L. 459; 4 I. E. R. 609; 4 Dr. & War. 441. (C.)

11. The Court will not, upon petition, remove a trustee who has accepted the trust, but refuses to continue to act. A bill must be filed for the purpose, the costs of which will be cast on the trustee, if it appears that he has improperly refused to act.—Anon., 4 I. E. R. 700. (E.E.)

12. Stock was vested in two trustees for the benefit of a married woman, with power to lend it on private security at the request of the husband and wife. The wife had a power to appoint new trustees in case of refusal, &c., or whenever she should think it expedient. The husband and wife applied to the trustees to lend the money on a security which one of them disapproved of. The wife appointed another trustee, but the former trustee refused to transfer the fund until satisfied of his safety. On a petition presented under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 10—Held, that the case was not within that Act.—Pepper v. Tuckey, 7 I. E. R. 572; 2 Jon. & L. 95. (C.)

13. When a trustee, who did not labour under any disability, declined to act, an application by petition for a new trustee was granted, although some of the c. g. t. were minors, the funds being small.—Plunket v. Smith, 8 I. E. R. 528. (E.E.)

14. A trustee, entitled to be discharged from his trust, must show that some other person is ready to accept the trust. If no person is ready to accept it, the Court may be obliged to keep the trustee before it, and not discharge him. It will, however, take care that the trustee shall not suffer thereby.—Courtenay v. C., 9 I. E. R. 329; 8 Jon. & L. 519. (C.)

1. The Charitable Bequests Act, 7 & 8 Vic., c. 97, authorising the Commissioners of Ch. Don. to sue for devises or bequests withheld, concealed, or misapplied, and to apply them according to the devisor's intention, gives the Commissioners such an interest as entitles them to file a bill to remove a testamentary trustee for a charity, and to appoint new trustees. The proceeding need not be by information, and such relief will be granted on account of the mere personal unfitness of the trustee.

Form of decree to remove a trustee who may still be entitled to a control as to the objects of the charity.—Comms. of Ch. Don. v. Archbold, 11 I. E. R. 187. (C.)—[Rev'd: 2 H. L. Cas. 440.]

2. A., the personal representative of the surviving trustee of a judgment permitted proceedings to revive the judgment to be taken in his name, but afterwards refused to join in any receipt for the money due on foot of the judgment. The c. q. t. of the judgment served on A. a notice, calling on him either to act in the trust, or to resign the trusteeship. A. gave no answer to this notice. On petition filed to remove A., and appoint a new trustee—Held, that A. must pay the costs of the suit.—Wren v. Swanton, 6 I. C. R. 233. (C.)

2. Investment of Trust Fund—Management of Trust Property.

3. Discretionary Powers of Trustees; how Controlled.

- a. In general; when Controlled by the Court.
- b. When not.

IV. 1. Rights, Powers, &c., generally, of Trustees.

3. Quære—Is a trustee of leaseholds, settled to a married woman's separate use, bound to see that the head rents are paid, or, otherwise, does he become liable as for wilful default, if the premises are evicted for non-payment of rent?—Booth v. Purser, 1 I. E. R. 40. (C.)

4. By marriage settlement £5000 were vested, upon trust, to permit the wife, if she survived her husband, to receive the interest thereof during her life; and if no issue of the marriage, in trust for the husband absolutely, with power to the trustees, with the consent of husband and wife, to invest the money in government, or on real security. The money was afterwards, with consent of husband and wife, lent upon mortgage. The husband died without issue, and by will bequeathed his interest in the £5000 to A. upon trusts, and appointed him his executor. The wife married B.; and upon her marriage the interest on the £5000 was assigned to A., upon trust, to pay the yearly interest on the £5000 to the wife for life. A. covenanted with the wife that he, his executors, &c., would stand possessed of the premises assigned to him upon the trusts. The £5000 were paid to A. out of the produce of a sale had in a suit in which he was a deft.; and A. represented to B.'s wife that he had invested the money upon government security. He paid her interest according to the rate it would have borne if it had been so invested. The money was not in fact so invested, but was applied by A. to his own use. Held, in a suit to administer A.'s assets, that the new trustee of B.'s last marriage settlement was entitled to rank as a specialty creditor for the difference between the amount of the interest actually paid by A., and interest upon the £5000, calculated at £6 per cent.; and also (there being a deficiency of the assets to pay the £5000, which was a debt by simple contract) as a specialty creditor for any future deficiency in the interest, calculated at £6 per cent.—Jameson v. Farrer, 3 I. E. R. 346. (E.E.)

5. Two persons, in whom were vested, under an Act of Parliament, the right to the tolls and profits arising from a road for fifty years, conveyed, by deed, the same, and all their estate and interest therein, to A., B., and C. (the deft.), upon trusts therein mentioned; and subject thereto, in trust, for A., B., and C., their executors, &c., as tenants in common, for their own use, for the residue of the fifty years. The deed contained a provision, that if any of the trustees should be unable to join in the direction and superintendence of the road, it should be lawful for any two of the trustees to act of themselves in the management of the road, and in all other things relating to the execution of the trusts. The interests to which A. and B. were entitled under the deed having become vested in the ptf., and C. (the deft.) having taken upon himself the exclusive control and management of the road, and insisted upon his right thereto, and also upon being paid a salary for his trouble and supervision. Held, upon a bill filed by the ptf. disputing such right, that the deft. C. was entitled to have the sole management of the road, but that his claim for salary could not be maintained.—Taylor v. T., 4 Dr. & War. 124. (C.)

6. If the infant refuses to execute the conveyance, the Master will be directed to do so in his name, under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 8.

Semble—The 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 8, does not apply to infants.—Peyton v. M'Dermott, 6 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

7. An elegit on foot of a judgment will not be issued in the names of new trustees appointed under the Trustee Act, 1850, unless they become parties to the record. They should make themselves parties thereto by suggestion, or by reviving the judgment in their own names, before seeking to issue the electio.—M'Cullagh v. Rogers, 4 I. Jur. 75. (R.)

1. When, in the inception of a trust, the funds are vested in two trustees, and one of them dies, the survivor is entitled to have the advice and co-operation of a new trustee before dealing with the principal of the trust funds in any way which may involve a question of discretion.—Livesay v. O'Hara, 14 I. C. R. 12. (C.)

IV. 2. Investment of Trust Fund: Management of Trust Property.

2. A., upon his daughter's marriage, executed his bond and warrant to the trustees of the settlement, habendum, upon trust, inter alia, if the wife died during her husband's life, leaving no issue of the marriage her surviving, or if the surviving issue should all die under age, then the money secured by the bond should not be called in; but the bond and warrant should, after the wife's decease without issue, and whether the husband was then dead or not, be given up to A., his heirs, executors, &c., to be cancelled. It was provided that the money so secured should not be called in during A.'s life; but that, on his death, the trustees might, with the husband's approbation, and, after the husband's death, with the wife's approbation, call in the money. Held, that the trustees were bound to accept payment of the money secured by the bond from A.'s executor, although the husband and wife objected to its being paid in.—Kempland v. Humphries, 2 Jones, 726. (E.E.)

3. A trustee appointed by will to manage estates (with a salary) during the continuance of a tenancy for life, took a lease at a very low rent, and in consideration of faithful services, from the tenant for life. It exceeded the power of leasing given to the tenant for life. Held, that this lease was fraudulent and voidable in the hands of a purchaser for value, who had constructive notice of the nature of the lease, in favour of those claiming the estates after the tenant for life.—Ker v. Lord Dungannon, 1 Dr. & War. 541; 1 Con. & L. 360; 4 I. E. R. 343. (C.)

4. Two persons in whom were vested, under an Act, the right to the tolls and profits arising from a particular road, for fifty years, by deed of 1827, conveyed them, and all their estate and interest therein to A., B., and C. (the deft.), on specified trusts; subject thereto, in trust for A., B., and C., and their executors, &c., as tenants in common, for their own use, for the residue of the fifty years. The deed provided that if any of the trustees should be unable to join in directing and superintending the road, any two trustees might act for themselves in managing it, and in all other matters relating to the execution of those trusts. The interests of A. and B. under the deed became vested in the ptf. C. took on himself the exclusive control and management of the road, and insisted on his right to do so, and to be paid a salary for his trouble, &c. Ptf. filed a bill disputing that right. Held, that C. was entitled to the sole management of the road, but that his claim for salary was unsustainable.—Taylor v. T., 4 Dr. & War. 124. (C.)

5. Stock was vested in the names of three trustees, in trust for the benefit of a lunatic for life, and, after her decease, for her children; the last surviving trustee having died, his widow and executrix refused to prove his will. The Court, upon petition, appointed new trustees, and directed that they should obtain a limited administration to the last surviving trustee, for the purpose of procuring a transfer of the stock to themselves.—In re Needham a lunatic, 1 Jon. & L. 34; 6 I. E. R. 557. (C.)

6. A power to trustees to lay out money "in the public stocks or funds in Great Britain, or on any mortgage of freehold or leasehold estates, or any other real securities in England, Wales, or Ireland," does not authorise them to lend it on the security of a judgment, even since the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22.—Johnston v. Lloyd, 7 I. E. R. 252. (C.)

7. An executor who invested part of his testator's assets in bank stock instead of government stock—Held, not accountable for the entire loss thereby occasioned; but only for the difference between the actual loss and the loss which would have been sustained had the money been invested in government stock.—Hynes v. Redington, 7 I. E. R. 405; 1 Jon. & L. 589. (C.)

8. By deed reciting that a sum was due on simple contract by the firm of A., B., C., and D., X. assigned it to A. and B. It was declared that they should stand possessed of it upon trusts. The money was misapplied. Held, a specialty debt of A. and B. not binding heirs.

Specialty debts in which heirs are not bound have no priority over simple contract debts in the administration of real estate under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 104.

Probate to one of several executors vests the property in all; so that on the death of him who proves, the survivor represents the deceased for all purposes without further probate, and without any further acceptance of the office.

When a co-executor, who had not proved, after the death of him who proved, gave a power of attorney to sell a small part of the testator's assets, which was not acted on, and had not further intermeddled—Held, a sufficient election to accept the office of executor, so that he could not afterwards renounce.

One of a firm, of which all the members owed a sum vested in two of the partners on trusts, and who had notice of the trusts, retired from the firm leaving ample assets to pay that sum, which continued lent to the new firm, and was applied in breach of the trusts, with knowledge of A. Held, that he was responsible to the cestui q. t.; for that the were retiring and leaving sufficient assets did not discharge his liability, unless they distinctly adopted the new firm as a substituted security for the old one.

A sum being lent on simple contract to a firm, who promised to give a bond for it, was vested in trustees, with power to vary the securities. The fund continued to be lent to the same firm. Held, a breach of trust.—Cummins v. C., 8 I. E. R. 723; 3 Jon. & L. 64. (C.)

1. An action of covenant was brought against a trustee, who lodged the amount claimed in Court, and filed an interpleader bill, which, on demurrer, was dismissed with costs. Held, that he was entitled to have the money returned, without deducting the costs.—Doyle v. Dumoncel, 11 I. E. R. 517. (R.)

2. To indemnify a trustee or executor, who lodges funds in Court under the Trustee Indemnity Act (11 & 12 Vic., c. 68), they must be lodged to the credit of a particular trust. The Court will not make an order when they have been improperly lodged.

Practice under this and the corresponding English Act.—In re Godfrey's Trust, 2 I. C. R. 105. (R.)

3. A marriage settlement vested money in two trustees, A. and B., upon trust. By A.'s representation B. was induced to join in placing the trust fund differently from the terms of the trust. On a bill filed by B. against A. praying a restoration of the fund for the purposes of the trust—Held, that it was enough that danger might arise to the trust fund to entitle B. to maintain the suit. The Court will presume danger when the trust fund is not in its proper place.—Atkinson v. Loddell, 2 I. Jur. 89. (C.)

4. A person indebted to the estate of an intestate, paid his debt to a person authorised by a deed executed by the administratrix to hold the property of the intestate. Her husband, as trustee for her children, was aware of such deed being executed, although no party to it. On a bill filed, charging that the money was paid by the debtor to his son-in-law, who was in embarrassed circumstances, and praying that an account might be taken of the personal estate of the intestate, and the debtor decreed to pay the amount he owed, notwithstanding any payment to the trustee; Held, that in the absence of any fraud, and the trust deed having been executed bona fide, the debtor was justified in paying the person therein named to receive the amount, and was not bound to see to the application of such money; and that payment to the appointee of the personal representative was payment to such representative.—Kane v. Mussin, 2 I. Jur. 201. (C.)

5. When, stock being invested in the Bank of Ireland in the name of a trustee who declines to act, new trustees are appointed, whom the order of appointment declares entitled to a transfer; Semble—The former trustee must make the transfer without further order.—Burgh v. Hickman, 3 I. Jur. 198. (C.)

6. When a trustee has in his hands funds to administer, his right is to lodge them in Court under the Trustee Relief Acts, without regard to the effect which the lodgment may have on the liability of other parties as to the payment of costs.—In re Mussenden's Trusts, 4 I. Jur. 389. (C.)

7. A trustee seeking to lodge money in Court under the Trustee Relief Act, must in all cases set forth in his affidavit a succinct account of his reasons for so doing, at the peril of costs.—Hillis, ex parte, 6 I. Jur. 26. (R.)

8. Under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 60, s. 31, the Court of Ch. will order that stock standing in the Bank to the credit of A. and B., trustees of a marriage settlement, be transferred to the credit of A. and of C. (appointed a trustee in the room of B., gone abroad to evade his creditors); and that a person be named in the place of B. to execute the deeds assigning the trust funds to A. and C.

Semble—The application is properly made to the Lord Chancellor and not to the M. R.—Read v. M'Neale, 5 I. Jur. 273. (C.)

9. New trustees of stock, appointed under the 35th sec. of the Trustee Act 1850, called on the person entitled to it to transfer it. He declined doing so—Held, that the 23rd sec. entitles them on the expiration of 28 days after such application to apply for an order on the proper officer of the Bank to transfer.

The new trustees are the parties to apply, and the Court has jurisdiction to entertain the application on motion.—Ex parte Hopkins, 5 I. Jur. 369. (C.)

10. V. bequeathed stocks, shares and funds to trustees for E. for life, and then for her children. A suit was instituted to administer the will, and the assets were lodged in Court. E. had three children, A., B., and C. In 1837 B., by marriage settlement, conveyed £3000 as her one-third share of the trust funds to trustees for her children. The funds in Court were apportioned in 1848, and £1955. 10s. 11d. were transferred to B. as her share, and the respective portions of the different stock and shares were set out in the order. The trustees of the settlement of 1837 declined to act. The Master's certificate found the foregoing facts; that it was advisable to appoint new trustees, and to vest in them the portions of stocks and shares so apportioned, amounting to £1955. 10s. 11d., and the right to sue for same; that these stocks and shares were subject to the settlement of 1837; and annexed to his certificate the form of an order which he approved of for that purpose. Held, that the Court could not vest in the new trustees the specific portions of stocks and shares so apportioned, amounting to £1955. 10s. 11d., or the right to sue therefor. An order was made appointing new trustees under the Act, and vesting in them the right to sue for the £3000, or the one-third share of the securities mentioned in the settlement of 1837.—In re Grant's Trusts, 6 I. Jur. 197. (R.)

1. The legal estate of a mortgage was vested in two trustees, one of whom was out of the jurisdiction. The Court, in order that the mortgage might be re-conveyed to the mortgagor, pursuant to a decree in a foreclosure suit, made an order under the Trustee Relief Act, that the mortgage should vest in the other trustee solely, and directed the costs of the petition to be costs in the suit.—Corker v. Ryan, 3 I. C. R. 562; 6 I. Jur. 288. (R.)

2. A., executrix and trustee of £400, lent them on unauthorised security. D., a solicitor, acted for A. in negotiating the loan. D. was aware of the nature of the fund, and that the loan was a breach of trust. The borrowers were D.'s clients; and he omitted to disclose to A. facts within his knowledge, which showed that the loan was in danger of being lost. About one-fourth of the fund was received by D. for his own use, in part as payment of money previously owed him by the borrowers, and in part as costs and commission in relation to the loan. The entire sum was lost by the insolvency of the borrowers. Held, on a cause petition, filed by the c. q. t., that D., by his conduct, had incurred the liability of a trustee, and was bound to make good the fund.—Alleyne v. Darcy, 4 I. C. R. 199. (C.)

3. When a settlement gives the wife surviving the husband a power to appoint by will, in default of direction, limitation, or appointment by the husband, the legal effect of such provision is, to give the wife a power to appoint, in respect of any portion unappointed by the husband, or not completely or validly appointed by him.

A father, having a power of appointment among all his children, by will, purporting to appoint the whole fund, excluded one child, and appointed a portion of the fund to grandchildren, not objects of the power. Held, that the appointment was valid, so far as it related to the portion of the fund appointed to the children.

But having given other legacies by the will to the children, in whose favour he had appointed—Held, that they were bound to elect in favour of the grandchildren.

Quære—Whether the Court has jurisdiction to decide a question on a petition under the Trustee Relief Act?

Semle—The Court has not jurisdiction, under the Trustee Relief Act, to order service of notice of the petition on parties residing out of the jurisdiction.

The prayer of a petition, and notice thereof, under the Trustee Relief Act, should specify the exact order which is sought for, and the precise portions of the fund which are to be transferred to the several parties entitled to it.—Ex parte Bernard, 6 I. C. R. 133; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (R.)

4. P., by will, executed in Bath, in 1818, gave £1000, in trust, to be placed out at interest of £5 or £6 per cent., and the interest paid to M. for life, with remainder to M.'s daughters. In 1823, P.'s executors invested £1000 Irish in government stock, to meet that legacy. M. received the dividends on the stock, without complaint, up to 1854. Held, that, admitting the devise to be of £1000 British, the personal representative of M. had no right to charge the representatives of P.'s executors with the difference between the dividends paid and the dividends on £1000 British, invested in stock or invested at £5 or £6 per cent.—Hamilton v. H., 7 I. C. R. 516; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 217. (C.)

5. Upon the marriage of J., managing director of a Joint-stock Bank, with E., £10,000 were assigned, upon trust, for E., for life, for her separate use; remainder to J. for life; remainder to the issue of the marriage. The money was in the Bank in the trustees' names; and deposit-receipts for that amount were issued in their favour. The money was immediately paid by the Bank to J.'s brother; and the deposit-receipts, endorsed by only one trustee, were taken up. To one trustee J. then sent an ordinary receipt for the £10,000, which, according to the practice, need not be periodically produced to the Bank. This receipt, signed by the then manager, falsely stated that the money was then in the Bank. Letters, leading to the same conclusion, were afterwards written by J. As each gale of interest fell due, E. sent to the trustees a draft which, when returned signed, was handed by E. to J., by whom the amount was supposed to be received. Twelve years after the money was paid out, the Bank stopped payment. Held, that the Statute of Limitations was not a bar to a suit by one of the trustees to recover the money.—Wheatley v. McDowell, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 285. (C.)

6. By marriage settlement, personal property was assigned upon trust for the separate use of the intended wife for life; remainder for her issue, as therein mentioned; in default of issue, to "transfer the sum to, and to the use of the intended wife, her executors, &c., to and for her and their own use and benefit." Held, that the limitation in default of issue did not create a trust for the separate use of the wife. Part of the fund comprised in the settlement consisted of a life annuity, and a policy of insurance on the life of the c. q. vie of the annuity. There was no direction in the settlement to pay the premiums on the policy; but the trustee paid them out of the income of the settled property, which was payable to the separate use of the wife. Held, that it was the duty of the trustee so to apply the income, and that no lien in favour of the separate estate of the wife was created upon the policy or its proceeds for the amount paid to keep up the policy.—Darcy v. Croft, 9 I. C. R. 19; 4 I. Jur. N. S. 81; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 403. (C.A.)

1. The Court will give advice to trustees, under the 22 & 23 Vic., c. 35, s. 10, in relation to the management of trust property, only while it remains vested in them, and under their control; but not as to any assignment or disposition of it which might render them liable for a breach of trust.—In re Thomas's Trusts, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 299. (C.)

2. G. and H., trustees of a settlement, on solicitation of D., tenant for life of the settlement, lent the trust funds on a security which totally failed. G. was a solicitor. In the transaction, no other solicitor was employed for the lenders, and no sufficient investigation of the title was made. Held, that the trustees were compellable to replace the trust fund.

That, both being solvent, H. was bound to replace one moiety, and G. the other moiety.

That G. was not entitled to be indemnified by the tenant for life, the onus of investigating the title having been cast upon him.

That H. was entitled to be recouped by the tenant for life the amount of his moiety.—French v. Graham, 10 I. C. R. 522. (C.)

3. The Court declined to give any directions as to an investment by trustees, the petition being presented by only one of two trustees, and the Court considering that one trustee could not safely execute the power under which it was proposed to make the investment.—Ex parte Kane, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 354. (R.)

4. The petitioner, a widow, was entitled for life to the income of a fund settled in new £3 per cent. stock, with remainder to her children. The Court ordered the fund to be transferred to Bank of Ireland stock; and that the petitioner should pay the costs of the petition and transfer.—Ex parte Tufnell, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 95. (C.)

5. When a policy of assurance is assigned to a trustee, who, either by express terms or fair construction, has a power to give receipts, the company ought not to refuse payment to the trustee.—Curtin v. Jellicoe, 13 I. C. R. 180. (C.)

IV. 3. Discretionary Powers of. how controlled.

- a. Generally: when controlled by the Court.
- b. When not.

IV. 3. a. Trustees' Discretionary Powers in general: how controlled by the Court.

6. A trustee filed a cause petition to recover portion of the trust property. This petition was dismissed. The trustee was by an order of the Court removed from being trustee. Held, that he could not maintain an appeal from the order dismissing his own petition.—Leach v. Wallace, 9 I. C. R. 147. (C.A.)

7. The discretion of trustees touching the time of sale directed by an instrument to be had "with all convenient speed," can only be exercised in the reasonable hope that the property will increase in value.—Dowell v. D., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 317. (L.E.C.)

IV. 3. b. When Discretionary Powers not controlled by the Court.

8. Stock was vested in two trustees for the benefit of a married woman, with power to lend it on private security at the request of the husband and wife. The wife had a power to appoint: fusil, &c., or when expedient. The husband refused to allow the trustees to let one of them pointed another trustee refused to let of his safety the 1 W. 4, was not with I. E. R. 572; case 7

9. A trustee, being by will invested with an unlimited discretion as to the quantity of estate which he may give to the c. q. t., though he give but a nominal share to one, the Court will not enquire into his reasons for so doing, unless it be alleged that he has been actuated by corrupt or dishonest motives in the distribution.—Boulger v. Smith, 8 I. Jur. 249. (C.)

10. V. bequeathed chattels real, upon trust to permit his grandson to receive the rents for life, and after his death to permit the person who, for the time being, would take by descent as heir male of his grandson, to receive the rents until some such person should attain twenty-one: then to convey the same to such person so attaining twenty-one; but if no such person, then to permit the persons successively who would take as heirs male of V.'s son, to receive the rents until some such person should attain twenty-one, and then to convey to the first such person so attaining twenty-one. At V.'s death his grandson was one of his next-of-kin. He made a lease, not warranted by the leasing power in the will, of part of the lands, to one of the trustees, who was also agent, both to the testator and his grandson, of the property, and took an annuity under the will given to him for his services in that capacity. That lease was expressed to be made partly in consideration of the services rendered by the lessee. In five years after date it was assigned by the son of the lessee to a third person, for a large sum. The eldest son of V.'s grandson had attained twenty-one in his father's life; and upon his father's death set up a representative to the surviving trustee under the will, got a conveyance from him, and brought an ejectment against the assignee of the lease, who filed a bill to restrain him. Held, that although the limitations after the life estate given to V.'s grandson were void as being too remote, yet that the trustee under that will could not take from the tenant for life a lease which was contrary to the terms of that will, and could not be permitted to question the validity of the limitations in it.—Ker v. Lord Dungannon, 4 I. E. R. 348; 1 Dr. & War. 541; 1 Con. & L. 360. (C.)

1. Though trustees, acting under a competent tribunal, are protected, that protection does not extend to persons receiving payment out of a fund for themselves. Though the decision has long been acted on, it is no protection to such persons against the claims of others not bound by it.—Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 I. E. R. 287. (C.)—[See also Richards v. Bayley, 6 I. E. R. 551.]

2. A., a minor, married. On her marriage a settlement was executed, conveying lands to her for life, remainder to her children, and, in default of issue surviving her husband and wife, to the husband in fee. The husband died. A. survived her children. A. married a second husband—her life estate being again settled on herself by the trustee of the first marriage. A. and her husband, subsequently, by an acknowledged deed, conveyed for value their entire interest in the settled lands to her trustees. She subsequently acquired the fee by a voluntary conveyance from the heir of her first husband. Held, on petition by the children of the second marriage against the trustee to set aside his purchase, that their mother having contracted to give a fee was bound to make that contract good out of the subsequently acquired fee; and that as she could not in her life have set aside this deed, neither had her representatives any equity. That the settlement on the first marriage was voidable only, and was confirmed by the settlement on her second marriage.—Jones v. Heard, 5 I. Jur. 325. (C.)

3. On M.'s marriage, in 1826, with R., £1500 charged on the lands of C. and F., belonging to M.'s father, were vested in trustees for the benefit of the children of that marriage. In 1837, those lands, and the lands of T., were upon the marriage of M.'s brother, J., conveyed upon trust for the children of that marriage. J. died in 1842, having by will expressly desired that his children should not be made wards of Court; and having appointed R. as executor, and as guardian of his children's fortune. R. entered into receipt of the rents, &c., of those lands, which, in 1852, were sold in the I. E. Court. R. having been authorised by his trustees to bid at the sale, was declared purchaser of T. for £1850; and by his direction T. was conveyed to the trustees of the first marriage settlement. The conveyance stated that it had been ascertained that £1850 were due to those trustees, and authorised them to retain the purchase-money in discharge thereof. R. appointed the lands to his eldest son, who mortgaged them. The wards of R., after attaining age, filed a petition praying to have the sale of T. set aside; and to have R. declared a trustee for them of T., subject to the charge of £1500. The mortgagees were made parties by amendment. Held, that the sale, though made to R. merely as trustee for his wife and children, could not be sustained, since he was guardian of the property, and that he was a trustee for the minors, subject to the mortgage.—Irwin v. Robertson, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 283. (C.)

V. 2. As Witnesses.

[See PRACTICE XXXVIII, 27, EVIDENCE, WITNESSES, ante, p. 944.]

4. In a marriage settlement of 1812, the husband covenanted with the trustees that his heirs, executors, &c., would, from and after his death, pay to his widow, if she survived him, an annuity of £40, and pay the trustees a sum of £400 for the children of the marriage. The husband became indebted to one of the trustees, who in 1828 entered up a judgment against him for £600, and effected a policy of insurance for a similar amount against the husband's life.

The judgment was subsequently assigned to B., who also became the purchaser of a judgment against the husband in 1834 for £200, on which occasion a policy of insurance had been effected on the life of the husband.

In 1860, the property comprised in the settlement was sold in the L. E. Court. Upon settling the final schedule of incumbrances, a Judge of that Court declared that the jointure of £40 per annum, and the sum of £400 for the children, were entitled to priority over the judgment of 1828, and that the judgment of 1834 had been satisfied by the payment of the amount reserved by the second policy above mentioned. Held, that the trustee was not, as a trustee, disqualified from dealing with the settlor, even though such dealing might have the effect of injuring the provision for the widow and children.—In re M'Kenna's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 239. (C.A.)

VI. TRUSTEES' LIABILITIES.

1. In general.

2. For each other, and for Third Parties.

VI. 1. Trustees' Liabilities in general.

[See also TRUSTEES IV, 2—INVESTMENT OF TRUST FUND.]

5. £4000 were vested in two trustees, in trust to pay the dividends to F., and C. his wife, for life; after the survivor's death, to pay over the principal to the children, in such shares as the tenants for life should appoint. Through misappropriation, £1200 remained unaccounted for by the trustees. The tenants for life, with their children, by a next friend, filed a bill for an account against the trustees, one of whom absconded; the other was arrested under a ne exeat. Held, that though, from the nature of the trusts, none of the c. q. trusts had a present right to any part of the principal, yet the deficit was a debt due in equity, and demandable from the deft., the prisoner, as a defaulting trustee, and sufficed to sustain the writ of ne exeat.—Waller v. Fowler, S. & Sc. 274. (R.)

1. A trustee of separate property of femme covert, without power of anticipation, joining in a lease, for which a fine was paid, and received by a third person—Held, to have committed a breach of trust, though c. q. t. joined in the lease.

Quere—Is the trustee of leaseholds, settled to the separate use of a married woman, bound to see that the head rents are paid; otherwise is he liable as for wilful default, if the premises are evicted for non-payment of rent?—Booth v. Purser, 1 I. E. R. 27. (C.)

2. A trustee of leasehold and of stock appointed A. and B. his executors, and died. They obtained probate, but never acted in the trusts. On their refusal to act, the Court appointed new trustees under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22; the executors undertaking to replace the amount of a breach of trust committed by their testator upon the trust fund.—Muley v. Smith, Long. & T., 241; 3 I. E. R. 497. (E.E.)

3. This Court looks upon the equitable right as if it were the estate; and if the person who has the legal title thinks proper to desert his duty, and abandon the party whom it was his business to protect, this Court will not only compel him to perform his duty, but in the meantime will give to the c. q. t. all the benefit he would have regularly obtained if his trustee had acted properly.—Malone v. Geraghty, 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 263; 2 Con. & L. 235. (C.)—[Affid.: 1 H. Lds. Cas. 81.]

4. If a man, having a fiduciary character in respect of lands, obtain a new interest, that will be bound by the old trust; but, in this case, the Court is asked to go much further, and to hold that what he takes besides the old interest, although in new lands, is bound by the trust, because the new lands are comprised in the same lease with the old lands. There is no such rule in Equity.

If trustees mix up property in an improper manner, so that the trust property cannot be distinguished from their own, they may suffer by their misconduct.—Acheson v. Fair, 3 Dr. & War. 524, 525. (C.)

5. An executor purchased up the legacies of several legatees for sums of money less in amount than the respective legacies. Held, that this transaction could not be sustained.—Barton v. Hassard, 3 Dr. & War. 461. (C.)

6. By marriage settlement, £400, the fortune of the intended wife, were assigned to C. and D. upon trust, to invest it, as soon as conveniently might be, either in some public bank stock or fund, or upon one or more good and sufficient securities, either real or personal, and in such manner as they should in their discretion think fit.

The money was paid to C. alone, who shortly afterwards lent it to J. upon the security of his bond to both the trustees, with warrant of attorney collateral. The interest was regularly paid during J.'s life, but upon his death the security proved worthless, and the trust fund was lost.

In 1842, D. filed this bill against C., and the husband and wife, seeking a declaration that C. was responsible for the breach of trust, and praying that he might be ordered to bring in the £400, and invest them upon the trusts of the settlement.

The husband had been fully aware of the loan, and had concurred in it, and the ptf., though not active in the breach of trust, had become acquainted with all the circumstances of the transaction shortly after its occurrence. The wife was not in any manner implicated in the transaction. Held, that C., though free from any moral blame, was responsible for the consequences of the breach of trust, and was therefore bound to bring in funds sufficient to secure the wife, who had a life estate in the £400, if she survived her husband.—Buckley v. B., Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden. 375. (C.)

7. A husband covenanted to insure his life for £1200, and assign the policy to trustees; and confessed a judgment to them for that amount, to be called in if the policy was not so assigned and kept up. £800, vested in them by the same settlement on similar trusts, were lent by them to the husband on the security of the assignment of a policy of insurance for £800 on his life. No other policy was assigned to them, and no steps were ever taken to enforce the judgment or covenant. In a suit against the trustees after the husband's death—Held, that the proceeds of the policy were not necessarily to be considered as obtained in pursuance of the husband's obligation, but that the trustees might apply them for the purpose for which the policy was really assigned; and that their liability for default in not compelling the husband to insure depended on his ability.

A. having passed his bond and warrant to confess judgment thereon to trustees, was discharged as an insolvent under the 3 G. 4, c. 124, returning them for the amount in his schedule. Judgment was afterwards entered on the warrant by them, and assigned to new trustees on the old trusts, by a deed to which A. was a party. Held, that this was in the nature of a new obligation, and that the judgment was an available security.—Ball v. B., 11 I. E. R. 370. (C.)

8. A testatrix named A. a trustee of part of her personal estate, and appointed him, her son, and X.'s husband executors. The son and X.'s husband alone proved the will, but A. did not disclaim. The son and X. took life interests in the trust fund, to a part of which the ptf. became, by X.'s appointment, entitled. A. had been the testatrix's agent, and acted in the management of the assets under powers of attorney from the executors who proved, and from X., and after the son's death from the surviving executor and X., which authorised him to receive the assets for the uses of the will. On A.'s death the deft., his son and executor, acted under a similar power, and continued to do so after the death of X.'s husband. X. and her husband got possession of the entire assets. Held, that A. and the deft. were responsible as trustees, and could not protect themselves as being agents only.—Montgomery v. Johnson, 11 I. E. R. 476. (C.)

1. Moneys, secured by judgments, the property of the wife, were, by an ante-nuptial settlement, assigned upon trust for her during life, and, if there should be issue of the marriage, upon trusts for their benefit; and, if there should not be issue, then upon trust to permit the wife to dispose of the moneys to such persons as she, whether sole or married, or by any deed or writing, with or without power of revocation, to be by her sealed and delivered in the presence of, or attested by two or more witnesses, should appoint; or, in default of such appointment, gift, or devise, to her next-of-kin under the Statute of Distributions.

There was not any issue. The surviving trustee received a portion of the moneys secured by the judgments, and paid a part thereof to the husband during his life, and the remaining part to the wife after his death. No appointment by deed or writing was ever executed by the wife. Held, that the wife took only a life estate with a general power of appointment; and that, as she never had exercised that power with the solemnities specified in the settlement, the payments to her and to her husband were invalid; and that the trustee was bound to replace the fund for the benefit of the next-of-kin of the wife.—Reid v. Thompson, 2 I. C. R. 26. (C.)

2. The executor of a trustee, having been ordered to invest a sum in stock, to the credit of a cause, and having neglected to do so for two years, during which the funds fell—Held (affirming the Master's order), that he was bound to pay the price of the sum in stock on the day on which he was ordered to invest it, with interest, at £3½ per cent. only, from that day.—Geraghty v. G., 3 I. C. R. 414; 6 I. Jur. 335. (R.)

3. An obligor in a bond, with notice of the trust, appointed one of the two obligees, who were trustees, his executor, and devised his real estate to him, subject to his debts. The executor received personal assets sufficient to pay the bond debt, but wasted them. Held, that the debt was not extinguished, and might be enforced against the real estate of the debtor.—[Richards v. Molony], 2 I. C. R. 1, overruled.—In re Carew, 4 I. C. R. 112. (P.C.)

4. By deed of settlement on the marriage of S. and N., securities for money were assigned to B. and F., on trust to invest the amount of the securities which they might thereafter receive, with the consent of S. and N., on trust for the benefit of S. and N., and their children. F. refused to execute or act under the settlement. The securities were not called in, and the sums due were lost. B., who had executed this settlement, died in 1841. Held, that there was not any specialty debt created against B. or his assets, by his omission to call in the amount due on the securities, there not being any express or implied covenant in the deed that he would call them in; and that, six years from B.'s death having elapsed, the remedy against his assets was barred by the Statute of Limitations.

Mere omission to perform a duty arising out of a deed does not create a liability in the nature of a specialty debt, unless there be in the deed words from which a covenant to perform that duty may be implied.—Newport v. Bryan, 5 I. C. R. 119. (C.)

5. A., the personal representative of the surviving trustee of a judgment, permitted proceedings to revive the judgment to be taken in his name, but afterwards refused to join in any receipt for the money due on foot of the judgment. The c. q. t. of the judgment served on A. a notice, calling on him either to act in the trust, or to resign the trusteeship. A. gave no answer to this notice. On petition filed to remove A., and appoint a new trustee; Held, that A. must pay the costs of the suit.—Wren v. Swanton, 6 I. C. R. 233. (C.)

6. An unregistered judgment of 1847 was, by deed of 1849, assigned upon trusts declared by marriage settlement of equal date. The c. q. t. having wished for some further security, the judgment of 1847 was in 1851 registered as a mortgage against lands belonging to the conuzor, before the passing of the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29. Neither the c. q. t. nor the trustee was aware of the want of proper registration. The judgment was not properly registered until 1854. Held, that the trustee was liable to make good any loss occasioned by the want of due registration of the judgment.—Lester v. L., 6 I. C. R. 513; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 313. (C.)

7. An executor, believing that there would be assets sufficient to pay a legacy, became trustee in, and executed the marriage settlement of the legatee, which recited that she was entitled to the legacy. It was agreed that it should be assigned upon trusts. A suit was afterwards instituted for a breach of trust by the testator, which was still pending, and, if established, would exhaust the assets. Held, that there was an admission of assets prima facie binding on the executor, who was ordered to lodge in Court the amount of the legacy, without prejudice to the executor (the respondent), in the event of there being a decree against him in the suit for a breach of trust by his testator, taking such proceedings as he might be advised to be relieved against the admission of assets.—Chaigneau v. Bryan, 8 I. C. R. 251. (R.)—[Affd.] 10 I. C. R. 172; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 4. (C.A.)

1. A trustee of a marriage settlement, by which funds were settled on trust for the husband and wife successively for life, and after their deaths for their children, paid over nearly the whole fund to the husband, who invested it in the purchase of a terminable leasehold interest, producing an income larger than could be derived from a proper investment. The husband died in 1835. On his death, the trustee paid over the residue of the fund to the wife, who, with knowledge of the circumstances, continued to receive the produce of the leasehold until the term expired in 1852. On her death, her children became, under her will, beneficially entitled to her assets, which were more than sufficient to replace the misapplied fund, and one of them became her personal representative. Held, that, in a suit by the children claiming under the settlement to compel the representatives of the trustee to bring in the misapplied fund, the latter had a right to have an indemnity from the children to the extent of the amount which their mother had received in rents from 1835 to 1852, in addition to the balance paid over to her.—Bentley v. Robinson, 9 I. C. R. 479; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 591. (C.)—[Revd.: 10 I. C. R. 287; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 7. (C.A.)]

2. An executor, believing that there would be assets sufficient to pay a legacy, became trustee in, and executed, the marriage settlement of the legatee, which recited that she was entitled to the legacy. It was agreed that it should be assigned upon certain trusts. A suit was afterwards instituted against the executor for a breach of trust by the testator, which suit, if successful, would exhaust the assets. Held, in a suit by the c. q. t. under the settlement, that there had been an admission of assets, prima facie binding on the executor, who was ordered to lodge in Court the amount of the legacy, without prejudice to his taking such proceedings as he might be advised, to be relieved against the admission of assets, in the event of there being a decree against him in the suit for the breach of trust by his testator.

Semble—Under the circumstances, the executor was conclusively bound.—Chaigneau v. Bryan, 10 I. C. R. 172; s. c., 5 I. Jur. N. S. 4 (C.A.)—[Affirming, 8 I. C. R. 251. (R.)]

3. V., tenant for life of his estate, bequeathed to a trustee, whom he named one of his executors, all rent and arrears of rent which might be due to him at the time of his death, upon trusts; and as to the residue, in trust for minors who were afterwards made wards of Court. He authorised the executor or executors of his will to pay and satisfy any debts owing or claimed to be owing by and from him or his estate, and any liabilities to which he or his estate might be subject; and to accept any compensation or any security, real or personal, for any debt or debts owing to him or his estate; and to allow such time for the payment of any such debt or compensation for a debt, either with or without taking security for the same, as should be reasonable; and also to compromise and compound or submit to arbitration and settle all debts, &c., and generally to act, in relation to the premises in such manner as he or they should think expedient, without being liable for any loss which might be occasioned thereby; and he gave power to his trustee to give receipts, and exempted him from liability for involuntary loss. Held, that the trustee or the executors were not authorised by the will to sell the arrears of rent.—[Affirmed: 13 I. C. R. 137; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (C.A.)]

The executors sold the arrears, which amounted to £49,709. 9s. 6d. to the remainderman, for £20,000, payable in four annual instalments. Held, having regard to the circumstances of the estate, and to the remedies which the executors and the remainderman respectively had to recover the arrears and the accruing rent, that the executors were not chargeable with the entire amount of the arrears recovered by the remainderman.—[Reversed: 13 I. C. R. 137; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (C.)]

The executors having acted improvidently and without the sanction of the Court, were charged with £25,000, the sum for which it would have sanctioned the sale of the arrears at the time when it was made.

Executors are not to be charged with debts which there is reasonable ground for believing they would not have recovered.

Semble—The remainderman should have been a party to a suit to charge the executors of the tenant for life with the arrears of rent sold to him.—Alexander v. A., 12 I. C. R. 1. (R.)—[On appeal, 13 I. C. R. 137; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (C.)]

4. A marriage settlement recited an agreement to settle all the recited properties of the husband upon trust. The operative part omitted two of the denominations. The intended husband, a solicitor, prepared the settlement. C., the lady's brother, a practising barrister, was a trustee; and the petition alleged that he had professionally approved of the draft settlement on her behalf. After the marriage, the husband, in whose possession the settlement unregistered was, mortgaged the omitted lands. It was not proved that C. was aware of the omission before the loss; but, upon learning the husband's dealings with the lands, C. procured from him the settlement, and had it registered. After the husband's death, insolvent, the widow appointed to the son, who sued C., as surviving trustee, to make him liable for the loss resulting from the omission. Held, that C. was not liable.

Semble—A trustee is not liable for non-registration of the trust deed, when his attention has not been called to its non-registration.—Macnamara v. Carey, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 293. (C.)—[Reversed, on appeal, as to non-registration of settlement.]

5. In a marriage settlement, a husband covenanted with his trustees that his heirs, executors, &c., would, from his death, pay his wife a jointure of £40 a-year; and pay them £400 for the benefit of the children, if any. The husband became indebted to one of the trustees, who entered up judgment against him, and insured the husband's life for its amount. Upon sale of the trust property—Held, that the assignee of that judgment was entitled to be placed upon the final schedule of incumbrances in priority to the settlor's wife and children; and that, in considering dealings between a trustee and his c. q. t., the length of time during which the trustee's acts have been acquiesced in, with the knowledge of the c. q. t., is to be taken into account in the trustee's favour.—Ennis v. Smith, Jon. & Car. 400, followed.—In re M'Kenna's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 830. (C.A.)

1. By deed, reciting A.'s title to several real estates, and that on a general settlement of accounts under a deed of submission and an award made thereon, A. had been found indebted to B. on a sum, which was to bear interest at £6 per cent.; and that A. had agreed to grant a rentcharge, to pay off that debt.—A. conveyed those estates to C. for 100 years (if A.'s estate should so long continue), in trust to pay the head rents, and reimburse C. all costs, &c.; and in the next place to pay B., a rentcharge towards payment and satisfaction of his debt; and upon further trust to pay the surplus of the rents to A., who covenanted with C., to pay the rentcharge. The deed also gave C., a power to distrain for the rentcharge; and contained a clause of re-entry; a covenant for further assurance; a covenant to insure the life of the surviving c. q. vie of one of the estates for the benefit of B.; and a proviso that the deed should not prejudice securities which B. held, and which were intended to be collateral; a clause of cesser on payment of the debt by preception of the rentcharge, and a proviso for reduction of the interest on the debt if the gales of the rentcharge were paid within 21 days after they fell due. Held, that the deed created the relation of debtor and creditor as well as that of trustee and c. q. t.; and therefore that B., who had gone into possession, was chargeable, in a redemption suit, with wilful default, although no such case was made by the petition.

That B. was also chargeable with the wilful default of a puisne incumbrancer, who went into possession with his assent.—O'Connell v. O'Callaghan, 15 I. C. R. 81. (R.)

VI. 2. Trustees' Liabilities for each other, and for Third Parties.

2. A judgment creditor filed a bill against the conuzor and prior incumbrancers, without having issued an elegit, or showed that he was entitled to issue it; but charging that the lands of the conuzor were an ample fund for satisfying all incumbrances; and praying a sale, and payment out of the proceeds thereof of his own and all prior charges, or that the lands might be sold subject to prior incumbrances; and did not offer to redeem the prior incumbrances. Demurrer, by a creditor made a debt., whose incumbrance was prior to the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, allowed.

Semble—When several co-trustees are made debts., one of them may demur alone.—Kirwan v. Portarlington, 8 I. E. R. 593. (E.E.)

3. When trustees incur, by reason of their default, a joint liability, which is discharged by one of them, he is entitled to contribution from his co-trustee.

But when that co-trustee had never interfered in the trusts, and circumstances showed that the other trustee had the entire management of them, the Court granted an enquiry as to the amount of contribution to be paid to the petitioner.—Worthington v. Pakenham, 3 I. Jur. 221. (C.)

4. When a trustee, entitled to receive purchase-money, gives an order requiring it to be paid to a person named therein, and acknowledges, in the deed of purchase, the receipt of the money; and when the transaction seems to be within the province of the trustee; and the purchaser has no notice of the breach of trust committed; he is not liable for the misapplication of the money.

Semble—Parties paying money to trustees having power to give receipts, are not bound to pay it into their hands, or into a bank to their credit. A judgment on the receipt of the trustee is sufficient to discharge the person paying.—Burris v. Sheppard, 6 I. Jur. 98. (C.)

5. A. was trustee of a settlement; part of the trust fund being secured by a bond. B., the executor of the obligor, with the assent of A., lent the sum secured by the bond, and all the assets of his testator, on mortgage of an estate, which, in consequence of the depreciation of property at the time, was sold in the I. E. Court for a sum insufficient to reach the mortgage. In a suit by the c. q. t. of the settlement and the legatees of the testator, A. and B. were ordered to bring into Court, in equal shares, the amount secured by the bond; and B. was ordered to bring in the remainder of the assets, without prejudice to any proceeding by A. against B. on foot of the bond. Held, that A. could not in Equity recover from B. the moiety of the sum secured by the bond, which he had paid into Court under the decree.—Montgomery v. Waring, 6 I. C. R. 533. (R.)

6. G. and H., trustees of a settlement, on the solicitation of D., tenant for life of the settlement, lent the trust funds on a security which totally failed. G. was a solicitor. In the transaction no other solicitor was employed for the lenders, and no sufficient investigation of title was made. Held, that the trustees were compellable to replace the trust fund.

That, both being solvent, H. was bound to replace one moiety, and G. the other moiety.

That G. was not entitled to be indemnified by the tenant for life, the onus of investigating the title having been cast upon him.

That H. was entitled to be recouped, by the tenant for life, the amount of his moiety.—French v. Graham, 10 I. C. R. 522. (C.)

VII. TRUSTEES' ACCOUNTS, ALLOWANCES, AND COSTS.

1. Three trustees named in the will of a testator were made debtors to an equity suit, and although in the same interest had answered separately. The Lord Chancellor said that circumstances might justify the debts, in putting in separate answers; and directed the Master, in taxing the costs, to allow to the trustees the costs as of one answer only, unless he should find that any one had properly put in a separate answer, and then to allow his reasonable costs.—Dudgeon v. Corley, 4 Dr. & War. 158. (C.)

2. Costs given to a trustee up to the decree to account only, when his account had been much reduced in the office.—Foxier v. Andrews, 7 I. E. R. 595; 2 Jon. & L. 199. (C.)

3. The rule that a receiver, when he is a party to a cause, shall not have his poundage, applies only to the cases of trustees, executors, owners, and heirs-at-law. Except in those cases, the receiver is entitled to poundage, unless the order of appointment provides that he shall not have it.

A debt, entitled to a reversionary interest, being appointed receiver without any such provision, is entitled to his poundage.—Bevan v. White, 8 I. E. R. 675. (R.)

4. The rule prohibiting a trustee, a solicitor, from charging costs against his c. q. t., considered. Securities containing such charges set aside when the trust deed did not clearly authorise them, notwithstanding letters recognising the right to charge them, and a petition for taxation presented by the c. q. t., the letters having been written, and securities given under influence, and the latter being improvident.

The securities set aside against a purchaser for value from the solicitor, with notice.—Gomley v. Wood, 9 I. E. R. 418; 3 Jon. & L. 678. (C.)

5. An action of covenant was brought against a trustee, who lodged the amount claimed in Court, and filed a bill of interpleader, which was, on demurrer, dismissed with costs. Held, that the trustee was entitled to have the money returned without deducting the costs.—Doyle v. Dumonceil, 11 I. E. R. 517. (R.)

6. A trustee of a church lease expended considerable sums in obtaining renewals and a perpetuity grant, and arranged to purchase the lands in consideration of an annuity to the c. q. t., under an award, in obtaining which there was some concealment, and which though acted on for fourteen years, was never completed. In a suit against the trustee—Held, that the new interest was a graft, and the trustee was bound to account for the entire period.

The cases in which accounts against debtors are limited in point of time, and when not considered.—Lovatt v. Kaape, 12 I. E. R. 124. (C.)

7. W., having made a settlement with a general power of revocation, made a will, by which, after reciting that he had been induced to execute the settlement contrary to his wishes and intentions, and that it was fraudulently and wickedly obtained from him, he directed the trustees and executors of the will to use their best exertions and to take all steps necessary to have the deed set aside and cancelled; and then disposed of the property included in the deed. Held, a good revocation under the power.

In a suit between claimants under a will and an inconsistent deed executed by the testator, the costs are not to be paid out of the assets, on the ground that the difficulty was created by the testator; but are subject to the ordinary rule in adverse suits.

Costs given against a trustee under the trust deed which was held revoked, when he had also a beneficial interest, and insisted on its validity.—Irwin v. Rogers, 12 I. E. R. 159. (C.)

8. A lunatic claimed as heir-at-law of T.; and, estates having been devised by T. to trustees for charitable purposes, by an instrument, the validity of which as a will was impeached, a suit was instituted, and an issue to try the validity of the will directed as necessary for freeing the lunatic's estate from doubts. The trustees were directed to conduct the issue as pffs. The issue was found against the will. Held, that though the trustees were not entitled to their costs under the decree, yet the Court could, upon petition, give them out of the lunatic's estate.—In re Turnley, 12 I. E. R. 581. (C.)

9. When trustees, in good faith, invest on a security not in strictness justified by the instrument creating the trust, but which is practically secure, and from which no loss to the trust fund occurs, they will not be decreed to pay the costs of a suit to compel them to bring in the fund so invested.

In this case the Court refused the trustees their costs, and directed the petitioners' costs to be paid out of the fund.—Fitzgerald v. F., 6 I. C. R. 145; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (C.)

10. A trustee, not charged with interest on balances from time to time retained by him, when it did not appear that he applied them to his own private purposes; and it was necessary, from the nature of the trust, that he should retain the balances for its execution.

When a trustee has acted fairly and bona fide, he will not be deprived of his costs of a suit against him to compel him to account, merely because a claim made by him has been disallowed in the office, and he has been found by the Master to be a debtor on the account, when the claim made against him by the petitioner has been greatly reduced.—Norris v. Duckworth, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 188. (R.)

1. V. devised real estate in trust for her husband for his life, and directed the trustees to sell and convey the property absolutely to him, for a named sum, applicable to the purposes of her will, provided that he declared, within one year after her death, that he accepted the proposal.

Semble—The right of pre-emption to the husband was a gift. The trustees, therefore, were not bound to make out title to him, nor were they entitled to receive, out of V.'s assets, and to the prejudice of the persons entitled to the residue, the costs of making out title.

Solicitors having been employed by the trustees to make out the title, the costs were allowed on taxation against the trustees, personally, under the Solicitors Act (12 & 13 Vic., c. 53), ss. 3, 4.—In re Davison & Torrens, 17 I. C. R. 7. (R.)

VIII. BANKRUPTCY, INSOLVENCY, OR ABSCONDING OF TRUSTEES: GOING ABROAD, OR REFUSING TO CONVEY.

[Powers of the Court in such cases to appoint new Trustees regulated by 13 & 14 Vic., c. 60; 15 & 16 Vic., c. 55, are more fully powers given by 23 & 24 Vic., c. 145, s. 27.]

2. A trustee and executor is not within the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 22.—Clarke v. Wilson, Hay. & J. 424. (E.E.)

3. When an estate in remainder is vested in trustees, with powers of sale, the c. q. trusts are entitled to have the trustees cognizant of the sale, and consulted with reference thereto; but, if they subsequently adopt the sale, and it is acted upon, and the money received under it, the Court will confirm it.—Blackwood v. Burrowes, 2 Con. & L. 459; 4 I. E. R. 609. (C.)

4. When the power to appoint new trustees directed the property to be vested in them, jointly with the surviving or continuing trustee, and the surviving trustee had become bankrupt—Held, that, notwithstanding, a valid appointment of, and transfer of the estate to the new trustee might be made under the power.—In re Roche, 2 Dr. & War. 287; 1 Con. & L. 306. (C.)

5. In petition cases under the Trustees Act, arising from trustees being out of the jurisdiction, the affidavit should state where the trustee is. If he is in England, he must be served.—Ex parte Hughes, 6 I. E. R. 559; 1 Jon. & L. 32. (C.)

6. Semble—That neither bankruptcy nor occasional residence abroad disqualifies a testamentary trustee, to whom the testator has unconditionally confided a large personal discretion in administering the trusts, together with power to appoint a receiver of the rents of the trust estates.—Archbold v. Commrs. of Ch. Don. & Beg., 2 H. L. Cas. 440.—[Rev. 11 I. E. R. 187.]

7. When a new trustee is appointed in lieu of one of two trustees out of the jurisdiction, a third person should be appointed to concur with the continuing trustee in conveying chattels real, the subject-matter of the trust, to the new trustee and continuing trustee, in order to prevent a severance of the joint tenancy.—In re Darley, 6 I. Jur. 41. (R.)

IX. TRUSTEE AND CESTUI QUE TRUST.

1. In general.

2. Lien and Rights of Trustee as against Defaulting Cestui que Trust.

IX. 1. Trustee and Cestui que Trust, generally.

[As to the liability of Trustee for a breach of trust, see also TRUSTEE, II, 2—INVESTMENT OF TRUST FUND, and TRUSTEE, V, 1—PURCHASES BY, &c.]

8. A petition to change the trustees in a settlement ought to be presented by the c. q. t., not by the proposed trustees.—In re O'Dell, Hayes, 257. (E.E.)

9. A trustee, who permitted his c. q. t. to remain in possession of the trust estate, was sued in covenant by the landlord for rent due by the c. q. t. Held, that the trustee was entitled to be repaid the amount of rent advanced by him, in priority to other creditors of the c. q. t., who had obtained a receiver over the trust estate.—Leech v. Mulloy, 1 I. Jur. 50. (R.)

10. When a trustee, at the instance and with the concurrence of one of his c. q. t., invests trust funds in an unauthorised security, whereby loss occurs, the trustee cannot compel the concurring c. q. t. to indemnify him from that loss, unless so far as the c. q. t.'s interest in the trust fund may extend, or unless there be a special contract to indemnify the trustee.—Trafford v. Boehm, 8 Atk. 440, explained.—Browne v. Maunsell, 5 I. C. R. 351. (C.)

11. Personal estate was, by settlement, vested upon trust, for R., a married woman, for life, without power of anticipation; and, if no issue of the marriage, and M., the husband of R., survived her, as R. should by deed or will appoint; if R. survived, for her absolutely. W., acting trustee of the settlement, at the instance of R. applied the settled property in discharge of M.'s liabilities. M. died; and, by R.'s request, the trustee took no steps to realise M.'s assets. R. married again, after the lapse of some years, and in her marriage settlement recited her wish to give credit to W. for all payments made by him at her request, in breach of trust. Held, that R. had lost her right to make the trustee liable for his breaches of trust.—Rutherford v. Maziere, 13 I. C. R. 204; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 210. (C.)

12. M., seized and possessed of real, chattel real, and personal property, including property in N., held for lives renewable, subject to a lease for 99 years from Feb. 1762, devised all her property to R. and H., whom she named her executors, upon trust, to pay annuities; and, subject thereto, devised her property to other persons. The will empowered the trustees and executors to sell and dispose of any portion of the property as they should think fit, for the advantage of the parties interested. M. died in 1819: H. alone proved the will, and obtained a renewal of N. in his own name, as trustee. In 1824, one of the persons beneficially entitled to N. executed a renewed lease at an increased rent, in the preparation of which H. acted as solicitor.

The devised property having become deficient to pay the annuities, the annuitants, about 1844, went into possession and receipt of the rents and profits of all the devised property. On the expiry of the lease of 1762, the annuitants filed their cause petition against the lessees under the lease of 1824, claiming thereby to hold discharged of this lease. Held, that the receipt by the annuitants, from 1844, of the increased rent, did not operate as a confirmation of the lease by them; and that they were entitled to hold discharged from the lease.—Metcalfe v. Ryves, 14 I. C. R. 558; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 405. (C.)

1. Trustees for charity permitted to sell land held under lease, the subject of the trust, though subject to a covenant to expend £3000 in building thereon. The landlord's rights were saved, and the title not forced on an unwilling purchaser, on account of the covenant.—In re The Catholic University, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 250. (R.)

IX. 2. Lien and Rights of Trustee as against Defauling Cestui que Trust.

2. Where the trustee of a fund settled on a husband until insolvency, and then to the separate use of his wife, at the urgent solicitation of the wife committed a breach of trust by lending part to the husband, and he became insolvent, whereupon the wife claimed the whole fund—Held, that the trustee was responsible to her, as during the husband's estate she could not bind the remainder to her separate use.

It is no answer to such a claim that the husband's insolvency was concerted, if that was done merely to evade his debts.—Semble, it would be a defence if the insolvency was concerted for the purpose of calling the wife's estate into existence.—Mara v. Manning, 8 I. E. R. 218; 2 Jon. & L. 311. (C.)

3. A trustee of a marriage settlement, by which funds were settled on trust for the husband and wife successively for life, and after their deaths, for their children, paid over nearly the whole fund to the husband, by whom it was invested in the purchase of a terminable leasehold interest producing an income larger than would be derived from a proper investment. The husband died in 1835. On his death the trustee paid the residue of the fund to the wife, who, with knowledge of the circumstances, continued to receive the produce of the leasehold until the term expired in 1852. On her death, her children became under her will beneficially entitled to her assets, which were more than sufficient to replace the misapplied fund, and one of them became her personal representative. Held, that in a suit by the children, claiming under the settlement, to compel the representatives of the trustee to bring in the misapplied fund, the latter had a right to have an indemnity from the children to the extent of the amount which their mother had received in rents from 1835 to 1852, in addition to the balance paid over to her.—Bentley v. Robinson, 9 I. C. R. 479; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 591. (C.)—[Reversed: 10 I. C. R. 287; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 7. (C.A.)]

4. G. and H., trustees of a settlement, on the solicitation of D., tenant for life of the settlement, lent the trust funds on a security which totally failed. G. was a solicitor. In the transaction no other solicitor was employed for the lenders, and no sufficient investigation of title was made. Held, that the trustees were compellable to replace the trust fund; that, both being solvent, H. was bound to replace one moiety, and G. the other moiety; that G. was not entitled to be indemnified by the tenant for life, the onus of investigating the title having been cast upon him; and that H. was entitled to be recouped by the tenant for life the amount of his moiety.—French v. Graham, 10 I. C. R. 522. (C.)

X. TO PRESERVE CONTINGENT REMAINDERS.

TURBARY, RIGHT OF.

[See also DEED, WORDS—LANDLORD AND TENANT.]

5. A demise of "land, with the bog and mountain thereunto adjoining," does not confer upon the lessees a right to cut turf for sale.—Chatterton v. White, 1 I. E. R. 200. (R.)

6. The words "bogs and turf-mosses," in their primary meaning, and when uncontrolled by the context, signify a particular description of land; and a grant thereof will pass the soil and freehold in such descriptions of land.

An exception of bogs and turf-mosses in a lease is not cut down to signify a reservation of a right of turbary merely, but the fact that the grantor also reserves to himself the right of ingress, egress, and regress, to dig for and carry away the excepted premises.—Boyle v. Olpherts, 4 I. E. R. 241; L. & T. 320. (E.E.)—[See also, Massay v. Gubbins, L. & T. 95.]

7. The Bishop of D., seized in fee in right of his bishopric, demised to J. for twenty-one years, all that territory of land called B., except all royalties, mines, minerals, quarries, and turbaries; with liberty to dig, cut, save, and carry away the same: provided always that J. and his under-tenants actually residing on the premises shall, notwithstanding the reservation or exception of turbaries, be permitted to cut, save, and take as much turf, each year during the demise, as may be sufficient for their firing, to be burned or consumed on the premises; but J., his executors, &c., and his and their under-tenants, shall not by this proviso have any right to cut or save turf for their firing in other parts of the excepted turbaries, but such as shall, from time to time, be marked out for them by the Bishop of D. J. demised part of the lands to I. for twenty-one years, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal, by the description of all that farm in B. which he purchased from R., and then in his possession; excepting and always reserving out of this demise all royalties of what nature or kind soever, as the same are and may be excepted from time to time by the Bishop of D. and his successors, from J., his heirs, and assigns. When this demise was made, I. was in possession of a portion of bog, as part of the farm of B. which he had purchased from R. The estate of J. vested in D., who, in the year 1835, acquired the inheritance in the lands under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37. By the conveyance of the fee, the Bishop of D. granted to him the lands as described in the lease to J., together with "all royalties, mines, minerals, bogs, mosses, and turbaries." The estate of I. vested in his sons, W. and J. I.—W. and J. I. having presented a petition for a conveyance of the inheritance in the lands demised to J., it appeared by the report of the Remembrancer, that during the last fifteen years, D. had used to give to his tenants occupying other portions of the demised lands liberty to cut turf for their own consumption on the portion of bog in the possession of W. and J. I., and that the said under-tenants had cut turf accordingly, without any hindrance by W. and J. I., or the Bishop of D.; and that W. and J. I., and those from whom they derived, had at all times cut turf for their own consumption, and had given permission to such persons as they thought proper to cut turf upon the bog in their possession, without any hindrance by the Bishop of D., J., or D. Held, that the soil of the bog in the possession of J., at the time when the lease was made to him passed to him under that demise.

That the petitioners were entitled to a conveyance of the inheritance in the premises demised by the lease to J.; and there ought not to be therein inserted a covenant that it should be lawful for D., his heirs or assigns, to direct any person residing on the territory of land called B., who had no bog within his holding, to resort to the bog in the possession of W. and J. I., for the purpose of cutting turf thereon; and that the persons so directed might cut and carry away such quantity of turf each year as might be necessary for their own consumption, without any hindrance of W. or J. I., their heirs or assigns.

In the conveyance to the petitioners, the same general words were made use of as were contained in the conveyance from the Bishop of D. to the respondent. See also the case of Dockrill v. Dolan.—Irons v. Douglas, 3 I. E. R. 601. (E.E.)

1. A mere demise of bog, as such, will not give the lessee a right to cut turf for sale, particularly when the demise is of the bog together with other property. But if nothing but bog be demised, and it is not convertible to any other use, same being cut for sale, or if it were at the time of the demise used by cutting it for sale, the lessee may cut turf for sale.—Coppinger v. Gubbins, 9 I. E. R. 304; 3 Jon. & L. 397. (C.)

2. Demise of a part of the lands of L., together with the bog in the possession of the lessee, situated in the bogs of L. and R. The lessee was in possession of part of the bog of R., in which he had cut turf for his own consumption, but not for sale. Held, that the lease did not confer a right to cut turf for sale on the bog of R.—Fowler v. Blakeley, 13 I. C. R. 58. (R.)

3. A house, garden, and parcel of land were demised in 1810. The lands were situated in a large district of bog, where the inhabitants supported themselves by the turbary, and had been used for upwards of 40 years as turbary. A portion of the lands had been reclaimed and cultivated by the tenant. The Court restrained the tenant from cutting turf for sale on that portion of the lands which was devised as "garden," but dissolved the injunction as to the remainder of the lands.—Stevenson v. Moore, 7 I. C. R. 462. (R.)

4. J. obtained a Crown grant of 111 acres profitable land in M., with all pasture, turbary, bogs, mountains, to the said premises belonging, or in anywise appertaining. K. and F. obtained similar grants of lands in M. B. obtained a subsequent grant of "one quarter of lands in M., containing 184 acres profitable land, and also a parcel of bog in common unto the above lands, called C., containing 236 acres."

In the Book of Distributions, C. was described as "bog in common to M., 236 acres." C. was, from time immemorial, used for pasture and turbary by the tenants of all portions of M. Held, on petition for partition, that the representatives of J., K., F., and M. were tenants in common of C.

The Book of Distributions is admissible evidence in points relating to property derived from the Crown, under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, at least when the original survey cannot be produced.

Decree for partition, with a reference to the Master to ascertain shares.—Knox v. Mayo, 7 I. C. R. 563; Dr. Rep., temp. Napier, 225. (C.)

1. The circumstances that the re-payment of the purchase-money of an annuity is secured by an insurance on the grantor's life, and that he has covenanted to pay the premiums, do not bring a case within the Usury Statute.—Manly v. Hawkins, 1 Dr. & Wal. 363. (C.)

2. It is a defence to a suit instituted to raise the arrears of a rentcharge, that it was granted upon a usurious consideration; and it is not necessary that the debt should file a cross-bill to impeach it.

The Statute of Usury may be pleaded to a suit in equity; and, if so, it may be relied on as a defence in the answer.—Moker v. Birmingham, 6 I. E. R. 6. (E.E.)

3. Quere—Whether an annuity for a term of years certain, which will, within the term, repay the purchase-money, and more than legal interest upon it, is usurious?—Kenny v. Lynch, 8 I. E. R. 207. (C.)—[See s. c., 9 I. E. R. 530; 2 Jon. & L. 819. (C.)]

4. It was agreed between A., B., and C., that B., in consideration of money, should surrender his lease to C.; that C. should make a new lease to A.; and that A. should sub-demise it to B., at a rent equal to £9 per cent. on the consideration money. Semble, the agreement is not void for usury.—Dowling v. Legh, 9 I. E. R. 413; 3 Jon. & L. 716. (C.)

5. The owner of a leasehold for fifty years unexpired, in consideration of £300, granted an annuity of £45, charged on the leasehold, and assigned the latter to secure the annuity. The annuitant covenanted, at any time on payment of £300, and on getting six months' notice, to reconvey. Held, an usurious transaction.—Kenny v. Lynch, 9 I. E. R. 530. (C.)—[But see Wade v. Williamson, 2 I. C. R. 299. (C.)]

6. A bond, with warrant of attorney to enter judgment, though there be a contemporaneous agreement to pay interest at £12 per cent. for the sum secured, is not void for usury within the exception in the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 37, s. 1, if the debtor has not lands on which the judgment can attach.—Baker v. Allen, 10 I. E. R. 226. (R.)

7. When, in consideration of £200, an annuity of £25 was granted out of premises held for a term of years, during which that sum of £200 and legal interest might be more than repaid by receipt of the annuity; and the deed empowered the grantor to re-purchase the annuity on payment to the grantee of £200, and the arrears of the annuity; Semble—that such a transaction was not usurious.

Semble also, that the decision in Kenny v. Lynch, 9 I. E. R. 530, cannot be upheld.—Wade v. Williamson, 2 I. C. R. 299. (C.)

I. VENDOR AND PURCHASER GENERALLY: PAYMENT OF THE PURCHASE-MONEY.

1. Two judgments of 1797 were obtained against one seized of the lands of B. and S. B. was sold in the I. E. Court, on the petition of a mortgagee of 1845; and, the proceeds of the sale being insufficient to pay the mortgage, an issue was directed by that Court to try whether the judgments had been paid. A verdict found that they had not been paid. The mortgagee was thereupon directed by the Court to pay the sum due on the judgments, and they were assigned to a trustee for her. Held, that the judgments were sub-sisting charges against S., and were not barred by the Statute of Limitations.—Morris v. Herbert, 9 I. C. R. 327. (R.)

2. A purchaser from a lessor, who is bound to grant a renewal, is entitled to those renewal fines only which accrued after his purchase.—De Veaux v. Mara, 15 I. C. R. 16. (R.)

II. ENFORCING CONTRACT BETWEEN: GENERALLY, OR ON CONDITIONS. See post, IX.

1. When and on what Grounds enforced.
2. When not.

II. 1. Enforcing Contract between: Generally, or on Conditions: When and on what Grounds enforced: When not.

3. In Equity there is a marked distinction between what is necessary to resist a suit for specific performance of a contract, and a suit founded on a contract executed.—Vigors v. Pike, 8 Cl. & F. 645.

4. A. and B. entered into a verbal treaty for the purchase of premises belonging to A. Being unable to agree on the price, A. wrote to C. that he would take from B. a named sum for the premises, reserving a small part thereof for his sister, if C. approved. B. lodged that sum with C., of which lodgment C. made a memorandum on A.'s letter, adding the remark, that it was "a great price." Held, that C. must be deemed A.'s agent; and that, since C. had signed the contract acknowledging the receipt of the purchase-money, A. was bound to perform the agreement.

Semble—The signature of the party to be bound satisfies the Statute of Frauds, so as to enable the Court to enforce specific performance.—Field v. Boland, 1 Dr. & Wal. 37. (C.)

5. The purchaser of an estate pur autre vie, sold under a decree of the Court of Ch. was Held, not entitled to be discharged from his purchase when the sole c. q. v. died after the bidding, and before the Master's report could have been confirmed.

In sales under the Court, the purchaser's title relates back to the time of the bidding, as in other sales it relates back to the time of the contract.—Vesey v. Elwood, 3 Dr. & War. 74; 2 Con. & L. 47. (C.)—[Affg. 5 I. E. R. 184; Fl. & K. 668. (R.)]

6. A., entitled to lands in fee, granted annuities out of them to B., to secure moneys advanced by him. A. subsequently agreed to sell the lands to C., in order to redeem with the purchase-money a leasehold interest under eviction, representing to him that B. would join in the conveyance. A. executed the conveyance to C., but he refused to allow A. to get the purchase-money until B. would discharge the lands of the annuities, which B. refused to do unless he were paid off. A. subsequently sold the lands to C., who had notice of the prior deed. On a bill filed by C., to set aside the sale to B., Held, that by C.'s conduct the contract was incomplete, notwithstanding that the deed was executed; and that A. had a full right to sell to another.—Leader v. Ahurne, 4 Dr. & War. 495; 2 Con. & L. 534. (C.)

7. A purchase upheld, which was agreed to on the vendor's death-bed, in consideration of an annuity for his life, the vendee having afterwards acquired the legal estate, and the agreement having been in pursuance of a contract made out by letters written some months before the final agreement.—Barry v. O'Grady, 9 I. E. R. 550. (C.)

8. A., being in prison as an insolvent, assigned to B. a leasehold interest, for a sum which discharged all A.'s debts, including debts to B. and head rent, but was less than the value. The deed purported to be an absolute sale, but there was an endorsement that if A. paid B. upon a day named the purchase-money, and costs, and all expenses of cropping the farm, B. would re-assign the lands, and the deed should be void. B. also a few days after gave a bond to surrender the premises if paid on the day. The same attorney acted for both parties. Held, that the transaction was a mortgage and not a conditional sale.—Fee v. Cobine, 11 I. E. R. 406. (C.)

9. In and previously to 1853, J. was indebted to S. by simple contract. At that time J. was possessed of considerable farming stock and household furniture, and of a judgment for £2500, and of leaseholds; he was also seized of a freehold interest in the lands of D. The leaseholds and freeholds were subject to a charge in favour of his sister H. J. was indebted to his sister M., and, in Jan. 1853, assigned to her his farming stock, at a valuation, in part payment of the debt. By deed of the 25th of May 1853, he conveyed to her his interest in D. for £600; and by another deed assigned the judgment. By deed of the 28th June 1853, he mortgaged the leaseholds and household furniture to M. to secure £3200. This mortgage was to be redeemable on the 28th June 1856, and contained a provision that M. should not, when in possession of the lands, be charged with a greater sum than £150 per annum; and that if J. died before the period of redemption, without paying off the sum due, the right to redeem should be at an end. By deed of the 7th Jan. 1854, J., in consideration of the charge in favour of H., conveyed his equity of redemption to a trustee for her. This purported to be an absolute conveyance, but contained a provision that it should not prejudice the charge. S. obtained a judgment against J. on foot of his demand, on the 29th of April 1854, and registered an affidavit of ownership against J. S. afterwards filed a petition charging that those deeds were executed with intent to defeat and delay creditors; that the property of J., was, if duly applied, sufficient to pay the claims of M. and H., and also the petitioner's debt; and that the whole sum of £3200 was not due from J. to M. The petition prayed that the assignments and conveyance might only stand as a security for so much as was actually due to M., and prayed redemption of the mortgage. M., by her answering affidavit, relied on an account settled by J., on the 28th June 1853, and relied on the conveyance of D. as an absolute sale for £600. Affidavits in reply were filed by the petitioner, alleging that J. was worth more than £3000. Held, that the petitioner was not, as claiming under J., bound by the account settled by him, but that not having impeached them by his petition, they were to be treated as binding on him.

That the Court could not allow the conveyance to be conclusively supported as a purchase for value against a creditor, by the fact of payment of the £600.

That the petition having been filed before the period for redemption arrived, the prayer for redemption of the mortgage could not be sustained.—Staunton v. Donohoe, 4 I. C. R. 554; 7 I. Jur. 37. (C.)

II. 2. When not.

2. An auctioneer in the country set up a property for sale, first in lots; then part of it in batches of some lots together; then the whole at once. He stated that he would receive biddings, and that the Master would declare the purchaser. C. was the highest bidder for a batch of some lots, and afterwards for the whole. Held, that he was not entitled to be discharged from his bidding for the lots, though he was misled by the mode of selling, and meant to bid for the entire.—O'Grady v. Brady, 11 I. E. R. 400. (C.)

3. Letters patent, under which lands sold by private contract were held, contained covenants by the grantee—first, that he would place three free tenants of English or British race, blood, or name on the premises, each of whom should have 50 acres; or one free tenant, who should have 100 acres for one life; secondly, that he should have on the premises eight cullivers or muskets, and a proper number of arms to arm eight pikemen for his defence against rebels, &c.; thirdly, a proviso, that if he should demise any part of the premises to the mere Irish for any term exceeding forty-one years or three lives, or if he should demise the premises, limited to be disposed of to any British or English person, to any person being mere Irish, the Crown might re-enter. The particulars of sale described the lands as a valuable fee-simple property, and one of the conditions of sale alluded to the letters patent. It appeared from a statute (10 Car. 1, sess. 3, c. 3), and public documents therein referred to, that the covenants were those inserted in patents at the plantation of Ulster, where the lands were situate. Held, that the purchaser, having express notice of the letters patent, was bound by constructive notice of the covenants contained in them.

That the first and third covenants were no longer in force; every subject of the Crown since the Union being a person of British race, name and blood, and there being no person now answering the description of mere Irish.

Semble—The second covenant could not be now enforced by the Crown.

By marriage articles, the husband agreed to settle out of the lands of K., in failure of A., his daughter by a former marriage, a jointure on his intended wife, the remainder of the lands on the issue male begotten on the wife; and in failure of issue male, on the issue female; and if A. survived and K. should not be made good, that then K., which was not settled on the former marriage, should be subject to the jointure, and be settled on the eldest son of the marriage; and in failure of the son, on the daughters of the marriage. There was no male issue, but female issue, B., C., and D. Held, that K. should be settled on them as tenants in common in tail.

No settlement was executed, and the lands descended to A., B., C., and D., subject to the trusts of the articles in 1763, when B., C., and D. went into possession. In 1783 they levied a fine, and conveyed to a purchaser for value, and covenanted that they were seized in fee. There were several subsequent conveyances for value. In 1847 the lands were contracted to be sold. Held, in a suit for specific performance against the purchaser, that the legal title of A. and her heirs to one-fourth of the lands was barred by the Statute of Limitations, as a Court of Law would not notice the executory trusts of the articles, and the several conveyances operated as disseizins.

Semble—The equitable title of the heir of A., on failure of issue of B., C., and D. was also barred.

Held, that as a fine created no discontinuance in equity, the title was too doubtful to be forced on the purchaser.

A conveyance of all her estate, &c., was obtained from the devisees of the heir-at-law of A., and was held to put an end to the objection; for although the reversion belonged to the heir of the settlor, he must trace title through the daughters, and all their right was extinguished by this conveyance and the fine.

A recovery was suffered by a tenant for life, and remainderman in tail in 1781. The record stated that the tenant to the præcipe called to warranty the tenant for life, who appeared by his attorney, and warranted the tenant in tail, who appeared in person. Held, that the recovery was valid, though the record did not state a summons to warranty, nor a warrant of attorney to authorise the appearance for the tenant for life.

After exceptions allowed to the Master's report of good title in a suit for specific performance, the practice is not to discharge the purchaser, but at the request of the ptf. to refer it back to the Master to review his report, and enquire whether a good title can be made to the lands.

A purchaser relied on the memorial of a deed as creating an objection to the title, and succeeded on an exception founded on it. Held, that he could not afterwards object that the deed itself was not produced, although there was no condition of sale to dispense with its production.

The particulars of sale stated that the timber on the estate would be included in the purchase. Title was not made out to the timber on a very small portion of the lands. There being no misrepresentation, the Court referred it to the Master to enquire whether the timber on that portion was material to the possession and enjoyment of the estate.—Stewart v. The Marquis of Conyngham, 1 I. C. R. 534. (R.)

1. The purchaser of lands by auction signed a memorandum of agreement, annexed to the conditions of sale, stating the purchase, and that the vendee paid into the hands of the vendor £300 deposit. The name of the vendor did not appear, either in the conditions of sale, or upon the face of the agreement. Subsequently the purchaser served a notice on the solicitor of the vendor that "unless a clear and satisfactory title was made of the lands sold to him, within a week, he would consider his contract at an end, and take proceedings to recover the money paid by him to Mr. Irvine." In several communications in writing, the name of the vendor was fully disclosed. Held, that these communications might be connected with the memorandum of agreement signed by the purchaser; and, taken together, constituted a sufficient note in writing, binding both parties under the Statute of Frauds, although neither the original agreement nor the conditions of sale contained the name of the vendor.—Irvine v. Deane, 2 I. Jur. 209. (C.)

2. In July 1859, a final award ascertained the price of lands taken by a Ry. Co., which did not go into possession, and whose power to take lands expired in July 1863. On a summary petition presented under the Railways Act (Ir.) 1851, the Court refused to compel the Company to lodge the purchase-money.

Semble—Even in a suit for specific performance, the Court will not compel a Company, who have not been in possession of the lands, and whose compulsory powers have expired, to pay the purchase-money, though the final award was made before their powers had expired. In such a case the Court will leave the seller to his remedy.—In re Cork and Youghal Ry. Co., ex parte Harnett, 16 I. C. R. 268. (R.)—[Revd. in the Court of C. A.]

3. Trustees for a charity permitted to sell land held under lease; the land being the subject of the trust; and though the lease contained a covenant by them to expend thereon £3000 in building, the landlord's rights were saved; and, because of the covenant, the title was not forced on an unwilling purchaser.—In re The Catholic University, 11 I. 4. A purchaser under a decree is entitled to the rents of the purchased lands from the gale day next preceding payment of the purchase-money into bank, and to have all outgoings cleared off up to that day.—Montgomery v. Cosslett, 2 Jones, 174. (E.E.)

5. The title of the purchaser and his liability refer back to the date of the contract. Semble—That if the subject of the contract become diminished in value after that period, and before conveyance executed, the loss will be his.—Vincent v. Going, 3 Dr. & War. 73.—[Rev. 3 I. E. R. 480; Fl. & K. 250. (R.)]

6. A. in 1838 agreed to sell to B. lands B. to pay £6000 of the purchase-money at once, and the rest by the 1st of Jan. 1839, on a good title being made out; B. to get possession of L., part of the lands, on the 1st of May 1838, subject to any question of title; the abstract to be delivered on the 1st Nov. 1838, and a good title made out to the satisfaction of B.'s counsel in a month after; B. to execute the conveyance on the 1st of Jan. 1839; and if a good title were not made out by the 1st of Feb. 1839 (which was expressly fixed as of the essence of the contract), B. to be discharged from his purchase. B. paid the £6000 and entered into possession of L., and before

Jan. 1839 requested A. not to press the contract, as he was not in a condition to pay the balance. At the request of B., A. deferred to furnish the abstract until 1844. In August 1845, B. furnished requisitions for searches. The discussion on the title continued until June 1847, when B. stated that he considered himself no longer bound, unless his objections were satisfactorily answered in a month. A. then furnished what he relied on as satisfactory evidence of the point in dispute, and declined to give further searches; and in March 1848 filed the bill for specific performance. Held, that though time was originally of the essence of the contract, it was waived by the conduct of the parties. That B.'s right to give notice to rescind the contract could not arise until July 1847, and that the bill was filed within a reasonable time after. That the retention of L. by B. was inconsistent with the rescinding of the contract.—The satisfaction of counsel means reasonable satisfaction. Gordon v. Mahony, 13 I. E. R. 388. (C.)

1. The lessee under a lease containing a covenant against assignment, agreed to assign his interest under the lease. On a petition by the purchaser, for specific performance, the respondent alleged that the assent of the lessor to the assignment could not be obtained. Held, that a Court of Equity could not give any relief to the purchaser.—Meara v. M., 8 I. C. R. 37. (C.)

III. 2. Consequences of Delay.

- a. Payment of Interest on Purchase-money.

2. The purchaser of a reversion expectant on a lease for lives must pay interest on the purchase-money from the day on which the Master reports that a good title could have been made by the vendor, to the time of payment.—Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 2 Dr. & War. 43; 1 Con. & L. 181. (C.)

8. Bill to raise an annuity. Answer, by purchaser of part of the lands charged, claiming to be exonerated from paying it. Upon motion for a receiver, ptf. relied on an affidavit, showing that, to obtain payment of the arrears, a receiver must be appointed over the sold lands. The order of reference directed the Master to appoint the receiver over part of the lands sufficient to pay the annuity.—Bonyng v. Colgan, 2 I. Jur. 156. (R.)

4. A purchaser served notice on the vendor that, unless a good title was made within one week, he would consider the contract at an end, yet continued negotiations, and did not appear to finally abandon the contract until about a month before the vendor filed his bill for specific performance. Held, that the purchaser's acquiescence in the proceedings taken after the service of the first notice, prevented his relying on unreasonable delay, so as to disentitle the vendor to maintain his bill.—Irvine v. Deane, 2 I. Jur. 201. (C.)

III. 2. b. Investment of Purchase-money: who is to have the Benefit, or bear the Loss of Investment.

5. A sum, not exceeding the interest of the purchase-money, or the rents of the estate, paid to the purchaser, when the money had been lodged three years, but the title had not yet been completed.—Piers v. P., 11 I. E. R. 358. (R.)

6. A R. Co., needing lands for the construction of their railway, served, in Nov. 1846, a notice to treat upon the owners of the legal estate in the lands; but the parties not having come to any arrangement in pursuance of that notice, the Company, in May 1847, proceeded by inquisition before the sheriff and a jury; and a verdict was then given for sums for purchase-money and compensation. Afterwards, in the same month, the Company went into possession of the lands. In March 1848, an abstract of the title of the owners was furnished to the Company; and from that period up to Jan. 1851, a correspondence took place between the respective parties, partly relating to title, and partly to a claim made by the owners for interest upon the purchase and compensation moneys. Eventually, the Company refused to pay interest, and in Jan. 1851 lodged the purchase-moneys in the Bank of Ireland to the credit of all persons interested in the lands. A cause petition having been filed by the owners, praying a specific performance, and interest at the rate of £5 per cent. upon the purchase and compensation moneys, from the period at which the Company took possession of the lands up to the time of the lodgment of those moneys in Bank; Held, that the ordinary relation of vendor and purchaser existed between the parties.

That the owners were entitled to the interest as prayed for.—Blount v. Gt. S. & W. Ry. Co., 2 I. C. R. 40. (C.)

On a summary petition presented under the Railways Act (Ir.) 1851, the Court refused to compel the Company to lodge the purchase-money.

Semble—Even in a suit for specific performance, the Court will not compel a Company, who have not been in possession of the lands, and whose compulsory powers have expired, to pay the purchase-money, though the final award was made before their powers had expired. In such a case the Court will leave the seller to his remedy.—In re Cork and Youghal Ry. Co., ex parte Harnett, 16 I. C. R. 268. (R.)—[Rev'd. in the Court of C. A.]

3. Trustees for a charity permitted to sell land held under lease; the land being the subject of the trust; and though the lease contained a covenant by them to expend thereon £3000 in building, the landlord's rights were saved; and, because of the covenant, the title was not forced on an unwilling purchaser.—In re The Catholic University, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 250. (R.)

III. RIGHTS OF VENDOR AND PURCHASER BETWEEN THE MAKING OF THE CONTRACT AND ITS COMPLETION: CONSEQUENCES OF DELAY.

1. In general; as to Deterioration of the Property.
2. Consequences of Delay.
 - a. Payment of Interest on Purchase-money.
 - b. Investment of Purchase-money; who is to have the Benefit, or to bear the Loss of the Investment.

III. 1. Generally, of the Rights of Vendor and Purchaser between the Making of the Contract, and its Completion: Consequences of Delay.

4. A purchaser under a decree is entitled to the rents of the purchased lands from the gale day next preceding payment of the purchase-money into bank, and to have all outgoings cleared off up to that day.—Montgomery v. Cosslett, 2 Jones, 174. (E.E.)

5. The title of the purchaser and his liability refer back to the date of the contract. Semble—That if the subject of the contract become diminished in value after that period, and before conveyance executed, the loss will be his.—Vincent v. Going, 3 Dr. & War. 75.—[Rev'd. 3 I. E. R. 480; Fl. & K. 250. (R.)]

6. A. in 1838 agreed to sell to B. lands, B. to pay £6000 of the purchase-money at once, and the rest by the 1st of Jan. 1839, on a good title being made out; B. to get possession of L., part of the lands, on the 1st of May 1838, subject to any question of title; the abstract to be delivered on the 1st Nov. 1838, and a good title made out to the satisfaction of B.'s counsel in a month after; B. to execute the conveyance on the 1st of Jan. 1839; and if a good title were not made out by the 1st of Feb. 1839 (which was expressly fixed as of the essence of the contract), B. to be discharged from his purchase. B. paid the £6000 and entered into possession of L., and before

Jan. 1839 requested A. not to press the contract, as he was not in a condition to pay the balance. At the request of B., A. deferred to furnish the abstract until 1844. In August 1845, B. furnished requisitions for searches. The discussion on the title continued until June 1847, when B. stated that he considered himself no longer bound, unless his objections were satisfactorily answered in a month. A. then furnished what he relied on as satisfactory evidence of the point in dispute, and declined to give further searches; and in March 1848 filed the bill for specific performance. Held, that though time was originally of the essence of the contract, it was waived by the conduct of the parties. That B.'s right to give notice to rescind the contract could not arise until July 1847, and that the bill was filed within a reasonable time after. That the retention of L. by B. was inconsistent with the rescinding of the contract.—The satisfaction of counsel means reasonable satisfaction. Gordon v. Mahony, 13 I. E. R. 383. (C.)

1. The lessee under a lease containing a covenant against assignment, agreed to assign his interest under the lease. On a petition by the purchaser, for specific performance, the respondent alleged that the assent of the lessor to the assignment could not be obtained. Held, that a Court of Equity could not give any relief to the purchaser.—Meara v. M., 8 I. C. R. 37. (C.)

III. 2. Consequences of Delay.

- a. Payment of Interest on Purchase-money.
- b. Investment of Purchase-money: who is to have the Benefit, or bear the Loss of the Investment.

III. 2. a. Consequences of Delay.

2. The purchaser of a reversion expectant on a lease for lives must pay interest on the purchase-money from the day on which the Master reports that a good title could have been made by the vendor, to the time of payment.—Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 2 Dr. & War. 43; 1 Con. & L. 181. (C.)

3. Bill to raise an annuity. Answer, by purchaser of part of the lands charged, claiming to be exonerated from paying it. Upon motion for a receiver, ptf. relied on an affidavit, showing that, to obtain payment of the arrears, a receiver must be appointed over the sold lands. The order of reference directed the Master to appoint the receiver over part of the lands sufficient to pay the annuity.—Bonyng v. Colgan, 2 I. Jur. 156. (R.)

4. A purchaser served notice on the vendor that, unless a good title was made within one week, he would consider the contract at an end, yet continued negotiations, and did not appear to finally abandon the contract until about a month before the vendor filed his bill for specific performance. Held, that the purchaser's acquiescence in the proceedings taken after the service of the first notice, prevented his relying on unreasonable delay, so as to disentitle the vendor to maintain his bill.—Irvine v. Deane, 2 I. Jur. 201. (C.)

III. 2. b. Investment of Purchase-money: who is to have the Benefit, or bear the Loss of Investment.

5. A sum, not exceeding the interest of the purchase-money, or the rents of the estate, paid to the purchaser, when the money had been lodged three years, but the title had not yet been completed.—Piers v. P., 11 I. E. R. 358. (R.)

6. A R. Co., needing lands for the construction of their railway, served, in Nov. 1846, a notice to treat upon the owners of the legal estate in the lands; but the parties not having come to any arrangement in pursuance of that notice, the Company, in May 1847, proceeded by inquisition before the sheriff and a jury; and a verdict was then given for sums for purchase-money and compensation. Afterwards, in the same month, the Company went into possession of the lands. In March 1848, an abstract of the title of the owners was furnished to the Company; and from that period up to Jan. 1851, a correspondence took place between the respective parties, partly relating to title, and partly to a claim made by the owners for interest upon the purchase and compensation moneys. Eventually, the Company refused to pay interest, and in Jan. 1851 lodged the purchase-moneys in the Bank of Ireland to the credit of all persons interested in the lands. A cause petition having been filed by the owners, praying a specific performance, and interest at the rate of £5 per cent. upon the purchase and compensation moneys, from the period at which the Company took possession of the lands up to the time of the lodgment of those moneys in Bank; Held, that the ordinary relation of vendor and purchaser existed between the parties.

That the owners were entitled to the interest as prayed for.—Blount v. Gt. S. & W. Ry. Co., 2 I. C. R. 40. (C.)

IV. OF THE TITLE.

1. Generally.
2. When Purchaser must Accept it.
3. When not bound to Accept it.
4. By Assignees in Bankruptcy, &c.; and under Trusts to Sell.
5. When Title is not made out until after the Contracts, or after Institution of the Suit.

IV. 1. Of the Title generally.

7. The Court will not make it a condition of sale of an interest under a lease, that a purchaser shall not be at liberty to object to the lessor's title to grant the lease; but will direct that the purchaser shall not require ptf. to show that the lessor had such power, leaving the purchaser free to object aliunde.—Willis v. Latham, S. & Sc. 441. (R.)

1. A purchaser, having lodged one-fourth of his purchase-money, refused to lodge the remaining three-fourths unless the abstract of title was first delivered to him. No report of good title had been obtained. The ptf. moved that the lands be re-sold, and the one-fourth forfeited. Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to the abstract, and that the one-fourth could not be forfeited; no report of good title having been obtained.

Semble—If that report had been obtained, the proper motion would have been, that the lands be re-sold; the one-fourth to remain as a security to indemnify the estate from all loss and costs attending the re-sale.—Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 189. (R.)

2. Construction of a contract to sell a leasehold estate: whether the contract was, to sell the vendor's interest, whatever it might be; or, that a good title to the leasehold estate should be made out?

Under a contract to make out a good title to a lease for lives renewable for ever, the vendor must show who were the lives existing when the contract was made.—Anderson v. Higgins, 1 Jon. & L. 718. (C.)

3. Recognizances conditioned for the due accounting of a receiver are not within the 2 G. 1. When recognizances of this description are searched for and found, it is not sufficient to satisfy the purchaser that twenty years have elapsed, and no payment has been made, or proceeding taken during that period; whereas, if that were a sufficient answer, there is no doubt that it would be relied on as an answer to the purchaser's objection; because it would be much easier for the vendor to rely on that, in many cases, than to procure the recognizance to be vacated; and yet the latter is the course invariably pursued.—Reg. v. Bayley, 4 I. E. R. 146. (C.)

4. Although a purchaser who buys subject to an incumbrance, for payment of which the vendor has bound himself by covenant, is bound to indemnify the vendor against it; yet, in a suit, to which the vendor is not a party, for the recovery of that incumbrance out of the estate, the Court will not, in his absence, compel the purchaser to pay more than six years' arrears.

It is too late now to dispute that a purchaser buying, subject to incumbrances, is bound as the seller was, and that he is bound to indemnify the seller against those incumbrances, subject to which he took.—Kyme v. Dignam, 4 I. E. R. 652. (C.)

5. Form of order to the Master to deliver title deeds and documents to the ptf.'s solicitor to be deposited in the Bank of Ireland for the benefit of the several purchasers under the decree; and allowing the purchaser to compare copies with the original deeds.—Cunningham v. Hume, 6 I. E. R. 76, n. (R.)

6. A condition of sale, that the purchaser shall not be at liberty to investigate the lessor's right to grant a lease for lives renewable for ever, decreed to be sold, will not be allowed; but the Court will refer it to the Remembrancer to settle a condition of sale, that the purchaser shall not require the vendors to produce the lessor's title.

A vendor will be relieved from the liability of verifying the abstract of title only by proper evidence, by stipulations expressed in plain, clear, and unambiguous language.—Lahey v. Bell, 6 I. E. R. 122. (E.E.)

7. Observations on a vendor's duty in preparing particulars of the estate to be sold.—Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 351; 3 Jon. & L. 496. (C.)—[See 9 I. E. R. 44; 8 I. E. R. 147. (R.)]

8. R., occupier of premises, agreed to give them up to a company for a sum; but afterwards—stating that another person also had an interest in them—refused. The company lodged the money Court to his separate credit. Held, that that lodgment was an admission by the company of his title, and that he was entitled to be paid without a reference.

That the company, having made an insufficient tender, was not entitled to costs; and that R., his proceedings having been mala fide, was not entitled to costs.—In re Ir. S. East. R. Co., 1 I. Jur. 155. (E.E.)

9. A purchaser under a decree objected to the title, but did not appear on the summons to consider the objections. A report of good title was made. He took several objections: they were overruled. Reference to enquire whether he had been put into possession of all the lands. Report, that he was entitled to £60 compensation; which he moved should be allocated to him with costs of the motion and reference.

Cross-motion, that he should pay ptf.'s costs of the reference upon which his objections had been overruled.

The Master certified that there were not grounds to justify those objections.

Order—that the compensation be allocated to the purchaser; but that he should pay the ptf.'s costs.

The Court declared that the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 12, gave the Masters jurisdiction to decide such questions of costs.—Beddy v. Smith, 2 I. Jur. 266. (R.)

10. An agreement "to sell the interest of A. B. in the lands of W.," does not absolve A. B., the vendor, from the necessity of proving his lessor's title.

Nor is there any waiver of that necessity by the mere fact of the vendee having taken possession of the lands before production of the lessor's title.

When an agreement for sale of a leasehold is silent as to the production of the lessor's title, parol testimony is admissible in proof of facts and circumstances constituting a waiver by the vendee of production of the lessor's title.

Semble—That if such a waiver be proved, the Court will declare it to be established although the bill contains no prayer to that effect.—Wright v Griffith, 1 I. C. R. 695; 3 I. Jur. 188. (C.)

1. An agreement by the vendors to let to the vendees, for the term of 61 years, the premises then occupied by the vendors, "as held under A.," does not absolve the vendors from the duty of proving the title of their lessor, A.

And on its appearing that A. was himself only a lessee for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal—Held, that the vendors could not make good title to grant a lease for a term of 61 years.

That the fact of other premises (besides those proposed to be let by the vendors) being comprised in the lease to A., was a fatal objection to the title.

When there is an agreement by a vendor, having a derivative estate in lands, to let them for a term of years; and such an agreement, if carried into execution, would operate not as a lease, but as an assignment of the vendor's estate: Quære—Whether specific performance of the agreement will be decreed against the vendee?—Leatham v. Allen, 1 I. C. R. 688; 3 I. Jur. 73. (C.)

2. A contract for sale of the "lessee's interest" in a lease does not exonerate the vendor from the necessity of proving the lessor's title to grant the lease.—Fennelly v. Anderson, 1 I. C. R. 706; 4 I. Jur. 33. (C.)

3. When a party who had contracted for the sale of lands died before the execution of the conveyance, having by will, before the contract for sale, devised all his real estate to trustees (who took the legal estate) upon trust for A. for life; remainder to B. for life; remainder to C., an infant, in tail; a suit for the completion of the contract having been rendered necessary by reason of the infancy of B., the Court decreed specific performance, with costs of the suit.—Heard v. Cuthbert, 1 I. C. R. 369. (C.)

4. When a purchaser of lands waives his right to have proof of the vendor's title, and a suit for specific performance of the contract is instituted by the vendor, the latter ought, if he wishes to take advantage of the waiver, to put the question in issue by his petition. The point should not be raised by a subsequent affidavit.

As a general rule, each party to a contract for the purchase of lands should employ a separate solicitor; the same solicitor ought not to act for both.—Meara v. Rogers, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 108. (R.)

5. By deed of 1769, A. granted a perpetual yearly rentcharge of £134, payable out of lands held by him for three lives, perpetually renewable. That deed was lost, but it appeared, from a memorial thereof, that A. had granted to B. and C., for the uses mentioned in the deed, a yearly rentcharge of £134, for ever, issuing out of the lands. The rentcharge was paid by the owners of the lands from 1769 down to 1860, when a petition was presented to the L. E. Court for a sale of the rentcharge. Held (overruling a decision of a Judge of the L. E. Court), that the memorial, coupled with evidence of the payment of the rentcharge down to 1860, was sufficient evidence of a perpetual subsisting rentcharge, so as to enable the Court to sell.—In re Harding, 11 I. C. R. 29. (C.A.)

6. A., having made a will, devising all his property to his wife, and having contracted to sell the lands, died. Held, in a suit for specific performance by the purchaser, that the heir-at-law of A. was not a necessary party to the conveyance, as he had no legal estate in the lands, and no equitable estate; and no right to institute a suit to set aside the contract, having regard to the will of A., devising all his property to his wife, who, if the contract was set aside, would be entitled to the lands; and, if the contract was not set aside, would be entitled to the purchase-money.—[Roberts v. Marchant, 1 Ph. 370, explained.]—Fowler v. Lightburne, 11 I. C. R. 495; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 93. (R.)

IV. 2. When the Purchaser must accept the Title.

7. D. being entitled to an undivided moiety of a lease for lives, containing a covenant for perpetual renewal, devised her interest to A. The day after the date of this will a renewal was granted by D. to the deft., who was entitled to the other moiety, and to C., who was supposed to have some interest in the lease. A. having contracted with the deft. to sell his (A.'s) moiety—Held, on a bill by A. for specific performance, that the renewal did not operate in Equity as a revocation of the devise to A. although it admittedly did at Law, and that A.'s was such a title as the Court would compel a purchaser to take.—Poole v. Coates, 2 Dr. & War. 493; s.c., 1 Con. & L. 531; 4 I. E. R. 497. (C.)

8. A purchaser, under a decree, will be compelled to take a title which depends on adverse possession, under the Statute of Limitations, although the fact of such adverse possession is evidenced merely by affidavit in the Master's office, and was not at issue in the suit.

Held, that it was no objection to the title, that the facts constituting adverse possession were proved by affidavit, and in the absence of the heir.—Scott v. Nixon, 2 Con. & L. 185; 6 I. E. R. 8; 3 Dr. & War. 388. (C.)

9. Semble—That when the estate bargained for has been voidable in its creation, it lies upon the purchaser objecting to the title upon that ground to show that it has been avoided.—Massey v. Batwell, 2 Con. & L. 413. (C.)

10. The decree in a suit, to raise charges created by will, directed the sale of lands, the legal estate in which was vested in an adult trustee, in trust for minors. The trustee and

c. g. trusts were parties to the suit. A day to show cause was given to the latter.

A purchaser under the decree was compelled to take the title.—Kirby v. O'Hara, 2 Jones, 635. (E.E.)

1. An estate for life having been sold under a decree, the tenant for life died after lodgment of the purchase-money in Court, and obtaining the rule nisi to confirm the report of the sale, but before the sale was confirmed. Held, that the purchaser must complete his purchase.—Vincent v. Going, 3 I. E. R. 480; Fl. & K. 250. (R.)—[Revd.: 3 Dr. & War. 75, n. (C.)]

2. When the purchaser of an interest sold under the Court acquires thereby a knowledge of a defect in the title to it, and afterwards buys up the estate of the person interested in taking advantage of the defect, the Court will not allow him to rely upon the doctrine, that a purchaser is not obliged to take a doubtful title, in support of an objection to the title founded on that defect.

Quare—If the objection was valid, would the Court allow him to rely on it?

Ultimately the purchaser accepted the title, being allowed his costs.—Sheppard v. Doolan, 5 I. E. R. 6; 3 Dr. & War. 1. (C.)—[See 4 I. E. R. 654; Fl. & K. 598. (R.)]

3. A marriage settlement conveyed lands, held under a lease for lives renewable for ever, to trustees to the use of G., the husband, for life; remainder (subject to jointure and younger children's portions) to the first and other sons of the marriage in quasi tail. After G.'s death, the younger children filed a bill to raise their portions. In 1843 the lands were sold under a final decree of 1838. In 1842, a renewal of the lease had been executed to deft., the quasi tenant in tail, against whom, pending the suit, several judgments had been obtained, of which no notice had been taken. Because of them the purchaser objected to the title. The Master reported a good title. On exceptions to the report—Held, that the renewal ought to have been executed to the trustees of the settlement: that, it having been executed to the deft., he was made thereby a mere trustee of the legal estate on the trusts of the settlement: that the judgments did not constitute a valid objection to the title.—Leake v. L., 5 I. E. R. 361. (R.)

4. In a purchase of a life interest under the Court, the life dropped after the rule nisi to confirm the report of the sale had been obtained, and before it could be made absolute. Held, that the purchaser was bound to pay the purchase-money.

In sales under the Court, the purchaser's title relates back to the day of the bidding, as in other sales it does to the day of the contract.

Semble—The case of the purchaser of a fee-simple estate is distinguishable from that of a life estate, with respect to compensation for casualties.—Vesey v. Elwood, 3 Dr. & War.

74; 2 Con. & L. 47. (C.)—[Affg. 5 I. E. R. 184; Fl. & K. 668. (R.)]

5. A tenant in tail, C., on the marriage of his eldest son, B., conveyed the entailed lands as if he were seized in fee, to trustees for a term of years, to secure a jointure for his own wife, and a jointure for B.'s intended wife, if other property whereon the latter had been charged should be sold; and, subject thereto, to the use of C. for life, remainder to other trustees for another term to raise portions for C.'s younger children; then to B.'s use for life; remainder, subject to a third term, to B.'s first and other sons in tail. No fine was ever levied, nor any recovery suffered by C. or B. A bill having been filed to raise the portions, a sale of the term was decreed. Afterwards, B. and C. being dead, the eldest son of B. executed a disentailing deed, and conveyed the lands in fee to D., not a party to the suit, expressly subject to the term. D. conveyed to B.'s widow, a party to the suit. She had allowed the decree to be made on sequestration against her. The M. R. overruled the purchaser's objections to the title. On appeal, Held, that the acts of the eldest son confirmed the settlement, and that a good title to the term could be made; that the widow, having acquired her title after the decree, must out of it give the decree effect; that the judgments, entered pending the suit, against the eldest son and D., did not constitute an objection to the title.—Mussey v. Batwell, 5 I. E. R. 382; 4 Dr. & War. 56. (C.)

6. Objections to title overruled.—Pool v. P., 6 I. E. R. 50. (R.)

7. The purchaser under a decree in a creditors' suit objected to the title because of outstanding judgments confessed by deft. before the bill was filed, but which afterwards, pending the cause, were revived and redocketed under Moore's Act; and that they were not bound by the decree. The Master overruled the objection, being of opinion that the judgments in sci. fa. were to be deemed new and original judgments; that the first were gone, and that the others, having been obtained pending the suit, did not affect the title to be conveyed to the purchaser. On exceptions to a report of good title—Held, that they should be allowed:—that the judgments in sci. fa. were not to be considered as creating new rights, but merely as reviving rights under the original judgments; and that the purchaser's objection should therefore be allowed.—Newman v. Fitzgerald, 6 I. E. R. 260. (R.)

8. The lands of M., part of the manor of C., were conveyed, in 1823, to A. and his heirs, "saving and excepting thereout the manorial rights belonging to the manor of C., and the tolls and duties of the fairs and markets thereof, and also any liberty of turbary or limestone heretofore granted therein or thereout by B. or his ancestors to any of the tenants of the said manor as expressed in their leases respectively." There was no limestone or turbary on the lands of M., nor had any manorial rights been exercised for more than twenty years, nor any fair or markets ever held. In 1845 M. was set up and sold as held by a clear indefeasible title in fee-simple. Upon objection to the title, the Master in Chancery reported the title bad. Held, upon exceptions to the report, that under the circumstances the saving in the deed did not form any ground for the report of bad title.

In the rental under which the lands were sold, a part was thus described:—"Term for which demised; under an article of agreement for lease for four lives, bearing date 1804, and one year." The sale took place in Jan. 1845, and on the 9th April, the purchaser's solicitor received a copy of the article, and then first discovered that the agreement was for a lease to commence after the expiration of a then subsisting lease which did not expire until 1843. On the 24th Oct. he lodged objections to the title, and subsequently swore that he was misled by the statement in the rental. Held, affirming the report, that the misstatement was ground for discharging the purchaser, not for compensation. That the delay in lodging the objection disentitled the purchaser to his costs.—Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 44. (R.)—[See 9 I. E. R. 351; 3 Jon. & L. 496. (C.)]

1. A., tenant for life, mortgaged under a power the inheritance for £500 and £1000. He afterwards paid the first mortgage, and took an assignment to a trustee. After his death, B. became entitled to the mortgages. C., the tenant in tail, being a minor, covenanted by marriage articles, in 1827, to convey the lands in trust to sell, and pay the debts affecting them; and, subject thereto, for herself for life; remainder to her children. On her attaining age, a recovery was suffered. B. filed a bill, and, in 1835, got a report finding that arrears of rent and fines due in A.'s life, and after, had been paid by loan on mortgages, and that this sum, and the two mortgages with interest on them all from A.'s death to the date of the report, were due. A sale to pay them was decreed. In 1840, B.'s assignee filed a bill, not making the trustee of C.'s settlement a party, and obtained a decree to carry the former decree into execution. Held, that the first decree erred in declaring the inheritance liable for interest, payable by the life estates of A. and C., and that a purchaser under the second decree, in which the inheritance was not represented, could not be held to his purchase.

2. The trustees of a marriage settlement were empowered, upon the request of the tenant for life, to raise such sum of money as might be necessary to purchase a mansion-house, with a demesne attached, as a residence for the tenant for life; and it was declared that the mansion-house or lands, when so purchased, should be conveyed to the trustees, upon and for the same trusts, &c., and with, under, and subject to the same powers, &c., as were in and by "these presents declared and contained, of and concerning the said hereditaments and premises hereinbefore granted." The settlement contained a power to the trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, to sell, by public auction or private contract, or to exchange the settled lands for such price in money, or equivalent in other lands, as to them should seem reasonable; or to re-sell the lands which might be so purchased, and to give discharges for the purchase-money; and, in order to effectuate such sales, to revoke the uses and trusts of the settlement, and to appoint any uses and trusts which should be thought necessary or expedient for effectuating such sale or exchange; and the trustees were authorised to invest the purchase-money in lands, which were to be settled to the same uses, and upon and for the same trusts, &c., and subject to such and the same powers, provisions, declarations, and agreements, as were declared as to the settled lands. In 1857, the trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, purchased for £1200 a mansion-house, which was conveyed to them, subject to such and the same trusts, &c., and subject to the same powers, &c., as in the thereinbefore recited indenture limited, &c., of and concerning the lands of L. In 1858, the trustees, at the request of the tenant for life, sold the mansion by auction to the respondent. Held, in a suit for specific performance of the contract for sale, that the trustees could make a good title to the mansion-house, and the purchasers were bound to accept it.

Deeds are to be read in their grammatical and ordinary sense; and the Court should not transpose the words of a clause, unless it is absurd, or repugnant to or inconsistent with the rest of the deed.—Clements v. Henry, 10 I. C. R. 79. (R.)

3. A purchaser, who has agreed to take an assignment of premises held under a lease for years, cannot object to the title upon the ground of the discovery that such lease is an under-lease; because the sub-lessee is now placed in privity with the head landlord, by the 23 & 24 Vic., c. 154, s. 21.—Balfour v. Macneill, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 8. (C.)

IV. 3. When not bound to accept Title.

4. A purchaser cannot be compelled to accept a title, without having judgments against the person in whom the legal estate is vested satisfied.

Semle—Even when a purchaser can get a clear legal estate, he will not be compelled to accept the title without having judgments, entered after the execution of a deed conveying such legal estate, satisfied; he having notice of them.—Piers v. P., S. & Sc. 879. (R.)—[Affid.: 1 Dr. & Wal. 265. (C.)]

5. The omission from a rental, of a reservation of mines, minerals, and of a right of entry to search for them, is a valid objection to the title.—Barton v. Lord Downes, Fl. & K. 505. (R.)

1. By deed of 1709, S., with twelve other denominations, was conveyed to J., subject to a rent of £126, determinable on payment of £1200. In J.'s will of 1717, and in family settlements of 1756 and 1778, no notice of the existence of this rent was taken. In 1841, S. was sold under a decree in a foreclosure suit. In the rental and abstract the lands were described as fee-simple; and in a declaration made by deft. under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 62, he stated that no part of the rent had ever been paid by him, or any of his ancestors, out of S. There was not evidence to show that it had not been paid out of the other denominations. Held, that there were not grounds sufficient to warrant the Court in presuming that the rent was extinguished or released; and that it was a valid objection to the title.—Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 448. (R.)

2. An estate, described as a freehold estate for three lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal, was sold under a decree. The original lease of 1777 did not contain any express covenant for perpetual renewal; but the habendum was to the lessee, his heirs and assigns, "for and during the natural lives of J. and C., or the longest liver of them, or whatever life or lives should for ever or thereafter be nominated or appointed, added or inserted on the back of said indenture, or a label affixed thereto; yielding and paying unto R. L., the lessor, his heirs and assigns, the yearly rent of," &c. In 1836, the son and devisee of the original lessor executed to the assignee of the original lessee a renewal for three lives, in which the original lease was recited as containing a covenant for perpetual renewal; and the renewal was expressly made "in pursuance and performance of said covenants." It did not contain any covenant for renewal; but the habendum was like that in the original lease, except that the word "and" was used instead of "or." The Master reported that the title was not such as the purchaser could be compelled to take. On exceptions thereto, Held, that the report should be confirmed, and the exceptions overruled, with costs.—Sheppard v. Doolan, 4 I. E. R. 654; Fl. & K. 598. (R.)—[But the purchaser ultimately accepted the title, being allowed his costs on appeal, 5 I. E. R. 6; 3 Dr. & War. 1. (C.)]

3. By letters patent of 31 Car. 2, the lands of H. were granted to G. in tail male; and a rent of 3d. an acre, the amount of quit-rent prescribed by the Act of Settlement, was reserved. In 1681, G. conveyed H. to S. and his heirs, saving the estate and right of the Crown. In 1776, the estate tail determined by failure of G.'s issue male. Until the filing of the bill in 1841, the representatives of S. remained in possession, and dealt with the estate as an absolute one in fee. The rent reserved by the letters patent was regularly paid to the proper officer, and the usual receipt given for it as quit-rent. Held, that the Crown's right to the land on the determination of the estate tail was barred, and transferred to the vendor by the 48 G. 3, c. 47; the case not coming within any of the exceptions in its 1st sec.

The purchaser's exception to the title was overruled.—Tuthill v. Rogers, 6 I. E. R. 429; 1 Jon. & L. 86. (C.)

4. When a party objects to a Master's report as to title, his proper course is, to file exceptions, and set them down for hearing in the cause list.

A ptf. cannot, after proceeding before the Master on a reference as to title, rely on the purchaser's previous acts as binding him to his purchase, notwithstanding a report of bad title.—Harwood v. Bland, Fl. & K. 540. (R.)

5. Under a deed, in the nature of a mortgage, containing a trust for sale, the trustees and mortgagee can make a good title to a purchaser without the concurrence of judgment creditors of the mortgagor, whose judgments are subsequent to the deed; and it makes no difference that the sale is had in a suit founded on the deed.

Though a purchaser is not bound by the opinion of his counsel on the abstract of title, waiving an objection, yet if the objection, does not go to the root of the title (ex. gr., if it be for the non-production of an old deed), if the purchaser continues to treat, and leads the seller to further expense for some time after the first waiver, he cannot afterwards rely on it.—Alexander v. Crosbie, 7 I. E. R. 445; 1 Jon. & L. 666. (C.)—[Affg. 6 I. E. R. 513.]

6. Lands were set up as held under a clear and indefeasible title in fee-simple. It appeared that they had been conveyed forty years before, reserving a right to cut turf and quarry limestone, to tenants of another estate, although the right had never been since exercised, and there were no turf bogs worked or quarries open on the estate; but it did not appear that there might not be turf, and there was no proof that there was not limestone. Held, a good objection to the title and the purchaser discharged.—[Overruling the decision of the M. R., 8 I. E. R. 147.]

The rental at the sale contained an obscure statement, leaving it doubtful whether a tenant held for lives named in 1804 or 1843. It proved to be the latter, and the purchaser swore he had been misled. Held, a sufficient ground for discharging the purchaser.—[Affirming the decision of the M. R.]

Observations on clearing a title by showing the non-existence of rights under a reservation or onerous covenant not stated; and on the duty of being careful and explicit in preparing for a sale.

A delay of seven months—Held, no waiver of an objection to the title which turned upon a question of fact.—Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 351; 3 Jon. & L. 496. (C.)—[Affirming the decision at the Rolls, 8 I. E. R. 147.]

1. Lands were sold as fee-simple; after the sale, the purchaser found that, though the lands were held in fee, the owner was bound to raise and maintain the fences, and keep the drains and watercourses clear, &c. Held, that the purchaser could not be compelled to accept the title, when the enjoyment of the estate was subject to those qualifications.—Larkin v. Lord Rosse, 10 I. E. R. 70. (R.)

2. A purchaser of a leasehold under a decree is affected with notice of all clauses in the lease; but has a right to assume that the premises are lawfully in the condition in which they are sold. Therefore when a lease contained a clause of forfeiture for the exercise of a trade, which was that carried on on a part of premises comparatively of little value for any other business—Held, a ground for discharging the purchaser, though he had been some time in possession, and there was a waiver by the landlord for the time past.

A purchaser under a decree is not bound to make his objections to the title in any particular order.—Spinner v. Walsh, 11 I. E. R. 597. (C.)

3. An agreement by the vendors to let to the vendees for 61 years the premises then occupied by the vendors, "as held under A.," does not absolve the vendors from the duty of proving the title of their lessor.

On its appearing that A. was himself only a lessee for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal—Held, that the vendors could not make good title to grant a lease for 61 years.

That the fact of other premises (besides those proposed to be let by the vendors) being comprised in the lease to A. was a fatal objection to the title.

When there is an agreement by a vendor, having a derivative estate in lands, to let them for a term of years, and such an agreement, if carried into execution, would operate not as a lease, but as an assignment of the vendor's estate; Quare—Whether specific performance of the agreement will be decreed against the vendee?—Leathem v. Allen, 1 I. C. R. 683; 3 I. Jur. 73. (C.)

4. A., seized of P. and other lands, directed all his just debts, funeral expenses and legacies to be paid by his executors, and devised all his real and freehold estates (save a part devised to his wife), upon trust that his wife and her assigns should, after his decease, receive a rentcharge, with power of distress; and that three of his daughters should receive rentcharges; with like remedy by distress and entry as provided with respect to the rentcharge to his wife. A. then bequeathed pecuniary legacies to his children, and left all the residue and remainder of his real, freehold and personal estates, subject to his debts and the aforesaid legacies and annuities, to the trustees. Held, that the rentcharges to the daughters were specifically charged on the same lands as the rentcharge to the wife, and had priority over the legacies, which were charged by the residuary clause only.

By the marriage settlement of one of the daughters, one of the rentcharges and part of a legacy were vested in the children of the marriage (some of whom were minors), subject to an exclusive power of appointment in the parents. The minors were depts. in a suit to carry the trusts of the will into execution, in which the Master found, upon the consent of the counsel and trustee of the minors, that the legacies and rentcharges were in equal priority, and that the finding was in the nature of a compromise, and beneficial to the minors. The report was confirmed by a final decree, and the lands of P., among others, were decreed to be sold to pay the several sums reported, in the first instance subject to the rentcharges to the daughters, and if sufficient was not produced to pay the debts and legacies, then discharged of the rentcharges. If the sum arising from such sale should be insufficient to pay the debts, legacies, and value of the rentcharges, and costs, the legatees and devisees of the rentcharges should abate rateably. The lands of P. were sold discharged of the rentcharges. Held, allowing exceptions to the Master's report of good title, that the report and decree, being founded on a consent which the Court had no jurisdiction to take, were erroneous, and that the title under it was bad.

Pending an appeal from that decision, which was affirmed, a deed was executed by the father of the minors, appointing the rentcharge to a son, who was adult when the consent was entered into, and was a party to it, and the legacy to him and two of the minors, who had since come of age. The Lord Chancellor having, on the statement that the ptf. could then show a good title, referred it back to the Master to review his report, who found that a good title could be made by reason of the deed.

Semle—That the appointment having been made on an emergency, and not bona fide for the end designed by the donor of the power, was void.

Held, that the title was too doubtful to be forced on a purchaser, and the exceptions to the Master's further report of good title were also allowed.—Weir v. Chamley, 1 I. C. R. 295. (R.)—[S. c., 4 I. Jur. 1. (C.)]

IV. 4. By Assignees in Bankruptcy, &c.; and under Trusts to Sell.

5. By marriage articles of 1767, it was agreed that £1000, secured by the bond of A., the intended husband, on which judgment was entered, should be divided among the younger children of the marriage. By deed of 1796, A. conveyed the lands of K., of which he was seized in fee, to the use of himself for life; remainder, subject to £500, secured by a term for his younger children, to J., his second son, for life, remainder to his third, fourth, and other sons in tail. In 1798, A. made his will, without noticing the deed of 1795, and devised K., subject to £1000 for his younger children, to J. A. died, and bills were filed in 1803 and 1818 on behalf of some of the younger children to raise the £2000 secured by the articles and the will; but not noticing or relying on the deed which was afterwards put in issue by one of the answers. In 1818, G., the fourth son, who was entitled to an estate tail in remainder under the deed, became insolvent. He and his assignee were parties to the latter suit, but not in respect of that estate. A decree for a sale of the fee was pronounced for the sum due under the articles, and a part of the sum due under the deed. The abstract of title stated the insolvency of G., and that the heir of his assignee would join in the conveyance. The assignment under the insolvency had been lost, but the deed of 1795 was referred to in the schedule. Held, on objections to title—

That the abstract and schedule afforded sufficient evidence of an actual assignment of the estate tail in remainder under the Insolvent Act then in force.

That the assignment, though pendente lite, was valid, being made under the authority of a statute, and conveyed a base fee to the assignee; and, the decree not being binding on him, the title was defective.

That the defect could not be cured by the heir of the assignee joining in the conveyance, as he was a trustee for the creditors of G., who did not appear to have been paid, and were not bound by the decree.

That the decree was not erroneous in directing a sale of the fee for a portion of the sum secured by the term in the deed of 1795.—Keogh v. K., 13 I. E. R. 284. (R.)

1. In the case of purchasers from the assignees of a bankrupt, the rule respecting the costs of investigating the title resembles that governing sales under decrees of Courts of Equity.—In re Page, 1 Dr. & Wal. 31. (C.)

2. A ptf. may rely on a title acquired in point of form after he filed the bill, if it be not inconsistent with his original claim, and is capable of relating back. Therefore, when an insolvent debtor's devisee filed a bill for a renewal; and, the objection being raised, afterwards procured himself to be appointed assignee, and amended the bill stating that fact, Held, that he could sustain the bill.—Doyle v. Callow, 12 I. E. R. 241. (C.)

IV. 5. When Title is not made out until after the Contracts, or after Institution of the Suit.

3. A ptf. may rely on a title acquired in point of form after he filed the bill, if it be not inconsistent with his original claim, and is capable of relating back. Therefore, when an insolvent debtor's assignee filed a bill for a renewal; and, the objection being raised, afterwards procured himself to be appointed assignee, and amended the bill by stating that fact—Held, that he could sustain the bill.—Doyle v. Callow, 12 I. E. R. 241. (C.)

4. A. in 1838 agreed to sell to B. lands, B. to pay £6000 of the purchase-money at once, and the rest by the 1st Jan. 1839, on a good title being made out; B. to get possession of L., part of the lands, on the 1st May 1838, subject to any question of title; the abstract to be delivered on the 1st Nov. 1838, and a good title made out to the satisfaction of B.'s counsel in a month after; B. to execute the conveyance on the 1st Jan. 1839, and if a good title were not made out by the 1st of Feb. 1839 (which was expressly fixed as of the essence of the contract), B. to be discharged from his purchase. B. paid the £6000, and entered into possession of L., and before Jan. 1839 requested A. not to press the contract, as he was not in a condition to pay the balance; and, at the request of B., A. deferred to furnish the abstract until 1844. In August 1845, B. furnished requisitions for searches. The discussion on the title continued until June 1847, when B. stated that he considered himself no longer bound, unless his objections were satisfactorily answered in a month. A. then furnished what he relied on as satisfactory evidence of the point in dispute, and declined to give further searches, and in March 1848 filed the bill for specific performance. Held, that though time was originally of the essence of the contract, it was waived by the conduct of the parties. That B.'s right to give notice to rescind the contract could not arise until July 1847, and that the bill was filed within a reasonable time after. That the retention of L. by B. was inconsistent with the rescinding of the contract.—The satisfaction of counsel means reasonable satisfaction.—Gordon v. Mahony, 13 I. E. R. 383. (C.)

V. WHEN THE PURCHASER MAY, OR MUST TAKE THE TITLE, WITH INDEMNITY, OR WITH COMPENSATION.

5. The case of a purchase of a fee-simple estate is distinguishable from that of a life estate with respect to compensation for casualties.—Vesey v. Elwood, 3 Dr. & War. 74; 2 Con. & L. 47. (C.)—[Affg. Fl. & K. 667; 5 I. E. R. 184. (R.)]

6. When lands are purchased by Commissioners under the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 61, for the purposes of the Act, and the purchase-money is lodged in Court, the Court will, under the words "reasonable costs, charges, and expenses," in the 29th sec., award the parties entitled, the costs necessarily incurred by them in obtaining payment from the Court, and in having the money invested upon trusts similar to those to which the lands purchased were subject.—In re The Commissioners of the River Shannon, 3 I. E. R. 355. (R.)

7. A purchaser of lands, sold under the decree, and described in the rental as held under a lease that would expire on the 1st June then next, discharged from his purchase; it subsequently appearing that the tenant of part of the lands was entitled under an equitable article to a reversionary lease for four lives. The purchaser, under his contract, is entitled to actual possession, when the contrary is not stipulated for. An outstanding lease is not the subject of compensation.—Linehan v. Cotter, 7 I. E. R. 176. (R.)

1. When lands sold under a decree contain a quantity less than stated in the rental, the ptf. cannot, the purchaser not having made any objection, set aside the sale, or insist that the purchaser shall not have compensation if he choose to hold his bargain.—Magawley v. Brady, 7 I. E. R. 557. (R.)

2. Part of the lands sold under the decree was liable to quit rent and tithe rentcharge, though not stated to be so in the rental. Another part was stated in the rental to be held from year to year by C. at a rent payable 1st May and 1st Nov.; but the purchaser found, after he lodged his one-fourth of the purchase-money, that it was held for a term, with power to the tenant to surrender on any 25th March or 29th September, giving six months' previous notice, and it was surrendered on the 25th March then next. The tenure by which other parts were held was not stated in the rental, but the purchaser, on going into possession, found they were held for lives still subsisting. Held, that the purchaser was entitled to compensation for the quit rent, but not for the tithe rentcharge: that C. was at the time of sale a tenant, not from year to year, but for a term to end on the 25th March then next, and the purchaser was entitled to compensation therefor; and that he was not entitled to compensation in respect of the premises whose tenure was not stated, as he should have ascertained how they were held.—Martin v. Cotter, 8 I. E. R. 147. (R.)—[Affd.: 9 I. E. R. 351; 3 Jon. & L. 496. (C.)]

3. The solicitor for X., ptf. in a suit to raise a charge on lands, purchased in the name of a trustee the lands, at a sale under the decree, which was conducted by him in a manner that showed great negligence, or a design to depreciate the property. The proceeds were insufficient to discharge his demand for costs, without paying anything to X. The sale was declared void, on a bill filed by X. sixteen years afterwards, without any proof of its being at an undervalue.

Semble—A solicitor having the conduct of a sale under a decree is under an absolute incapacity to purchase at it.

Relief in such cases is given after a great lapse of time. When there is a deception on the Court—Semble, There is no fixed period of limitation to bar relief.—Atkins v. Delmege, 12 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

4. A solicitor purchased a leasehold interest from his client, and prepared the assignment, which contained no covenant to indemnify the vendor, but contained the words "subject to the rents and covenants" in the lease. Held, that the executor of the solicitor was bound to indemnify the vendor against the rent and covenants.—Greenfield v. Bates, 5 I. C. R. 219. (C.)

5. Lands were sold in Ch., in the cause of C. v. C., and purchased by A., to whom a conveyance was executed describing the lands by reference to a map on the margin of the conveyance. A. was evicted, by title paramount, from a portion of the lands as marked out on the map. Meanwhile, E. filed a bill against the deft., C., to recover the amount of claims for which he was liable as trustee. It prayed that she might have the benefit of the proceedings in the cause of C. v. C. An order of the Court transferred the funds in C. v. C., to the cause of E. v. C. Held, that the map on the conveyance was conclusive evidence that everything so marked out on it was intended to be conveyed to the purchaser; and that he was entitled to compensation for the portion of the lands from which he had been evicted; that, if any of the purchase-money of the lands so transferred to the cause of E. v. C. remained in Court, compensation should be paid thereout; but that a motion seeking compensation out of the funds generally in Court to the credit of the cause of E. v. C. should be refused with costs, whatever the rights of the parties might be in a plenary suit.

Semble—That the purchaser, when served with the ejectment, should have served notice on the parties in the cause of C. v. C., that he, if evicted, would seek compensation; and that they would then have been bound by the proceedings.—Cooper v. C., 6 I. Jur. 404. (R.)

6. The rental of a lot of lands sold in the I. E. Court stated that the property was held under two leases for three young lives, with a concurrent term, at a rent; and that the lease contained covenants by the lessee to expend £300 in building a dwelling-house and for planting and registering trees. One lease contained a covenant to expend £300 in building a house; but there were blanks for the names of the covenantor and covenantee, and for the years within which the covenant was to be performed. The other lease contained a covenant merely to improve a dwelling-house; and each lease contained a covenant to plant timber trees every year. Held, that the observations in the rental were not so specific as to amount to misrepresentation, such as would entitle the purchaser to be discharged from his purchase.

That the purchaser had constructive notice of the covenants in the leases.

That the purchaser was entitled to compensation, because the covenant to build was limited in point of time.—In re Irwin, 5 I. C. R. 290. (P.C.)

7. The L. E. Court, even in the absence of an express condition of sale to that effect, does not guarantee the particulars of tithe rentcharge, the amount and apportionment of which are settled by statute. A rental stated incorrectly the names of the tithe rentcharge payers; but the same amount was in fact paid by other parties. The Court refused to discharge a purchaser, but gave him compensation, at the rate of the purchase, for any substantial error of detail.—In re Moorhead's Estate, 12 I. C. R. 371; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 319. (L.E.C.)

8. In 1851, the I. E. Court, upon a mortgagee's petition, ordered a sale of the estate of O., a tenant for life. Lot 14 was sold by private sale, and, in 1855, conveyed to the purchaser. It was described in the rental as containing, amongst other denominations, "Coolacarra mountain, in common to tenants, 363a. 2r." A map, approved of by the Master of the Court, was annexed to the conveyance, which did not refer to the map. The denominations and quantities in both were the same. A portion of O.'s estate, sufficient to pay all incumbrances thereon, having been sold in the I. E. Court, the order to sell was, as to the unsold portion, dismissed, on the petitioner's application; O. undertaking to pay petitioner's post costs, and a balance of interest due, and to abide any further order to be made by the Commissioners in the matter. The sheriff put the purchaser into possession of lot 14, including the 363 acres, called "Coolacarra" in the map and rental. In 1859, H. having disputed the purchaser's title to 270 acres of Coolacarra, the purchaser brought an action against him, and obtained a verdict, which was set aside. On a second trial, the jury found that the 270 acres in question had never been known as Coolacarra, and were the property of H.—The purchaser moved the L. E. Court to vary the order dismissing the order for sale, and to sell further portions, sufficient to compensate him for the loss of the 270 acres, and for the costs of the two trials. The Judge ruled that the purchaser was entitled to compensation for the 270 acres, and that O., in accordance with his undertaking, was bound to pay it, but refused to grant compensation for the costs of the trials. O. appealed from the whole order; the purchaser appealed from the latter portion. Held, that the decisions as to compensation in cases of sales in the Court of Ch., do not apply to sales in the I. E. Court, the conveyance from which contains no covenants; and the purchaser in which has no opportunity of investigating title.

That O. was not, by reason of his above undertaking, bound to compensate the purchaser; because its true construction was, that O. would abide any further order made by the Court in the matter, as it then stood.

That, there being no fund upon which the Court could act, and the Court having no jurisdiction to sell any further portion of the estate, the purchaser could not obtain any compensation.—In re Otway's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 222; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 189. (C.A.)

VI. ALLOWANCE TO PURCHASER RESPECTING ABATEMENT OF PRICE.

1. One of the lots in a rental comprised a flour mill. The rental contained no notice that the Board of Works had executed works upon the river which supplied said mill; but the purchaser of the lot had resided in the neighbourhood of the premises for some time before the sale. Held, that, as the purchaser must have been aware of the execution of the drainage works, he was not entitled to compensation in respect of an annual charge imposed after the sale by the Board of Works upon the purchased premises.—In re Fitzgerald's Estate, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 203. (C.A.)

VII. DELIVERY OF POSSESSION: ITS EFFECT AS AN ALLOWANCE OR WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS TO TITLE.

2. A land-agent has not authority to enter into contracts for leases.

Entering into possession under a contract for a lease is a part performance; but the Court will not decree a specific performance unless the terms of the contract are clearly proved. Therefore, when a tenant paid a fine, and entered into possession, but did not claim performance of the contract for a lease for thirteen years, during part of which time he paid an increased rent; nor until after the death of the agent with whom the contract was alleged to have been made; and there was evidence that the contract was for a tenancy from year to year, the Court refused specific performance.—Mortal v. Lyons, 8 I. C. R. 112. (R.)

VIII. THE CONVEYANCE, SURRENDER, AND ADMISSION OF PARTIES: COSTS THEREOF.

3. A., entitled to freehold lands, confessed a judgment in 1806, and, in 1829, granted an annuity charged upon those lands. The judgment was not revived or redocketed within five years after the passing of the Redocketing Act. The rent fell into arrear. The landlord recovered judgment in an ejectment for non-payment of rent; but the annuitant redeemed the lands. The grantor devised the lands, upon trust, to sell and pay his debts, and distribute the surplus among his younger children. After his death, his younger children contracted with the executrix of the annuitant, who had a life interest in the annuity, to sell the lands, which were accordingly conveyed to her. The deed conveyed them subject to the judgment; but the vendors covenanted against all incumbrances, without excepting it. Held, that the purchaser took subject to the judgment, and that the judgment creditor was entitled to be paid its amount out of the lands, but that the purchaser was entitled to be repaid out of the other assets of the testator.

That the purchaser was not entitled, as against the judgment creditor, to the benefit of the sums paid in discharge of head-rent.—Garnett v. Armstrong, 4 Dr. & War. 182; 2 Coz. & L. 449; 5 I. E. R. 533. (C.)

4. A. and B., petitioners in the I. E. C. for sale of lands, purchased them. The map to the I. E. C. conveyance included a plot of land alleged to have belonged to X., an adjoining owner. On application to the Court, to compel A. and B. to re-convey to X.—Held, that, as the circumstances of the case negatived the presumption of misconduct on the part of A. and B., or their solicitor, arising from the mistake, the Court had not jurisdiction to direct a re-conveyance.

Semble—That the principle which guides the Court in such cases is, that if, by any fraud, negligence, or other misconduct of the party having the carriage of the sale, he procures the Court to sell and convey to him property which ought not to have been sold or conveyed, the Court has jurisdiction to compel him to re-convey, if the property remains in his hands, and to make good the loss, by pecuniary compensation, if it has passed from him into the hands of a purchaser for value.

From a clear mistake, the Court will presume misconduct, unless and until the contrary is proved. A substantial loss must have been suffered by the applicant.—In re Collis's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 511; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 177. (L.E.C.)

IX. PURCHASER'S AND VENDOR'S COVENANTS.

X. DISCHARGE OF CONTRACT: REFUNDING PURCHASE-MONEY.

[See also of the TITLE, IV, ante.]

1. A purchaser, discharged on a report of bad title, is entitled, in this Court, to interest, from the date of the lodgment, on the one-fourth of the purchase-money lodged. — Gower v. Hill, Hay, & J. 127. (E.E.)

2. When a deficient fund is produced by a sale under a decree; and judgment creditors, having upon the legal estate a lien puisne to the reported incumbrances, refuse to prove under the decree, or to release the lands; if the purchaser, who relies on those judgments as objections to the title, will not consent to be discharged, the proper course is to apply for a reference touching the title.—Barret v. Birmingham, S. & Sc. 419. (R.)

3. A purchaser who, having lodged only one-fourth of his purchase-money, was discharged upon a report of bad title—Held, entitled to his costs incurred in investigating the title, but not to interest on the one-fourth.—Feely v. Kilkenny, Fl. & K. 456. (R.)

4. The omission from a rental of a reservation of mines and minerals, and of a right to enter and search for them, is a valid objection to the title.—Burton v. Lord Downes, Fl. & K. 505. (R.)

5. A purchaser of lands; sold under the decree, and described in the rental as held under a lease that would expire on the 1st June then next, discharged from his purchase; it appearing that the tenant of part of the lands was entitled under an equitable article to a reversionary lease for four lives.

The purchaser, under his contract, is entitled to actual possession when the contrary is not stipulated for. An outstanding lease is not the subject of compensation.—Linehan v. Cotter, 7 I. E. R. 176. (R.)

6. It is irregular for a party in the cause to bid at the sale of lands set up under the decree, without having previously obtained permission of the Court to bid. The Court will not, in such case, on a certificate of his being the highest and best bidder, declare him the purchaser, unless special circumstances are shown to excuse his irregularity.—Byrne v. Lafferty, 8 I. E. R. 47. (R.)

7. In order to set aside a conveyance by a principal to his agent, it is not necessary to prove that the property was sold at an under-value; and though an agent may purchase from his principal, he must make a full disclosure of all the knowledge which he himself possesses with respect to the property. If there be any underhand dealing—ex. gr., a purchase in the name of another person—however good the price or fair the transaction in other respects, it has no validity in a Court of Equity.—Murphy v. O'Shea, 8 I. E. R. 329; 2 Jon. & L. 422. (C.)

8. Lands were set up as held under a clear and indefeasible title in fee simple, and it appeared that they had been conveyed forty years before, reserving to tenants of another estate a right to cut turf and quarry limestone, although the right had never been since exercised, and there were no turf bogs worked or quarries open on the estate; but it did not appear that there might not be turf, and there was no proof that there was not limestone. Held, a good objection to the title, and the purchaser was discharged.

The rental at the sale contained an obscure statement, leaving it doubtful whether a tenant held for lives named in 1804 or 1843. It proved to be the latter, and the purchaser swore he had been misled. Held, a sufficient ground for discharging the purchaser.

A delay of seven months held no waiver of an objection to the title, which turned upon a question of fact.

Observations on clearing a title by showing the non-existence of rights under a reservation or onerous covenant not stated; and on the duty of being careful and explicit in preparing for a sale.—Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 351; 3 Jon. & L. 496. (C.)—[Affg. 8 I. E. R. 157. (R.)—See 9 I. E. R. 44.]

9. A release of an annuity, given by an illiterate person without professional assistance, and for inadequate consideration, was set aside after several years; the price being held inadequate as to the debt, by whose covenant the annuity was secured, although, considering the nature of the security, it might not have been so from a stranger.—Garvey v. M'Minn, 9 I. E. R. 526. (C.)

10. The rental of lands sold under a decree stated the date, tenure, and rent of a tenant's lease, but not a clause in it giving the tenant power, under restrictions, to fell and dispose of the timber, which was very valuable. Held, that the purchaser, having notice of the lease, was bound by constructive notice of the clause relating to the timber.

The rental described lands as held by lease for three lives and thirty-one years, the lease being for three lives and the survivor, and, if all the lives died before the expiration of thirty-one years, for so much of such term of private sale, and, in 1855, conveyed to the purchaser. It was described in the rental as containing, amongst other denominations, "Coolacarra mountain, in common to tenants, 363a. 2r." A map, approved of by the Master of the Court, was annexed to the conveyance, which did not refer to the map. The denominations and quantities in both were the same. A portion of O.'s estate, sufficient to pay all incumbrances thereon, having been sold in the I. E. Court, the order to sell was, as to the unsold portion, dismissed, on the petitioner's application; O. undertaking to pay petitioner's post costs, and a balance of interest due, and to abide any further order to be made by the Commissioners in the matter. The sheriff put the purchaser into possession of lot 14, including the 363 acres, called "Coolacarra" in the map and rental. In 1859, H. having disputed the purchaser's title to 270 acres of Coolacarra, the purchaser brought an action against him, and obtained a verdict, which was set aside. On a second trial, the jury found that the 270 acres in question had never been known as Coolacarra, and were the property of H.—The purchaser moved the I. E. Court to vary the order dismissing the order for sale, and to sell further portions, sufficient to compensate him for the loss of the 270 acres, and for the costs of the two trials. The Judge ruled that the purchaser was entitled to compensation for the 270 acres, and that O., in accordance with his undertaking, was bound to pay it, but refused to grant compensation for the costs of the trials. O. appealed from the whole order; the purchaser appealed from the latter portion. Held, that the decisions as to compensation in cases of sales in the Court of Ch., do not apply to sales in the I. E. Court, the conveyance from which contains no covenants; and the purchaser in which has no opportunity of investigating title.

That O. was not, by reason of his above undertaking, bound to compensate the purchaser; because its true construction was, that O. would abide any further order made by the Court in the matter, as it then stood.

That, there being no fund upon which the Court could act, and the Court having no jurisdiction to sell any further portion of the estate, the purchaser could not obtain any compensation.—In re Otway's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 222; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 189. (C.A.)

VI. ALLOWANCE TO PURCHASER RESPECTING ABATEMENT OF PRICE.

1. One of the lots in a rental comprised a flour mill. The rental contained no notice that the Board of Works had executed works upon the river which supplied said mill; but the purchaser of the lot had resided in the neighbourhood of the premises for some time before the sale. Held, that, as the purchaser must have been aware of the execution of the drainage works, he was not entitled to compensation in respect of an annual charge imposed after the sale by the Board of Works upon the purchased premises.—In re Fitzgerald's Estate, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 208. (C.A.)

VII. DELIVERY OF POSSESSION: ITS EFFECT AS AN ALLOWANCE OR WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS TO TITLE.

2. A land-agent has not authority to enter into contracts for leases.

Entering into possession under a contract for a lease is a part performance; but the Court will not decree a specific performance unless the terms of the contract are clearly proved. Therefore, when a tenant paid a fine, and entered into possession, but did not claim performance of the contract for a lease for thirteen years, during part of which time he paid an increased rent; nor until after the death of the agent with whom the contract was alleged to have been made; and there was evidence that the contract was for a tenancy from year to year, the Court refused specific performance.—Mortal v. Lyons, 8 I. C. R. 112. (R.)

VIII. THE CONVEYANCE, SURRENDER, AND ADMISSION OF PARTIES: COSTS THEREOF.

3. A., entitled to freehold lands, confessed a judgment in 1806, and, in 1829, granted an annuity charged upon those lands. The judgment was not revived or redocketed within five years after the passing of the Redocketing Act. The rent fell into arrear. The landlord recovered judgment in an ejectment for non-payment of rent; but the annuitant redeemed the lands. The grantor devised the lands, upon trust, to sell and pay his debts, and distribute the surplus among his younger children. After his death, his younger children contracted with the executrix of the annuitant, who had a life interest in the annuity, to sell the lands, which were accordingly conveyed to her. The deed conveyed them subject to the judgment; but the vendors covenanted against all incumbrances, without excepting it. Held, that the purchaser took subject to the judgment, and that the judgment creditor was entitled to be paid its amount out of the lands, but that the purchaser was entitled to be repaid out of the other assets of the testator.

That the purchaser was not entitled, as against the judgment creditor, to the benefit of the sums paid in discharge of head-rent.—Garnett v. Armstrong, 4 Dr. & War. 182; 2 Con. & L. 449; 5 I. E. R. 533. (C.)

4. A. and B., petitioners in the I. E. C., for sale of lands, purchased them. The map to the I. E. C. conveyance included a plot of land alleged to have belonged to X., an adjoining owner. On application to the Court, to compel A. and B. to re-convey to X.—Held, that, as the circumstances of the case negatived the presumption of misconduct on the part of A. and B., or their solicitor, arising from the mistake, the Court had not jurisdiction to direct a re-conveyance.

Semble—That the principle which guides the Court in such cases is, that if, by any fraud, negligence, or other misconduct of the party having the carriage of the sale, he procures the Court to sell and convey to him

Conveyances is not confined to cases in which the same person makes both conveyances.—Blake v. Hyland, 2 Dr. & Wal. 397. (C.)

1. An estate for life having been sold under a decree, the tenant for life died after lodgment of one-fourth of the purchase-money, and after the rule nisi to confirm the sale had been obtained, but before it could be made absolute. Held, that the purchaser must complete his purchase.—Vincent v. Going, 3 I. E. R. 480; Fl. & K. 250. (R.)—[Rev'd.: 3 Dr. & War. 75, n. (C.)]

2. Under a decree of the Court of Ch. an estate pur autre vie was sold. The sole c. g. v. died after the bidding, but before the Master's report of the sale could be confirmed. Held, that the purchaser was not discharged from his purchase.

In sales under the Court, the purchaser's title relates back to the time of the bidding, as in other sales it does to the time of the contract.—Vesey v. Elwood, 3 Dr. & War. 74; 2 Con. & L. 47. (C.)—[Affg. 5 I. E. R. 184; Fl. & K. 668. (R.)]

8. H., on his marriage covenanted to settle specified lands on trusts, under which portions were to be secured for his younger children. Afterwards, H. sold the lands, and levied a fine to the purchaser. Held, that in equity the fine did not protect the purchaser: that H. was a trustee for his children, and that the fine could not give the purchaser a benefit which H. could not take.

At the end of half a century, a Court of Equity will not fix on a purchaser a difficult construction of an ambiguous instrument, which it might have done as between the original parties, if there had not been a sale.

When several estates are settled on children, they may recover a part thereof without showing title to the rest of the settled property.

But, when estates and other property, forming a mixed fund, are settled, subject to a power of appointment, the Court, when the parties entitled to the mixed fund are numerous, will not, as against a purchaser of part of the mixed fund, in which purchase one of the objects of the fund acquiesced, act as against that purchaser without knowing all the dispositions of the mixed fund.—Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459. (C.)

4. A party who takes an assignment of a lease from the lessor's agent, with notice of his character as agent, has cast upon him the same liability of sustaining the lease as rested upon the agent. If the agent cannot support the lease, neither can his assignee.

When a deft. insists by his answer that he is a purchaser for value, and without notice, proof of payment of the purchase-money is an essential part of the defence. If at the hearing deft. fails to prove it, the Court will not allow the cause to stand over in order to enable him to supply that defect.—Molony v. Kernan, 2 Dr. & War. 31. (C.)

5. When an estate has been devised to trustees to sell to pay debts, and, subject thereto, for testator's younger children; Semble—A purchaser from them will in all cases buy subject to the debts.—Garnett v. Armstrong, 5 I. E. R. 533; 4 Dr. & War. 182; 2 Con. & L. 458. (C.)

6. It never could have been the intention of the Legislature that a judgment debt should be placed in a worse situation than a simple contract debt; and there is nothing harsh in holding that a purchaser, with express notice of a judgment which has not been redocketed or revived pursuant to the 9 G. 4, c. 35, shall not take advantage of the provisions of that statute. A similar construction has been put on the words of the Registry Act, which are as strong as those of the 9 G. 4, c. 35.—Cockburne v. Wright, 6 I. E. R. 4. (E.E.)

7. Although there is considerable difference of opinion on this point, whether a purchaser for value without notice can protect himself when there is a legal right—that is, whether the Court can give relief to such a purchaser, when it is open to the other party to pursue his legal right,—yet, when the purchaser is brought into this Court, he may avail himself of his character of a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice, as a defence, whether his title be a legal or an equitable one; and he is entitled to have the bill against him dismissed with costs, although the next hour the party may be able to turn him out of possession. This Court ought not to act against him. I agree with Lord Rosslyn; and my opinion is, that the right of a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice should be sustained, although he has only an equitable interest.—Bowen v. Evans, 6 I. E. R. 615; 1 Jon. & L. 178. (C.)—[Decree aff'd.: 2 H. L. Cas. 257.]

8. A sum having been bequeathed to a wife, she and her husband joined in a power of attorney to A. to receive it. A. took out administration, as attorney of the wife, and received the money, which he lodged at a banker's to the credit of the husband. The wife bequeathed the money by a will, which was proved by the husband; and administration c. t. a. taken out by him. The account having been afterwards settled and the balance struck, the husband released A. from all claim. Held, that giving the power of attorney to A. did not amount to a reduction into possession by the husband; but that the receipt of the money by A. and the payment of it into the Bank to the husband's credit did.—Roche v. R., 7 I. E. R. 436. (C.)—[See 2 Jon. & L. 561. (C.)]

9. A person who advances money bona fide on the deposit of title deeds, made by one who has no right to them, or to the estate to which they relate, will be protected in equity as a purchaser for value without notice; and may retain the deeds, though the person making the deposit was not in possession of the property, if it be an incorporeal hereditament.—Joyce v. De Moleyns, 8 I. E. R. 215; 2 Jon. & L. 874. (C.)

thirty-one years from that period as should be to come upon the decease of the survivor. Held, that the rental being substantially correct, there was not misrepresentation entitling the purchaser to be discharged from the purchase.—Vignolles v. Bowen, 12 I. E. R. 194. (R.)

1. The Court will not act on evidence of a parol waiver of a written contract, unless it be very clear and distinct.

The petitioner and respondent contracted in writing to make a joint purchase. The petitioner paid the respondent one-half the amount of the deposit; but afterwards took back that money and gave the respondent a receipt for it. In a suit for specific performance, the respondent relied on the resumption of the money and the receipt, as a waiver of the contract. The petitioner alleged that he had taken back the money on a misrepresentation by the respondent, that the deposit had been returned and the contract rescinded. The evidence was conflicting as to the alleged false representation. Held, that the respondent had failed to prove the waiver, and that there should be a decree as the case stood. The Court offered an issue on the question of misrepresentation.—Clifford v. Kelly, 7 I. C. R. 333. (R.)

2. A., a solicitor, having a charge on real estate, caused a bill to be filed, in his partner's name, to raise the charge. A sale having been decreed, A., without obtaining leave from the Court, purchased the lands in the name of B., to whom the conveyance was made. The fact that A. was the real purchaser was never disclosed to the Master, or to the parties in the cause; and several orders were made, on applications in the name of B., calculated to lead the Court to believe that he was the real purchaser, though the whole of the purchase-money was paid by A. The Court, after the expiration of nineteen years, and after the death of A. and his partner, set aside the sale, although it was not proved to have been fraudulent or at an undervalue.

It is a settled rule of the Court that the ptf., or his solicitor, cannot bid at a sale under the decree, without leave of the Court. Non-compliance with that rule will vitiate the sale.

If a solicitor or trustee secretly purchases, in the name of another, at a sale under the Court, the sale is void.

Where there has been concealment, a violation of a rule of the Court, or the sale was void, laches or lapse of time will not preclude relief.

Form of decree setting aside a purchase by a solicitor, and directing accounts, when no fraud or undervalue was proved.—Popham v. Exham, 10 I. C. R. 440. (R.)

3. A purchaser discharged on the ground of misrepresentation of the value of the property in the rental. His costs were given him; but interest was refused, only one-fourth of the price having been lodged.—Porter v. Vesey, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 48. (R.)

4. Purchase by a receiver of an annuity at an undervalue set aside in a suit instituted by the vendor's personal representatives.—Form of order.—Eyre v. M'Dowell, 15 I. C. R. 534. (C.)

5. Purchase by a receiver, of a jointure charged upon the lands over which he was receiver, declared a trust for the benefit of those entitled to the estate.

The receiver over the estates of L. purchased from L.'s widow a jointure charged on the estate. In a suit instituted by an incumbent on the estate to set aside this purchase, the widow declaring herself satisfied with the terms of the arrangement, the purchase was upheld as regarded her, but was declared a trust for those beneficially entitled to the estate. Form of decree.—Boddington v. Langford, 15 I. C. R. 558, note. (C.)

XI. BONA FIDE PURCHASER: HOW FAVOURED OR BOUND.

6. A person in Ireland bought an annuity, granted out of an annuity charged on an estate, then the subject of litigation in England—Held, that the purchase was one for value, without notice, as the original annuity was not impeached in that English suit.—Houlditch v. Wallace, 5 Cl. & F. 629; 1 Dr. & Wal. 490.—[Affg. Wallace v. Marquis of Dougal, 1 Dr. & Wal. 461. (C.)]

7. A., being indebted to B., by deed of 1819 granted lands and premises to C., as trustee for B., in consideration of, and for the purpose of discharging the debt, &c., with specified powers; and, after satisfying those purposes, on trust to re-convey to A. B. died, having named C. his executor. C. assigned to ptf., by deed in 1834, the benefit of the deed of 1819, as forming part of B.'s assets, on trust to apply the produce of its sale in further payment of B.'s creditors. In pursuance of the deed of 1834, a bill was filed against A., and a decretal order referred it to the Master to take the usual accounts. He reported that D., assignee of a judgment obtained in M. T. 1811, against A., filed a charge of that judgment, which was, however, null and void against ptf., a purchaser for value under the two deeds mentioned, and the judgment not having been revived or redocketed pursuant to 9 G. 4, c. 85. On exceptions—Held, that the Master was right in postponing the judgment: that the deed of 1834 was one for value within the 9 G. 4, c. 85: and that that Act applies as well to purchases made before as to those made after that Act passed.—Knox v. Kelly, 1 Dr. & Wal. 542. (C.)

8. When a judgment affects several denominations, a prior purchaser of one of them is entitled to throw the judgment from his own upon the lands of any puisne purchaser; and so on, in succession, with each purchaser, until it falls in the hands of the last purchaser.—Aicken v. Macklin, 1 Dr. & Wal. 621. (C.)

8. H., on his marriage covenanted to settle specified lands on trusts, under which portions were to be secured for his younger children. De Moleyns*, 8 I. E. R. 215; 2 Jon. & L. 374. (C.)

1. A purchase of the legal estate for value, without notice, is not a defence to a suit for specific performance of a contract, relating to the lands, contained in a prior duly registered instrument.—Drew v. Earl of Norbury, 9 I. E. R. 171, 524; 3 Jon. & L. 267. (C.)

2. Under articles of 1760, estates subject to prior incumbrances were covenanted to be settled on A. for life; remainder to B. for life; remainder to the heirs of his body. A. executed a trust deed to pay creditors; and a bill was filed by one of the creditors, by judgment against A., pursue to the articles of 1760, and under the direction of A. By an arrangement made in the course of the suit, but in pursuance of a private agreement, and without the sanction of the Court, the lands were conveyed in f.-f. by A. and B. to X., who had notice of the articles, the rent being reserved to B., the purchase-money being applied partly to discharge incumbrances before 1760. In a sale in the suit, X. afterwards purchased the f.-f. rent. The proceeds of the sale were paid to B., and otherwise without regard to the rights of his children; all parties apparently acting under a mistake as to the effect of the articles. A bill afterwards filed by A. and B. against X., impeaching the sale for fraud, was dismissed. Held, on a bill by the son of B., claiming as remainderman in tail under the articles, that the f.-f. grant should be treated as a private sale and set aside; but that the purchase under the decree should be upheld.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadleir, 9 I. E. R. 595. (C.)

3. S., being largely indebted to B. and other persons, agreed with B. for a further advance, on a mortgage of estates in Ireland. By the deed of mortgage, S. covenanted that the lands of K., part of the security, were free from incumbrances; and for further assurance. No title was furnished by S., nor search in the registry in Ireland made by B. Before the entire advance was paid to S., it was discovered that K. was subject to a mortgage to E. B. thereupon applied to S., who told him that E. would release the lands, on his (S.'s) request; on which assurance B. paid over the residue of the loan to S., who fraudulently procured a release from E., of which B. was made aware; but remained ignorant of the fraud, which was discovered after some months had elapsed. Held, that B. was a purchaser for value of the release, as having been procured by S., in pursuance of the covenants in the mortgage deed; and that, being ignorant of S.'s fraud, he was entitled to retain the advantage which the release had given him.—In re Burnmaster, 11 I. C. R. 1; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 349. (C.A.)—[Reversed: 10 H. L. Cas. 90.]

4. A marriage settlement limited the husband's estate to his daughters as tenants in common in fee. Held, that such limitation, so far as it extended to the daughters of a future marriage, did not come within the doctrine of Clayton v. Lord Wilton, 3 Madd. 302, because its avoidance as to such daughters could not prejudice its validity, so far as it affected the daughters of the marriage; and that, as regards the former class, it could not, in the absence of special reasons, be deemed to have been stipulated for by the husband, whose estate was being settled, nor by the wife.

Held, therefore, that as to those daughters, it was voluntary, and void as against a purchaser for value.—In re Collis's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 511; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 117. (L.E.C.)

5. A recognizance was acknowledged and registered under the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 90, s. 11, in the name of John Donovan Barron, by which name the cozuee executed other instruments and was known in his family, though he had been baptized by the name of John Barron. He had, by the name of John Lawrence Barron, acquired and sold to a purchaser, who had no notice of the recognizance, real estate. Held, that, as against the purchaser, it was not a charge on the real estate.

In order to bind the purchaser, the recognizance should have been registered, as acknowledged by John Donovan Barron; and, under the head of "persons whose estates are sought to be affected," the name of John Lawrence Barron should have been entered.—Staunton v. S., 15 I. C. R. 464. (R.)

XII. LIEN, GENERALLY.

1. Vendor's Lien.
2. Purchaser's Lien.

XII. 1. Lien generally: Vendor's Lien.

6. A. and B. were equal partners in mills and concerns of which A. was lessee. In Nov. 1810, they took in C. as a partner, for £8500. In Jan. 1811, B. proposed to A. and C. to sell them his share for £8500, and to let his name continue in the firm for five years, they paying interest at £8 per cent. on his money remaining in their hands. This proposal was accepted. Thenceforward A. had two-thirds of the profits. C. had one-third. In July 1812, A. conveyed to C. the legal estate in one-third of the mills and concerns by a deed, which was never registered. In August 1812, C., by his marriage settlement, conveyed his one-third to A. and D. as trustees for himself for life; remainder for ptfs. (daughters of the marriage), as tenants in common. This deed was registered in 1814. In 1819, B. withdrew his name from the firm, and furnished A. and C. with an account current, showing a balance of about £24,000, due to himself. This balance was composed of the £8500, with interest at £8 per cent, and of advances made since 1814 to the firm on C.'s credit. A. and C. then mortgaged the mills to B. to secure the £24,000. The mortgage was registered soon afterwards. C. died in 1820; A. died in 1823. In 1826, B. procured from A.'s representatives an assignment of the equity of redemption, and entered into possession of the mills. The bill charged that, before the mortgage was executed, B. had been informed by A. and C. of the prior settlement. It prayed for an account, partition, and an allotment of one-third.

The only evidence of notice was a deposition of E., A.'s family solicitor, who deposed that he had apprised B. of the settlement. Held, that the deft. had not any claim of lien against ptfs. as an unpaid vendor.—Stuart v. Ferguson, Hayes, 452. (E.E.)

1. In a suit by a vendor to establish a lien upon the estate for the unpaid purchase-money, the Court decreed that the ptf., notwithstanding the recital in the conveyance that the consideration money was paid, and the endorsed receipt, was entitled to an enquiry whether the full consideration was paid; and to a lien, as an unpaid vendor, on the lands, for whatever amount should appear to be unpaid, with interest from the date of the conveyance. Held, that the onus of proving payment of the consideration money lay on deft. (the vendee's assignee); and that neither the receipt nor the recital was any evidence of that fact.—Croly v. O'Callaghan, 5 I. E. R. 25. (E.E.)

2. In March 1857, the bankrupt borrowed from W. £200, and deposited with W., as a security, a memorandum of agreement between the bankrupt and his landlord, whereby they agreed that, on payment of £400, by instalments of £50, a lease would be granted to the bankrupt. The instalments were not paid, and the benefit of the agreement was forfeited. In April 1858, the bankrupt, being indebted to R. in £160, proposed, as security to R., an equitable mortgage on those premises. The landlord agreed to execute a lease, on payment of £100, the balance due on the £400. The lease was executed; R. paid the £100. Held, that R.'s demand for £260 was prior to the claim of W. on the premises.—In re Clarke, 8 I. C. R. 216. (B.)

3. S. agreed with E. to purchase from him lands already sold in the I. E. Court, but not yet conveyed. A bill of exchange, accepted by the T. Bank, was to form part of the consideration for the purchase. S. forged a conveyance from the I. E. Court to persons from whom he traced title to himself; and executed to W. a conveyance, reciting the forged conveyance, as if genuine. Afterwards the I. E. Court executed to S. a conveyance reciting the purchase-money to be E.'s. Held, that under the genuine deed an interest in the land passed by estoppel to W.; and that E. had not a lien for the amount of the bill.—Eyre v. Sadleir, 15 I. C. R. 1. (C.A.)

XII. 2. Purchaser's Lien.

4. A purchaser in possession of lands under an executed conveyance, part of the purchase-money having been secured by bond, may come into Equity, to have it employed in discharge of an arrear of head rent due at the date of the conveyance; and is not confined to the legal remedy on the covenants in his conveyance.—Woods v. Martin, 11 I. C. R. 148. (C.A.)

XIII. OF NOTICE, AND ITS EFFECT: OF CHOSSES IN ACTION.

1. What amounts to Notice.
2. Effect of Notice, or the want of it.
3. Choses in Action.

XIII. 1. Of Notice and its Effect: of Choses in Action: what amounts to Notice.

5. A person bought an annuity granted out of an annuity charged on an estate which was at the time of the purchase the subject of litigation in England. Held, that he was a purchaser for value without notice, since the original annuity was not impeached in the suit.—Houlditch v. Wallace, 1 Dr. & Wal. 490: 5 Cl. & F. 629.—[Affg. Wallace v. Marquis of Donegal, 1 Dr. & Wal. 461. (C.)]

6. If, in the matter of a purchase, a party employs a solicitor, who has any knowledge of an incumbrance affecting the property, that knowledge is, in law, communicated to the principal, who may, nevertheless, be wholly unconscious of the existence of the incumbrance. It makes no difference that the solicitor happens to be himself owner of the property.

Notice to an agent, even although acquired in a different transaction, is notice to his principal in those cases in which, from the former transaction being so recent or so closely connected with the latter, it must be presumed that the agent remembered it.—Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 6 I. E. R. 238; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 11. (C.)

7. When, at the time of a purchase tenants are in possession, the purchaser, entering into possession and receipt of the rents, has constructive notice of the title by which the tenants hold.—Hamilton v. Lyster, 7 I. E. R. 560. (R.)

8. W. being seized of the lands of X., confessed a judgment, and afterwards, on his son's marriage, joined in a settlement under which the son was made tenant for life of X., remainder to his children; W. covenanting that X. was free from incumbrances. W. then made his will, giving large legacies, and making his son executor. Y., one of the legatees, married. By her settlement the legacy was assigned to trustees, of whom the son was one. He executed the settlement. A suit was instituted by the judgment creditor in 1835, the bill praying a general account, and administration of the assets. In 1836 a bill was filed by the parties entitled to Y.'s legacy, praying the proper and usual accounts, the judgment creditor being a deft. Soon afterwards the son disposed of some assets, and an order made on consent transferred a considerable sum to the credit of the legatees' cause, without prejudice to the rights of the various parties at the hearing, the judgment creditor not being represented on the motion. The order directed the dividends of the sum invested to be paid to the party entitled to the interest under Y.'s settlement, and the bill was dismissed against the judgment creditor. The assets being wasted, the son's children filed a bill, claiming as specialty creditors to have X. indemnified against the judgment under the covenant in the son's settlement; and an order was obtained to transfer the fund in Court to the credit of this cause. Held, that there had been no appropriation of the fund, either as against the specialty creditors, or as against the other legatees in W.'s will, but that it still continued assets.

The purchaser for value of a legacy, being merely the purchaser of a chose in action, has no higher equity than the legatee himself.

A suit, by a judgment creditor for the general administration of his debtor's estate, is a sufficient lis pendens to affect a purchaser of a life estate in lands the whole of which were bound by the judgment, with an equity against the life estate to indemnify the inheritance.

On a question of lis pendens, the registry of the purchase deed of the person sought to be affected is immaterial.

The 7 & 8 Vic., c. 90, s. 10, as requiring registry of lis pendens to affect a purchaser, does not apply to a purchase before the Act. — Jennings v. Bond, 8 I. E. R. 755; 2 Jon. & L. 720. (C.)

1. A purchaser of a perpetual rentcharge had notice of a deed which made his vendor tenant for life of the lands on which the rent was charged; and of a subsequent deed whereby the vendor, suggesting that he was seized in fee, purported to convey the lands in fee, in consideration of the perpetual rentcharge. Held, that he had notice of, and was bound to enquire into the circumstances under which the latter deed was executed. — Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

2. The purchaser of a leasehold interest under a decree is bound by notice of all the covenants contained in the lease under which the property is held.

The omission to state, in the rental of a leasehold sold under a decree, a covenant in the lease against the exercise of particular trades, is not misdescription, although the value of the premises may be lessened by the covenant. A rental described the premises as held for the residue of a term at a yearly rent, though by the breach of a covenant the term had been forfeited, or an additional rent incurred, at the election of the lessor. Held, a misdescription, and the purchaser was discharged.

The rental described premises as let by one lease at one rent, whereas they were let by two leases at two separate rents, together equal to that stated in the rental. Held, that the misdescription was not such as affected the title. — Spinner v. Walsh, 10 I. E. R. 386. (R.)

3. Renewable leaseholds were settled by a registered deed on B. for life, remainders over. B. being in possession, apparently as absolute owner, new leases were obtained under circumstances which against him would have made them grafts on the old interests, and at the same time the lands were sold by him to a purchaser for value without notice. Held, that the equitable claim of a remainderman under the settlement was, under the Registry Act, preserved against the purchaser. — Hill v. Mill, 12 I. E. R. 107. (C.) — [Varied: 3 H. Lds. Cas. 828.]

4. Lands held under a Bishop's lease for 21 years were sold under a decree. The rental stated the date of the lease, and that the lands were subject to a rentcharge, which appeared to be a permanent charge on them. Held, that the purchaser was bound by constructive notice of a non-alienation clause, and other unusual covenants in the lease.

That he was bound by notice of the deed granting the rentcharge, and of all its contents, and could not therefore object to the purchase, because the rentcharge was secured by a term short by six months of the 21 years, with a t. q. covenant for renewal. — Vaughan v. Magill, 12 I. E. R. 200. (R.) — [Affd.: 12 I. E. R. 207. (C.)]

5. A purchaser of a leasehold sold under a decree is bound by notice of all clauses and covenants, whether usual or unusual, in the lease, though not specially mentioned in the rental or conditions.

A rental stated that an annuity was charged on the premises sold. Held, that that statement was sufficient notice of the legal estate being outstanding to secure it in the usual way. That principle applies equally when the interest sold is a renewable leasehold, and the annuity deed contains a t. q. covenant, though the effect is, that the purchaser cannot acquire the reversion of the tenancies on the lands. — Vaughan v. Magill, 12 I. E. R. 207. (C.) — [Affg. 12 I. E. R. 200.]

6. The conuzee of a judgment appointed the conuzor one of his executors. The will was proved by the other executor only. Held, that in equity the judgment debt was not extinguished, but was assets in the hands of the executor for payment of his testator's debts; and that lands of the conuzor, sold after the rendition of the judgment, were in the possession of a purchaser with notice, liable to the discharge of the judgment debt. — Willock v. Dargan, 1 I. C. R. 39. (C.)

7. A., having effected a policy of insurance, by deed of the 1st Nov. 1827 assigned it to B., in trust for his wife and children. B. assigned the policy to C., for value, by a deed falsely reciting that A., by deed of the 1st Nov. 1827, had assigned the policy to B., for her own benefit. C. died, having bequeathed the policy to D., who assigned it to E., a solicitor, who acted in that transaction for B., by deed of the 4th Feb. 1843, in which D. covenanted that he had full power, and lawful and absolute authority to execute the assignment. The life insured died; and, E. having received the amount of the policy, a bill was filed against him by the children of A., and he was obliged to compromise the suit, by paying a sum of money. D. died; and a claim having been made by E.'s executor against his assets, on foot of the covenant for title, a cause petition was filed to administer his estate. It stated that E. was D.'s solicitor; that it was his duty to have limited the covenant to the acts of D.; and that he was entitled to no benefit greater than if he had only imposed the proper and usual covenant on D., but prayed no relief as to that statement, and did not make E.'s executrix a respondent. The usual order of reference having been made under the Ch. Reg. Act. s. 15, and E.'s executrix having filed, on foot of the covenant, a charge which the Master disallowed, on the ground that E. was D.'s attorney, and ought not to have permitted him to enter into such a covenant—Held, on appeal, that, the claim under the covenant being a legal claim, the Master had no jurisdiction to disallow it on that ground, without a cross petition.

Semble—Though E. had constructive notice of the trusts of the deed of the 1st Nov. 1827, such notice could not qualify or control the covenant for title.

D. having directed that any claim on foot of any covenant should be paid out of a particular legacy, the legatees should be before the Court.—Ex parte Collins, 2 I. C. R. 618. (R.)

1. In 1781, A. agreed, on the occasion of his marriage, to settle the lands of X. The articles were lost; but by the memorial it appeared that X. was conveyed in trust, subject, as therein mentioned, to pay the rents and profits to A. for life; and, after his decease, upon trust, at the request of the eldest son of A., or of such person as should then be heir or heirs of the eldest son, to convey X. to the person so requiring the conveyance; and, if A. should die in the life of B., his intended wife, without issue male then living, or without B. being then enceinte of a son, who should be afterwards born alive, and should have one or more daughter or daughters, then upon trust, to convey to such daughter or daughters. A. had but one child, a son, who died in the life of B. In 1828, the respondent purchased a portion of X. from A., and the person who was then heir of the only son of A. In 1844, A. died; and the petitioner was the person who was then heir of the only son of A. Held, that he was not entitled to require a conveyance of X. as against a purchaser for value.

In the memorial the county in which the lands were situate was not stated; but one of the parties was described as of X., in the county of T.

Semble—That, as the articles were not produced, it would be presumed that the memorial followed them, and that consequently the memorial was sufficient.

Semble—That the doctrine of constructive notice has been carried too far in Penny v. Watts, 1 Mac. & Gor. 150, and that that case cannot be considered established law.—Abbott v. Geraghty, 4 I. C. R. 15. (C.)

2. A tenant contracted with a tenant for life for a lease. The contract did not bind the remainderman. The tenant entered into possession; and, after the death of the tenant for life, having sent a copy of the contract to the land agent of the remainderman, expended a large sum on the lands, of which expenditure the remainderman knew, or had an opportunity of knowing, though he denied, and it did not appear, that the contract was directly communicated to him. Held, that the notice of the contract to the land agent did not affect the remainderman, so as to give the tenant an equity against him, by reason of his acquiescence in the expenditure.—O'Fay v. Burke, 8 I. C. R. 225. (R.)—[Affid. Ibid, 511. (C.A.)]

3. A testator devised all his property, in trust to pay his debts, amongst which was a charge (secured by mortgage and judgment collateral) in favour of his son, C. (the petitioner's father), who, in a suit instituted in relation to the testator's assets, was appointed receiver and manager of the testator's personal estate, and was authorised to proceed in the executor's name to render the assets available.

Under a subsequent consent order, premises (of a mortgage affecting which the testator died possessed) were sold to D., to whom they were conveyed by a deed, which alleged that, in pursuance of provisions in the consent order, the purchase-money (£750) was paid thus:—£250 to the party entitled to the equity of redemption in the premises, and £500 to C.

Afterwards, C.'s wife instituted a suit to compel the execution of the trusts of her marriage settlement, whereby C. had assigned (inter alia) the aforesaid charge, and the securities for it, to trustees, in trust for his wife for life; and, after her decease, for the issue of the marriage. In this suit, V. acted as her solicitor.

Afterwards other premises, part of the testator's assets, were mortgaged to another solicitor, P., to secure the repayment of £250 and interest; and, subject to his demand, the equity of redemption therein was, at a later period, conveyed to J., his heirs and assigns. C. and his family emigrated. P. afterwards presented a petition to administer J.'s real and personal estates, and to enforce payment of his own demand; neither C., nor any member of his family, was a party to this suit, in which V. was P.'s solicitor.

After sale of (inter alia) the property mortgaged to P., he was paid the amount found to be due to him by the Master's order, which ascertained the amount, and declared that there was not any other charge affecting the premises. Upon this order of the Master the Court's order for payment was founded. A younger child of C. presented both the present petitions, and sought in the first to compel P. to replace the sum so paid to him. Held, that, under the circumstances of the case, and particularly having regard to P.'s position as an officer of the Court, and to the fact of his having instituted the suit through the intervention of V., he had notice of the petitioner's claims, and was bound to replace the moneys so paid to him.

In the second suit, the petitioner sought that the sale to D. of the premises in Baggot-street, as well as the sale of other premises, which also had been sold to him, might be set aside.

It was not shown that D. had ever paid (as the conveyance to him alleged) to C. any portion of the £500; but it appeared that C. and D. had mutual private dealings, in respect of which some settlement was alleged to have taken place. Held, that D.'s purchases could not be sustained.—Walker v. Power and Walker v. Taylor, Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 668. (C.)

XIII. 2. Effect of Notice, or of its Want.

1. A deft., who means to rely on his being a purchaser for value without notice, must, by his answer, deny notice, although it be not charged in the bill that he had notice.—Ireland v. Kidd, Jon. & Ca. 249. (E.E.)

2. Notice of the contents of a voluntary instrument has not any effect in postponing a purchaser for value.—Nixon v. Hamilton, 1 I. E. R. 55. (C.)

3. A purchaser with notice, implied or constructive, from a trustee, is bound by the trust, though there has been a fine levied to him, and five years' non-claim.—Thompson v. Simpson, 2 Dr. & War. 459. (C.)

4. R., being seized of an undivided moiety of lands, conveyed it on his marriage, in 1775, to trustees, for himself for life; remainder to his first and every other son in tail; remainder to himself in fee. This settlement contained a leasing power to R., to lease for any period not exceeding three lives, or thirty-one years, at the full improved rent, and not dispunishable of waste. R. subsequently purchased the other undivided moiety of the same lands; and in 1785 leased the entire to T. for three lives, renewable for ever. This lease contained a covenant by R. for quiet possession, without the disturbance of R., his heirs or assigns, or any person claiming under him, and for further assurance. It contained no reference to the power. In 1797, upon the marriage of G., eldest son of R., by deed, to which R. and G. were parties, all the lands were settled and conveyed to the use of R. for life, and after his death to G. for life; remainder to the use of such of the sons of G. as G. should appoint to. R., by this deed, covenanted against all incumbrances, "save and except the leases heretofore bona fide made by R.;" and G. covenanted for further assurance and quiet enjoyment against all persons, "except the lessees in such leases, as aforesaid." G. executed the power of appointment reserved to him in favour of W., his son, and died in 1809. On the death of R., W. filed his bill to set aside the lease of the moiety comprised within the settlement of 1775, as contrary to the leasing power. Held, that W., claiming and deriving benefits under the settlement of 1797, which contained references to the lease made by R., was bound by the lease of 1785, and could not set it aside.—Steele v. Mitchell, 2 Dr. & Wal. 568; 3 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

5. When lands, let under the Court for seven years, pending the cause, are sold under a decree, and the tenancy determines before the term expires, the purchaser who, at the time of the sale, has notice of the tenancy, and goes into possession, is not entitled to the crops sown by the outgoing tenant and growing on the lands. The outgoing tenant is entitled to emblements. His right is not affected by the custom of the country respecting the outgoing tenant's right after the expiration of his lease.

Semble—If the purchaser insists upon retaining the crops, the Court will direct a reference at his expense touching the value of the crop, and the damage sustained by the outgoing tenant in relation thereto.—Creed v. C., 3 I. E. R. 207. (R.)

6. The doctrine, that a purchaser may defeat the title of the vendor's wife to dower, by obtaining a conveyance of a prior outstanding term, with notice of her title, is not to be extended.—Kent v. Roberts, 3 I. E. R. 297. (E.E.)

7. An agent obtained a lease from his principal, at a low rent, and reciting it to be "in consideration of faithful services." Held, that this recital was sufficient to put a purchaser for full value of the lease upon enquiry into the nature of the transaction; and that therefore the lease was equally impeachable in his hands as in those of the lessee.

A party who takes an assignment of a lease from the agent of the lessor, with notice of the assignor's character as agent, has cast upon him the same liability of sustaining the lease that the agent has; and if the lease cannot be upheld by the agent, neither can it by the purchaser.—Ker v. Lord Duncannon, 1 Dr. & War. 542; 1 Con. & L. 335; 4 I. E. R. 343. (C.)

8. In a suit to administer real estate, there had been a decree to account. Purchasers after the decree are bound by the constructive notice given by the lis pendens, as the decree to account does not terminate the suit.—Higgins v. Shaw, 2 Dr. & War. 356; 1 Con. & L. 400. (C.)

9. A registered mortgage will not be preferred to a prior unregistered deed of annuity, when the solicitor of the mortgagee was, at the time of executing the mortgage, fully aware of the existence of the former deed, having himself assisted in the preparation and execution of it, and being a party thereto as trustee; there being at the same time some evidence to show that the non-registry of the former deed was caused by the improper conduct of the same solicitor.

Notice to bind a purchaser must not of necessity be notice in the same transaction.—Nixon v. Hamilton, 2 Dr. & Wal. 364. (C.)

1. A married woman or infant is as much bound by notice as an adult.

A purchaser, with notice of, and who takes subject to an incumbrance, is bound to indemnify the vendor against that incumbrance, although there is no express contract to that effect.—Jones v. Kearney, 1 Dr. & War. 184, 166; 4 I. E. R. 37; 1 Con. & L. 46. (C.)

2. An advertisement is not notice, unless it is brought home to the party.—Nagle v. Baylor, 3 Dr. & War. 73. (C.)

3. The purchaser of a reversion, under a decree of the Court, will not be precluded from taking advantage of a breach of covenant incident to the reversion, by notice of a breach being committed before the sale was confirmed.

Notice to the solicitor is notice to the client, but the rule does not extend to cases in which the solicitor acts for third parties.—Gerrard v. O'Reilly, 2 Con. & L. 165; 3 Dr. & War. 414. (C.)

4. A purchaser, who buys expressly subject to a judgment, will be bound by it, although it has not been redocketed within the time required by the 9 G. 4, c. 35.

When an estate is devised in trust to sell for payment of debts, and, subject thereto, for younger children, a purchaser from such children must take subject to the debt.—Garnett v. Armstrong, 2 Con. & L. 449; 5 I. E. R. 538; 4 Dr. & War. 182. (C.)

5. A suit was instituted in 1822, to impeach a sale for fraud, and have it set aside. In 1823 the debt. answered, and in 1828 died, no proceedings having been taken in the cause since his answer. In 1839 a bill of revivor and supplement was filed, and the cause brought to a hearing in 1842.

Semble—That there was sufficient lis pendens to affect purchasers of the subject-matter in 1830, with constructive notice.—Thornhill v. Glover, 3 Dr. & War. 195. (C.)

6. An information was filed in Ch., in 1832, to set aside a lease, granted at an undervalue, and was amended in 1827. The interest in the lease was, in 1835, put into settlement. The parties entitled under this settlement claimed the rights of purchasers for value without notice. Held, that there was lis pendens sufficient to affect them with notice of the adverse claim.—Att.-Gen. v. Corp. of Cashel, 3 Dr. & War. 294. (C.)

7. A trustee, in violation of his duty, lent the trust money to F., upon the security of judgment; F. at the time not being aware that it was trust money. Subsequently, F. was informed that it was trust money, and recognised and acknowledged the title of the trustee thereto. Held, that from the time he had notice of the trusts, F. was a trustee of the money, and as such liable for the safety of it.—Sheridan v. Joyce, 1 Jon. & L. 401; 7 I. E. R. 115. (C.)

8. Notice, to a purchaser for value, of a judgment not revived or redocketed pursuant to the 9 G. 4, c. 35, will not take it out of the operation of that statute.—Beere v. Head, 9 I. E. R. 76; 3 Jon. & L. 340. (C.)—[Rev. on this point, 8 I. E. R. 647. (R.)]

9. If a debt., in his answer, relies generally on his right as a purchaser for value, without notice, but does not specifically deny notice of a particular matter—e. g., a private act, with notice of which the bill charges him, and notice of which would invalidate his title—ptf., not excepting to the answer, must prove notice.

A statute relating to the corporate property of a city, with the usual clause declaring that it shall be deemed a public act, does not bind strangers with notice. The mere probability of a stranger knowing it, or precautions taken by him when buying corporate property, will not fix him with constructive notice.—Att.-Gen. v. Marrett, 10 I. E. R. 167. (C.)

10. A bill by a judgment creditor to have the benefit of a renewal to A., and to set aside a sub-lease to B., who sold to the debt. X., stated circumstances of express notice to A. and B. The bill was taken as confessed against A. and B. The debt. X. denied notice to them, and it was not proved. Held, that there could not be a decree against him.—Kelly v. Magee, 11 I. E. R. 383. (C.)

11. An estate having, under a decree of the Court of Exchequer, been sold for £12,000, the purchaser lodged in Court £5000 of his own moneys, and applied to the ptf. in the present suit to lend him the remaining £7000 on the terms of securing that sum as the first incumbrance upon the lands. After an agreement with the ptf. for this loan, but before it was carried out, the purchaser confessed a judgment for value. The ptf. although having notice of the judgment, advanced £8000, of which £7000 were paid into Court as there stood of the purchase-money; and £1000 to the purchaser. By consent, which was made an order of Court, the conveyance of the lands was made to a trustee for the purchaser and the ptf. The trustee subsequently, in consideration of the £8000, mortgaged the lands to the ptf. Held, that the judgment was prior to the mortgage as a charge upon the lands.—Walcott v. Lynch, 13 I. E. R. 199. (R.)

12. Letters patent, under which lands sold by private contract were held, contained covenants by the grantee:—first, that he would place three free tenants of English or British race, blood, or names on the premises, each of whom should have 50 acres, or one free tenant who should have 100 acres, for life.

Secondly:—That he would have on the premises eight cullivers or muskets, and a proper number of arms to arm eight pikemen, for his defence against rebels, &c.

Thirdly:—A proviso, that if he should demise any part of the premises to the mere Irish for any term exceeding 41 years or three lives, or if he should demise the premises, limited to be disposed of to any English or British person, to any person being mere Irish, the Crown might re-enter. The particulars of sale described the lands as a valuable fee-simple property. One of the conditions of sale alluded to the letters patent. It appeared from a statute (10 Car. 1, sess. 3, c. 3), and public documents therein referred to, that the covenants were those inserted in patents at the plantation of Ulster, in which province the lands were situated. Held, that the purchaser, having express notice of the letters patent, was bound by constructive notice of the covenants contained therein. That the first and third covenants were no longer enforced, every subject of the Crown, since the Union, being a person of British race, name, and blood, and there not being any person now answering the description of mere Irish.

Semble—The second covenant could not now be enforced by the Crown.—Stewart v. Marquis of Conyngham, 1 I. C. R. 534. (R.)

1. A recovery was suffered by a tenant for life and remainderman in tail in 1781. The record stated that the tenant to the præcipe called to warranty the tenant for life, who appeared by his attorney, and warranted the tenant in tail, who appeared in person. Held, that the recovery was valid, though the record did not state a summons to warranty, nor a warrant of attorney to authorise the appearance for the tenant for life.—Stewart v. The Marquis of Conyngham, 1 I. C. R. 535. (R.)

2. The lands of S., held for lives renewable, were devised to A. for life, remainder to his children in strict settlement, remainder to testator's daughters, B. and C., in quasi tail; and if either B. or C. should die without issue, to the surviving daughter, in quasi tail.

On the marriage of E., eldest son of B., a settlement was executed, containing a recital that E., by virtue of the will of his grandfather, was entitled to a contingent remainder in the lands of S. on failure of issue of A., subject only to such powers over the same as should appear to be vested in A., and further containing a covenant, on the part of E., to settle the lands when they should become vested in possession in him.

After the execution of the settlement, A. died without issue, and after his decease, B. and C. barred their respective estates in quasi tail, and died. B.'s moiety of the lands of S. descended, and C.'s was devised to E., who sold them to a person affected with notice of the covenant. Held, as against the purchaser, that though the estates in existence at the time of the execution of the settlement had been destroyed, the estates in the land which actually became vested in the settlor were bound by his covenant.

Semble—That "surviving daughter" must be taken to mean "other daughter."—Osborne v. Smith, 4 I. C. R. 58. (C.)—[Revd. in part: 6 H. L. Cas. 375; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 41.]

3. In a suit for specific performance of an agreement which was taken out of the Statute of Frauds, by part performance, the petitioner having pleaded an agreement in writing, which omitted to state the term of the lease to be made—Held, that parol evidence should not be received to supply the term.

Semble—A purchaser for value without notice before his purchase, who afterwards receives express notice, is notwithstanding entitled to register his deed, and obtain to all the benefits of the Registry Acts.—Riddick v. Glennon & others, 6 I. Jur. 39. (C.)

4. A. being seized of an estate tail in the lands of S., &c., and of an estate in fee in K., &c., in 1794, by an indenture reciting that he was seized in fee of both denominations, conveyed them to trustees to the use of himself for life, remainder to his eldest son, B. (then alive), for life, remainder to B.'s children successively in tail, remainder to the sons of A. successively in tail, remainders over; and A. covenanted with the trustees that he was seized in fee of all the lands, and for further assurance. A. died, leaving several sons, and without barring the entail in S. B. went into possession of all the lands. In a suit against B. to raise out of the lands charges created by A. B., by answer, admitted that A. had been seized in fee of all the lands. On the investigation of the title, in contemplation of a sale in that suit, B.'s attention was called to the existence of the entail, and he soon afterwards executed a disentailing deed. He also procured the discharge from S. of a receiver who had been appointed over it and K., in the suit, on the ground that by reason of the entail S. was not after his death subject to the charges. He continued by himself or creditors in possession of all the lands; and part of K. having been sold, he obtained payment of the income of a surplus fund realised by them, and lodged in Court, claiming such income as tenant for life under the settlement of 1794. He afterwards mortgaged S., by a deed reciting the settlement, &c., and which conveyed to the mortgagee B.'s life estate in K., &c., under the settlement. The persons entitled in remainder did not interfere, although aware of nearly all these proceedings. Held, that B. had conclusively elected to take under the settlement of 1794, and was bound to give effect to it; and that his mortgagee, having taken with notice, was equally bound.

B. died without having children; and C., a minor and B.'s heir-at-law, became, after B.'s death, entitled to the remainder limited by the settlement of 1794. B., devised S., subject to charges, to trustees for C. In a suit by one of the trustees to carry out the trusts of B.'s will, C. having come of age, and having first desired an issue as to B.'s competency, a decree was afterwards made on consent that the trusts of B.'s will should be carried into execution; and that the usual consequential accounts should be taken. C. soon after filed a petition, as owner, to sell S. to pay B.'s charges; and, in a discharge filed in the Master's office in an administration suit, admitted that B. had been seized in fee of S. He afterwards, by leave of the Master, filed a fresh charge, alleging that B. had elected to take under the settlement of 1794.

Held, that C. was not prevented by the decree or his admissions from claiming S., &c., as bound by the settlement of 1794.—Spread v. Morgan, 9 I. C. R. 535; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 525. (C.)—[Rev'd.: 11 H. L. Cas. 588.]

1. A., being sub-tenant of a college lease for 14 years, with a t. g. covenant for renewal, demised for 14 years, with a like covenant, by an unregistered deed, and afterwards assigned his interest to a purchaser for value by a registered deed. Held, that the purchaser having no notice of the unregistered deed, was not bound by the covenant to renew contained in it, as it was not a lease within sec. 14 of the Registry Act (6 Anne, c. 2), which declares that the Act shall not extend to leases not exceeding 21 years, when the possession goes with the lease.

Semble—A license to set, at the tenant's convenience, any part of the premises included in a lease containing a non-alienation clause, does not authorise an assignment of them.—Clarke v. Armstrong, 10 I. C. R. 263; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (R.)

2. S., being largely indebted to B. and other persons, agreed with B. for a further advance, on a mortgage of estates in Ireland. By the deed of mortgage, S. covenanted that the lands of K., part of the security, were free from incumbrances; and for further assurance. No title was furnished by S., nor search in the registry in Ireland made by B. Before the entire advance was paid to S., it was discovered that K. was subject to a mortgage to E. B. thereupon applied to S., who told him that E. would release the lands on his (S.'s) request; on which assurance B. paid over the residue of the loan to S. S., subsequently, by fraud, procured a release from E., of which release B. was made aware, but was ignorant of the fraud, which was discovered after some months had elapsed. Held, that B. was a purchaser for value of the release, as having been procured by S., in pursuance of the covenants in the mortgage deed; and that, being ignorant of S.'s fraud, he was entitled to retain the advantage which the release had given him.—In re Burmester, 11 I. C. R. 1; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 849. (C.A.)—[Reversed: 10 H. Lds. Cas. 90.]

3. A., tenant in tail in possession, executed a disentailing deed, not for value, which was enrolled after his death, but within six months from its execution. B., entitled in remainder expectant on the determination of A.'s estate tail, executed a disentailing deed for value after A.'s death, but enrolled before it. B. and B.'s grantees had express notice of A.'s deed. Held, that the enrolment of A.'s deed was good, although made after his death.

That whether B. was entitled in fee or in tail, B.'s deed being made to a purchaser for value, and being first enrolled under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 74, s. 74, avoided A.'s deed; and that notice was immaterial.

That the 38th and 74th sections of the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 74, are not in pari materia; that the 38th sec. applies to dispositions by the same tenant in tail, while sec. 74 applies to dispositions by successive tenants in tail.—In re Piers' Estate, 13 I. C. R. 459; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 76. (L.E.C.)

4. By a written agreement, framed as an accepted proposal, and dated 12th Feb. 1839, A. gave his son, B., on his marriage, a moiety of the lands of X. B. entered into, and continued in possession of X., until his death in 1840, when he left all his estate and interest in X. to his daughter, C. B.'s widow entered into occupation, but was induced by A., and his son, D., to give them possession in consideration of money. A. and D. continued jointly in possession until A.'s death, after which, and until this suit, D. remained in exclusive possession. C., attained age in 1861, unsuccessfully endeavoured to get possession of X., and then instituted this suit to obtain possession from D., with an account of the rents, &c. D. set up a title under a registered deed of 1840, whereby A., in consideration of £150, conveyed X. to D. and E.; and claimed to be a purchaser for value, without notice. Notice was clearly proved. Held, that D., having confessedly taken possession from the minor's guardian, could not set up a title adverse to the minor.

Semble—The question of notice was sufficiently put in issue, without amendment of the petition.—Kennefick v. K., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 181. (C.)

5. Purchase for value, without notice, is not a defence to a suit instituted to enforce a mere legal right, such as dower.

A purchaser in 1840, obtained possession of the deed creating an attendant term, but did not procure an assignment of the term. Held, that he could not rely on the term as a bar to a claim for dower.

The Act (5 & 6 Vic., c. 118), for the Confirmation of Marriages in Ireland confirms marriages theretofore solemnized by persons who had been Protestant Dissenting Ministers, even though at the time of the marriage they had been degraded or suspended.

A purchase made for a minor ward of the Court, under a power given by statute, is an Act done under the authority of the Court, within the meaning of the 3rd sec. of that Act.

A statement of an admission in the petitioner's affidavit in reply, is not a compliance with the rules of Equity pleading, requiring admissions to be put in issue.—Corry v. Cremenorne, 12 I. C. R. 136; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 21. (C.)

6. A., by marriage settlement, executed on the 10th August 1787, covenanted with the trustees, within three years after the marriage, to pay them, their executors, or administrators, £2500, which (with £500, the fortune of A.'s intended wife) they were to invest in the purchase of land to be held in trust for A., for life, and, after his decease, for the children of the marriage. The settlement provided that, until such investment, the trustees should lay out those two sums on public or private security, and pay the interest to the persons entitled to the rents of the purchased lands. On the same day, A. passed his bond to the trustees for the penal sum of £6000, and judgment was entered up against him by the trustees on the 11th August 1787. On the 10th of Nov. 1800, A. became entitled to an equitable interest in the lands of R. under the limitations contained in a deed for value, dated the 14th May 1812. This equitable interest became vested in B., without notice of the judgment. A. died in 1845. C., one of A.'s daughters, in 1862, presented a petition to sell the equitable interest in R., to pay the judgment. No payment of principal or interest was ever made on foot of the judgment, nor was there any acknowledgment in writing, or revivor, within twenty years before the filing of the petition. Held, even supposing the £2500 and £500 were represented by the judgment, that B. was entitled, as a purchaser for value without notice, to R., discharged from the judgment, and, that therefore the petition must be discharged with costs.

Semble—That a judgment creditor, claiming against an assignee for value, should aver notice, to give himself any equity.—In re Grady's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 154. (L.E.C.)

1. A will directed that no part of the testator's property, except the interest in a house, should be sold or disposed of for ten years only, if thought advisable by the executors; and bequeathed testator's property to his son, a minor. The executor sold the interest in the house to the respondent, who had notice of some restriction on the executor's power to sell. There were not any debts. In a suit to impeach the sale—Held, that the respondent was bound to prove that the sale, being a breach of trust, was at the full value.—M'Mullen v. O'Reilly, 15 I. C. R. 251. (R.)

2. In 1849 judgments were obtained against A., who in 1851 became by virtue of a parol agreement, or by the operation of law, tenant from year to year of X.

In professed pursuance of the Judgment Mortgage Act, s. 6, affidavits were in 1855 registered in respect of the judgments of 1849 against A.'s interest in X. In 1858 that interest was enlarged by A.'s accepting a lease for years, with a covenant for perpetual renewal. This lease was, immediately upon its execution, deposited with B. to secure a previous loan made by C. to A. on the faith of this security. Throughout this transaction B. acted as solicitor for both A. and C. There was not any investigation of the title, and B. had actual notice of the previous tenancy from year to year. A.'s enlarged interest in X. having been sold, a question of priority arose between C. and the judgment creditors of 1849 touching the proceeds of the sale. Held, that the tenancy from year to year, not having become vested in A. under an "instrument," was not under Pigot's Act withdrawn from the operation of the judgments of 1849 by the 2nd section of the Judgment Mortgage Act.

That he enlarged interest of 1858, being a graft on the tenancy from year to year, became vested in A. as a trustee for the judgment creditors of 1849, to the extent of their equitable charges; and that C., although a purchaser for value, took subject to these incumbrances, on the assumption of their having been kept duly registered as judgments, the circumstances having been such as to fix him with notice of their existence.—In re Tottenham's Estate, 16 I. C. R. 115. (L.E.C.)

XIII. 3. Choses in Action.

3. An assignee of a chose in action takes it subject only to existing equities, and not to collateral rights arising from events after the assignment. Therefore when X., a legatee, assigned his legacy, payable out of a charge on A.'s estate, and, the executor having died, X. obtained administration to the testator, and as such administrator received payments from A., whereby the charge became deficient to pay other legatees—Held, that X.'s assignee was not bound to bear the entire loss.

The rule requiring notice of an assignment of a chose in action does not apply when there is no question between successive claimants under the assignor; and as between them, the personal representative is the proper party to have the notice of the assignment of a legacy, though payable out of a debt to the estate.—Molloy v. French, 13 I. E. R. 261. (C.)

4. A married woman being entitled to a share in a legacy payable out of real estate, she, by her husband's consent, and with other beneficiaries, agreed to accept the lands in lieu of the money. The testamentary trustee accordingly conveyed the lands to a trustee. By a subsequent deed declaring the trusts, a portion of the lands was limited to the husband and wife during their joint lives, and to the survivor for life; remainder to such of their children as the husband in his lifetime, or the wife, if she survived him, should by deed or will appoint. Held (by the Lord Chancellor), that the assignment to the trustee did not operate as a reduction into possession of the wife's chose in action, and that the lands into which the money was thereby converted became subject to the same uses and trusts as the money.

By the Lord Chancellor:—That the modification of the prior rights and interests of the husband and wife in the lands formed a sufficient consideration in the deed declaring the trusts, to make it a deed for value.—In re Bayley's Estate, 16 I. C. R. 215. (C.A.)

XIV. APPLICATION OF PURCHASE-MONEY.

5. Semble—If a man sells lands which are subject to specialty debts, this Court will presume that the purchase-money is to be applied to discharge them, and that the sale is made with that view; and the purchaser will be discharged.—Higgins v. Shaw, 2 Dr. & War. 356; 1 Con. & L. 400. (C.)

6. In a suit by a vendor, to establish a lien upon the estate for the amount of the unpaid purchase-money, the Court decreed that the ptf., notwithstanding the recital in the deed of conveyance of the payment of the consideration money, and the receipt endorsed on it, was entitled to an enquiry whether the full amount of the consideration money was paid; and to a lien, as an unpaid vendor, on the lands, for so much of the consideration money as should, upon enquiry, appear to be unpaid, with interest from the date of the conveyance. Held, that the onus of proving the payment of the consideration money lay upon the deft. (the assignee of the vendee); and that neither the recital nor the receipt was any evidence of the fact.—Croly v. O'Callaghan, 5 I. E. R. 25. (E.E.)

1. When a policy of insurance is assigned upon trusts, even though the deed contains no express power to the trustee to give receipts, the insurer is not compellable to see to the application of the sum assigned; payment to the trustee will sufficiently discharge him.—Ford v. Ryan, 4 I. C. R. 342. (C.)

2. When a trustee, entitled to receive purchase-money, gives an order requiring it to be paid to a person named therein, and acknowledges, in the deed of purchase, the receipt of the money; and when the transaction seems to be one within the province of the trustee, and the purchaser has no notice of the breach of trust committed, he is not liable for the misapplication of the money.

Semble—Parties paying money to trustees having power to give receipts, are not bound to pay it into their hands, or into a bank to their credit. A judgment on the receipt of the trustee is sufficient to discharge the payer.—Burris v. Sheppard, 6 I. Jur. 98. (C.)

XV. LIFE ESTATES: REVERSIONS: OTHER LIMITED INTERESTS.

3. A., entitled, if B. died without issue, to the interest of £2000, for life, sold his reversionary interest for £250. The Court gave effect to the contract, notwithstanding allegations of inadequacy of price, the dealing not having been with an expectant heir.—Woodroffe v. Allen, Hay. & J. 73. (E.E.)

4. Semble—The purchaser of a reversion expectant on a demise made by the vendor may, on its expiration, maintain a possessory bill on the vendor's possession, though the tenant has not acknowledged the purchaser as his landlord.—Lefroy v. Lee, H. & J. 721. (E.E.)

5. When, an estate for life having been sold under a decree, the tenant for life died after lodgment of one-fourth of the purchase-money, and obtaining the rule nisi, but before the sale was confirmed—Held, that the purchaser was bound to complete his purchase.—Vasey v. Elwood, 5 I. E. R. 184; Fl. & K. 667. (R.)—[Affd.: 3 Dr. & War. 74; 2 Con. & L. 47. (C.)]

6. On a bill for specific performance of a contract to purchase a reversion expectant on a lease for lives, the vendor is entitled to interest on the purchase-money from the day on which the Master reports that a good title could have been made.

In future the Court will add, to the reference, whether a good title can be made, a direction to the Master to enquire and report at either party's request, at what time a good title was shown.—Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 2 Dr. & War. 43. (C.)

7. A life interest having been sold under a decree, the tenant for life died after the one-fourth of the purchase-money had been lodged, but before the sale was confirmed. Held, that the contract was not complete until the sale had been confirmed by the order of the Court; and that the purchaser was not bound to complete his purchase.—Vincent v. Going, 3 Dr. & War. 75, n. (C.)—[Rev. 3 I. E. R. 480; Fl. & K. 250. (R.)]

8. Under a contract to make a good title to a lease for lives renewable for ever, the vendor must show who are the lives existing at the time of the contract.—Anderson v. Higgins, 1 Jon. & L. 718. (C.)

- I. WHAT AMOUNTS TO, AND GENERALLY.
- II. EFFECT OF.

I. WHAT AMOUNTS TO: WAIVER GENERALLY.

1. By indenture of demise executed in 1835, the lessee covenanted not to do a certain act, under the penalty of a double rent, recoverable by distress as the single rent. A creditor's suit having been instituted to sell the lessor's interest, Y., a solicitor, was appointed receiver therein. O. had proved as a judgment creditor in the suit, and Y., had acted as his solicitor. In H. Term, 1847, an action was brought against the lessee for injuries to the property of W. (ptf. in the action, but no party to the demise of 1835), consequential upon an act done in violation of the covenant in that lease. This action was stopped by consent, and the matter referred to three arbitrators, who, in ignorance of the prohibitory covenant in the lease, awarded that the lessee should, amongst other things, do a certain act, which involved a breach of that covenant. The lessee served a copy of this award upon all the parties in the creditors' suit, except Y., accompanied with a notice of his intention to perform it; and then began to act pursuant to the award. In June 1838, O. became the purchaser in the creditors' suit. The sale was confirmed in July 1839, and the conveyance executed in 1840. It was proved that in July 1838, O. had seen the workmen of the lessee engaged in performing the act directed by the award, and had not made any objection thereto; and that Y. was also aware of it in 1838. Held, that there was not such an acquiescence by O. as amounted to a waiver of the forfeiture caused by the act so done in violation of the covenant in the lease.

That notice to the solicitor in that case was not sufficient to bind the principal.

In order to constitute a waiver of a legal right, there must be fraud, or such acquiescence, as, in the view of a Court of Equity, would make it a fraud to insist thereon upon the legal right.—Gordon v. O'Reilly, 11 R. & W. 414, 431, 433. (C.)

2. Acquiescence in a voidable transaction, not be a waiver of the right to avoid it, if the party so acquiescing was the debtor of the person against whom he should proceed to impeach the transaction, and therefore with his power.—Mulhollen v. Martin, 3 Dr. & W. 317. (C.)

3. Lease in 1819, with covenant against assignment, and to pay an increased head rent in case of breach. In 1824 lessee assigned with consent. In 1845 another assignment without consent. Held, that the first assignment was not a general waiver of the covenant, and that the lessor was entitled to the post rent.—Stewart v. Hassard, 1 L. Jur. 291. R.

4. A., in 1838, agreed to sell B. certain lands, B. to pay £6000 of the purchase-money at once, and the rest by the 1st Jan. 1839, a good title being made out; B. to get possession of L., part of the lands, on the 1st May 1838, subject to any question of title; the abstract to be delivered on the 1st Nov. 1838, and a good title made out to the satisfaction of B.'s counsel, in a month after; B. to execute the conveyance on the 1st Jan. 1839; and if a good title were not made out by the 1st Feb. 1839 (which was expressly fixed as of the essence of the contract), B. to be discharged from his purchase. B. paid the £6000; entered into possession of L., and before Jan. 1839 requested A. not to press the contract, as he was not in a condition to pay the balance. At B.'s request A. deferred to furnish the abstract until 1844. In August 1845, B. furnished requisitions for searches. The discussion on the title continued until June 1847, when B. stated that he considered himself no longer bound, unless his objections were satisfactorily answered in a month. A. then furnished what he relied on as satisfactory evidence of the point in dispute; declined to give further searches; and in March 1848 filed this bill for specific performance. Held, that though time was originally of the essence of the contract, it was waived by the conduct of the parties. That B.'s right to give notice to rescind the contract could not arise until July 1847; and that the bill was filed within a reasonable time after. That the retention of L. by B. was inconsistent with the rescission of the contract.—The satisfaction of counsel means reasonable satisfaction.—Gordon v. Mahony, 13 I. E. R. 383. (C.)

5. An agreement, "to sell the interest of A. in the lands of W.," does not absolve A., the vendor, from the necessity of proving his lessor's title, nor is that necessity waived by the fact that the vendee has taken possession of the lands before the lessor's title is produced. When an agreement to sell a leasehold is silent respecting the production of the lessor's title, parol testimony is admissible to prove facts and circumstances constituting a waiver by the vendee of production of the lessor's title.

Semle.—If such waiver be proved, the Court will declare it to be established, although the bill does not contain a prayer to that effect.—Wright v. Griffith, 1 I. C. R. 695; 3 I. Jur. 138. (C.)

1. The Board of the College of Physicians resolved that B. should be accepted as tenant of a farm for thirty-one years, at a rent of £1. 10s. 0d. an acre, as nominee of P., a former tenant, who had been allowed to dispose of his interest. F., B.'s solicitor, acting under a general authority, wrote to the solicitor of the College that, in consequence of the dangerous illness of B., he had not finally concluded with P., and could not take out the lease. Held, that the letter amounted to a waiver of B.'s right to the lease.

Quere.—Whether, if there had not been any waiver, P. could have compelled the execution of a lease to the representative of B., who was a banker, and would not have resided on the farm?

After B.'s death, P. filed a cause petition for a specific performance of the agreement. The solicitor for the College stated in his affidavit an agreement made in 1846 for a lease for twenty-one years, at a rent of £1. 17s. 0d. an acre, with the brother of P., who had formerly been tenant of the farm, and whose administrator and creditor P. was, of which agreement P. was ignorant. P. amended his petition, and, as administrator, prayed, in the alternative, a specific performance of that agreement. Held, having regard to the 19th G. O. of May 1857, that the misjoinder could be set right, by amendment of the prayer, at the hearing.

Quere.—Whether the 19th G. O. of May 1857 applies to misjoinder of causes of suit, as well as to misjoinder of parties?

Held also, on the authority of Lindsay v. Lynch (2 Sch. & Lef. 1), that the petition should be dismissed, as praying relief in the alternative, under two inconsistent agreements. But the Court gave leave to amend the petition, by abandoning the relief prayed by the original petition.

The petitioner had paid the rent of £1. 10s. an acre up to March 1856; and receipts had been given by the respondents for each gale. Held, that the petitioner was entitled to specific performance of the agreement of 1846, on the terms of paying all rent from the 25th March 1856, at the rate of £1. 17s., without prejudice to the respondents bringing such action as they might be advised, for the arrears alleged to be due up to March 1856.—Power v. College of Physicians, 7 I. C. R. 104. (R.)

2. The purchaser of a leasehold interest filed a petition for specific performance. The respondent, in his answering affidavit, insisted that time was of the essence of the contract; and that he had not waived his right so to insist. The petitioner in his replying affidavits went into evidence to establish a waiver. Held, that it could not be received, no case of waiver having been made on the petition.

When the petitioner intends to rely upon a waiver by the respondent of a right arising out of the contract, the waiver must be specifically put in issue by the petition.—Barry v. Burns, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 97. (C.)

3. When a purchaser of lands waives his right to have proof of the title of the vendor, who institutes a suit for specific performance, the vendor ought, if he wishes to avail himself of the waiver, to put that question in issue by his petition; the question should not be raised afterwards by affidavit.

As a general rule, each party to a contract for the purchase of lands should employ a separate solicitor; the same solicitor should not act for both.—Meara v. Rogers, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 108. (R.)

4. In April 1854, A. contracted to let lands to B. at an occupation rent. The written agreement provided that the lease should be taken out in three months. B. immediately went into possession of the lands. In May 1854, B. tendered a draft lease to A. who refused to execute it. In Jan. 1856, A. sold the lands to C., who had notice of the agreement. In June 1856, C. tendered to B. a deed of attornment, describing B. as tenant from year to year; this B. refused to execute. In March 1857 C. served a notice to quit on B., and in May 1857 B. filed his petition. Held, that there was no abandonment of the lease, and that there was no such waiver as to disentitle B. to specific performance of his contract.—Brophy v. Connolly, 7 I. C. R. 173; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 330. (C.A.)

5. Waiver of a demand under the Tenantry Act, if the petitioner intends to rely upon it, should be put in issue by the petition; not by an affidavit in reply.—Ex parte Bull, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 332. (R.)

6. The Court will not act on evidence of a parol waiver of a written contract, unless it be very clear and distinct. The petitioner and respondent contracted in writing to make a joint purchase. The petitioner paid the respondent one-half of the amount of the deposit, but afterwards took back that money, and gave the respondent a receipt for it. In a suit for specific performance, the respondent relied on the resumption of the money, and the receipt, as a waiver of the contract. The petitioner alleged that he had resumed the money on a misrepresentation by the respondent; that the deposit had been returned, and the contract rescinded. The evidence conflicted as to the alleged false representation. Held, that the respondent had failed to prove the waiver, and that there should be a decree as the case stood. The Court offered the respondent an issue on the question of misrepresentation.—Clifford v. Kelly, 7 I. C. R. 333. (R.)

7. D., sub-tenant of a portion of leasehold property, having undertaken to pay the head-rent, fraudulently omitted to do so. The head landlord evicted the lease for non-payment of rent. More than six months after the execution of the decree, the head landlord offered the sub-tenant the option of redeeming, or taking out a new lease to himself. The sub-tenant elected to take the new lease. Held, that the forfeiture was not waived in favour of the mesne tenant.—Dowding v. The Commrs. of Ch. Don. & Beg., 12 I. C. R. 361. (C.)

1. M. agreed to sell his interest in a lease under the following conditions of sale (amongst others):—"As the property in question is of small value, and the vendor is unwilling to incur any unnecessary expense or costs, the purchaser is to accept the title which the present vendor accepted upon the occasion of the purchase of the premises in February last; and such purchaser shall not be entitled to object on any grounds whatsoever to the title anterior to the conveyance to the present vendor, dated the 1st of February 1861, or to make any requisition in respect to such prior title; but the abstract of title under which the vendor was satisfied upon the purchase of these premises, and all deeds, documents, and papers handed over to him or his solicitor upon that occasion, shall be handed to the present purchaser." Pending the negotiation between the solicitors of the parties, M. frequently by letter assured the intending purchaser that the title was perfectly good. Held, that the letters amounted to a waiver of the above conditions of sale.—Mathews v. Archer, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 235. (C.)

2. Proviso in a mortgage, that if the interest should be punctually paid, the principal should not be called in before a certain date; but that in case of default the mortgagee might enter notwithstanding any subsequent acceptance of interest. The first half-year's interest was not paid within the time limited. During that time the mortgagee was out of the country. The interest was forwarded upon the mortgagee's sending instructions as to the mode of remittance. The next half-year's interest was liquidated, in advance, by a bill accepted by the mortgagor for the mortgagee's convenience, and the mutual relations of the parties were treated as subsisting unchanged. Held, that there had not been default in payment of the interest, and that if any default had been made, the subsequent conduct of the mortgagee would have amounted to a waiver of it.—In re Taaffe's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 347; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 18. (L.E.C.)

3. The tenant of an intermediate interest in lands the property of a See, without having renewed his lease or paid rent to his immediate landlord for more than twenty years, petitioned the L. E. Court to sell the fee, but afterwards served on his immediate landlord a notice containing an offer to take out a perpetuity grant. The landlord, by notice, replied that he would execute the grant on payment to him of all rent, fines, interest, and costs of establishing his title in the L. E. Court. Held, that that notice was a waiver of the forfeiture.—Courtenay v. Parker, 16 I. C. R. 320. (R.)

II. EFFECT OF.

4. An information against distillers charged them with distilling large quantities of spirits for which they had not paid duty; they having evaded payment by concealing the distillation, and pretending that their distillery had been silent during the time when the spirits were distilled. The information required the debts. to discover the actual quantities of wort fermented in the distillery, and prayed an account of the duties payable to the Crown on spirits distilled by them. The Att.-Gen. waived all penalties and forfeitures. Held, that the debts. were bound to answer the charges fully; and could not protect themselves on the ground that the facts charged would, if coupled with other facts, show that they had been guilty of a conspiracy to defraud the Crown.—The Att.-Gen. v. Conroy, 2 Jon. 791. (E.E.)

WASTE.

See PRACTICE, INJUNCTION—LANDLORD AND TENANT.

5. In 1618, the Irish Society granted lands to the Fishmongers' Company, reserving the timber. By deed of 1741, the Society declared that they would not claim trees thereafter planted, but that the Company might cut them, so as they should be first applied in improving the estate. In 1747, the Company demised to a lessee, excepting the trees, with liberty to themselves to cut them to improve their estates, according to their interest, but not for sale; granting estovers to the tenant, who covenanted to use the trees cut on the estate, and not for sale. He cut trees for sale. Held, that neither the nature of their title, nor the Timber Acts, were an objection to a suit by the Company for an account and injunction. A bill by a landlord for an account of waste, committed by a tenant in cutting timber, lies against his executors.

The waste having been committed during 50 years of the tenant's life, the bill was not filed until a few years after his death. The account was refused touching all the waste done in the tenant's life; but was granted with an injunction touching waste committed by the executors.—The Fishmongers' Company v. Beresford, Beat. Rep. 607. (C.)

1. The clerk of a patron, having recovered in quare impedit, filed a bill under the 1 G. 2, c. 23, against the presenting bishop and against his clerk, for an account of the profits of the benefice pending the litigation. The bill contained (amongst others) charges of waste by cutting trees and otherwise. Held, that such a clerk, deft., is liable, in a suit instituted in this Court under the statute, to account for the waste committed; and that the incumbent's remedy for such dilapidation is not confined to a proceeding in the Ecclesiastical Court under the 11 W. 3, c. 6, and 12 G. 3, c. 10.—Crompton v. Bishop of Meath, S. & Sc. 297. (R.)

2. A bill by the next remainderman charged that the tenant for life, who was dispunishable of waste, and had power to make leases not dispunishable of waste, had demised part of the lands to a third person, who, in collusion with the tenant for life, was committing waste by turning up, tilling, and burning the land. The deft. admitted the turning up, &c.; but stated that it was land which the tenant for life had reclaimed, and laid down in grass about thirty years before. The Court refused a motion for an injunction.

Semble—That such pasture is not ancient meadow or pasture.—Davies v. D., 2 I. E. R. 414. (E.E.)

3. Upon the receiver's application, an injunction was granted to restrain one tenant of the estate from quarrying upon a private road, part of the premises, which was common to all the tenants.—Dorman v. D., 3 I. E. R. 885. (E.E.)

4. The erection of a building, even of small size, for a purpose foreign from that contemplated on the demise of the lands, is waste in the contemplation of a Court of Equity.—Hunt v. Hodges, 1 I. Jur. 83. (C.)

5. To break up a rabbit-warren, unless it be a warren by charter or prescription, is not waste at Common Law; the Court will not grant an injunction to prevent it. Quære—If the warren be demised as such?—Lurting v. Conn, 1 I. C. R. 273; 3 I. Jur. 99. (R.)

6. When a lessee, bound by covenant not to commit waste, has committed acts of waste, for which damages merely nominal would be given, the Court of Ch. will not entertain against him, a suit founded on those acts, when it appears that he does not contemplate committing any further waste, or assert a right to commit it. No change in this respect has been introduced by the Ch. Amendment Act 1858. A tenant, by replying to a letter charging him with committing waste, and requiring him to make compensation for it, "that he is prepared to defend any action which may be brought against him, and to show that, so far from having committed injury, he has materially improved the premises demised to him," does not assert a right to commit the waste complained of.—Doran v. Carroll, 11 I. C. R. 378. (C.)

7. The introduction of folding-doors into the walls of a deanery parlour is waste. The cost of removing them, and of restoring the wall, was charged against the late Dean's executor; the value of the doors being allowed for.

The deanery gatehouse was, the Dean and Chapter assenting, removed by the late Dean without any faculty. Held, waste. The necessary expense of rebuilding it was charged against the Dean's executor.—In re Dilapidations of the Deanery-house of St. Patrick's, Dublin, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 38. (Cons.)

8. The conversion of lands into a cemetery is waste. Demise of lands for lives and years, with a covenant to yield them up in repair at the expiration of the lease. The lessee's assignee agreed with Poor-law Guardians with the Poor-law Commissioners' assent, not under seal, to let a portion of the lands to the Guardians as a cemetery. The land was so used for many years. The reversion was sold in the L. E. Court, and conveyed subject to the lease to the petitioner, who before the conveyance had notice of the cemetery's existence. Held, that the agreement with the Guardians was not a "purchase or hiring" by the Commissioners within the 10 Vic., c. 81, s. 20.

Semble—Such a "purchase or hiring" must be by deed, and from or with the concurrence of the owner of the fee.

The Court granted an injunction to restrain future burials, but refused to order the restoration of the surface to its condition at the date of the demise.—Cregan v. Cullen, 16 I. C. R. 339. (R.)

9. A lease for years demised premises "with the right of digging, lowering, levelling, and removing" any portion thereof, so as to make them suitable for building or ornamental purposes. The lessee covenanted not to "commit any wilful or voluntary waste, spoil, or destruction upon said premises."

The lessee removed sand, which he sold for profit. The Master reported that the sand had been removed bona fide to aid the lessee in building upon and improving the premises. On exceptions taken to the report—Held, that the lessee, though he might remove the sand bona fide, was not empowered to sell any portion thereof; and that his doing so was waste, although the price was expended on improving the premises.—Clelland v. Ritchie, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 64. (C.)

I. GENERAL JURISDICTION TOUCHING WILLS, &c.

1. When administration had been granted, by sentence of the Ecclesiastical Court, to A., as only next-of-kin of the intestate, in a suit in which B. also claimed to be the only next-of-kin; and that sentence was affirmed by the Court of Delegates on appeal; and B. filed a bill impeaching the pedigree of A. and to establish his own; this Court would not grant an injunction until answer to prevent the administrator possessing himself of the assets, he being, by the decree of the Ecclesiastical Court, both legally and equitably entitled thereto.—Maher v. Gorman, 6 I. E. R. 304. (R.)
2. In a suit to carry into execution the trusts of a will; the Court will not merely declare the rights of the parties, and then leave them to act on that declaration out of Court.—Brown v. Martyn, 2 Jon. & L. 333. (C.)
3. The Court will distribute a fund in Court payable to a personal representative, upon a

Diocesan probate, if the intestate had not bona notabilia.—Graves v. G., 8 I. E. R. 36. (R.)

1. When the heir-at-law successfully resists probate of a will of real estate, the Court of Probate has not jurisdiction to charge the real estate with the costs of the litigation.—Newton v. N., 13 I. C. R. 245. (C.A.)

II. WHO MAY MAKE A WILL.

[Since the 1 Vic., c. 26, s. 7, no person under the age of 21 can make a Will.]

[As to Persons under Disability; See Massy v. Pennefather, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 268.]

III. WHAT MAY BE DISPOSED OF BY WILL.

[See 34 & 35 H. 8, c. 5; 32 H. 8, c. 1; 3 W. & M., c. 14; 29 Car. 2, c. 3; 7 W. 4 & 1 Vic., c. 26.]

2. The right to set aside a conveyance improperly obtained by a solicitor from his client is devisable.—Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dr. & War. 184; 1 Con. & L. 291. (C.)

IV. VALIDITY AND CONSTITUTION OF.

[As to Bequests for Charitable Purposes, See MORTMAIN, CHARITY: 1 Vic., c. 26.]

3. A devise of lands in Ireland, to Trinity College, Dublin, for the promotion of the knowledge of the Irish language—Held, void.

In Ireland the Statutes of Mortmain include the University of Dublin, and are affected only by the 10 Car. 1.

Devises to Corporations, whether with or without license, are void in Ireland, under the exception in the 10 Car. 1, sess. 2, c. 2, s. 10.

Though a devise to a Corporation be void, its trusts may be supported in equity, provided they are not corporate.—Att.-Gen. v. Flood, Hayes, 611; Hay. & J., App. 21, 32, 35, 37. (E.E.)

4. When there is a devise in trust, which devise is void at Law by reason of the incapacity of the devisee to take, the trust will nevertheless be supported in Equity, which will enforce it against the estate.—Incorporated Society v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58; 4 I. E. R. 177. (C.)

5. Semble—That a testamentary instrument which is left incomplete by reason of the testator's sudden death, or other incapacity of making a will suddenly supervening, is not void in toto, but is good as far as it goes.—Armstrong v. Millar, 4 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

6. The fact of testator retaining his mental capacity, and for a considerable length of time surviving the date of, without altering or throwing doubt upon his will, is an important circumstance in favour of its validity.

A will has not been set aside, on the ground of undue influence having been used to procure its execution, in any case in which the evidence did not establish the ascendancy of the controlling power, and its actual exercise by the constraint and coercion of an enfeebled, exhausted, or subjugated intellect.

When force, fraud, or undue influence are alleged to have been exercised in obtaining the execution of a will, the mental capacity of the testator is a question of the utmost importance.

The fraud to vitiate a will must be contemporaneous with the making of the will; it must be discovered in, and form part of, the res gestæ. The means and power of achieving the fraud may have been previously acquired and realised, but the Court must be satisfied that the act impeached is effected by their actual present use and exercise at that time, controlling and defeating volition.

When it appeared uncertain whether the Court of Delegates had refused probate of a will, on the ground of fraud, or defect probatis, the Lord Chancellor being satisfied that, upon the latter of those grounds, the decision could not be supported, advised the issuing of a commission of review.—Kelly v. Thomas, 11 C. R. 510. (C.)

7. Bequest of an annuity to the monks of S., to provide clothing for the poor children attending their schools—Held, valid.

That the bequest showed a general charitable intent, which the Court would effectuate, though the school should be accidentally discontinued, or should cease to answer the very description of it in the will.

Bequest of an annuity to the parish priest of D., to provide for the expense of an organ and organist for the chapel of B—Held, valid.

A. bequeathed an annuity to the monks of M., to be appropriated to the improvement of the chapel of M. The abbot of M., at A.'s death, having died—Held, that his successor had no right to the annuity; and that there was no general charitable purpose for which a scheme should be directed.—Carbery v. Cat, 3 I. C. R. 281; 4 I. Jur. 274. (C.)

8. A bequest of a sum of money for the purpose of building a church in Ireland is not within the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 97, s. 16, and is therefore valid, though the will be made within three months of the testator's death.—Pollock v. Day, 14 I. C. R. 297. (R.)—[Affirmed: ibid. 371. (C.A.)]

9. A solicitor drew from instructions a draft will, settling in strict settlement on testator's children his real estates, with powers of jointuring, charging portions, and giving maintenance. In these powers blanks were left for the sums, and for the trustees' names.

The testator had in his possession for a considerable time an epitome of the draft, of which he approved, and which contained like blanks.

The testator was suddenly taken ill. Whereupon the solicitor, of his own motion, filled up the blanks, but did not inform the testator how they had been filled. The will, so framed, was executed. Held, that the parts filled in formed no part of the will; of which, nevertheless, the remainder was valid.—O'Reilly v. O'R., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 216. (R.)

V. EXECUTION AND PUBLICATION OF WILLS.

1. On the 13th June 1825, J. made a will devising his real estate to E. On the 25th Nov. following, he executed another will, disposing of his personal estate merely, but revoking all former wills, and attested by three witnesses thus:—J. told two of them that the document was his will, pointed out his name, and acknowledged the signature to be his, whereupon they subscribed and attested the will. Whilst the second witness was in the act of signing, the third witness accidentally entered the room, and was asked by J. to become a witness, although, J. said, it was unnecessary. J. then gave that witness to understand that the document was his will, but did not point out his name, or acknowledge the signature to be his, to this witness, who might, however, while in the act of signing, have seen J.'s name. Held, that it was duly executed as a devising will under the Statute of Frauds. That it, though conversant with personal property only, was a good will to revoke the devise of the freehold.

Semle—Even as a "writing of revocation," it was well executed under the statute, J.'s acknowledgment being equivalent to signing in the witnesses' presence.—Jones v. Ogle, S. & Sc. 1. (R.)

2. A will terminated with a testimonium clause about two inches from the foot of the second page of a sheet of paper, leaving ample room for the signatures of the testatrix and of the witnesses, all of whom, signed their names opposite to an attestation clause at the top of the third page, upon which no part of the will was written. Held, that the will was properly signed within the meaning of the 1 Vic., c. 26.—Derinzy v. Turner, 1 I. C. R. 341. (Court of Delegates.)

3. Although, to sustain a case of fraud, and show that a will has been made under coercion and influence, the evidence must be pointed to the very factum of the will, and directly show that the instrument whose validity is disputed was executed under pressure of coercion and undue influence, the jury may, from circumstantial evidence, or from inference and presumption from such evidence, come to the conclusion that coercion and undue influence existed.—Rosborough v. Boyse, 3 I. C. R. 489; 6 I. Jur. 249. (C.)—[S. c. 3 I. C. R. 540, 629.—Orders and decrees reversed; 6 H. Lds. Cas. 2.]

4. Under the 1 Vic., c. 26, s. 9, it is necessary that the witnesses to a will shall subscribe their names in the presence of the testator, and of each other.—[Casement v. Fulton, 5 Moo. P. Cas. 180, followed.]—Slack v. Busted, 6 I. C. R. 1; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 98. (R.)

5. Quare—Whether under the 1 Vic., c. 26, s. 9, it is necessary that the witnesses to a will shall subscribe their names in the presence of each other.—Slack v. Busted, 6 I. C. R. 226. (C.)—(Sub nom. Slack v. Gillier, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 98.)

6. One of the attesting witnesses subscribed the will after the testator's signature, but before execution, in the presence of the other witnesses. Held, a bad execution under the 1 Vic., c. 26.

That witness should sign again.—Mitchell v. Huffington, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 40. (P.)

7. A solicitor prepared, on the day next but one before the testator's death, a draft will, under which he took, as residuary legatee, a large pecuniary benefit. On the day on which the will was prepared the testator executed it in the presence of two witnesses, brought by the solicitor to witness the testator's signature. The validity of the will having been questioned in a contested suit—Held, that the solicitor's evidence on his own behalf was admissible, but should be received with great jealousy and caution.

In such a case mere formal proof, that the will was executed according to the forms prescribed by law, is not sufficient to establish the will; the evidence should satisfy the Court that the instrument so executed was the genuine will of a free and capable testator.

Review of the principles which govern the Court in estimating the capacity of a testator and the testimony of witnesses in contested testamentary cases.—Keogh v. Barrington, Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 1. (C.A.)

8. V. having produced a paper to two persons, told them that it was his will, and requested them to witness his execution of it. The paper was so folded that only a blank space at the bottom was presented to the witnesses; the writing (if any) was hidden.

One witness deposed that he saw no trace of writing inside the paper. The other, averring that it contained some writing, could not say what that writing was.

V. signed his name on the blank portion in their presence. They attested the paper in his presence and in that of each other. Held, that the will was valid.

Quare—If neither of the witnesses had seen any trace of writing inside the paper?

The next-of-kin did not call any witnesses. Held, that they were entitled to costs out of the estate.—Byrne v. Hogan, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 114. (P.)

9. A testator signed his will in the absence of the two attesting witnesses, of whom the survivor negatived an express acknowledgment then, but admitted that the will was on the table, signed, before the testator, and handed over to the witnesses to sign. The drawer and the deft., who were present, swore to an express acknowledgment. Held, that there was an express acknowledgment, and, besides, that there was enough to constitute a virtual one at law.—Todd v. Thompson, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 390. (P.)

1. Two wills, each of which devised real estate, were executed and attested on the same day, and at the same place. The witnesses could not state which was signed last. Both were endorsed in testator's handwriting: one, with the words "The last will and testament of R. F.," the other, "Duplicate will of R. F." The same words were written on each will after the attestation clause. Each revoked all previous wills. The wills were inconsistent. Held, that the former document was the last will.—Lofthus v. Stoney, 17 I. C. R. 178. (R.)

VI. ATTESTATION OF. See PRACTICE, EVIDENCE.

[The mode of Attestation now settled by 1 Vic., c. 26, ss. 9, 14, 15, 16, and 17.

As to Exceptions in favour of Wills of Seamen, &c., see ss. 11 and 12.]

2. The day before her death, testatrix, V., bequeathed a legacy to her sister, B. The will was then properly attested by two witnesses. Immediately after they had signed, B., at V.'s request, and, as she thought, for greater security, signed her name to the will. After V.'s death, B. cut her name off the will. Held, that she signed as an attesting witness, and must pay the costs incurred by her spoiling the will.—Toker v. Maguire, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (P.)

VII. REPUBLICATION AND REVIVAL OF WILLS.

3. A will was dated before the change of currency, made by the 6 G. 4, c. 79. A codicil was dated afterwards. Held, such a republication of the will that the legacies were deemed bequeathed in British currency, though the codicil merely appointed new executors.—Hamilton v. Carroll, 1 I. E. R. 175. (C.)

4. If a testator devises to B. an annuity charged upon lands, and subsequently conveys a portion of the premises to the devisee of the rentcharge, the rentcharge is thereby extinguished.

A will speaks from the testator's death; 1 Vic., c. 26, s. 24. But if, after its execution, and before his death, he does an act which extinguishes or revokes the bequest as to that portion, the will is not set up by the statute.—Hewson v. Carolin, 3 I. Jur. 285. (C.)

5. C., by will, devised lands to trustees for B. for life, "provided she does not marry;" remainder over, in case of her death or marriage. C. married B., and afterwards made a codicil to his will, which republished it. Held, that the devise to B. took effect, notwithstanding her marriage to C.—Cooper v. C., 6 I. C. R. 217. (C.)

6. V., being seized in fee of the lands of X., by will, in 1829, devised X. to A. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; and, in default of such issue, to B. and C., share and share alike. After some further dispositions of other property, the will contained this clause:—"I devise and bequeath the residue and remainder of my estate and effects, not herein specifically devised, to my brothers J. S. and D. S., share and share alike." In 1830, C. died. In 1832, V. made a codicil, but made no alteration in the disposition of X. The codicil did not in terms re-publish the will, but adverted to it more than once, and confirmed the appointment of the trustees named in the will. Held, that the codicil was a general re-publication of the will.

That the lapsed devise to C. did not come within the operation of the residuary devise, but passed to the heir-at-law.—In re Swiney, 6 I. C. R. 455. (I.E.C.)

7. V. made, in Feb. 1858, a will which he subsequently destroyed. After its destruction, he made a will containing a disposition of his property, different from that contained in his former will, and dated in Jan. 1859. These two wills were prepared by different solicitors. In Feb. 1859, he applied to the solicitor who had prepared the will of 1858, and who was ignorant of the existence of that made in 1859, to prepare a codicil. The codicil on its face appeared to be a codicil to the will of 1858, and referred to its provisions. V. afterwards destroyed the codicil of Feb. 1859, with the intention of setting up the will of 1859, and died, without making any further testamentary disposition. Held, that he died intestate.—Newton v. N., 12 I. C. R. 118; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 129. (C.A.)

8. In 1845, a testator, by will, settled his estates on A. and his issue; then on B. and his issue. In 1854, he made another will, settling the estates, first, on B. and his issue, and then on A. and his issue; and, in 1858, executed a codicil to the will of 1845, which he mistook for the will of 1854, commencing thus:—"This is a codicil to the above will." Held, that parol evidence was inadmissible to prove the mistake; that the will of 1845 was revived; and that it, together with the codicil, formed the testator's last will.—In the Goods of Stowell, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 325. (P.)

VIII. REVOCATION OF.

[See 1 Vic., c. 26, ss. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22 & 23; and also Statutes repealing former Acts. See also VII, REPUBLICATION AND REVIVAL OF.]

1. By Cancellation.
2. By Marriage, and Birth of Issue.
3. By Will, Codicil, or other Testamentary Act. See infra, XVI.
4. By Alteration or Alienation of the Subject-matter by Subsequent Act or Deed.

VIII. 1. By Cancellation.

9. A testator bequeathed properties as follows:—"To our three children, Henry and James, now residing with me, our sons, and the before-named Anne, our daughter." This last member of the sentence had been stroked with a pen, as if to obliterate the words, which were quite legible. Held, that the previous words of description, "our three children," were sufficient to entitle Anne to take, even if the obliteration were complete, which it was not.—Boyd v. Martin, 2 Dr. & Wal. 355. (C.)

1. In a will of 1836, words, though cancelled, remained legible. Held, that, as to the personal estate bequeathed, the cancellation, though unattested, was complete.—In re Barrett, 8 I. C. R. 548. (R.)

2. V. devised, in trust, his estates in several Irish counties (which he named), "and elsewhere in Ireland." Through the word "Sligo," one of the named counties, he drew a line in ink, and initialed the alteration. The word remained quite legible. The attestation clause ran thus:—"In witness, &c., the word Sligo being struck out before the execution, and initialed by me." Held, that "elsewhere in Ireland," meant elsewhere in Ireland except in Sligo, and that the Sligo estate was not devised to the trustees.

The Lord Chancellor felt strongly convinced that the adverse possession of those estates by a third party, for more than twenty years, would bar all rights of the trustees, and of the equitable tenants in fee in remainder.—Cooper v. Warre, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (C.)

3. The effect of interlineations considered.—Hutchinson v. H., 13 I. E. R. 332. (C.)

VIII. 2. By Marriage, and Birth of Issue.

4. V. devised the lands of A., B., and C. to trustees, to the use of his son, H., for life; remainder to trustees to preserve, &c.; remainder to other trustees for 500 years, to raise £2000 for portions for H.'s younger children, and subject thereto to the use of the first and other sons of H. successively in tail male; remainder to X., a grandson, for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; and like successive remainders to two other grandsons for life, and their first and other sons in tail male; with an ultimate remainder to V.'s daughter in fee. Powers, including a power to charge £2000 for younger children, were given to the grandsons. Subsequently, V. married again, and vested A. and B. in trustees to secure his wife's jointure; and by codicil, executed afterwards, revoked any bequest or devise in his will to H., and devised A. and B. to him for life, subject to the second wife's jointure; remainder to a new trustee to preserve, &c.; remainder to H.'s first and other sons successively in tail general; remainder to his grandson, X., in fee; and directed that the codicil should be annexed to and made part of his will. Held, on rehearing, after two conflicting decisions, that the term and £2000 charge for H.'s younger children were not revoked.

The construction of implied revocations considered.—Persse v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 508. (C.) —[See this case on the hearing; Daly v. D., 2 Jon. & L. 752. (C.)]

5. When a party makes a will, and during the same day marries, the marriage operates as a revocation of the will, notwithstanding that, from the terms of the instrument, it appears that the testator did not intend that it should take effect till after the marriage. The law in such a case does not admit the doctrine of no fraction of a day.—Otway v. Sadleir, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 97. (P.)

VIII. 3. By Will, Codicil, or other Testamentary Act. See infra, XVI.

[See 1 Vic., c. 26, s. 20.]

6. On the 13th June 1825, J. made a will devising his real estates to E. On the 25th Nov. following, J. executed another will disposing of his personal estate merely; but revoking all former wills, and attested by three witnesses thus:—J. told two of them that the document was his will, pointed out his name, and acknowledged the signature to be his, whereupon they subscribed and attested the will. Whilst the second witness was in the act of signing, the third witness accidentally entered the room, and was asked by J. to become a witness, though J. said it was unnecessary. J. then gave that witness to understand that the document was his will, but did not point out his name, or acknowledge the signature to be his to this witness, who might, however, while signing it, have seen J.'s name. Held, that the will, though conversant only with personal property, was a good will to revoke the devise of the freehold.—Jones v. Oyle, S. & Sc. 1. (R.)

7. Articles of agreement provided that the interest of a fund, which was vested in trustees, should be paid to C. for life; after her death, the principal to go among the then unmarried children as her husband, D., should by deed or will appoint; in default of appointment, equally among the children living at his death. Pursuant to a trust in the articles, the fund was invested in lands. D., by will, appointed the lands among his sons thus:—B. to J.; G. to P.; K. to H.; and E. to N.; to go to them immediately on C.'s death; with a clause of survivorship amongst them, if any brother died before they respectively became entitled. By two subsequent deeds of appointment, D. irrevocably appointed B. to J., and K. to P. By a codicil, reciting those two deeds, D. revoked the appointment of K. to H., and, instead thereof, appointed G. to him. H. died after D., but predeceased C. Held, that the devise by the codicil of G. was an absolute appointment, not subject to the clause of survivorship in the will. That the period, at which the estates given by the will vested, was C.'s death, not D.'s.—Comrs. of Ch. D. & B. v. Cotter, 2 Dr. & Wal. 615. (C.) —[Latter point revd.: 2 I. E. R. 196; 1 Dr. & War. 498. (C.)]

1. V., by will, devised D. to trustees to the use of her son, Y., for life; remainder to his sons in tail. V. then bequeathed annuities to different members of her family; amongst them, one of £100 to H. She directed the annuities to be paid without any deduction, and charged them "on the lands so devised to the use of my son, Y.;" and on the residue of other lands which she directed to be sold. A codicil contained this clause—"And whereas I did, by my said will, give the lands of D. to the use of my son, Y., as therein; now I do hereby revoke so much of my said will as gives said lands of D. to my said son, Y., and I direct the trustees shall stand seized of the said last-mentioned lands to the use of my daughter, H." (the annuitant), "for her life, in addition to what I have left her by my said will." Held, that V. merely meant to substitute one devisee for the other, and did not intend to discharge D. from contribution to the annuities charged thereon by the will.

A codicil is never held to revoke a will further than is necessary to effect the testator's intentions.—Young v. Hassard, 1 Dr. & War. 638. (C.)

2. A legacy in a third codicil—Held, substitutional for a legacy given by the will, and for a cumulative legacy given by a prior codicil; the testator having, in his third codicil, given the legatee a description different from that given her by the will and prior codicil; having expressed an intention to alter his will; and having delivered this codicil as his last will.—Russell v. Dickson, 4 I. E. R. 339; 2 Dr. & War. 133; 1 Con. & L. 284. (C.)

3. Quere—Whether the devisee of an estate, which the testator subsequently contracts to sell, is entitled to the purchase-money?—Saunders v. Cramer, 5 I. E. R. 12; 3 Dr. & War. 87; 2 Con. & L. 54. (C.)

4. V., having by will devised two different properties among her nephews successively for life, remainder to their issue in strict settlement, making A. the head of one set of limitations, and B. of the other, by a codicil reciting that she had made devises to A. and B. respectively, and that she wished them to change places as to the properties so devised, revoked the "said bequests by her said will to the said A. and B. respectively," and bequeathed the property by the will devised to A., to B., his heirs, executors, &c.; and in like manner as to A. and his heirs, with respect to the property devised by the will to B. Held, that the codicil revoked all the limitations in the will, and vested the respective properties in A. and B. absolutely.—Murray v. Johnson, 2 Con. & L. 104; 3 Dr. & War. 148. (C.)

5. V. devised the lands of K., held for a term of years, to H. and J., and the longest liver of them. He afterwards executed two codicils on the same day. In the first he did not mention K. by name; but, after directing two bonds to be given to his eldest son, "to create a fund to pay their rent of the lands of K.," relinquished "a settlement made on J. of an interest concern on this occasion, and desired that the entire interest and property arising out of this farm, after the demise and extinction of the present lease, be converted into one fund." By the other codicil he gave property to pay the head rent of K. Held, that the bequest of K. to J. was not revoked by the codicils.—O'Shea v. Howley, 1 Jon. & L. 391; 7 I. E. R. 56. (C.)

6. V. devised lands to the use of H. for life, without impeachment of waste; remainder to trustees during the life of H., to preserve, &c.; remainder, after his decease, to trustees for a term, upon trust to raise portions for his younger children; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; with several remainders over.

By codicil, V. revoked any bequest or devise to H. by any former will or codicil; and devised the same lands to H. for life, subject to an annuity charged thereon by deed; remainder to M., during life, to preserve, &c.; remainder to the first and other sons of H. in tail; remainder to M. D. in fee. V. directed that this codicil should be taken as part of his will.

Semble—That the codicil revoked the devise of the term, and the trusts thereof.

When a codicil contains an unbroken set of limitations, irreconcilable with those in the will, and which exhaust the fee, the inference is—that the testator intended to dispose by the codicil of the whole fee, which he had otherwise disposed of by his will.—Daly v. D., 2 Jon. & L. 752. (C.)

[On re-hearing—Held, that the codicil did not revoke the term and the charge for younger children.—Persse v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 508. (C.)]

7. V. by will bequeathed one-seventh of a fund to B. for life, remainder to her daughter. The residue of the fund was bequeathed to the sisters of B. for life, remainder to their children; with an executory limitation over in default of children, in the nature of a cross remainder. By codicil, V. revoked the bequest of one-seventh to B. and her daughter, and declared his intention that they should take no benefit under the will. Held, a revocation of the interest of B. under the executory limitation.—Murray v. Richardson, 1 I. Jur. 73. (C.)

8. V. by will devised lands to A. and his heirs, to the use of R. for life, remainder to A. to preserve, &c., remainder to the use of the first and other sons of R. in tail, remainders over. By codicil, reciting that by will he had devised all his estate in the lands to R., he devised all his right, title, and interest in the lands to W. and R., and the survivor of them, on trusts which did not exhaust the fee; and ratified his will in all its parts, save so far as it had been revoked by the codicil, which was to be taken as part of his will. Held, that the legal estate tail devised by the will to the sons of R. was revoked by the codicil.

Quere—Whether the eldest son of R. was not under the codicil entitled to an equitable estate tail, subject to the trusts stated in the codicil?—Fitzmaurice v. Sadler, 12 I. E. R. 136. (R.)—[Revd.: 12 I. E. R. 544. (C.)—See 9 I. E. R. 595.]

1. V. devised the lands of A., B., and C., to trustees, to the use of his son H. for life; remainder to trustees to preserve, &c.; remainder to other trustees for 500 years, to raise £2000 for portions for H.'s younger children, and subject thereto to the use of the first and other sons of H. successively in tail male; remainder to X., a grandson, for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; with like successive remainders to two other grandsons for life, and their first and other sons in tail male; with an ultimate remainder to V.'s daughter in fee. Powers, including a power to charge £2000 for younger children, were given to the grandsons. Subsequently V. married again, and vested A. and B. in trustees to secure the wife's jointure; and by a codicil, executed afterwards, revoked any bequest or devise in his will to H., and devised A. and B. to him for life, subject to the second wife's jointure; remainder to a new trustee to preserve, &c.; remainder to H.'s first and other sons successively in tail general; remainder to his grandson X. in fee; and directed that the codicil should be annexed to and made part of his will. Held, on re-hearing, after two conflicting decisions, that the term and £2000 charge for H.'s younger children were not revoked.

The construction of implied revocations considered.—Persse v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 508. (C.)—[See the case on the hearing: Daly v. D., 2 Jon. & L. 752. (C.)]

2. V., one of whose sisters, S., was residing with her, while the other, O., resided with her (O.'s) husband, after giving several legacies, amongst them £100 to O., said: "The remainder of my property I leave to my sister S." Subsequently, after giving some small bequests, V. said: "I appoint my two sisters, S. and O., my executrices and residuary legatees of this my last will." Held, that the last residuary bequest did not revoke the first, and that S. took all the residuary fund.—In re Gregory's Trusts, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 55. (C.)

3. V. made, in Feb. 1858, a will, which he subsequently destroyed. After its destruction, he made a will containing a disposition of his property different from that contained in his former will, and dated in Jan. 1859. These two wills were prepared by different solicitors. In Feb. 1859, he applied to the solicitor who had prepared the will of 1858, and who was ignorant of the existence of the will of 1859, to prepare a codicil. The codicil on its face appeared to be a codicil to the will of 1858, and referred to its provisions. V. afterwards destroyed the codicil of Feb. 1859, with the intention of setting up the will of 1859, and died without making any further testamentary disposition. Held, that he died intestate.—Newton v. N., 12 I. C. R. 118; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 129. (C.A.)

4. A devise to a child of a legal rentcharge will not be satisfied by a subsequent gift, by deed, by way of advancement, of a rentcharge equal in amount.

V., by will, dated 20th Nov. 1834, appointed to his younger children, in pursuance of a power, £16,000 late currency, giving to T., as his share, £5000. He also devised to T. an annuity of £150 for life, charged on land. By a codicil, dated 13th Dec. 1844, reciting that he had made a provision for T. on his marriage, he declared that that provision should be deemed a satisfaction of his share of the £16,000 late currency, and that he should not be admitted to claim under V.'s will the sums appointed and bequeathed to him. By a further codicil, V. devised his real and freehold estates to his eldest son, E., charged with payment of the several legacies and annuities devised and bequeathed by his will and codicil, save such of them as had been revoked by the codicils. Held, that the devise of the annuity to T. was not revoked by the codicils.—Preston v. Gormanstown, 13 I. C. R. 329; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 310. (C.)

5. V. bequeathed £12,000 among his younger children, and his household furniture, and live and dead stock, to those daughters who should attain twenty-one; and bequeathed other portions of his property, real and personal, to his children, and the residue of his property to his daughters. He made a codicil, commencing thus. "Codicil to my will of the —, &c. Four of my children having died since the execution of said will, I alter the disposition of my property as follows." He bequeathed £4000 each to his three surviving daughters, and if one died unmarried, her portion to go to the survivors; but if another died unmarried, her portion to go among his sons, as he was of opinion that £6000 was a sufficient portion for any girl; and bequeathed to his two surviving sons the remainder of his property, in equal proportions, of whatever kind it might consist at his death. He gave directions as to the management of mills which he held in partnership; devised his property over in the event of his sons dying without issue; and appointed executors of the codicil as of "his last will and testament." Held, that the bequest of the household furniture, &c., in the will, was not revoked by the codicil.

The intention to revoke in a codicil must be as clearly expressed as the intention to devise in the will, otherwise the codicil will not operate as a revocation. A doubt, however reasonable, is not sufficient, if the two instruments are not absolutely inconsistent.

A father advanced £1000 in a partnership concern, for the benefit of his sons A. and B., reserving to himself power, if they died, to substitute two other sons for them. The partner gave credit in his books to A. and B. for £500 each. A. and B. both died under age; and after their death, the partner, by the father's direction transferred two sums of £500 each in his books to C. and D., two other sons, but without adding any interest or profits thereto from the accounts of A. and B. The business was, by the father's directions, carried on in the partner's own name, and the profits carried in his books to his own account. Held, that there was no trust created for C. and D.: that the partnership was with the father, and the share of the profits was his assets.

V., after giving legacies to his daughters, bequeathed to his two sons, C. and D., the remainder of his property, in equal proportions, of whatever kind it might consist at his death. He directed the business of the mills of Y. to be carried on, and a sum to be applied to that purpose; and the remainder of his capital to be invested in fee-simple estates, so that each of his sons should have his portion independent of the other; that they were not to be of age, for the purpose of his will, until they were twenty-five; and if one died without issue, under that age, his property should go over to the other. V. was entitled to £4061 as partner in the mills of Y. C. died under twenty-five. Held, that the profits realised on the sum of £4061, during C.'s life, belonged to him, and were not capital to be invested in land.

V.'s partner in the mills of Y., after his death, paid £5421, which he appropriated to the payment in the first instance of the £4061 due at V.'s death, and the balance to subsequent profits. Held, that the profits realised after C.'s death were divisible between his representative and D.

Scumble—If there had been no appropriation by the partner, the payment would have been applicable first to the payment of the profits realised after V.'s death; and the balance and profits after C.'s death would, as capital, have belonged to D.—Pilsworth v. Mosse, 14 L. C. R. 163. (R.)

1. V. devised real estate, upon trust, out of the rents, &c., or by demise, mortgage, or sale, to raise £1000 for each of his daughters; the interest on each sum of £1000 to be paid to each daughter, from his death, during her natural life; on trust, in the events of their being married, for their husbands and children; and upon the death of, and according, and when each daughter should die unmarried, or, being married, should die without leaving issue—sons who should attain twenty-one, or daughters who should attain twenty-one or marry—upon trust to pay the principal sum of £1000 provided for her to and amongst all or any of V.'s other children, in such shares, &c., as each of his daughters, so dying, should by deed or will appoint; in default of such appointment, upon trust to apply the principal sum of £1000 of her so dying to and amongst V.'s then surviving children, and the issue of such of them as should be dead, in equal shares.

By a codicil, V. revoked his will so far as the sum of £1000 was given absolutely to each of his daughters; and declared his will to be, that if his daughters, or any of them, remained single, they or she should only have an interest for their or her natural lives or life, and no longer, in the said sum of £1000. Held, that the codicil revoked the power of appointment given by the will to the daughters who should die unmarried and without issue; but did not revoke the gifts, in default of appointment, of the shares of such daughters.

V., after reciting that he had demised to A. a house and lands for the lives of V.'s daughters, subject to the rent of £2. 10s. per acre, declared that the lease was so made for the use and benefit of his daughters, and the survivor of them. No such lease was made; and V., by a codicil, directed that his then surviving daughters should have the house, lands, furniture, and plate at their disposal. Held, that the daughters took the house and lands absolutely, discharged of the rent of £2s. 10s. per acre.—Kellett v. K., 16 L. C. R. 63. (R.)

2. A testator burned a will, and afterwards made declarations that he had revoked it by burning. Held, at Nisi Prius, that these declarations were inadmissible to prove revocation.—Mullarkey v. Mathews, 11 L. Jur. N. S. 218. (P.)

3. V., having described his property, and made devises and bequests, bequeathed the residue of said several sums of money and securities, after payment of those several legacies and bequests, and the residue of all chattel and other property of what nature or kind soever he might die possessed of, and which was not thereby, or should not be by any codicil thereto, specifically bequeathed, subject to his debts and to any deficiency which might possibly occur in the funds appropriated to the payment of his legacies, upon trust to invest it, and pay the interest to his wife for life, and after her death distribute it among certain persons.

By a codicil of the same date as the will, V., after stating that certain stock was not correctly described in his will, left it to his wife; appointed her sole residuary legatee, and confirmed his will in other respects. Held, that the codicil did not revoke the residuary clause in the will.—Cooke v. Franklin, 16 L. C. R. 469. (R.)

VIII. 4. By Alteration or Alienation of the Subject-matter by subsequent act or deed.

4. A renewal of a lease containing a covenant for perpetual renewal, executed to the lessee after the date of her will, devising her interest in the lease, though it was (previous to the passing of 1 Vic., c. 26) a revocation of the will at Law—Held, not to have such effect in Equity.

The mere change of the legal estate, unaccompanied by any alteration of the equitable ownership, will not affect a revocation.—Pool v. Coates, 4 L. E. R. 497; 2 Dr. & War. 493; 1 Con. & L. 531. (C.)

1. That the subject of an intended provision on marriage was disposed of by will, made after the 1 Vic., c. 26, came into operation, and before an offer to sell was made, forms no objection to its being carried into execution:—a contract to sell being a revocation pro tanto, now as well as before that Act, though its effect on the devisee's estate may be doubtful.—Saunders v. Cramer, 5 I. E. R. 12; 3 Dr. & War. 87; 2 Con. & L. 54. (C.)

2. Estates were settled to uses, remainder in fee to V., subject to a power of revocation. Under the power they were re-settled to other uses, remainder in fee to V., subject to a proviso, under which this settlement became ultimately defeated. V. made a will before 1838, devising the estates, and they were afterwards settled, reserving the remainder in fee to V. Held, that the will was inoperative, as the old remainder did not subsist, and the estates went under the latter deed to V.'s heir-at-law.

A will of lands, made before 1838, is entirely revoked by an alteration in the estate, though made after 1838.—Lord Langford v. Little, 8 I. E. R. 546; 2 Jon. & L. 613. (C.)

3. The effect of interlineations considered.—Hutchinson v. H., 13 I. E. R. 332. (C.)

4. V. by will, in 1819, devised his chattel property to J., for life, remainder over. By deed executed in 1820, he assigned the same property to J. absolutely. The deed was witnessed and registered, but remained in V.'s possession until his death, in 1821. The will was proved, but no probate duty was paid in respect of the property comprised in the deed. J. entered into possession, and so remained until his death in 1854, having by his marriage settlement, in 1834, dealt with the property in pursuance of a power derived under the will; and in 1853 assigned it as his absolute property. The deed was, after his death, found among other papers belonging to him, Held, that J. took the absolute interest in the property under the deed. That the deed operated as a revocation of the will as to that property, whether J. knew of it and disclaimed it or not.—Fitzgerald v. Sterling, 6 I. C. R. 198; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 382. (C.A.)

5. V., seized in tail male of lands, suffered a recovery to the use of himself in fee; and then devised the lands. He afterwards disentailed them by deed, with the sole view, as was admitted, of making title for a lender who had agreed to advance a sum upon mortgage of them. The mortgage was duly executed. Held, upon appeal, that the disentailing deed, had operated as a revocation of the will to all intents and purposes. [Affg. Rolls decision.]—Power v. P., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 379. (C.A.)

6. V., seized in tail of several estates, suffered a recovery of them, and made his will in 1834. In 1836, he borrowed money on the security of a mortgage on one of the estates, and of a judgment. The lender's counsel objected to the recovery, which was valid, and required the mortgage to be enrolled under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 92, s. 18. Instead of that, a disentailing deed of all the estates was executed, by which V. conveyed them to the use of himself and his heirs. Held, that the deed was a total revocation of the will.

Before the 1 Vic., c. 26, a deed which revoked a will at Law would also have revoked it in Equity, although the estate in Equity remained unaltered; unless the deed was executed for some partial or qualified purpose.

Intention is immaterial, if there was an alteration of the estate, both at Law and in Equity; but if there was no alteration of the estate in Equity, evidence is admissible to rebut the inference of an intention to revoke, arising from the alteration of the estate at Law.

Held, therefore, that the opinion of counsel was admissible as evidence, that the disentailing deed was executed for the purpose of the mortgage.—Power v. P., 7 I. C. R. 354. (R.)—[Revd.: 3 I. Jur. N. S. 379. (C.A.)]

7. V., seised in tail of the lands of K. and other lands, suffered a recovery of those lands in 1834, and by will, dated in 1832, devised them. In 1836, V. borrowed money on a mortgage of K., and a collateral judgment. On that occasion, a disentailing deed of all the lands was executed and enrolled, by which A. conveyed all the lands to the use of himself and his heirs. Held, that the deed was a total revocation of the will.

On the occasion of the mortgage, the lender's counsel had objected to the recovery which had been suffered of K., and had advised that the mortgage should be enrolled.

Quere—Whether that opinion was admissible as evidence.—Power v. P., 9 I. C. R. 178; Dr. Rep., temp. Napier, 268; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 379. (C.A.)

IX. NUNCUPATIVE WILL.

8. A testator, knowing that he was in his last illness, delivered several articles into his sister's possession as a gift, in case he died; and, immediately before death, told her that he gave her his gold repeating watch, which was on the table in his bedroom, and of which she did not take possession until after his death. Held, that those gifts were good as donationes mortis causa.—Lyster v. O'Sullivan, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 242. (M.O.)

X. PROBATE AND PROOF OF. See PRACTICE, EVIDENCE.

1. In general.
2. Probate Duty.

X. 1. Probate and Proof of Will, generally.

9. That the Prerogative Courts have admitted testamentary papers to probate as a will and codicil, is conclusive evidence upon their being distinct instruments.—Russell v. Dickson, 4 I. E. R. 339; 2 Dr. & War. 133; 1 Con. & L. 284. (C.)

1. When the Ecclesiastical Court has given probates of two instruments, as constituting one will or testamentary document, the whole must be construed as one will.

Semble—A testamentary instrument, left incomplete by the testator's sudden death, or other suddenly supervening incapacity to make a will, is not void in toto, but is good so far as it goes.—Armstrong v. Millar, 4 I. E. R. 659; Long. & T. 557. (E.E.)

2. The Court will distribute, upon a Diocesan probate, a fund in Court payable to a personal representative, if the intestate had not bona notabilia.—Graves v. G., 8 I. E. R. 36. (R.)

3. Proof of the factum of a will, and of the testator's capacity, are not sufficient to encounter suspicious circumstances which may raise a presumption of falsity or fraud, requiring clear and satisfactory evidence to remove it. It is not necessary to prove the fraud or imposition. It may, in such a case, be presumed; the onus of proof lying on the party propounding the will.

Several authorities, in which the fact of a legatee being the writer of a will, and similar suspicious circumstances, have been held to raise presumptions against it, reviewed and compared, and the principles of the decisions observed on.—Von Stentz v. Comyn, 12 I. E. R. 622. (C.)

4. The applicant permitted a will, dated in 1844, of M'C., to be proved in the Prerogative Court, to the prejudice of one of 1817, under which she claimed. On an application by her for an issue to try the validity of the will, and of various judgments obtained in the interval—Held, that she had lapsed her time, by delaying such application for fifteen months after the absolute order for sale had been made, and by otherwise sanctioning the proceedings.

Semble—This Court is very unwilling to entertain such questions; there being other Courts competent to decide such matters; more especially in cases in which their judgments would not bind those Courts.—In re M'Clintock, 3 I. Jur. 199. (I.E.C.)

5. The fact of a testator retaining his mental capacity, and for a considerable length of time surviving the date of, without altering or throwing doubt upon his will, is an important circumstance in favour of its validity.

A will has not been set aside, on the ground of undue influence having been used to procure its execution, in any case in which the evidence did not establish the ascendancy of the controlling power, and its actual exercise by the constraint and coercion of an enfeebled, exhausted, or subjugated intellect.

When force, fraud, or undue influence are alleged to have been exercised in obtaining the execution of a will, the mental capacity of the testator is a question of the utmost importance.

The fraud, to vitiate a will, must be contemporaneous with the making of the will; it must be discovered in, and form part of, the res gesta. The means and power of achieving the fraud may have been previously acquired and realised; but the Court must be satisfied that the act impeached is effected by their actual present use and exercise at that time, controlling and defeating volition.

When it appeared uncertain whether the Court of Delegates had refused probate of a will, on the ground of fraud, or deficit probatio, the Lord Chancellor being satisfied that, upon the latter of those grounds, the decision could not be supported, advised the issuing of a commission of review.—Kelly v. Thewles, 2 I. C. R. 510. (C.)

6. In 1830 V. made his will, the draft of which purported to devise all his lands, situate in several counties, amongst others in the county of Sligo, where the lands in the lease were situate, and "elsewhere in Ireland," to trustees, upon trust for his second son. Before the execution of the will, V. drew a pen through the word "Sligo," without making it illegible. Held, that evidence was not admissible to show that he intended that the lands in Sligo should not pass by his will.—Phibbs v. Cooper, 7 I. C. R. 422. (R.)

XI. SUBSTITUTION.

7. A marriage settlement conveyed to trustees property of the wife in trust to pay the interest to the husband for life; after his death to the wife for life; and after the death of the survivor to pay the principal to the child or children of the marriage as the wife should appoint; in default of appointment, amongst the children, share and share alike; on failure of issue of the marriage, to the wife. Their only issue died an infant. Afterwards, the husband, who had received from the trustees the bulk of the trust fund, by will, made devises and bequests to his wife; and directed that they should be in lieu and bar of all her claims under her marriage settlement to anything comprised therein; and that, if she should elect to take under the settlement, the devises and bequests should be void, and the subject of them comprised in the general devise of his property. He devised all the rest of his real and personal property to trustees. Held, that the wife, surviving him, was barred by the will from claiming any portion of the principal of the funds comprised in the settlement. But that she was entitled to the interest of the funds during her life.

Two sums of money, the property of a wife, were lent by her to her husband, who gave her a cheque for one sum, and for the other a letter acknowledging the receipt of it, and placing it to her credit in his firm. Held, that she was entitled only to one year's interest on the sums against her husband's assets.—Mackey v. Maturin 15 I. C. R. 150. (R.)

XII. MUTUAL WILLS.

XIII. OBTAINED BY FRAUD.

1. When an heir-at-law files a bill to impeach a will of real estate, alleged to have been obtained by undue influence or fraud, the Court of Ch. may, at its discretion, direct an issue devisavit vel non, or may merely remove obstacles which impede the heir in asserting his legal title.

The House of Lords will not interfere with the exercise of that discretion, unless it appears that injustice has been, or is likely to be, worked thereby.

Undue influence, insufficient to invalidate a will made under its operation, may, nevertheless, exist in the form of bad companionship and bad example.

Undue influence, which suffices to invalidate a will, must be exercised by coercion or by fraud. To constitute coercion, actual violence need not be used; imaginary terrors will suffice.

To set aside a will made by a testator of competent mental capacity, the circumstances under which it was executed may be shown to have been inconsistent with any hypothesis other than that of undue influence.

Undue influence cannot be presumed. It must be established that such influence was, in fact, exercised in relation to the will itself.

Whether the Judge, before whom an issue directed by a Court of Equity has been tried, has or has not mis-directed the jury, one verdict does not bind the Court of Equity, which may, for its better satisfaction, direct a new trial.

Quere—Whether a married woman can validly consent to a particular form of order?

A married woman, having during her husband's life, and after his decease, acted upon such an order, was, nevertheless, permitted to make it a ground of appeal to the House of Lords.

A suit respecting property devised to a married woman was instituted against her and her husband. Decree for an account. The Master reported a sum due from both, which the Court ordered the widow to pay into Court within a limited time, the sum being composed of rents received from the property before the marriage, and during coverture and viduity.

Quere—Was the order valid?—Boyse v. Rossborough, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 265. (H. Lds.)—[S. c., 6 H. Lds. Cas. 2.]

- XV. 1. a. General Principles, Rules, and Examples of Construction: Cases that fall under them: generally.
1. It is a well-settled rule of construction, never to put a different construction upon the same word when it occurs twice or oftener in the same instrument, unless there appear a clear intention to the contrary.
Where a will contains a general absolute devise of real and personal estate, and in a subsequent clause the testator uses language plainly restricting the absolute gift in one species of property, but not in words confining it to that one, the restriction will be held applicable to both, to carry out his clear intention, unless there exists a clear necessity for excluding the other from its operation.
The word "issue," in a will, may be held to mean "children," when such is the manifest meaning of the testator.—Ridgeway v. Muskittrick, 1 Dr. & War 84. (C.)
 2. Semble—Stronger words are required to exonerate a personal estate from the payment of debts than of legacies.—Lamphier v. Despard, 1 Con. & L. 200; 2 Dr. & War. 59; 4 I. E. R. 335. (C.)
 3. A codicil is never held to revoke a will, further than is necessary to give effect to the testator's intentions.—Young v. Hassard, 1 Dr. & War. 688. (C.)

1. V. devised the lands in question to trustees, to A.'s use for life; remainder to the use of A.'s first and other sons; in default of such issue, over. Held, that the words "in default of such issue" did not enlarge, by implication, A.'s life estate.—Purcell v. P., 4 I. E. R. 558; 2 Dr. & War. 219, n.; 1 Con. & L. 371. (C.)

2. Under a devise of freehold property, among all such children of the testator as should be living at his death—Held, that, the testator having, by a codicil, revoked the devise as to one child, that revoked share went among all the other children, and did not descend to the heir.

When the gift is to a class, with a direction that, upon a contingency, one of the class is not to take, but there is no gift over of his share, the question is, what is the testator's intention; and, if an intention can be discovered, that such undisposed of share should go amongst the remaining objects of the original gift, this intention will, notwithstanding the rule in favour of the heir-at-law, enable the Court to decree against an intestacy as to that share.—Shaw v. M'Mahon, 2 Con. & L. 528. (C.)

3. When a testator directs that his estates shall descend as if he died intestate, the heir-at-law takes by his title by descent.—Walcott v. Bloomfield, 2 Con. & L. 577. (C.)

4. The question touching priority between legatees is a mere question of intention, which the Court is not at liberty to presume; but which must be made out from something apparent upon the face of the will itself.—Pepper v. Bloomfield, 3 Dr. & War. 499. (C.)

5. V., by will, directed that if his daughter married a professional gentleman, or a man embarked in trade or business, and not possessed of landed property whereon to charge a suitable provision for her, trust funds should be settled upon her for life; after her decease, the principal to the issue of her marriage; but that, if she married a gentleman possessed of landed estate, who made a suitable provision for her, and settled his estate on their issue, the trust fund should be paid to him. She married a country gentleman not possessed of any landed estate, and not a professional gentleman, or embarked in any trade or business. He afterwards purchased an estate, and offered to settle it upon being paid his wife's fortune. Held, that the trust fund should be settled according to the directions in the will, and that he was not entitled to a life interest therein.—Briscoe v. B., 1 Jon. & L. 334; 7 I. E. R. 123. (C.)

6. The whole will must be looked to for the intention of the testator; and, though there is a direction to pay all debts or legacies, yet, if there is an intention shown to throw a particular debt or legacy upon the real estate, the Court is bound to give effect to it.—Bateman v. Earl of Roden, 1 Jon. & L. 356. (C.)

7. When there is a clear devise of lands, in construing the will the Court will not cut it down by means of an ambiguous codicil.—Stannard v. Lodge, 1 I. Jur. 221. (E.E.)

8. V., by will, directed the interest of the residue of his property to be paid to his three surviving daughters, and his son-in-law, the husband of his deceased daughter, A.; and, as to the principal, directed that it should be invested (subject to bequests) for the issue of A., and of his other three daughters; so that, after the decease of each of his daughters who should die and leave any issue, such issue should be entitled to receive the share of the interest of the property which his, her, or their mother respectively would have been entitled to receive; and that the principal should be given to such issue of his daughters respectively, share and share alike, on their respectively attaining age, or, if females, on their attaining age, or marrying with consent of their guardians thereafter mentioned: and that, if any of his daughters died without leaving any issue, the share of interest which she would have been entitled to should go to the issue of his surviving daughters, and to the issue of A.; and the share of the principal, whenever it arose, should go to the child or children of his daughters; and if any of his daughters should die leaving children, and any of them should die before being entitled to receive his proportion, the surviving child or children, issue of such daughters so dying, should receive it. He appointed guardians to his grandchildren. Held, that "issue" meant "children."—Black v. Campbell, 14 I. C. R. 92. (R.)

9. A bequest to several legatees, whose legacies were unequal, "to be equally divided between them, in proportion to their legacies," thereinbefore given them. Held, on the context and general scheme of the will, that the division should be in proportion to the legacies.

That, in ascertaining the proportions, a legacy bequeathed to one of the legatees, by a subsequent codicil, should be taken into account.—Talbot v. Gordon, 14 I. C. R. 397. (R.)

XV. 1. b. Gift by Implication; what Words amount to.

10. V. bequeathed £1500 to her mother for life, and desired that it should be given share and share alike between her two sisters, A. and B., after her mother's decease, in the event of their surviving her; but if neither survived her mother, she desired that the whole of the property should be left entirely to her mother, and placed at her disposal. B. only survived her mother. Held, that the gift to A. and B. was contingent, on the event of both surviving their mother; that there was a gift of the entire by implication to the survivor in case either of the sisters died in the mother's lifetime, and therefore that, in the events which had happened, B. took the whole £1500, and no part of it went to A.'s representative.

Scott v. Bargeman, 2 P. Wms. 68, and Skye v. Barnes, 3 Mer. 335, distinguished and approved of.—Graves v. Waters, 10 I. E. R. 234. (R.)

1. A devise of lands in trust for A. for life, then for his first and other sons in tail male; in default of such issue, over. Held, that A. took only an estate for life, and that a remainder in tail after the limitations could not be implied.—Tucker v. Baker, 11 I. E. R. 104. (C.)—[Affid.: 3 II. L. Cas. 106; 14 Jur. 771.]

2. When there is an indefinite bequest to the parent, and if he die without having or leaving children, over, the children do not take by implication.

When there is a bequest to the parent for life, and if he die without having or leaving children, over, the children are not entitled by implication.

When there is a bequest to the parent for life, and if he die without having or leaving children, over; and there are matters in the will to raise an inference in favour of the children; the Court is at liberty to take them in connection with the bequest, in the event of the parent dying without having or leaving issue; and to hold that the children are entitled by implication.

V. bequeathed to each of his grand-nephews, A. and B., an annuity for their respective lives; and in case of the death of either of them, leaving issue, directed that the annuity of him so dying should go to such issue, if more than one, share and share alike; the share or shares of such child or children as should die under 21, or before marriage, to go to and be equally divided amongst the survivor and survivors of such issue during their respective natural lives: if but one, the whole of the annuity to go to such only child for life; and in case of the death of either A. or B., without lawful issue then living, that his annuity should go to the survivor for life; and in case of the death of both A. and B., without leaving issue, or, leaving such, and that such issue should die before the age of 21 years, then, after the death of the survivor of such issue of A. and B., he directed that the two annuities should sink into his residuary personal estate. A. died without issue. Held, that there was a bequest by implication of A.'s annuity to the children of B.—Kinsella v. Caffrey, 11 I. C. R. 154. (R.)—[Affid.: 6 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (C.A.)]

3. A testator bequeathed annuities for their respective lives to each of his grand-nephews, A. and B.; and directed that, if either of them died leaving issue, his annuity should go to the issue, if more than one, share and share alike; the share or shares of such child or children as died under age, or before marriage, to be equally divided amongst the surviving issue during their respective lives; if but one child, the whole annuity to go to such only child for life. If either A. or B. died, without issue living at his death, his annuity to go to the survivor for life. If both died without leaving issue; or leaving issue, which died before age, both annuities to sink into the residue. A. died without issue. Held, that there was a bequest by implication of A.'s annuity to the children of B.—Kinsella v. Caffrey, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (C.A.)

4. V. bequeathed to his two sons all his property, real and personal, to have and to hold it in the most absolute manner: and declared his will to be, that his sons should, at their discretion, and according to their own judgment, allocate to the other members of his family, being his lawfully begotten children, such portions of that property and goods, be the same more or less, as to them should seem fit, and appointed them his executors. Held, coupling the will with an admission in the petition by the sons, of V.'s intention, that a trust had been created; and that they were trustees for V.'s other children as to V.'s entire property, both real and personal.—Gray v. G., 11 I. C. R. 218. (R.)

XV. 1. c. Gifts by rejecting words, or substituting one word for another.

5. In a will or a deed, the word "or" may be construed to mean "and," and "and" may be construed to mean "or," if such a construction be necessary to effectuate the intention of the testator.—White v. Supple, 2 Dr. & War. 471; 1 Con. & L. 525. (C.)

6. Testator devised and bequeathed his interest in his freehold and chattel property to his grandson J., but if J. died before he attained age or married, then over. Held (reversing the decision of a Judge of the L. E. Court), that "or" should be read "and," and that J. had acquired an absolute estate, having attained 21, though he had not been married.—In re Clegg's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 70; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 21. (C.A.)

7. V. devised real estate, upon trust out of the rents, &c., or by demise, mortgage, or sale, to raise £1000 for each of his daughters, the interest on each sum of £1000 to be paid to each daughter, from his death, during her natural life; on trust, in the event of their being married, for their husbands and children; and upon the death of, and according, and when each daughter should die unmarried, or, being married, should die without leaving issue—sons who should attain twenty-one, or daughters who should attain twenty-one, or marry—upon trust, to pay the principal sum of £1000 provided for her, to and amongst all or any of V.'s other children, in such shares, &c., as each of his daughters so dying should by deed or will appoint; in default of such appointment, upon trust, to apply the principal sum of £1000 of her so dying, to and amongst V.'s then surviving children, and the issue of such of them as should be dead, in equal shares.

By a codicil, V. revoked his will so far as the sum of £1000 was given absolutely to each of his daughters; and declared his will to be, that if his daughters or any of them remained single, they or she should only have an interest for their natural lives or her natural life, and no longer, in the said sum of £1000. Held, that the codicil revoked the power of appointment given by the will to the daughters who should die unmarried and without issue, but did not revoke the gifts in default of appointment of the shares of such daughters.

V. after reciting that he had devised to A. a house and lands for the lives of V.'s daughters, subject to the rent of £2. 10s. per acre, declared that the lease was so made for the use and benefit of his daughters and the survivor of them. No such lease was made; and V. by a codicil directed that his then surviving daughter should have the house, lands, furniture, and plate at their disposal. Held, that the daughters took the house and lands absolutely discharged of the rent of £2. 10s. per acre.—Kellett v. K., 16 I. C. R. 63. (R.)

1. A codicil recited that the testatrix had in the Bank of Ireland "money not theretofore disposed of." By that codicil, she bequeathed that sum to trustees upon trust to pay legacies. She had not any "money" in the Bank of Ireland, but possessed government "stock" sufficient to pay the legacies. Held, that they were payable out of her general assets, and in equal priority with other legacies bequeathed by the will and prior codicils.—Reilly v. Stoney, 16 I. C. R. 295. (R.)

2. V. bequeathed money to his two daughters, share and share alike, to be paid to them by his executors in twelve months after their respective marriages, with the consent of his executors; and directed that his daughters should be paid a yearly sum, less than the interest of their shares, until their respective marriages as aforesaid; and that, from their respective marriages, each of them should be paid the full legal interest. Until their respective marriages, the remainder of the interest on their fortunes was directed to go to V.'s son; and, if V.'s daughters, or either of them, died before the age of 21 years, or day of marriage, her share of the sum so bequeathed was directed to go to V.'s son, to whom the entire sum should go, if both daughters died.

Seem—That the daughters' legacies did not vest until marriage.

Held, that "or" should be read "and;" and that therefore the legacies did not go over to the son on the death of his sisters unmarried; but remained undisposed of by the will, and divisible amongst V.'s next-of-kin.—In re Cantillon Minors, 16 I. C. R. 301. (R.)

3. V. bequeathed to his daughter, A., an annuity of £100, and to four other daughters annuities of £50 each, which were not to be paid to them until after their mother's decease, unless they married, or their mother had some particular reason for making them such payments. V. left A., if she was unmarried at her mother's death, an annuity of £500 thereafter, in addition to the £100 a-year previously bequeathed. If A. married, she was not to have more than £100 a-year, which she might leave as she pleased; and the £500 a-year was to merge in the real estate on which the annuities were charged. If his other daughters were unmarried at their mother's decease, and A. was then married, or dead, each was to have £100 a-year, in addition to the £50 a-year, as a maintenance for them: but, so long as A. received the annuity of £500, they were to have no more than an annuity of £50 each, as they would reside with her. If any daughter married without her mother's consent, or that of their brother after the mother's decease, she should have only a life annuity of £50 a-year, payable to her own receipt. V.'s wife predeceased him. At his death, A. and another daughter, E., were unmarried. Held, that after the determination of the annuity of £500 by A.'s marriage, E. was entitled to the annuity of £100, which did not determine when she married with her brother's consent.—In re Newcomens Minors, 16 I. C. R. 315. (R.)

XV. 1. d. When Gifts are enlarged or confined by the terms of Gifts over.

4. In ascertaining whether the words "die without issue," in a will made subsequently to the 1 Vic., c. 26, mean an indefinite failure of issue, a contrary intention within the meaning of sec. 29 is not to be inferred from the use of those very words.—In re O'Beirne, 1 Jon. & L. 352; 7 I. E. R. 171. (C.)

5. By will, before 1838, testator bequeathed a sum to trustees to permit his daughter to take the interest for life, and, if she should "leave any issue lawfully begotten," desired that the principal might be disposed of among her children as she should appoint; for want of appointment, equally; but "in case of failure of issue" of his daughter, directed the fund to be paid to A., B., C., and D. Held, that "failure of issue" referred to issue living at the daughter's death, and that the gift over was valid.

Testator bequeathed a fund to trustees to pay the interest to X. for life, and the principal among her issue, and in case of failure of issue (which was limited to those living at her death), directed that £500 of the trust-fund might be paid to A., £500 to B., £500 to C., and £500 to D. A. and B. died in the lifetime of X. Held, that their representatives were entitled to their shares, X. having afterwards died without leaving issue.—Hanan v. Drew, 10 I. E. R. 333. (C.)

6. V. bequeathed one-half of the interest of a sum to A. and B., and the other half to C. and D., during their natural lives; and after the death of A., B., C., and D., bequeathed the principal to E. V. appointed residuary legatees. A. died, and then B., leaving C. and D. surviving. Held, that no part of the principal or interest went to E. during the life of C. and D.

That the executrix of B., not the residuary legatees, was entitled to the interest of one-half during the lives of C. and D.—Gray v. Robinson, 11 I. C. R. 203; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 233. (R.)

1. A marriage settlement gave a power to appoint amongst her children £10,000, to a testatrix, who, by will, appointed to each of three of her children one-sixth of this fund, and, in a subsequent part of the will bequeathed to each of them £1000. She directed that those legacies, and their respective shares of the appointed fund, should, within twelve months after her decease, be settled upon trust for those children for their respective lives, and, after their decease, for their issue, in such shares and proportions as they should by deed or will appoint; and if no issue, for such person or persons as they should by deed or will appoint to. The will then expressly provided that, if the settlements of the legacies and of the shares of the appointed fund were not made in the prescribed manner, the legacies should become absolutely forfeited, and should sink into the residue of testatrix's personal estate. Held, that the direction to settle the shares of the appointed fund in a manner not warranted by the power amounted to a superadded condition attempting to qualify a previous absolute appointment; and that no question of election was raised thereby.

That, owing to the express clause of forfeiture, the legatees could not take the legacies without settling their shares in the appointed fund according to the directions of the testatrix.—[Moriarty v. Martin, 3 I. C. R. 26, disapproved of.]—King v. K., 15 I. C. R. 479. (C.)

XV. 1. e. Gifts by way of Substitution.

2. When there is a gift of lands by a codicil, "instead of" other lands given to the same devisee by the will—Quere, whether the gift in the codicil is not subject, by force of the words "instead of," to all the conditions and restrictions attached by the will to the gift for which the codicil substitutes the present one?—Commissioners of Charitable Donations v. Cotter, 1 Dr. & War. 498. (C.)

3. The doctrine of cy-pres was applicable to the construction of a will made in the exercise of a power of appointment.—Stackpole v. S., 2 Con. & L. 506. (C.)

4. When a testator had given several legacies by a complete will and codicils, and, by a subsequent instrument purporting to be a "last will and testament," proceeded to give several legacies, different in amount, to the same legatees, but died suddenly before the second will was completed, and the Ecclesiastical Court granted probates of both instruments as one will—Held, that the legacies thereby given were cumulative.—Armstrong v. Millar, Long. & T. 557; 4 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

5. V., by marriage articles, agreed to settle £50 a-year, payable out of C., on his wife, if she became a widow. Afterwards, V. made a will, which contained this passage:—"I bequeath to my wife, during her life, the sum of £50 yearly (£50 yearly being settled on her by me on our intermarriage), payable out of the lands of C." Held, that she took only one annuity of £50.—In re Power, Fl. & K. 282. (R.)

6. By will V. gave £2000 to his natural daughter for her separate use, the interest to be expended in her education. By codicil he gave her £3000 in addition. By a subsequent codicil, stating that he had not time to alter his will, to guard against risk, he charged all his property with £20,000 for his daughter (calling her by his own name) subject to the limitations and restrictions mentioned in his will. Held, that the £20,000 was in substitution of the gifts in the will and first codicil.—Russel v. Dixon, 11 I. E. R. 418. (C.)

7. A marriage settlement of £1269 (the wife's fortune) upon trust for the husband for life; and on his decease, for the wife for life; and on her decease, for the children of the marriage; reciting that the husband was not then able to settle a jointure upon the wife, empowered him to acquire the wife's fortune absolutely, if on his becoming entitled to adequate real estate he should by deed charge that estate with a jointure of £120 per annum for her, and with £1200 for the children of the marriage. He subsequently became seized in fee of real estate, yielding an annual income of £500, but never executed any deed charging it with a jointure or with portions.

He by will, reciting that, "inasmuch as his wife was entitled by marriage settlement to the sum of £130 sterling per annum by way of jointure, and being anxious further to provide for her," bequeathed "in addition the sum of £70 per annum; and also the interest of the money, the produce of the furniture of his house, so long as his children should be educated in and profess the Protestant religion; said sum of £70 and interest money to be paid by the trustees of his will, on the above conditions, and not otherwise." He then bequeathed all his property, real and personal, to his eldest son, charged with £800 for each of his (the testator's) younger children. The testator's wife being a Roman Catholic, he authorised the trustees to take proper steps for the education of the children in the Protestant religion, and to make provision for their maintenance and education out of the property bequeathed to his son. In a codicil the testator directed that the trustees should "have power to take out of his property and pay to his wife the said sum of £70 per annum; and also have charge of the produce of his furniture and other assets for payment of his legacy to her, and carry out the intention of his will, before any other charge whatsoever, provided she conformed to his wishes and did not interfere with the trustees in the education of the children in the Protestant religion."

A bond for £900, to the trustees of the settlement, mentioned in the settlement as the security for so much of the £1269, was found amongst the papers of the testator at his death. Held, that neither under the settlement, nor under the will and codicil, notwithstanding the recital in the will, was the wife entitled to a jointure of £120 or £180; and that she was only entitled to a life interest in the £1269 under the settlement; and to the annuity of £70, and the interest of the proceeds of the furniture under the will.—Peirce v. Locke, 2 I. C. R. 205. (C.)

1. When two legacies, of different amount, are given by the same will to the same person, the legacies are to be considered cumulative, unless a contrary intention appears in the will.

When two legacies are bequeathed to the same person by different testamentary instruments, e. g., one by the will, the other by the codicil; or when they are given by different codicils, and both are given simpliciter, the Court, in the absence of intrinsic evidence to the contrary, considers the legacies cumulative.

V., by will, after confirming the provision made for his wife by his marriage settlement, and reciting his intention to make a further provision for her by way of annuity, directed his executor to purchase £2333. 6s. 8d. stock, and transfer it to trustees, upon trust to pay the dividends to his wife, so long as she remained unmarried; and that on her marriage or death it should become part of the residue of his property. By codicil, reciting his will, and directing that the codicil should be annexed thereto, and taken as part thereof, and that it was his wish to increase the annuity bequeathed by will to his wife, he directed his executor to purchase £3333. 6s. 8d. stock, and transfer it to the same trustees, upon trust to pay the dividends to his wife, so long as she might remain his widow, and no longer; and that from and after her decease, or if she married again, the stock should form and be a portion of the residue of his property, to be disposed of as directed by his will; he ratified and confirmed his will and codicil in every respect. Held, that the legacies were cumulative, and that the widow was entitled to both annuities.—Brennan v. Moran, 6 I. C. R. 126; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 146. (R.)

2. V., a father, who had government stock standing in his own name, in 1838 transferred all except a small portion, into the joint names of himself and his son, A.; and in 1856 deposited moneys in a bank in their joint names. Small purchases of stock were at intervals made in their names, up to 1851; and joint deposits were made at intervals up to V.'s death in 1862. These investments constituted the bulk of V.'s property.

No definite provision for A. had been made by V., whose other seven children lived away, and were provided for. A. was married, but lived chiefly with V., whom he assisted in his business, and who during his life received all the dividends on the stock, and the interest on the deposit receipts; and also drew small portions of the principal money deposited.

By the practice of the bank, new deposit receipts were issued on every occasion of drawing the interest. On the first occasion of the joint lodgment, the manager of the bank explained to V. that the effect would be to enable the son to draw the money after V.'s death. V. then, and on a subsequent occasion, intimated his intention that the son should do so without expense.

There was evidence that V., 18 months before his death, stated to a third person that he did not mean all his property to go to A. after his death; and a short time before his death refused to allow A. to meddle with the stock certificates and deposit receipts. Evidence of testamentary intention in favour of the other children was also given. Held (reversing the Lord Chancellor's decree), that there was an advancement for A. to the extent of the joint investments and deposits.

Semble—The re-issue by the bank, according to its practice, of new deposit receipts did not amount to a new investment.—Fox v. F., 15 I. C. R. 90. (C.A.)

XV. 1. f. Gifts or Powers for Maintenance: Directions or Trusts to Convey or Settle.

3. V., by will, directed the trustees to call in money due to him, and invest it in the purchase of freehold estates in lands or hereditaments of a clear estate of inheritance for the use of his son, A., for life; after A.'s death, to the use of his first and other sons, according to seniority of age and priority of birth; if A. died without issue male, then in trust for V.'s second son, B., and the heirs male of his body, according to seniority, &c.; and desired that his (V.'s) sons, and the several persons, who should be in possession of such estates, should have a power to make leases not exceeding three lives or 31 years. Held, that A. was entitled to an estate tail in the lands to be purchased.—Herbert v. Blunden, 1 Dr. & Wal. 78. (C.)

4. Lands were settled to V.'s use, for life, remainder in fee to such one or more of his children as he should by deed or will appoint to; in default of appointment, to the children equally.

V. devised the lands to his wife, for life, upon condition that she thereout maintained and educated his children in such manner as his executors should think proper; and that, after defraying all necessary expenses, whatever sum remained in her hands at the end of the year should be accumulated as a fund to pay the legacies thereafter bequeathed by him. To each of his younger children, V. bequeathed £500; and devised the lands to his eldest son, in tail, with a direction that, if at his wife's death a fund sufficient to pay the legacies had not been accumulated, those lands, and others not subject to the power, should stand charged with the deficiency. Held, that the devise to the children was not invalidated by the prior devise to their mother, which was, nevertheless, void for excess of the power.

That, during her life, the amount of rents not being required to maintain the younger children, and pay the legacies, went as in default of appointment.

That the direction to maintain the younger children, and the bequests to them, were pro tanto a good execution of the power.—Crozier v. C., 5 I. E. R. 540. (C.)

1. V., by will, directed that if his daughter married a professional gentleman, or a man embarked in trade or business, and not possessed of landed property whereon to charge a suitable provision for her, trust funds should be settled on her for life, and on her issue after her death; but if she married a gentleman possessed of landed estate, who made a suitable provision for her, and settled his estate on their issue, the trust funds should be paid to him. She married a country gentleman, not possessed of any landed estate, not a professional gentleman, not a man embarked in any trade or business. He afterwards bought an estate, and offered to put it in settlement on being paid his wife's fortune. Held, that the trust funds should be settled according to the directions in the will; and that he was not entitled to a life interest therein.—Briscoe v. B., 7 I. E. R. 123; 1 Jon. & L. 334. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed a pecuniary legacy to each of his children, some of whom were minors; and bequeathed the residue of his property, after payment of all his just debts, &c., and the several legacies, to be equally divided between all his sons and daughters; and directed that the "interest of the legacies," thereby given to such of his children as should not be of age at his decease, should be paid to his wife, to be applied by her for and towards their maintenance and education. Held, that the interest of the respective shares of the residue, as well as that of the pecuniary legacies, was applicable to the maintenance of the minor children.—Guinness v. G., 14 I. C. R. 218; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (R.)

XV. 1. g. Periods to which, in general, words are referable, and herein of "dying without issue," and of Survivorship.

3. Devise to "children share and share alike." The first codicil appointed a guardian "during minority;" the second, provided that—"in the event of the death of any of the children, their portion be divided among the survivors, share and share alike." Held, that the phrase, "in the event of the death," meant death during the minority.

In a will, the phrase, "in the event of the death of" the devisee, is never construed to mean the event of a lapse by death before the testator dies, unless in case of necessity.—Montgomery v. M., 2 I. E. R. 161. (C.)

4. V., seized and possessed of real and personal estates, devised a chattel interest to B., her executors, &c., and freehold and chattel estates and interests to C., her heirs, executors, &c., with a proviso that, if either should die unmarried, or, being married, should die without issue, the bequests so appointed for such of them so dying unmarried, or, being married, dying without issue, should go and remain to the survivor of them, her heirs, executors, &c. Held, that the words "without issue" meant an indefinite failure of issue, not issue living at the death of the devisee.—O'Donohoe v. King, 8 I. E. R. 185. (E.E.)

5. Testator devised lands, to hold from the death of his widow, on trust, to secure an annuity, the first payment thereof to be made on the first day of May after his decease. Held, that the annuity commenced on the testator's death, although his widow was still living.—Jackson v. Hamilton, 9 I. E. R. 430; 3 Jon. & L. 702. (C.)

6. A power was given by will to successive tenants for life, to limit a rentcharge "for any woman or women whom they may respectively marry," by way of jointure and in bar of dower, "to be in proportion to the marriage portion they shall respectively receive with their respective wife or wives—i. e., £100 jointure for every £1000 they shall so actually receive as a marriage portion with their respective wife or wives, if they shall so think fit," not to exceed £500; "such grant, limitation, or appointment to be made either before or after marriage." Held, that the wife of a tenant for life, who afterwards came into possession, but who had been married before the will, was not an object of the power; there being no grounds from the rest of the will for giving a past meaning to the words of futurity.

Semble—That money of the wife, which had been settled to her separate use, with remainders to the husband and children of the marriage, was not "received" by the husband, within the meaning of the power.—Dillon v. D., 11 I. E. R. 423. (C.)

7. Bequest of personalty, in equal shares, "to each and every of my children and their issue, whether sons or daughters, with benefit of survivorship." Held, that the testator's death was the period of survivorship.—Caulfield v. Giles, 12 I. E. R. 427. (R.)

8. The cases respecting the period to which survivorship shall be referred, reviewed and classified.—Forrester v. Smith, 2 I. C. R. 70. (R.)

9. V. devised lands to his son, G., for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; remainder to his daughters in common in tail; and, if either died without issue, then to his surviving daughter and the heirs of her body; in default of such issue, to his right heirs for ever. Held, that the word "surviving" meant "other."—Smith v. Osborne, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (H.L.)—[S. c., 6 H. L. Cas. 375.]

10. V. by will, made in 1840, in case of his wife having a child after his death, left to that child eight shares he had in the N. Bank, and ten shares in the B. Bank. Held, that three children, born after the will, and before V.'s death, were entitled to the shares.—White v. Barber, 5 Bur. 2703, approved of.—In re Lindsay, 8 I. C. R. 239; 5 I. Jur. 97. (C.)

1. V., by will in 1845, bequeathed personal estates, in the following terms:—"The interest of which I leave to X., and he is never to demand the principal so long as the interest is satisfactorily settled; and, in case he shall die without male issue lawfully begotten, and arriving at the age of twenty-one years, it shall then descend to his brother Y., and his male issue lawfully begotten, and arriving at the age of twenty-one years; and, in case he should die without such issue lawfully begotten, then I bequeath the same to W. and his family, on his taking the name of M., so that the estate may remain in the family; the interest of all bonds which remain on the estate to continue to remain on the estate, and to descend from heirs to heirs, as above stated." Held, that, notwithstanding the 29th sec. of the Wills Act (7 W. 4 & 1 Vic., c. 26), the failure of issue intended could not be construed to be a failure of issue at the death of the first taker; a "contrary intention" appearing by the will; and that, consequently, the gift over was void for remoteness.—Green v. Giles, 5 I. C. R. 25; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 90. (C.)

2. A testator gave a life estate in funds, of which the principal was after that estate to be divided among several, and to the survivor, if any, died, without specifying the time of survivorship. Held, that the legacy did not vest until the death of the tenant for life.

The word "vest" prima facie, means "come into possession," and not "accrue in point of interest."

V. devised a life estate to B., and after B.'s death to six persons equally, with a declaration that "if any die without issue before his share vests, the same shall belong equally to the survivors." Held, that the word "vest" did not prevent the application of the above rule.—Richardson v. Robertson, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 269. (H.L.)

3. A testator bequeathed a legacy to a tenant for life, and after her death to the testator's surviving children. Held, that the survivorship referred to the death of the tenant for life.—Shaw v. Magill, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 298. (R.)

4. A testatrix bequeathed to each of two nephews and to a niece a legacy a-piece, on the happening of certain events; and directed that, if either or any of the legatees died before his or her legacy became payable, his or her share should go to the survivors or survivor. If all died before their legacies became payable, the aggregate of their legacies was bequeathed among a number of legatees, one of whom was appointed executor and residuary legatee, "to take to his own use the amount of any of the aforesaid legacies which may become void by the death of the respective legatees happening before my decease." One of the nephews and the niece died in the life of the testatrix. Held, that their legacies went to the surviving nephew.

Held, that the word "payable" referred to the death of the testatrix; and that "survivor" meant surviving at her decease.—Dalton v. O'Beirne, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 107. (M.O.)

XV. 2. Generally.

5. It is a well settled rule of construction, never to put a different construction on the same word, when it occurs more than once in an instrument, unless there appears a clear intention to the contrary.—Ridgeway v. Mun-Kittrick, 1 Dr. & War. 84. (C.)

6. V., by codicil, having devised lands to trustees for charitable purposes, and having recited that they were then let at a clear yearly rent of £237, which he directed to be appropriated in the particular manner specified in the codicil, to maintain an almshouse, &c., declared that, if the rent was increased by any new letting, the surplus so to arise should go to the only use of the person or persons of the S. & C. families, who should, for the time being, be lord or lords, lady or ladies, of the manor of D.; and, if those families did not protect those charities, or if those families became extinct, in either case the trustees should apply those surplus rents in addition to the former provisions for the charity. After V.'s death, those families sold D. Held, that they had not thereby become extinct within the meaning of the codicil.—Commrs. of Ch. D. & B. v. De Clifford, 1 Dr. & War. 245. (C.)

7. When legacies are given to children "subject to the same limitations" as portions to which they are entitled; the expressions put them on the same footing as to interest.—Bredin v. B., 1 Dr. & War. 494. (C.)

8. Semble—The dictum in Forth v. Chapman, 1 P. Wms. 666, and the doctrine in Dee v. Cooke, 7 East, 269, "that, when there appears to be an intention on the face of a will to give the whole of a term of years away from an executor, a bequest of it, though only for a day, is a gift of the whole term, if the limitations over are void," cannot be sustained.—Ker v. Lord Dungannon, 4 I. E. R. 343; 1 Dr. & War. 509; 1 Con. & L. 335. (C.)

9. Exception to the maxim, dies incertus in testamento conditionem facit. V. bequeathed to his three daughters, A., B., and C., to A., £1500, to B., £1000, to C., £1200, which sums were to be paid to them respectively on their days of marriage, with lawful interest, to be computed from the day of his death, until they were fully paid. A. and C., surviving V., died unmarried. Held, that their legacies were vested.—Vize v. Stoney, 4 I. E. R. 64; 2 Dr. & Wal. 660. (C.)

10. Semble—Stronger words are required to exonerate personal estate from paying debts than from paying legacies.—Lamphier v. Despard, 4 I. E. R. 386; 2 Dr. & War. 59; 1 Con. & L. 200. (C.)

11. When there is some property which comes exactly within the words of a bequest, it will not include other property to which it is doubtful whether the words apply.—Ridge v. Newton, 4 I. E. R. 389; 2 Dr. & War. 239; 1 Con. & L. 381. (C.)

1. Semble—The rule in Wild's case, Repts. 16. a., does not apply to personal property.—Heron v. Stokes, 4 I. E. R. 284; 2 Dr. & War. 89; 1 Con. & L. 270. (C.)

2. When the Ecclesiastical Court has given probates of both instruments, as constituting one will or testamentary document, the whole is to be construed as one will.—Armstrong v. Millar, 4 I. E. R. 659; L. & T. 557. (E.E.)

3. The doctrine of cy-pres applies to the construction of a will made in exercise of a power.—Stackpole v. S., 6 I. E. R. 18; 4 Dr. & War. 320; 2 Con. & L. 506. (C.)

4. V. bequeathed to his wife F. all his household furniture and plate, and, subject thereto, he left all his property to his executors, in trust, immediately after his decease, or so soon as they conveniently could, to sell all his chattels (except his household furniture and plate, and his horse "Harkaway"), and invest the produce thereof; and as to his horse, desired that, should £1000 or upwards be offered for him, his executors should sell him; but that if that sum could not be realised for him, he should be kept so long as he should live, and let each season; and if sold, that the price should likewise be invested. V. then devised an annuity, and subject thereto left all the rest of his property in trust to pay the rents, issues, and the whole and entire produce thereof, to his wife F. for her natural life, and after her decease to convey it over. The horse was not sold, but let out as a sire. Held, that F. was not entitled during her life to the clear earnings of the horse.

Semble—That a value should have been placed on the earnings of the horse, and that F. was entitled to the Court rate of interest on such value.—Arnold v. Ennis, 2 I. C. R. 601. (R.)

5. V. devised the lands of Q. in trust, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, to sell them; and directed that their price, together with their rents and profits, until sold, should be considered as part of his personal estate, and applied in the same manner as his personal estate, which he gave, upon trust, to pay his funeral expenses, debts, and legacies; and in the next place, that its yearly amount, and the yearly rents and profits of the lands which should be purchased with such personal estate, or any part thereof, should be applied to pay his debts and legacies, until they were satisfied. The residue of his personal estate he gave upon trust, to lay it out in purchasing lands of inheritance in fee, to be conveyed to his grandson, T., and his heirs, subject to a charge for renewing chattel leases; and directed a term for years to be created out of such purchased lands for that purpose; and upon trust, that until a proper purchase could be made, the trust money should be laid out at interest, and applied towards discharging the purchase-money. He directed his trustees to renew his chattel leases, which he bequeathed to T. for life. V. died in 1771. From that time, to 1837, T. continued in possession of Q., and of the chattel leases. From 1820 to 1837, he paid large sums for renewal fines. Held, that the accumulation of the rents of Q. was to cease at the end of a year from V.'s death, and that the rents from that period to 1820, when the trust to raise the renewal fines arose, belonged to T.; but that after 1820 the rents were to be set off against the renewal fines.—Smith v. Dungannon, 3 I. C. R. 316. (C.)

6. On W.'s marriage with A., the ptf., a mortgage term, and £6000 secured thereby, were assigned to trustees for W. for life, remainder to provide a jointure of £300 per annum for A., remainder for the first son of the marriage who should attain age. C. was the first son who attained age. W. died. C. became indebted by judgments to A. A.'s jointure and the interest on her judgments were regularly paid down to 1846. C. bequeathed all his money and securities for money to E., and constituted him sole executor. C. died in 1834. E. bequeathed his interest in the mortgage to his children, in various shares; £1200 part of it to his daughter, A. W., and a like sum to his son V., and constituted S. sole executrix. V. died in 1846, and S. proved his will. By deed made in 1850 between A. W. of the first part, S. of the second part, and G. of the third part, A. W. and S. in her own right, and as representative of C. and E., assigned to G., for value, £800, part of A. W.'s portion of the mortgage.

S. assented to the legacy to E., and by deed of 1849, made between E. and F., E. for value assigned his portion of the mortgage to F.

A. filed a creditor's bill against S., praying an administration of the estate of C. and V. Held, that A.'s judgments were not charges upon the bequeathed portions of the mortgage in priority to the claims of G. and F. That the lapse of time before the death of C., prevented A. from following his assets into the hands of a purchaser for value; and that the assignment by the specific legatee, with the assent of the executrix of the legatee and the executrix of the debtor, barred the claim of the ptf.—Ward v. W., 4 I. C. R. 215. (C.)

7. V. devised specific real property on trust for his eldest son T., absolutely; and other specific real property to trustees during the minority of his second son D., to receive the rents and create an accumulating fund for the benefit of V.'s younger children; and after D. attained age, upon trust for him absolutely. V. created similar trusts of other property for the benefit of his other younger sons, and directed similar accumulations during the minority of those to be entitled to them. After sundry legacies, and some rather complicated provisions, V. bequeathed any sum which should remain out of his assets, or of the savings of his real, freehold, or chattel proper-

, and all the residue of his estates, to and among all his children who should attain age, share and share alike: but if no child save T. should attain age, he gave to his wife £1000, and authorised her to dispose of a house among children; and as to the remainder of his property, which would have descended to such child, if living, he gave the same to his brothers and sisters. At the date of the will, T. had attained age; all the other children were minors. Held, that T. was not entitled to any share of the residue.—Hanna v. Bell, 7 I. C. R. 3. (C.)—[Affirmed: ibid, 221. (C.A.)]

XV. 8. a. Generally.

1. "It is my will that my trustees shall sell by auction all my coins and gems, except such as my wife shall choose to keep for her own use."

The wife chose to keep them all. Held, that she was entitled to do so.—Vincent v. Percival, 2 Jon. 635. (E.E.)

XV. 8. b. Fee-simple, or Quasi Fee.

2. V. devised his lands to his wife. By a separate clause he gave her specified chattels, and added, fourthly:—"I order my wife to pay the following legacies"—(enumerating them). He appointed her and another executors. Held, that the legacies were charged on the lands, and that the wife took the fee.

Neither the word "thereout," nor "paying," is required to make payment of a legacy a condition, so as to give the devisee the fee in the lands charged therewith.—Johnson v. Brady, 11 I. E. R. 386. (C.)

3. V., being entitled under a f.-f. grant to a farm called K., by his will, executed long before the passing of the Wills Act (7 W. 4 & 1 Vic., c. 26), made a yearly provision, consisting of a certain quantity of oatmeal, potatoes and turf, for his wife, and directed that this provision should be paid by his sons B., C., and D., in certain proportions. In two subsequent and totally distinct clauses of his will he devised as follows:—"Fourthly, I bequeath to my son C. one-half of that farm called K., he paying yearly £2. 13s. 6d."—"Sixthly, I bequeath to my son D. the other half of K. aforesaid, he paying yearly £2. 13s. 6d." Held, that the fee-simple in the two moiety parts passed by these devises.—M'Naghten v. Boyd, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 177. (R.)

4. V., seized for lives renewable for ever of the reversion expectant on a term of 99 years in the lands of G., by deed dated the 16th March 1797, settled his interest in G. upon W. for life, remainders over, the ultimate reversion to himself in fee. On the 20th May 1797, V., by will, devised "whatever residue might remain of his fortune undisposed of by his will" equally amongst all his children, sons and daughters, and made a codicil in 1802, reciting that it was his intention to have divided the residue of his fortune between his wife and all his children, but that he had since considered that it would be "great ease" to his wife to leave to his children specific sums instead of their respective shares of the residue of his fortune; and he thereby bequeathed to his children specific sums "in lieu and stead of all residue of his fortune;" and after payment thereof left and bequeathed the rest and remainder of all such residue to his wife. All the limitations in the settlement of 1797 before V.'s reversion were exhausted after V.'s death. Held, that V.'s interest in the lands of G. passed by the residuary devise in the codicil.

The word "fortune," in a devise, prima facie includes both real and personal property.—Spearing v. Hawkes, 6 I. C. R. 297; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 406. (C.A.)

XV. 8. c. Absolute Interest.

5. Testator, seized of B., under a lease for lives renewable for ever, gave his wife his dwelling-house, a cow's grass for her in summer, and fodder for her in winter, yearly and every year, as long as she lived; with four bushels of potatoes, set, dug, and ground; with half a peck of flax-seed, and a cart of madeturf, brought and drawn up, yearly and every year. He then gave his son John four acres of land; and his son Andrew the remainder of his farm of B.; "and further, I allow my son Andrew to make good the aforesaid benefits that I do leave to my wife; to him the said Andrew, and my son John I do allow that they both shall, equally between them, be both alike in doing whatever labour belongeth to it." Held, that John took the absolute interest in the four acres devised to him.—Morrrough v. Lord Dufferin, 2 Jon. 719. (E.E.)

6. When a testator devised to trustees his "estate and interest" in farms of which he was seized for lives renewable for ever, in trust, after paying certain annuities &c., to permit and suffer his nephew, A., to enjoy the same for his life; and, from and after his decease, to permit such son of his as should attain the age of 21 years to enjoy said lands; and on failure of such, remainder to his nephew, B., for his life; remainder to his first son, as before. Held, that a son of

A.'s, who attained the age of 21, and died in the lifetime of his father, took the absolute interest in those premises.—Kirby v. O'Heu, 2 I. E. R. 424. (E.E.)

1. Testator, seized of the lands of D. under a lease to him and his heirs pur autre vie, made his will, commencing thus:—"As to such estate and worldly substance as I am possessed of or entitled to, I dispose thereof in manner following." He then devised the lands of D., and all his estate and interest therein, to S. and his heirs, upon trust, to apply the rents in payment of debts until the same should be discharged; and, after the same should be discharged, to permit his heir-at-law to take thereout £40 a-year, for three years only; and, subject thereto, to the use of his sons T. and J., share and share alike, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants. He also devised other lands for the benefit of his other sons and their families, by apt technical words; and bequeathed the residue of his personal property to his heir-at-law. There was not any residuary bequest of the real estate. Held, that T. and J. took the absolute interest in the lease of the lands of D.—Bradshaw v. B., 5 I. E. R. 310. (E.E.)

2. V. devised B. to her nephew F., for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; remainder to R. and several other nephews, successively, for like estates. She devised W. to R. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; with remainders over to F., and several other nephews, in like manner. Afterwards, by a codicil, V., reciting the gifts to F. and R., and declaring her wish to give R. the property devised to F.; and v. v.; she revoked those gifts, and devised the provision given by her will to F., to R., his heirs, executors, &c.; and in lieu thereof devised to F., his executors, &c., the property given by her will to R. Held, that the limitations over to the other nephews were revoked, and that R. and F. respectively took absolute interests in their gifts.—Murray v. Johnson, 3 Dr. & War. 143; 2 Con. & L. 104. (C.)

3. Bequest of personalty by will, executed after the 1 Vic., c. 26, to "A. and B., to be divided equally; with a request to A. that, should he die without lawful issue, the property which I bequeath him shall revert back to the sons of B." Held, that A. did not take an absolute interest in his moiety.—In re O'Beirne, 7 I. E. R. 171; 1 Jon. & L. 352. (C.)

4. V. gave a sum to her children who should be living at her decease; and, if she died without leaving any such issue, over. Having a power to appoint to D.'s children, V. gave £2000 to the separate use of A. (one of them); and, if she died without issue by her then husband, or any other whom she might thereafter take, that £2000 to be divided amongst other objects of the power. Held, that A. was absolutely entitled to the £2000.—Caul- field v. Maguire, 8 I. E. R. 164; 2 Jon. & L. 141. (C.)

5. Bequest of chattels real to A. for life, remainder to his lawful issue, to be disposed of to them as he might think fit; on failure of his lawful issue, over. Held, to vest the absolute interest in A.—Delap v. Hall, 1 L. Jur. 312. (C.)

6. Devise of freeholds to B., "to be kept in trust for C.; that is, B. is to let the premises, and to give the rent to my son, C., for his support." Held, that C. took an absolute estate.

The 1 Vic., c. 16, put real and personal estates on a parity.—Malcolmson v. M., 3 I. Jur. 150. (C.)

7. V. bequeathed a chattel interest to J and T., and the survivor of them, and to the heirs of such survivor, not as joint heirs, but as tenants in common; and declared his will to be, that if both J. and T. died without issue, the share or shares of both, or such one of them as died without issue, should go to V.'s rightful heirs-at-law. T. bequeathed all his property of every description to J., and died. Held, that J. took the absolute interest in the chattel.

J. bequeathed the same interest to B. for life, without impeachment of waste, and from the decease of B., then to the use of the first son of B.; and the first and other sons of the first son, or the daughter or daughters of such first son; remainder to the second and other sons of B., successively, and their issue, male or female; for want of such issue male in B., remainder to his issue female, and for want of any issue in B., remainder over. Held, that B. took a life interest, with remainder to his first son absolutely.—Murphy v. Johnston, 6 I. C. R. 230. (C.)

8. A testator, having directed the accumulation of a fund, ordered that his executors should invest it in the funds, "the same to be, and remain to the use of J. and R. during their natural lives respectively, in equal moieties, with full power and authority to each to receive the interest thereof during their respective lives, with remainder over to the first and every other son of each, according to seniority of age and priority of birth; and in case of failure of issue male or female in each," then over. On the death of R. without having ever married—Held, that as he would under the limitations have taken an estate tail in realty, he took an absolute interest in his moiety of the fund.

Semble—That Ex parte Wynch (5 De G. M. & G. 188), and cases of that class, do not abrogate the old rule of construction; but relax the rule, where the testator's intention is clearly in favour of such a construction.—Monteagle v. Langrishe, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 403. (C.)

9. V. devised all his landed property to his son, R.; and in case his said son died under the age of twenty-one years, gave his property to his nephew, E.; and in case his nephew, E. died under the age of twenty-one years, gave to his nephew, P. V. then directed his executors to realise his outstanding personal estate; and, reciting that he was entitled to a fund, "ordered and directed that it might be distributed share and share alike between his son R., and his nephew E., or his (the nephew's) brother, P." R., E., and P., all survived V. Held, that the fund should be divided equally between R. and E.—Carey v. J., 6 I. C. R. 255. (C.)

1. V. gave all his property, real and personal, to trustees, and directed that they should sell his freehold estate, and make up in account of his estate, so that they might be able to make a division among his nine children, to whom he left it in equal shares.

After other directions, he declared that he left the shares of his daughters to them, for their respective lives, free from the control of their husbands, with power to appoint those shares among their children, notwithstanding coverture. In a subsequent clause he directed that the shares of his sons, who should have attained twenty-one, at his death, should forthwith vest in them; and that the shares of the other sons should vest as they should afterwards respectively attain age, and the shares of daughters on marriage; and that the shares of sons who should die under twenty-one, and of daughters who should die unmarried, should go amongst the survivors as therein mentioned. J., one of V.'s daughters, married, and died without exercising her power of appointment, leaving one child. Held, that J. took an absolute interest in her share of the fund.—M'Tear v. M'Dowell, 11 I. C. R. 338; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 146. (C.)

2. V., after particularising his real and personal estate, bequeathed the residue thereof to his children living at his death, share and share alike; the shares of his daughters to be paid to them on their respective days of marriage, provided a settlement, with the approbation of his executors, was executed on the marriage of each; and if such settlement was not made, each of his daughters should be entitled to the interest of her share for life only, with a gift over. V. declared that if any of his daughters died unmarried, "she shall have power and liberty to dispose of, by will or otherwise, the sum of £500 of her share, and the remainder of her share is to be divided, share and share alike, amongst all my other children then living, except those who may have married without the settlement aforesaid." C., one of V.'s daughters, died intestate, and unmarried. Held, that C. took an absolute interest in her share, to the extent of £500, which was to be considered as a gross sum of money taken out of her share, and not as an aliquot part of her share; and that it was to be considered as personalty in C., and not as partly real and partly personal.—In re M'Donnell's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 268. (L.E.C.)

3. V. bequeathed moneys, lent on mortgage, to A. for life, remainder to his "first and other sons." The will also contained devises of fee-simple, freehold, and chattel lands to the first and other sons of A. successively. Held, that the first son of A. took the whole mortgage money absolutely.—In re Stauntons Minors, 14 I. C. R. 98. (R.)

4. By marriage settlement, two sums of £1000, one the property of the husband, the other that of the wife, were vested, in trust, to pay the interest from time to time, as received, or to permit the wife to receive and take "the said two several sums of £1000 respectively, and all interest, benefit, and advantage arising, or to arise therefrom," to her separate use; "said two several sums to be so received and taken" in full for her jointure, and in bar of dower; and if the husband survived her, to permit him, during life, to receive those two several sums, and all interest, &c., derivable therefrom; with power of appointment of those two several sums among the issue of the marriage, to the husband; in default of appointment, to such issue, in equal shares; in default of issue surviving at the death of the husband, those sums were to be disposed of as the husband should appoint. Provided that when the husband should acquire property in lands producing £200 a-year, and should settle a jointure of £200 a-year on the wife, subject to the same limitations as those sums were declared subject to, it should be lawful for him to receive those two sums for his own use. No issue of the marriage survived the husband. He died before the wife, without having settled any jointure, or made any appointment of the fund. Held, that the wife took only the interest of the fund for her life.

That the husband was entitled to the interest of the fund for his life, with a general power of appointment over the principal.

That no appointment having been made by him, there was a resulting trust in favour of the administrator of the husband as to £1000, and a similar trust to the wife's executor as to the other £1000.—In re Lane's Trusts, 14 I. C. R. 523. (R.)

5. V., seized in fee of the lands of "Baskin," and for life in entailed lands, was empowered by his marriage settlement to charge the entailed estates with £5000 for his own use. He mortgaged them to his brother, to whom, as the deed recited, their mother had bequeathed arrears of jointure (amounting to more than £5000) charged upon those estates, which V., to secure those arrears, thereby charged with £5000. Amongst the names of the mortgaged townlands occurred "Baskin." Held, that "Baskin" had been introduced by mistake, and was not charged with the mortgage debt.

V., by subsequent will, reciting that all his estates, except "Baskin," and the townland of K., were settled on his eldest son, devised (without mentioning what) to trustees, in trust, for his son B.; and then devised to them for his son C., K., together with other specified premises. Held, that B. was absolutely entitled to "Baskin."

V. thereby further charged "said property, according to the power given me, with the sum of £1000 sterling, for my daughter Julia, in addition to her share of the sum charged by my marriage settlement." At V.'s death, the mortgage debt amounted to only £4688; so that £312 became thereby absolutely discharged from the mortgage. Held, that Julia was absolutely entitled to that sum.—Montgomery v. M., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 102. (C.)

1. V. bequeathed the life use of all his funded property, moneys, and securities for money, to his sons, A. and B., share and share alike, for their lives, with power to them to invest it; and directed that, after their respective deaths, the issues and profits arising therefrom should go to their respective eldest sons born in wedlock, share and share alike, during each of their natural lives and life; and so on to the eldest sons of the eldest sons born in wedlock, in succession, share and share alike, on their attaining age respectively, subject to bequests, with cross limitations to A. and B.; if they both died without male issue, then among their female issue, as they should respectively appoint. At V.'s death there was not any son born to A. Held, that to carry out the general intent, the will must be construed to give A.'s eldest son, born after V.'s death, an estate tail in realty; and, therefore, that he took an absolute interest in his share of V.'s personalty.—In re Cleary's Trusts, 16 I. C. R. 488. (R.)

XV. 3. d. Estate Tail.

2. Lands were devised in trust for A. for life, remainder in trust for her issue male and their issue male, in such manner as A. should appoint; and in default of such issue male, in trust for B. for life, remainder in trust for such of his issue male and their issue as he should appoint, and in default of such appointment then over. Held, that B. took an estate tail.—Irwin v. Cuffe, Hayes, 30. (E.E.)

3. V., by will, directed his trustees to call in money to which he was entitled, and invest it in the purchase of freehold estates in lands or hereditaments of a clear estate of inheritance, for the use of his son, A., for life; after his death, to the use of his first and other sons, according to seniority of age and priority of birth. If A. died without issue male, in trust for V.'s second son, B., and the heirs male of his body, according to, &c.; and desired that those sons, and the several persons who should be in possession of those estates, should have power to make leases not exceeding three lives or 31 years, at the full improved value. Held, that A. was entitled to an estate tail in the lands to be purchased.—Herbert v. Blunden, 1 Dr. & War. 78. (C.)

4. V., who had, under his marriage settlement, a power of appointing, by will or deed, lands held pur autre vie, to any of his sons, for any estate not exceeding an estate tail, by will, reciting the power, devised the lands to a trustee, to the use of his third son for life; remainder to the trustee during his life, to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to the first and other sons of that son in tail; in default of such issue of his third son, to his other sons successively for life, with similar remainders to their first and other sons in succession. By a codicil, V. directed that other lands, included in the settlement, which he had by will devised to his sixth son, should, on the happening of a particular event, namely, the death of his eldest son without issue, belong to the third son in tail. The third son, in 1816, before the happening of the event on which he was to take the additional lands, executed a settlement, by lease and release, upon his marriage, by which, after reciting his title to the lands devised to him by the will, and that he was contingently entitled to the lands devised to him by the codicil, he settled all the lands upon himself for life; remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage in tail; and, in default of such issue settled the lands devised by the will, upon his brothers successively for life, remainder to their first and other sons in tail. In 1817 the event happened upon which the settlor became entitled to the additional lands; but he did not get possession of them. The first wife of the settlor died, leaving two sons; and in 1827, upon his second marriage he executed articles, by which he covenanted to settle the reversion in all the lands expectant upon the death of his sons without issue, upon the children of the second marriage. The sons of the first marriage died without issue, and a bill was filed by the children of the second marriage, after the death of their father, claiming all the lands under the articles. Held, that the appointment by the will by the third son gave him an estate tail, by the application of the doctrine of cy-pres.

That the limitations to collaterals in the third son's first marriage settlement were voluntary and void against subsequent purchasers.

That the Court would enforce the subsequent articles against the persons claiming under those limitations.

That as to the additional lands, the Statute of Limitations ran from the happening of the event upon which the title of the third son accrued; and that all claiming under the subsequent settlement were barred at the expiration of the statutable period.

That the persons claiming under the settlement of 1816 were not estopped by it from denying the right of the settlor to the additional lands.—Stackpole v. S., 6 I. E. R. 18; 2 Con. & L. 489. (C.)

5. V. devised lands to his son A. and his heirs, for ever, and if A. died without lawful issue, desired that, after his death, all the property should go to his daughter and her heirs, and if both A. and the daughter died without lawful issue, desired that the property should go to his brothers. Held, an estate tail in A., not a fee-simple, with an executory devise over.—Jones v. Ryan, 9 I. E. R. 249. (C.)

1. V., seized and possessed of real and personal estates, devises a chattel interest to B., her executors, &c., and freehold and chattel estates and interests to C., her heirs, executors, &c., with a proviso that, if either should die unmarried, or, being married, should die without issue, then that the bequests so appointed for such of them so dying unmarried, or, being married, dying without issue, should go to and remain to the survivor of them, her heirs, executors, &c. Held, that the words "without issue" meant an indefinite failure of issue, and not issue living at the time of the death of the devisee.—O'Donohoe v. King, 8 I. E. R. 185. (E.E.)

2. V., seized in fee, devised one moiety of his estate to his sister M. for life; remainder to her first and other sons in tail male; for want of such issue, remainder to her issue female, and the heirs of their bodies, with power to M. to charge £1000 for younger children; for want of such issue, remainder to his sister J. for life, with precisely similar remainders to her issue. The other moiety was limited to J. for life, and to her issue, and then to M. and her issue, in precisely the same way as the first moiety; for want of issue of M. and J., the whole to L. for life; remainders over.

V., by codicil, reciting the marriage of M. with D., devised one moiety to M. for life; remainder to the issue of M. successively and the heirs of their bodies, "as in said will limited, and, for default of such issue," to D. for life; remainder over, as in said will limited. The codicil contained the following clause:—"I ratify my will, with respect to my real estate, in every particular not hereby altered; the only alteration I intend hereby is, that if my sister Margaret should die without issue, or failing issue, that the said D., her husband, or any other husband she may have, should hold a moiety of my estate during his life." M., after the death of D., suffered a recovery to the use of herself, her heirs and assigns, for ever. Held, that, under the limitations in the will, M. took only an estate for her life, and that she did not take an estate in tail female, after the estate in tail male to her first and other sons.

That, from the words "in default of such issue, to D.," &c., in the codicil, there was no ground for implying an estate tail in M.; the word "such" being referential to the devise in the will to her sons in tail male, and her daughters in tail general.

That the devise in the codicil to D., or any future husband, if M. should die without issue or failing issue, was to take effect on the determination of the express limitations in the will to M.'s first and other sons in tail male, and to her daughters in tail general, and not on a general failure of M.'s issue, and that M. therefore did not take an estate tail by implication.—Hamilton v. West, 10 I. E. R. 75. (R.)

3. V. devised A. to his son S., for life, sans waste; remainder to trustees to preserve, &c.; after the death of S., to the use of his heirs male, in such shares and subject to such charges as S. should by deed or will appoint; if S. died without issue male, in trust, to permit V.'s second son, J., to receive the rents for life, sans waste; remainder to trustees, to preserve, &c.; after J.'s death, to the use of his male children, in the same manner, and with like power of appointment and charging as above; remainders over, in the same terms, to V.'s third son, T.; remainder to T.'s male children; remainder to V.'s right heirs. V. then devised B. to J. for life; remainder to his male children, as he should appoint; in default of appointment, to J.'s first son, and the heirs male of his body; like remainder to the second, &c., and every other son of J.; if J. died without issue male, to S., to be disposed of amongst his children as he thought proper. V. directed that if S. died without issue male, and therefore A. descended to J., and his issue male, then B. should immediately descend and go to T. and his issue male; and V. gave powers of leasing to S., J., and T., as they should respectively become seized. Held, that S. took an estate tail in A.—Phillips v. P., 10 I. E. R. 518. (R.)

4. A devise of lands, in trust for A. for life, then for his first and other sons in tail male; in default of such issue, over. Held, that A. took only a life estate, and that a remainder in tail, after the limitation, could not be implied.—Tucker v. Baker, 11 I. E. R. 104. (C.) —[Affid.: 3 H. L. Cas. 106; 14 Jur. 771.]

5. Devise to testator's son, A., and to his issue, male and female, in such shares, manner, and proportions as he might by deed or will appoint, with power to jointure a wife; and in case of the death of A. without lawful issue, then to testator's three daughters, share and share alike, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and to their heirs and assigns. Held, that A. took an estate tail.—Whitsitt v. Thompson, 12 I. E. R. 119. (C.)

6. Testator, being seized in fee of, among others, the lands of M., devised the said lands of M. to his daughter Martha, for life, remainder to her first and second sons in tail male, remainder to his daughters as tenants in common in tail general, with a series of successive remainders to several persons in tail, and an ultimate remainder to J. D. in fee. In a subsequent part of the will, testator devised the same lands, together with others, "unto my said daughter Martha, and the heirs of her body lawfully begotten; and for default of such heirs, to the use of all other the heir and heirs herein named, and for the uses mentioned, for ever." Held, that the two sets of limitations of the lands of M. were not irreconcilable; that Martha took under the will an estate in tail general in remainder, after the estate devised to her daughters as tenants in common in tail, and before all the estates and uses limited to other

"heirs" or devisees, according to the ultimate disposition of the will.—In re Frew's Estate, 7 I. C. R. 95. (I.E.C.)

1. V., by will, in 1822, devised all his freehold property, upon trust, to permit his daughter R., his heiress-at-law, to receive the rents and profits "for such term, time, and space, as my said daughter shall remain unmarried, or marry with the consent of one or both of my above named trustees. But in case my said daughter R. shall not marry with the consent of one or both of my said trustees," then she shall receive only an annuity of £60 for her life, and the residue of the property shall be invested in government stock for the benefit of her issue; "and in case of no issue, I bequeath such residue to my right heirs;" and if R. died unmarried, or without lawful issue, V. devised her property over.

V., together with other persons, was seized of the lands in question, together with other lands, by a lease for lives renewable for ever, made in 1744. In 1818, a partition was made of the lands. In 1825, V. died. In 1829, a renewal of the lease of 1744 was made to a trustee, upon trust, as to one moiety of the lands, for himself and his heirs; and, as to the other moiety, for the several persons entitled thereto, according to their respective rights. To that renewal, R. and the other persons interested under the lease of 1744 were parties. Held, that R. took, under the will, an estate quasi in tail, and that that estate was barred by the renewal of 1829.—In re McNeale's Estate, 7 I. C. R. 388; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 45; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 212. (I.E.C.); 3 I. Jur. N. S. 310. (C.A.)

2. Devise in trust for the testator's mother for life; then to his brother A., and his assigns for life; then to permit such one child of A., and the heirs of his or her body, to receive the rents as A. should by deed or will appoint to; in default of appointment, to go to A.'s eldest son, and the heirs of his body; and, if no son, to and amongst A.'s daughters, and to the heirs of their bodies, share and share alike; and in default of such issue, in trust for B., C., and D., successively for their lives, with similar remainders to them respectively as to A.'s sons and daughters, remainder over in fee, and a residuary devise to A., who by will appointed to his eldest son, who died in A.'s lifetime, and without issue. Held, that A. took an estate tail in remainder after the estate devised to his eldest son in default of appointment.

That the words, "in case there shall be no son," did not give an estate by implication to A.'s other sons.—Ball v. B., 15 I. C. R. 517. (R.)

3. V., seized of lands under leases for lives renewable for ever, devised in 1824 all his freehold leases and interest whatsoever to trustees, and the heirs of their survivor, in trust, after payment of the head rents, to apply the clear yearly rents amongst his three daughters during their respective lives, in equal shares, for their separate use; and, if any or either of them should die leaving lawful issue, then in trust, as to her share, for the use of such issue as she should by deed or will appoint; in default of such appointment, to the use of such issue equally, share and share alike. He directed that, if any of his daughters died without issue, her share should go to the survivor or survivors of them for the increase of her and their respective shares, to their separate use, and to go to their lawful issue, subject to the like power of appointment amongst them; and, if all his daughters died without leaving lawful issue, then in trust to pay the rents to his nephew during his life, and after the nephew's death, if he left lawful issue, in trust, as to one-half of the freehold and leasehold interests, to the use of such issue as he should appoint; in default of appointment, equally; and as to the remaining half to the use of his sister's children, in equal shares, and to their lawful issue; and, if his nephew died without issue, then as to the whole of his freehold and leasehold interests to the use of his sister's children, in equal shares, and to their lawful issue; if they should be then dead, then as to the whole in trust for the issue of his nephew; and, in case of the deaths of his nephew, and the children of his sister without issue, in trust to assign over the freehold and leasehold interests to his own right heirs. The trustees were given a power to lease from time to time, as they should remain seized and possessed by virtue of the trusts contained in the will, with the consent of the person or persons then entitled. Held, that the legal estate was devised to the trustees during the existence of the entire series of limitations; and that V.'s daughters took equitable estates in quasi tail in their respective shares.—Sherwin v. Kenny, 16 I. C. R. 138. (R.)

4. An owner in fee devised different portions to several of his sons respectively. Each devise was made to the devisee "and his heirs for ever." One devise was in these words:—"I leave my third son, M., the lands of G. for ever; but in case he should die unmarried, or without lawful issue, in that case he may will one-half of it as he pleases, and the other half to go, share and share alike, between my surviving sons and their families." The will concluded thus:—"All the bequests given to my son R., my son J., and my other three sons, M., C., and H., of my property, no part of it shall or will be liable to pay any debts they may contract, nor sell or mortgage same, but always go in the male line free of any debt of theirs." Held, that M. took an estate tail under the will.—In re Thompson's Estate, 16 I. C. R. 228; 10 I. Jur. N. S. 47. (C.A.)

from should go to their respective eldest sons born in wedlock, share and share alike, during each of their natural lives and life; and so on to the eldest sons of the eldest sons born in wedlock, in succession, share and share alike, on their respectively attaining age, subject to bequests, with cross limitations to A. and B.; if they both died without male issue, then among their female issue, as they should respectively appoint. At V.'s death there was not any son born to A. Held, that to carry out the general intent, the will must be construed to give A.'s eldest son, born after V.'s death, an estate tail in realty; and therefore that he took an absolute interest in his share of V.'s personality.—In re Cleary's Trusts, 16 I. C. R. 438. (R.)

1. A testator nominated "———, as sole executor, leaving him all" testator's property "for the purpose of paying the following bequests, first paying all" his "just debts and funeral expenses." He then bequeathed the bill of Knocknarea for ever to his illegitimate son, Thomas, giving him full power to will and dispose thereof, if he should have a family; but, if he died without issue, then to the use of testator's illegitimate daughter, Jane, without further words of limitation, and appointed W. his executor. Jane, unmarried, predeceased Thomas, who died unmarried. Held, that the executor took the fee in Knocknarea, and that Thomas took an estate in quasi tail, the limitation over not being an executory devise, with a remainder in fee to Jane.

That W. was the executor and trustee whose name the testator had intended to insert in the blank.—Ormsby v. Anderson, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 66. (C.)

XV. 3. e. Estate for Life, or other Limited Interest.

2. V. devised his house in H—— street, whereof he was seized in fee, to his wife for life, with power for her to sell it; and directed the purchase-money, or so much thereof as should be necessary, to be applied by his executors in paying his debts; the surplus he gave to his wife for her own benefit. V. also devised B., whereof he was seized under a lease for lives renewable for ever, to his wife for life, subject to payment of his debts; and, after her death, devised the house in H—— street, if not sold, and also B., to his son, C., for life, subject to payment of his debts, with power to sell the house, the purchase-money to be applied as aforesaid. The surplus V. gave C. for his own benefit. After C.'s death, V. gave all the premises to the use of the issue of C., with power by deed or will to appoint same to all or any of his children or issue, male or female; in default of appointment, to the first and other sons in tail male; remainder to C.'s issue female, as tenants in common, and to their issue; in default of such issue, to V.'s two grand-daughters, D. and E., as tenants in common, for their lives, with several limitations over. V. declared his intention to be, that every person who should come into possession of his estates by virtue of these devises, should hold as tenants for life only, and gave them leasing and jointuring powers; and appointed his son and daughter executor and executrix. C. entered after the death of V.'s wife, was discharged as an insolvent, and died without issue. Held, that C. took only a life estate.—Flood v. Digby, 1 Jones, 520. (E.E.)

3. A gift, by will, of personal annuities to A. and B., for themselves and their children, they being childless at the date of the will, or at testator's death, gives them only a life interest.

Semble—The rule in Wild's case, Repts., 16. a., is inapplicable to bequests of personal estate.—Heron v. Stokes, 4 I. E. R. 284; 2 Dr. & War. 89; 1 Con. & L. 278. (C.)—[Rev. 3 I. E. R. 163. (R.)]

4. Under a bequest, "in trust, for the use of my father, to be disposed of by him, share and share alike, as he by will or deed may appoint, among my brothers H. and J., and the daughter or daughters of S."—Held, that the father took a life estate; and that H. and J., and the daughters of S., were each entitled equally in default of appointment.—Acheson v. Fair, 2 Con. & L. 208; 3 Dr. & War. 512. (C.)

5. L. bequeathed to his daughter E., £500, to be laid out for her benefit, as thereafter directed; and directed that the £500 be invested in government stock, in trust that his executors, when convenient and eligible purchases offer, should lay it out in the purchase of lands in Ireland, or of rentcharges, annuities, or other beneficial estates and interests; and thereupon to settle them to the several uses, and subject to the powers, provisions, and limitations thereafter mentioned (as far as the nature of the several estates or interests to be purchased, and other contingencies, would admit of), that is to say, in trust, well and sufficiently to settle the estates to be purchased; and to begin payment of the rents of the estates and properties to be purchased for the use and benefit of his daughter as soon as she should attain age, or be married; and further, well and sufficiently to settle and secure the estates or properties upon her marriage, so that they, or any part thereof, should not be liable or subject to the control or intermeddling of any husband she might intermarry with, without the same, or any part thereof, being subject or liable to the debts, forfeitures, or engagements of her husband; with full power to his daughter, notwithstanding her covertures, to dispose of, by will, the estates and properties to be purchased, as she should think fit. The daughter married after attaining age. No settlement was executed on her marriage. The £500 were paid into Court by the executors, in a suit instituted for the purpose. Upon an application by the husband and wife to have the money paid to them—Held, per Pennefather, B., and Foster, B., that the daughter took but an estate for life in the lands to be purchased, with power to dispose of them by will. Per Pennefather, B., and Richards, B., that the testator had manifested an intention that the interest given to his daughter should be settled to her separate use, independent of her husband; and that she should not have a power of alienation. Per Curiam—that the husband and wife were not entitled to be paid the £500.—Marcken v. Magrath, 3 I. E. R. 566. (E.E.)

1. V. devised lands, held under a lease for lives, to his nephew, for life, and after his death to the issue, male and female, of the nephew by his then wife, to be divided among them in such manner, shares, &c., as the nephew should by will appoint. Held, that this devise gave the nephew a life estate, with a power of appointing the absolute interest among the children of his then marriage.—Crozier v. C., 5 L. E. R. 415. (C.)

2. A devise of "all my real and personal fortune" to V. for life, and after his decease to "the first and every other son in succession" of V.; in default of such issue," to B. for life, with the same limitations to his sons; in default of such issue, to the daughters of V. and B.; in default of such issue to C. for life, with the same limitations repeated as to her sons and daughters; and in default of such issue to X. in fee. Held, to give successive life estates in all the limitations previous to the gift to X.—Bevan v. White, 7 L. E. R. 473. (C.)

3. Bequest of the use of plate, with power to dispose of such portion thereof as the legatee might think proper, preceded by an absolute gift of other chattels to the same person—Held, to give a life interest only in the plate, with a power of disposition over part of it.—Espinasse v. Luffingham, 9 I. E. R. 129; 3 Jon. & L. 186. (C.)

4. A devise of lands in trust for A. for life, then for his first and other sons in tail male; in default of such issue, over. Held, that A. took only a life estate, and that a remainder in tail, after the limitation, could not be implied.—Tucker v. Baker, 11 I. E. R. 104. (C.)—[Affd.: 3 H. L. Cas. 106; 14 Jur. 771.]

5. £1000 were left by will to M. By a codicil, if M. should marry, and not leave children or a child alive, that £1000 were to become the property of E. and F.; but if M. "should ever marry, and leave a child alive, or children, in that case she can leave the £1000," as she thinks proper, "to one, or amongst any children she might have." By a further codicil the £1000 were left "to M., but if she died without children, they were to become the property of E. and F." M. married, and died, leaving no child; but leaving a grandchild, the son of a deceased daughter, to whom she had appointed the £1000 on her marriage. Held, that the bequest was an absolute one to M., with an executory bequest over to E. and F. if she died without leaving issue living at her death, whether children or remoter issue, which, in the events which had happened, had failed.—In re Synge's Trusts, 3 L. C. R. 379. (R.)

6. V. bequeathed to R. and W. £2800, upon trust, to lay out at interest, and pay the yearly interest to M., for her separate use, it being his will that the sum should not be liable to the debts of her husband, P., or any future husband; after her death, upon trust to pay the £2800 among the children of M., as she should appoint; in default of appointment, to such children equally, at twenty-one or marriage; and if M. died in the life of P., without issue, or if such issue died before twenty-one or marriage, then to pay the £2800, and all interest that then might be due thereof, to B. Residuary bequest to B. M. never had issue, and survived P. B. died in the life of V. Held, that M. was entitled to a life interest only in the produce of the £2800; and that in the event which had happened, the corpus of the fund, subject to that life interest, was not bequeathed by the will of V.—Cole v. Lucas, 5 L. C. R. 375; 1 I. Jur. 368. (C.)

7. Bequest of the interest of £500 to A. for life, and as to the principal, after the decease of A., and as "to all other property belonging to me, that I may die seized or possessed of or entitled unto, in trust, for the use, benefit, and behoof of B. and her children," without the control or intermeddling of her husband, to be paid in such manner as my trustees shall in their discretion think fit. Held, that B. took a life interest in all the property, with remainder to all her children born in A.'s life-time, before and after the death of the testatrix.—Scott v. S., 11 L. C. R. 114. (R.)

8. V. bequeathed to his daughters, A. and C., £1000 each, to be left at interest by his executors and trustees, and the interest regularly paid to them; and should they marry, it must be with the consent of their brother, and even in that case their husbands were to have no control over principal or interest. The receipt of the daughters was to be a sufficient discharge of the interest. Should either or both of his daughters die without issue, they might, by will, dispose of £500 each of the £2000, to any of their brothers or sisters, or nephews or nieces, but to no other person; the remaining £1000 to be divided amongst his surviving children, share and share alike; and should his daughters, or either of them, wish to purchase an annuity with their share of the £2000 for their life or lives, with the consent, or under the direction and advice of their guardians, they were permitted to do so. C. died intestate, and without issue. Held, that the daughters took life interests only in the £1000.

That as to £500 of C.'s share, a trust was created for the brothers and sisters, and nephews and nieces, living at her death, and that they were entitled equally to the £500, in default of appointment.

That the brothers of C., who survived her, were entitled to the remaining £500, her sisters having died before her.—O'Neill v. Montgomery, 12 L. C. R. 163; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 351. (B.)

1. An estate pur autre vie was devised to trustees to permit E., testator's eldest son, to have the use of same for life, and after his death to permit the first and other sons of E. to receive the profits for their lives, the eldest to be always preferred before the youngest; and on failure of issue male of E., remainder to testator's second and other sons in tail male, remainder to testator's right heirs. Held, that the limitation of the life estates was precise and clear; and that the words, "on failure of issue," could not be imported from where they stood in the will, so as to create an estate tail to the prejudice of the life estates; and that the words "issue" or "children" not being used, it did not come within the rule of Roddy v. Fitzgerald, 6 H. Lds. Cas. 823—Burke v. Tully, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 344. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed £1000 a-piece to her sons, A. and B., during their lifetime, with reversion to their children lawfully begotten; and charged property—over part of which she had a general power of appointment, and over the remainder of which she had a power to appoint in favour of her children—with £2000 to be levied and paid to a trustee for the use and benefit of A. and B.—i. e., to pay the interest to them during their life equally; and after the decease of A. to pay £1000 to his lawful children, and, in default of such issue, to her own heirs; with a like bequest of £1000 to B.'s children, and, in default, &c., to her own heirs. Held, that A. and B. took only life interests.

That the bequests to their children were charged on the property over which D. had a general power of appointment.—Clune v. Apjohn, 17 I. C. R. 25. (R.)

3. V. bequeathed a house "to B., for her and children's sole use," and by the same will £1000 "to B., for herself and children's use." Held, that a joint tenancy was created between B. and her children living at the death of the testator.—[De Witte v. De Witte, 11 Sim. 41, followed.]—Kirby v. West, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 190. (C.)

XV. 3. f. Joint Tenancy.

4. By indenture of settlement of 12th May 1791, made in contemplation of the intended marriage of V., the fee of the lands of G. was conveyed to trustees, in trust, for V. for life; remainder to the children of the marriage in fee, in such shares, &c., as V. should appoint; and in default of appointment, share and share alike. There were five children of the marriage. V., by his will, made in 1827, having recited his power of appointment, and that he had provided otherwise for his eldest son, and obtained a release from him of all claims under V.'s marriage settlement, devised said lands of G. to trustees, upon trust, for his second son for life; remainder to that son's first and other sons in tail male; and in default of such issue, then in trust for testator's third son for life; remainder to that son's first and other sons in tail male; and so on as to his fourth and fifth sons. Testator also devised other real estates, over which he had an absolute power of disposal, amongst his said sons; he also bequeathed a sum of £10,000, among them; and he directed that each of his sons should, within three months after testator's decease, execute to the trustees of testator's marriage settlement, a release of all claims under that settlement: and in case any son refused to do so, he revoked all devises and bequests in favour of such son. All the younger sons elected to take under the will. Held (reversing Judge Hargreave, in L.E.C.), that each younger son took an estate for life only, and not an estate tail in the lands.—In re Dennehy's Estate, 17 I. C. R. 97. (C.A.)

5. In a will, made in 1836, words were cancelled, but not made illegible. Held, that as to the personal estate bequeathed, the cancellation, though unattested, was complete.

V. by will directed that the premiums of a policy of insurance should be paid out of his real estate; and left all his property to his two daughters, A. and B., subject to his lawful debts, and under the control of his executors; and should either daughter die, or act contrary to the will of his executors, directed that she should be limited to one shilling; and should either die [within the term of twenty-one years] or unprovided for according to the will of his executors, the survivor was to inherit the entire; should both die at any period unprovided for, he willed his landed property to revert to his nephews, to inherit the entire, share and share alike; and, finally, should any of his daughters disobey the commands of his executors, that she should be limited to any sum they should appoint for her.

Semble—That A. and B. took as joint tenants; but, if not, B. took under the survivorship clause.

A., having attained age, married, and she and her husband afterwards, in the lifetime of the insured, assigned her moiety of the policy in trust. Held, that the joint tenancy in the policy was not thereby severed.

N.B.—The words in brackets were cancelled in the will.—In re Barrett, 8 I. C. R. 548. (R.)

6. Devise to testator's three illegitimate children of a yearly rentcharge on the lands of X., to be equally divided among the devisees share and share alike, to hold to the devisees and their heirs as joint tenants; and in default of heirs the rentcharge to merge in the testator's estate in X. A., one of the devisees, on her marriage put her share in settlement; the other devisees subsequently died intestate and unmarried. A., claiming the whole rentcharge, instituted a suit against the owners of X. Held, that the three devisees took estates in joint tenancy which was severed by the settlement; and that A. was entitled to only one-third of the rentcharge.

A devise to an illegitimate son and his heirs gives an estate in fee-simple.—Daly v. Aldworth, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 141. (C.)

1. Direction in a will:—that testator's wife and brother should be his residuary legatees, and enjoy all the benefits arising from that appointment—Held, to create a joint tenancy in the residue.—M'Donnell v. Jebb, 16 I. C. R. 359. (R.)

2. A testator bequeathed to his wife £1000 a-year during her life, and to A., his brother, £500 a-year during his life; and expressed a hope that they would "continue to live together in kindness and love as heretofore which cannot, in consequence of my brother's health, be long. . . . After the death of my wife and brother, my executors will dispose of all my property in the most advantageous manner."

By codicil the testator desired that his wife and brother should be his residuary legatees, and enjoy all the benefits arising from this appointment. Held, that the testator's wife and brother took the residue as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common.—M'Donnell v. Jebb, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 121. (C.A.)

XV. 3. g. Tenancy in Common.

8. V. devised all his real estates to D., remainder to his sons, in strict settlement, and, "in default of such issue male in the said D., then to the use of my nieces, J., R., and B., and the survivor of them, for the term of their natural lives, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants; and from and after their decease, to the use of their first and every other son and sons lawfully begotten on their bodies, and the heirs male of their respective bodies successively, in equal proportions; the elder of such sons of each of my said nieces, and the heirs male of their bodies, being always preferred, and to take before the younger, and the heirs male of their bodies: for default of such issue male, then to the daughters of the said J., R., and B.; and for default of such issue, male or female, to the use of my right heirs male forever." Held, that J., R., and B., took as tenants in common for life, with remainder, as to the share of each, to her sons in tail, with immediate remainder to her daughters in tail.—Connec v. Taaffe, 12 I. C. R. 338; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 232. (C.)—[Rev'd: 10 H. L. Cas. 64.]

4. The benefit of survivorship may be given to those who have life interests as tenants in common.

In gifts of personal estate the word "survivor" may be taken as referring to the period of distribution. Regarding real estate it is not equally settled that it applies to the determination of the prior limitation.

When that word is applied to a class of persons of whom individuals are named, its natural meaning is "the longest liver" of those named.

V. devised his estates in trust to the use of his nephew, F., and his issue male in strict settlement; and, for default of such issue male in F., to the use of my nieces, J., R., and B., and the survivor of them, for the term of their natural lives, as tenants in common and not as joint tenants, without impeachment of waste; and, from their decease, to the use of their first and every other son and sons, and the heirs male of their respective bodies, successively, in equal proportions, the elder of such sons of each of my said nieces and the heirs male of their bodies being always preferred, &c.; and for default of such issue male, then to the daughters of J., R., and B.; and for default of such issue male or female, to my own right heirs. He directed that no son of a niece should take any benefit under the will, unless on assuming the testator's name. F. died without issue. J. had a daughter; R. and B. had a son a-piece. J. and R. died. Held, that the nieces took as tenants in common for life, with cross-remainders between them for life; that on the deaths of J. and R. the "survivor," B., took the whole for life; that the sons took a remainder, expectant on her death, as tenants in common in tail male; and that there was not any estate in any daughter of a niece until a total failure of issue male.—Taaffe v. Connec, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 229. (H.L.)—10 H. of Lds. Cases, 64.—[Reversing decision below: 12 I. C. R. 338. (C.)]

XV. 3. h. Estate Beneficial, or clothed with a Trust.

5. Testatrix devised all her fee-simple, freehold, and leasehold estate, to R. for life; remainder to J. for life; remainder, save a rentcharge, to the Commissioners of Ch. Don., in trust, to pay the head-rents, and to apply the annual profits to charities. Held, that R. and J. took beneficial interests for their lives.—Commrs. of Ch. Don. v. Espinasse, Flan. & K. 164; 3 I. E. R. 324. (R.)

6. V., seized of estates, devised them in trust "for the payment and discharge of the debts of his father." Held, a legacy, not a trust for the benefit of the creditors whose debts subsisted at the father's death.

That a creditor's debt, subsisting at the death of V.'s father, was payable, though barred long before V.'s death.—Carr v. O'Connor, 3 I. Jur. 185. (C.)

XV. 3. i. Whether to be enjoyed in specie or not.

XV. 3. j. Estate Vested, subject to be Divested: period of Vesting.

7. V., by will, gave £300 to her executors, with directions to place it out at interest, and pay the interest to her nephew for life, and, at his decease, divide the principal among all his children; if he should leave but one, the whole to such one child. V.'s nephew had two children, who died in his life. Held, that the children took vested interests in the legacy as tenants in common, with a gift over; in case there should be but one child, to that one, and that the representative of the children who died was entitled to the legacy.—Kimberley v. Tew, 5 I. E. R. 389; 2 Con. & L. 366; 4 Dr. & War. 139. (C.)

1. Devise of houses to executors, in trust, to receive the rents for the support, clothing, maintenance, and education of testator's children, until they respectively attained age, or married; thenceforward, to A., B., and C., or such of them as should be then living. Held, that this last devise did not take effect in possession until after all the children attained age or married.

Quere—Was there an intestacy respecting the surplus rents beyond what was necessary for maintaining and educating the children during minority?—Farran v. Smith, 11 I. E. R. 254. (R.)

2. V., in pursuance of a power, appointed by will £5000 amongst his five daughters, in equal shares, and, reciting that he was possessed of specified lands, for a term of 21 years, with a t. q. covenant for renewal, bequeathed them, with £1000, to trustees, to pay the interest, proceeds, rents, and profits, to his wife for life; from her death, or in her life, if she should so direct, to raise by sale, mortgage, or otherwise, such a sum as, together with the provision thereby made for them, should make up to each of his five daughters on marriage, if in the life of his wife, with her consent; and, if unmarried when she died, then on their attaining age, or being married, £2000. Until payment of this additional provision, V. directed the trustees, on his wife's death, to pay each daughter, out of the rents and the interest of the £1000, so much as, together with the interest of the £1000, would produce £120 a-year; and, after his wife's death, and payment of the additional portions, to assign the residue to his son. The wife did not, during her life, direct the additional provision to be raised. Held, that a daughter, who attained age, but predeceased her mother, did not take a vested interest in the additional provision.—In re Brabazon, 18 I. E. R. 156. (C.)

3. V. devised lands to A. for life; remainder to his sons successively in tail; remainder to B. for life; remainder to his sons successively in tail; remainder to V.'s nieces, C. and D., and the survivor, for their respective lives, as tenants in common. He also bequeathed to D. £1000, charged upon his real and personal estate, to be by her distributed among her younger children, in such shares as she should think proper, provided always that if D. should, under the foregoing limitations in the will, get into possession of the lands, then the £1000 should not be paid unto her for the purpose aforesaid. D. survived V., but died; her life estate in remainder in the lands never having taken effect in possession. Held, that she took a vested interest in the £1000 at V.'s death, subject to be divested on the happening of the contingency; and that interest was payable upon the legacy from V.'s decease.—Finucane v. Studdert, 1 I. C. R. 140; 3 I. Jur. 114. (C.)

4. V., having three unmarried daughters, A., L., and C., bequeathed to A. and L. £2000 each, and to C. £2500, to be invested for their benefit, and there to remain until their day of marriage; and, if one or more of them died before marriage, the portion or portions of her so dying should go to and be divided between his surviving daughters, share and share alike; if only one should survive, then to her. If all of them died before marriage, then their portions should be divided between all his sons. Testator had also three married daughters. C. married, and died in the life of A., who died unmarried, leaving L. surviving. Held, that C.'s personal representative was entitled to a moiety of A.'s share.—In re Jackson's Trusts, 14 I. C. R. 473. (C.A.)

XV. 3. k. Annuities.

5. S., to whom, by settlement (executed in 1800), an annuity of £200, by way of jointure, was secured in the event of her surviving her husband, continued, for many years after her husband's death in 1809, to receive payment of the same from the hands of her step-son, H., the inheritor of the estate upon which the annuity was charged. In 1830, the annuity being two years in arrear, S. wrote to her step-son, a letter, wherein, after expressing her wish to do what she could to serve him, she stated that she would feel happy in thenceforth giving up the £200 annuity, which he had paid her since her husband's death, and would also make him a present of the £400, the amount of the arrears then due. In 1834 H. died. By will he charged his real estates with payment of an annuity of £200 to his step-mother. By a codicil, after stating that he had been most reluctantly constrained by circumstances to alter the bequest, he substituted an annuity of £100 for that of £200 granted by his will. The bequest of the smaller sum was accompanied by a declaration, that it was upon condition that S. should not seek to raise the annuity of £200 secured by the settlement of 1800, which, the testator stated, she had, in a letter written long since, expressed her intention to relinquish in his favour. S. died in 1837, having previously, by will, appointed the ptf. her residuary legatee and sole executor. S. had never sought for or demanded the annuity secured by the settlement, or that granted by the will, after the date of her letter. The ptf. having filed a bill to raise the arrears of the annuity secured by the settlement, the Court dismissed it, so far as it claimed relief in respect of the arrears which accrued in the life of H., but directed an account of what was due from his death to the death of S.—Langley v. L., 2 I. E. R. 313. (E.E.)

6. V. by will gave an annuity (which he directed his eldest son W. to pay) to his daughter B., for life, with power to her to dispose of it to all or any of her children, by any writing, witnessed by two or more credible witnesses. B., by will, reciting this annuity as one for ever, devised it to her two sons, share and share alike. W., by will subsequent to B.'s will, ratified the annuity given to B., and as bequeathed by her, and directed his eldest son, his heirs and assigns, to pay it. Held, a perpetual annuity.—Burke v. Lambert, 2 Dr. & Wal. 608. (C.)

1. V., by will, declared "that his property, together with what his wife was entitled to, should produce to her an annuity of £100; to each of his daughters £100 per annum, for themselves and their children;" and gave all the residue of his property to his son. By a subsequent codicil, executed after the death of one of his daughters, he directed that if his son died, without leaving issue male, then, after the decease of his wife and of his surviving daughter, his remaining property should be equally divided between his sister and her daughters by her then husband, and his sister-in-law, and any children of her's by his late brother. Neither of the daughters had children at the date of the will or of the death of V. Held, upon the will and codicil, that the daughter did not take a perpetual interest in the annuity.

Semle—That if it had rested upon the will alone, she would have taken a perpetual interest in it.

Held also—That on the death of the son without issue male, the property was divisible per capita.

A gift of an annuity, not pre-existing, simpliciter, without reference to any property from which it is to spring, gives but a life interest.

The rule in Wild's case (Rep. 16, a.) does not apply to personal chattels.—Heron v. Stokes, 4 I. E. R. 284; 2 Dr. & War. 89; 1 Con. & L. 284. (C.)—[Revg., on re-hearing, 3 I. E. R. 163. (C.)]

2. Testator, seized of an estate for lives renewable for ever, demised it, subject to a rent of £400 per annum, to H., his brother-in-law, for life; and having, in the commencement of his will, recited this demise, and that he was entitled to the profit rent of £400 per annum, devised same amongst his three sisters, A., B., and C., in manner following:—to A. £150 yearly, to her separate use, for ever, without the control of her husband, to be issuing and payable out of the lands and premises; to B., £150, in the same terms; and to C. £100, in the same terms; "said three sums making together the sum of £400 yearly, reserved and payable to him (the testator) by said lease so made to said H.;" and then devised the reversion, share and share alike, amongst his four sisters, A., B., C., and D., wife of H., after payment of the said bequests of £400 yearly. By a second codicil he revoked the gift of £150 per annum to A., and devised £100 yearly, part of the £150, to the husband of A. for life, remainder to M. for life, remainder to M.'s issue male for ever, share and share alike; and devised the remaining £50, to D. for ever. Held, that the annuitants under the will and codicil were entitled to perpetual interests in their several annuities.

When a man has a rent payable out of his own estate, and disposes of that rent only by will, yet in favour of the intention, the whole estate will pass.—Ashton v. Adamson, 1 Dr. & War. 198, 209; 1 Con. & L. 325. (C.)

3. When an annuity is bequeathed without words of limitation, and unaccompanied by a reference to some fund for its payment, the legatee will not take more than a life interest therein.

If there be reference to a particular fund for the purpose; Semle—That this amounts to a dedication of the fund for the purpose of the annuity, and confers a perpetual annuity therein.—Heron v. Stokes, 2 Dr. & War. 89; 1 Con. & L. 270; 4 I. E. R. 284. (C.)

4. Testator devised a freehold estate to his wife, and, in addition thereto, an annuity of £1000 for her life, charged upon all his real estate, except the portion before devised to her; and empowered her to take all remedies for the recovery thereof, as in cases of rent service were usual. He then charged all his debts upon his real estate (except the portion devised to his wife), in aid of his personal estate; and, after giving several legacies charged upon his real estate, except that devised to his wife, devised three other annuities, in the very same terms that he had employed in the gift of the annuity to his wife. Held, upon the true construction of this will, that the annuitants were not entitled to any priority over the legatees.—Creed v. C., 1 Dr. & War. 416; 4 I. E. R. 525. (C.)—[Revd.: 11 Cl. & F. 491.]

5. Testator devised all his estates to his wife for her life, and charged them with an annuity of £50 for his niece, payable from day of his death; and with a further annuity of £50 for the same niece, to commence from the day of the wife's death. Held, that those annuities were successive, and not cumulative.—Baylee v. Quin, 2 Dr. & War. 116. (C.)

6. V. bequeathed to his trustee and executor all the property whereof he should die seized or possessed, upon trust (amongst other purposes) to "receive and retain, for his own proper use and benefit, a sum of £250, and also to retain and keep thereout, for his own use, one annuity of £20 yearly, to commence immediately after V.'s decease, to reimburse him for his trouble and expense in receiving the said rents, and keeping the necessary accounts." Held, that this annuity was to endure only during the continuance of the trusts created by the will.—Henrion v. Bonham, Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 476. (C.)

7. V., possessed of considerable real and personal estate, primarily charged the real estate with the payment of annuities to his wife, his two daughters, and his son, and desired that his trustees should, during the lives of his wife and daughters, accumulate the rents of the real estate for the purposes of his will, and on their deaths devised those estates over. He also bequeathed £3000, £34 per cent. stock, upon trust, out of the interest and dividends, to pay an annuity of £105 to his youngest daughter for life, and upon trust as to the principal, if she married with the consent of the trustees, for her issue; but if she married without such consent, then, as to £1000, upon trust as she should appoint, and as to the remaining £2000, that it should form part of V.'s estate, to be applied as he should direct. V. also directed that if the annuities given to his wife, and daughters, and son, should be unpaid for four months after due, the trustees should, "out of the accumulation of the moneys in their possession, exclusive of the £3000 so left to his youngest daughter, and which he directed should be left untouched for the purposes of his will, pay and assist in discharging the annuities so in arrear; and should, out of the moneys which should next come to their possession, replace the sums" so advanced. He directed that the trustees should, after first paying those annuities and the several legacies charged upon one of his real estates, invest the rents of that estate in government stock, and pay thereout to his grandchildren living at his death, £300 each, and any deficiency in those legacies he desired should be made good out of his other real estates. And all his other property, of what nature soever, including a policy of insurance, he devised and bequeathed to his trustees to invest for the purposes of his will. And as to the proceeds of that policy, and the remainder of his personal property, invested or to be invested, as well as the overplus of his income not thereby disposed of, excepting the £3000 left as above to his youngest daughter, and excepting such parts of his personal property as might be necessary to be applied in payment of the annuities and legacies bequeathed by him, he directed that it should remain invested during the lives of his wife and daughters, and until his grandchildren should attain twenty-one or marry, with interest at £5 per cent., to commence from one year after his death. Then came a clause directing that any surplus which should remain, after satisfying the several purposes of the will, should be applied by the trustees in payment, or assisting in payment of £5000, charged by settlement on one of his real estates for the younger children of his late son, J.; and if such surplus should be more than sufficient to discharge that sum, that surplus to be paid to such younger children in equal shares, on attaining twenty-one or marriage; subject, however, to the payment and discharge of all and every the sums and charges thereinbefore charged and created on said general fund by the will. Held, that the annuity of £105, given to V.'s youngest daughter, was not reduced by the 7 & 8 Vic., c. 5, which lowered the rate of interest upon £3½ per cent. government stock to £3¼ per cent.; and that the trustees should make up any deficiency arising in the dividends of the sum of £3000 out of the accumulated fund.

That the residuary bequest to the grandchildren generally of the testator was inconsistent with the residuary bequest to the younger children of his son, J., and therefore that the latter bequest must prevail.—Fitzpatrick v. Knarborough, 13 I. E. R. 338. (C.)

1. V. bequeathed to A., his executors, &c., an annuity charged on all her property. Under the decree, a specific sum of £3¼ per cent.

stock was transferred to the separate credit thereof to pay the annuity. Afterwards that stock was reduced to £3¼ per cent., while other funds were still in Court, though appropriated to other purposes. Held, that A. was entitled to have a further sum invested in stock to make the dividends suffice to pay the annuity.—Conmrs. of Ch. D. & B. v. St. Lawrence, 9 I. E. R. 560; 3 Jon. & L. 561. (C.)

2. V. by will bequeathed annuities to each of his daughters, severally, with power of appointment to their children, and if any daughter died without leaving issue, her annuity to go to his sons, to be equally divided between them; but if either of his sons died before such event happened, that son's proportion in such annuity to go to such issue as he should leave; and if any son died without issue, to V.'s other sons, except he or they should leave a widow or widows, and if so, to such widow or widows during her or their lives; and after to his sons or the issue of such sons as may have died. V. then devised his freehold and leasehold property to his four sons, A., B., C., and D., in the following proportions:—To A. one-third, to B. one-third; the remaining one-third to be divided between C. and D., after payment of the annuities, providing that in ten years after his death his "income" should be equally divided between his four sons, after payment of the annuities, with the following provision:—"Having left to my eldest son D. one-fourth of my income, to take place in ten years after my death, it is my will that then he shall have his choice either to take the one-fourth of the income as mentioned above, or to take instead of one-fourth of the income the house and demesnes of X. and Y., subject to the marriage settlement of the said D., and subject also to a sum of £500 and interest at six per cent. on said sum of £500;" and after a bequest of his furniture, &c., "I appoint my executors residuary legatees, in trust first with the produce of such property to pay each of my daughters (naming them) £5 each, and such further sum as shall be necessary for their maintenance until the first payment of annuity shall be made to them." He then named D. and C., and his son-in-law, executors. In the following year he added a codicil, naming C. as executor in place of D., with the following clause:—"And with the view of removing any doubts that may exist as to the continuance of annuities to my daughters (naming them), it is my will, and so intended by me, that the same respectively be only payable during their respective lives, and in the event of their dying leaving children, the share of such daughters so dying to survive to their children, and subject to appointment as in my will named." Held, that the several annuities did not become extinct upon the death of each daughter respectively.

That X. and Y. (D. having elected to take them) were exonerated from paying the annuities.

That the residuary legatees did not take a beneficial estate in the residue.—Stevell v. S., 7 I. Jur. 145. (C.)

1. V., tenant for life without a leasing power, had made a lease, in 1882, to F., for three lives or 31 years. G., sister of E., petitioner in the suit, being one of the c. q. vies. F. left the country in 1884, and up to the commencement of this suit had not been heard of. G. entered into possession of the demised premises. The rent having fallen into arrear, an ejectment was brought by V., but subsequently V. and G. arranged that G. should pay the rent in arrear and give up possession; and that she should receive an annuity for life to the amount of the profit rent in the premises. There was no written agreement produced, except letters from V., and B. his son, to G., relative to the payment of the annuity. Upon the death of V., B. took possession as his heir-at-law, being also his personal representative; and having refused to continue paying the annuity, upon the ground that V. had no power to create such a charge beyond his own life, G. filed a petition praying for an order that B. should pay what was due on account of the annuity; for a decree that the annuity was an equitable charge upon the lands demised; for the appointment of a receiver; and that the annuity should be payable out of the assets of V. Held, that G. was entitled to a personal annuity for her life, and that the assets of V. were liable thereto.

That the real estate was not liable to the charge.

That the petition was not bad for multifariousness or misjoinder.—Gibbon v. Cloncurry, 7 I. Jur. 171. (C.)

2. V. devised several annuities, which she directed only to be a lien upon and charged on the yearly income of her lands, real, freehold and chattel real, but not upon any other personal estate; and directed that if that yearly income fell short of paying the annuities, the deficiency should equally and proportionably be upon all such annuities, each to receive according to the magnitude of such annuity, and in proportion thereto; but no such deficiency to be vested upon her personal estate; and devised the residue of her property, real and personal, after satisfying and discharging said annuities, &c. The income of the lands was insufficient to pay the entire of the annuities. Held, that the annuities, being charged on the income of the lands only, were, for each year, satisfied by payment of a proportionable share; and that the arrears were not charged on the future rents.—Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 11 I. C. R. 437. (R.)

By will reciting that the testator was entitled to a remainder in fee expectant on the death of his wife, he devised the same, after the death of his wife, to his son W. for life, and after his decease to the child or children of W.; and for default of such issue to his own right heirs. By codicil he retracted the devise to W., and gave to his wife and grandchildren (issue of his son J.) what he originally allotted to W. Held, that the remainder in fee passed by the codicil to the wife and grandchildren.

Semble—The gift in the will to the children of W. was revoked by the codicil.—Madden v. Kirwan, 7 I. E. R. 570. (C.)

5. A. and B., having a joint power of revocation and new appointment, by deed and fine, reciting an agreement that A. should, in manner therein after mentioned, secure to B. payment within twelve months of £12,000, and the interest on £8000, irrevocably revoked the uses of the former settlement, and appointed the lands to trustees for 550 years, upon trust, so soon as conveniently might be (but with A's written consent, if, during or within twelve months from the date of the deed, and afterwards of their own authority), to raise £20,000, by sale or mortgage; provided that, if that sum should not be raised by the end of the twelve months, the deed, and every clause and thing therein, to be void; and the fine should enure to confirm the several estates and interests in the lands, subsisting immediately before the deed of revocation was executed. Held, that the money was to be raised within twelve months; if not raised within that time, or if A. died before it was raised, and within the twelve months, the deed was to be void. That, the money not having been raised within that time, the old uses, including the power of revocation, revived.

The ultimate limitation of the use, in the former settlement, was to A. in fee. After the expiration of the twelve months, A. made his will, devising all his estates. Afterwards, A. and B., by deed, revoked the uses of the settlement, and limited the use to A. in fee. The deed revoking the uses of the settlement operates as a revocation of the will. The will was made before, the deed of revocation after, the 1 Vic., c. 26. Held, that the reversion in fee, whereof the devisor was seized at the time of his decease, did not pass by his will.—Lord Langford v. Little, 2 Jon. & L. 613. (C.)

1. V. devised all his property, real and personal, to his wife and his unmarried daughters, B. and C., and to the survivor; and if C. should marry, and leave issue her surviving, that her share, and the shares of her mother and of B., if they survived her, should be divided amongst such issue; and if C. should not marry, that upon her death, and that of her mother and B., the entire of V.'s property should go to the issue then living of his married daughter, D.; and if no issue of D., that the entire of his property should vest in the R. C. Bishop of G. V. then devised one-third part of his interest in lands, part of his property, to his nephew, E. Held, that V.'s wife and unmarried daughters took subject to the devise to E., which was to have immediate operation upon V.'s death.—Walsh v. Ryan, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (R.)

2. V., having, by will, in 1837, bequeathed legacies, proceeded thus:—"To my son I give, devise, and bequeath all my lands and tenements, rights, and credits, subject to the legacies aforesaid and my debts, the remainder of my property to be disposed of by him to and amongst his children, in such shares and proportions as he shall think fit." The words in italics were interlined. The last clause in the will declared the interlineations, as well as the original text, to be in V.'s handwriting. In 1839, he added a codicil, whereby he merely made a declaration respecting one of the legacies given by the will. In 1845, the son predeceased V., without having made any appointment amongst his children. Held, that the will gave the son a power, coupled with a trust; and that, accordingly, his children were entitled as well to the real as to the personal estate of V., in equal shares.—Hutchinson v. H., 13 I. E. R. 332. (C.)

XV. 4. a. 2. Respecting particular Descriptive Words.

3. V. being entitled to two distinct interests in land called K., in the county of C., one a freehold interest derived under H., the other a chattel interest derived under B., which was not to commence until the determination of the freehold, made his will, and thereby desired that all his freehold interests in the counties of C. and W. (except his interest in K., which he held under B.) should be sold, and the proceeds of the sale be divided between his children. In a subsequent part of the will he desired his chattel interest in K. to be sold immediately upon the determination of the freehold interest therein, and the proceeds thereof to be divided in a certain manner. Held, that the exception referred to the chattel interest only in K.; and that the freehold interest therein was to be sold immediately, against the claim of the heir-at-law of V.—Gurly v. G., 2 Dr. & Wal. 463. (C.)

—[Affd.: 8 Cl. & F. 743.]

4. Devise of real estate to W. and his heirs, on trust, to receive the rents, and apply them in discharging testator's (V.'s) debts and legacies; then to convey part thereof to V.'s brother, R., for life; the residue, and R.'s share, after his death, to such of W.'s sons as should, at W.'s death, be his second son, for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; remainder to the third, fourth, and every other son of W. successively, in strict settlement. The will concluded thus:—"And as to all my personal estate, &c., subject, however, to my debts and legacies heretofore bequeathed, I give and bequeath same to my relative, W., whom I appoint executor of this my will; and also, in case of any residue, I appoint him my residuary legatee." The debts and legacies having been all paid, and R. having died in the life of W.—Held, that the residuary clause was confined to the personal estate; and that the rents did not pass under it to W. for life.—Wills v. W., 1 Dr. & War. 439. (C.)

5. V., being seized and possessed of freehold and chattel leases, devised as follows:—"I give, devise, and bequeath my farm of B. to my grandson M., and every kind of stock thereon, together with one-third of every other property that I now possess, and am entitled to." He then made similar devises of others of the farms, and the remaining two-thirds of the residue to two other grandsons respectively. He then left £18 a-year to his wife, "to be paid to her during her life by my said three grandsons, share and share alike, or by their heirs or executors." He then directed £300 to be invested on a certain event, "the said sum to be deducted equally from and out of the property herein first bequeathed to my said three grandsons, who, or their heirs, on the fall of any lease, are to be equal sufferers, pursuant to their respective proportions." A., at the date of his will, was seized of the farm of G., but did not devise it by name. Held, that either there was to be no contribution, but that each was to bear his own loss, or that the lands devised nominatim were those only which were to be contributory; and that consequently the farm of G. was not liable.

Semble—That, the claim was bad for uncertainty.—Spinner v. Dwyer, 2 Con. & L. 432, 440. (C.)

6. Testator was seized of one estate in fee-simple, and of another settled by marriage articles upon himself for life; remainder in tail to his first and other sons, &c.; in default of such issue, to his own right heirs, provided that, "in case he should die without issue, or intestate, the said lands" were to go to L., her heirs and assigns. By will he devised all his "unsettled estate." Held, that the reversion in fee in the settled estates passed.—The Incorporated Society v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58; 4 I. E. R. 177. (C.)

1. An absolute interest in leaseholds bequeathed to trustees, in trust for two c.g. trusts. Held, to pass.—Bradshaw v. B., 5 I. E. R. 810. (E.E.)

2. V. devised part of his real estates to his son W. in settlement, and other parts in fee, and the residue, not specifically devised, to W., whom, with E., he appointed executor and executrix. V., by codicil, reciting the death of W., and the devises of the particular estates to him, devised them, if E. died without issue in his wife's life, to his wife for life; with remainder to R., and appointed E. his "sole executrix and residuary legatee." V. died seized of estates other than those specifically devised. Held, that E. did not take the residuary realty.—Hillas v. H., 10 I. E. R. 184. (C.)

3. V. being entitled to one-sixth of leasehold lands under the will of J., and having a power of appointment over another sixth under the will of C., both wills being nearly of equal date, devised all "his property" in the lands bequeathed "by the will of C.," speaking of it as property of which he was possessed, and giving it for purposes in common with other property which he owned absolutely. Held, merely a fauxa demonstratio, and to apply only to the property he was entitled to under J.'s will.—Lendrick v. Russell, 10 I. E. R. 269. (C.)

4. V. devised to his wife his lands. By a separate clause he gave her chattels, and then added: "fourthly, I order my wife to pay the following legacies," which he enumerated. He made her and another executors. Held, that the legacies were charged on the lands; and that the wife took the fee.

Neither the word "thereout" nor "paying" is required to make the payment of a legacy a condition so as to give the devisee the fee in lands charged with it.

The costs of a suit in the nature of an ejectment bill to recover devised property on a construction of a will, though doubtful, are not within the rule in administration suits, that they come out of the estate.—Johnson v. Brady, 11 I. E. R. 386. (C.)

5. A testator in his will described himself as "of Fleenstown;" devised "this townland and sixty-eight acres of M." to his son W.; and concluded thus:—"My will is, that any deficiency there may be of chattel property for payment of the pecuniary legacies, the same will be made up by my son W. out of this farm, it being the principal part of my property." Held, that the words "this farm" applied to Fleenstown alone.—Kennedy v. K., 8 I. Jur. 141. (C.)

6. V., by will, gave to his daughters M. and E. legacies of £6500 each, charged upon his estate of C., and gave to his sons all the residue of his property. By deed the sons arranged that C. should be conveyed to W. the eldest son, charged with sums of £4000 each for the younger sons. E., who had no assets save the legacy of £6500, by will gave T., one of the sons of V., a legacy of £446. M. also had no assets save the legacy of £6500, and by will gave T. a legacy of £400. F., another of the sons of V., died intestate, and T., as one of his next-of-kin, became entitled to a distributive share of his assets, including the £4000 charged on C. T. by his will bequeathed his patrimony bonds and judgment debts charged on the estate of Clonea. Held, that the word "patrimony" included T.'s distributive share of F.'s charge of £4000, but did not include the legacies under M.'s and E.'s wills.

The word "patrimony" is not necessarily restricted to property derived directly from a father.

T., by will in 1845, bequeathed personal estates, in the following terms:—"The interest of which I leave to X., and he is never to demand the principal so long as the interest is satisfactorily settled; and in case he shall die without male issue lawfully begotten, and arriving at the age of twenty-one years, it shall then descend to his brother Y., and his male issue lawfully begotten, and arriving at the age of twenty-one years; and in case he should die without such issue lawfully begotten, then I bequeath the same to W. and his family, on his taking the name of M., so that the estate may remain in the family; the interest of all bonds which remain on the estate to continue to remain on the estate, and to descend from heirs to heirs, as above stated." Held, that notwithstanding the 29th sec. of the Wills Act (7 W. 4 & 1 Vic., c. 26), the failure of issue intended could not be construed to be a failure of issue at the death of the first taker, a "contrary intention" appearing by the will; and that consequently the gift over was void for remoteness.—Green v. Giles, 5 I. C. R. 25; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 90. (C.)

7. V., by will, being seized of freehold estates, and possessed of chattels real, directed his executors to make out an inventory of his effects, which were to be sold by auction; and if he died "possessed of any funded or other property," to sell all for the benefit of his children. He also appointed his brothers trustees to his "children and property," and in the event of their declining to act, desired that his "property and children" should be placed under the Court of Chancery. Held, that the word "property" in the above general clause passed the real estates.

V., at the time of making his will, was seized in quasi fee of the lands of A., but the will contained an erroneous recital, that A. was settled on his eldest son. Held, that from the operation of the above general clause, A. must be taken to be excluded.—Chibborn v. C., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 381. (C.)

8. Direction in a will to pay a debt by "annual instalments," out of rents and profits of real estate. Held, to mean payments out of rents and profits de anno in annum; not out of the corpus of the estate.—Ker v. Hardman, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 45. (C.)

1. V., seized of freeholds, and possessed of chattels real, by marriage settlement limited them, subject to his own life estate, to the issue of the marriage, to be distributed as he should appoint.

V., by will, reciting his settlement, directed his chattels to be sold, and the produce applied in payment of funeral and testamentary expenses, and debts, and of the charges on his real estate; and devised the residue to his then unmarried daughters, as tenants in common. He gave provisions, in satisfaction of their claims under the settlement, to two of his sons, and devised portion of the settled lands, and all others of which he should die seized, or have a power over, to his unmarried daughters, in equal shares.

By deed of 1st Aug. 1860, made on the marriage of S., one of V.'s daughters unmarried at the date of the will, he charged the lands of D., part of the settled estate, with £600 for S.; and by codicil of the same date, revoked the gifts to her in his will. Held, that V. by the words in his will, "his real estate," did not mean to include the lands comprised in the settlement; and that the £600 were not charged upon his personal estate.—Ellis v. E., 13 I. C. R. 484. (C.)

2. In 1830, V. made his will, the draft of which purported to devise all his lands, situate in several counties, among others in the county of Sligo, where the lands in the lease were situate, and "elsewhere in Ireland," to trustees, upon trust for his second son. Before the execution of the will, V. drew a pen through the word "Sligo," without making it illegible. Held, that evidence was not admissible to show that he intended that the lands in Sligo should not pass by the will.—Phibbs v. Cooper, 7 I. C. R. 422. (R.)

3. V., being seized of the lands of A., B., C., and D., under a lease, by will, reciting that he was possessed of a lease for lives renewable for ever, of lands, which were denominated A., B., and C., directed that they should, as soon after his decease as possible, be sold, and after payment of his just debts, be equally divided between W. and L., as tenants in common and not as joint tenants. He then specified the debts "affecting those lands," and, after legacies, appointed W. residuary legatee of all his real and personal estate and effects. The specified debts were judgment debts which had been registered as mortgages against all the lands comprised in the lease. Held, that D. was included in the specific devise.—West v. Lawday, 14 I. C. R. 209. (R.) —[Affirmed: ibid, 340; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 23. (C. A.)]

4. V., being seized of real estate, made her will, dated the 10th May 1849, and thereby did "give and bequeath to her brother-in-law A., everything she might die possessed of, with the exception of her furniture; and appointed him her sole executor and residuary legatee." Held, that the real estate passed to A. under the will.—In re Gyles's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 311; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 315. (L.E.C.)

5. V. made his will, reciting that under the will of J., he was seized in fee of the lands of N. and W., and possessed of leasehold interests in the lands of N., and the lands of B. The will then recited that V. believed that he would have personal property, exclusive of his chattel interests in land, sufficient to pay off his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses. It then recited his desire to give E. all his said fee-simple and leasehold estates, he (E.) paying £10,042. V. then devised to E. all his "estate and interest in the aforesaid lands and houses, upon the terms of his paying to me or my executor the said sum of £10,042."

V., at his decease, was entitled, under the will of J., to the lands of C. B., which had been held for a term which had expired before the date of V.'s will. Held, that the lands of C. B. did not pass to E. under V.'s will.—Mooney v. M'Donnell, 15 I. C. R. 84. (C.A.)

6. V., having previously disposed of all his property, real and personal, bequeathed all the rest, residue, and remainder of his properties, debentures, funded, and securities, &c., to be equally divided, share and share alike, amongst his then surviving children as residuary legatees. Held, that real estate, the devise of which had failed, passed by that clause.—Loftus v. Stoney, 17 I. C. R. 178. (R.)

XV. 4. b. Personal Estate.

1. Generally: whether general Personal Estate, or Residue passes.
2. When Chattels, Stock, &c., pass, by what Words.

XV. 4. b. 1. Personal Estate generally: whether general Personal Estate, or Residue passes.

7. V., after bequeathing several legacies to his relations, and for charitable purposes, said, in his will:—"To meet these I have £200 in the Bank of Ireland. The little matters of furniture will be sold. If anything shall remain, after all being paid, the Rev. Mr. G. will divide it amongst the poor." At his death, V. had not any such sum as £200 in the Bank of Ireland; but his property consisted of £1462. 2s. 8d., of £3½ per cent. stock, and £52 in cash. Held, that the general residue of his estate passed under the residuary clause.—Gaffney v. Hevey, 1 Dr. & Wal. 12. (C.)

8. The right to set aside a conveyance improperly obtained by a solicitor from his client, is devisable.—Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dr. & War. 184; 1 Con. & L. 291. (C.)

9. V. by will, after bequeathing legacies, and directing his debts to be paid, ordered all his effects to be sold by auction; such money or valuables as he died possessed of to be handed over to D., to be applied to the use of M., to a certain amount during her life; if after her demise any residue remained, such residue to be expended in masses for his soul's sake; and directed a security in the hands of J. to be applied as above directed. "My Royal Canal stock is to be sold; also, my Grand Canal debentures, as necessity may require, at the discretion of my executors." Held, that the whole of the residue, including the stock and debentures, was disposed of under the residuary clause, and passed to the executors on the death of M.

That the bequest for masses for the testator's soul was valid, and not void as a superstitious use.—Read v. Hodgins, 7 I. E. R. 17. (R.)

1. A testator, having specifically bequeathed to several persons, including A., moneys which he possessed in government and other securities, directed that five persons named, should each receive £100; and added:—"to pay this £500, my just debts, and funeral expenses, a sufficiency will be found in my bankers' and agent's hands, with the interest due on my funded property; and whatever sum or sums should be over, it is my will should be the property of A." Held, that the bequest to A. was a general residuary bequest of the entire estate.—Vincent v. Fitzgerald, 2 I. Jur. 177. (C.)

2. V., by will dated in 1837, bequeathed legacies, and proceeded as follows:—"To my son, I give, devise, and bequeath all my lands and tenements, rights and credits, subject to the legacies aforesaid, and my debts; the remainder of my property to be disposed of by him to and amongst his children in such shares and proportions as he shall think proper." In 1839 he added a codicil, by which he merely made a declaration with reference to one of the legacies. In 1845 the son died, in V.'s life, and without having made any appointment amongst his children. V. having died—Held, that the will gave the son a power coupled with a trust, and that accordingly his children were entitled as well to the real as to the personal estate of V. in equal shares.

Semble—The general personal estate of V. would have passed under the words "rights and credits" alone, even if the interlineations had not been made.

The effect of interlineations considered.—Hutchinson v. H., 13 I. E. R. 332. (C.)

3. V. having devised all his real estate to certain persons, and bequeathed "the sum of £11,086" in British stock to his nephews, bequeathed to his niece, F., "whatsoever sum or sums he had in Irish £3½ per cent. consols." After some other specific legacies, he stated it to be his will that five of his female relatives, whom he named, should receive each £100 to purchase rings. The will then proceeded thus:—"To pay this £500, my just debts, and funeral expenses, a sufficiency will be found in the hands of Messrs. Coutts and Company, my bankers, and Messrs. Cox and Company, my agents, with the interest due on my funded property, with any balance that might be in my private agent, G.V.'s hands; and whatever sum or sums should be over, it is my will should be the property of my dear niece, F." Held, that the last mentioned bequest to F. comprised the general residue of the testator's personal estate, and was not limited to the residue of the funds indicated by him as sufficient to meet the legacy of £500, and his debts and funeral expenses.—Vincent v. Fitzgerald, 2 I. C. R. 256; 2 I. Jur. 177. (C.)

4. V., living in India, and possessed of a share of a sum charged on lands in Ireland, made his will in India; and thereby, after making several bequests in Company's rupees, proceeded as follows:—"I desire that my plate, clothes, horses, and books, with the exception of those my wife shall select, together with all my other personal property, with the following exceptions, be sold to the best advantage, and the proceeds appropriated to the liquidation of my just debts; the balance, if any, to be handed over to my wife to assist in defraying her expenses to England." He then bequeathed his watch and chain, and mathematical instruments of every description, and his professional books, to his brother-in-law, and appointed executors for India, and executors "at home." Held, that the share in the Irish charge passed as part of V.'s "other personal property."—Armstrong v. A., 9 I. C. R. 487; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 280. (C.)

5. By will of 1821, a testator devised the lands of C., which he held for three lives and thirty-one years, to trustees and their heirs, in trust to permit his wife to receive an annuity; and on further trust, to apply a yearly sum to raise £500 for his daughter; and, subject to the annuity and charge, devised the interest in the lands to his son R., and his heirs; and as to all the rest, residue and remainder of his property, consisting of stock, &c., and other property not thereby disposed of, gave, devised, and bequeathed it to his wife, subject to the discharge of his just debts, and directed her to apply it, in the first instance, in discharge of them; and in case of his said residuary property being insufficient to pay his just debts, he charged other lands therein before devised to his son J. with a portion of the deficiency, and the lands therein before devised to his son R. with another portion of the deficiency. R. died in his father's lifetime. Held, that the reversionary term of thirty-one years in the lands of C. passed by the residuary clause.

Lapsed bequests of personal estate will pass by a residuary clause, unless an intention be apparent to exclude them.—Blachford v. Long, 7 I. C. R. 87. (R.)

6. V., by will, after directing his debts to be paid, and bequeathing legacies, left all the residue of his personal estate to his executors, in trust, to pay the interest to his wife, A., for life. Held, that the reversionary interest in the stock transferred to the trustees to answer the jointure passed by the residuary bequest, no intention to exclude it appearing by the will.—Napier v. Staples, 10 I. C. R. 344. (R.)

1. V., after reciting that £50,000 were charged on estates, and bore interest at £4 per cent., and were payable, subject to a power of appointment, to the male issue of his marriage, and in certain events, reverted to him, bequeathed that sum, upon trust, to pay out of the interest an annuity to his wife, and the residue of the interest to his granddaughter for life; and directed that, with the exception of that sum so charged, all his debts, legacies, and legacy duties, &c., should be paid and payable out of such portions of his estate as were not specifically bequeathed; and directed that all his legacies should be paid within twelve months after his decease, without any deduction for legacy or stamp duty, and that all his legacies should bear interest at the rate of £5 per cent. from the time of his death; and further directed that his executors should pay the legacy duties payable on the legacies, and that all legacies thereby bequeathed should be payable without any deduction whatever. Held, that the £5000 were payable free from legacy duty.—Ferguson v. O'Gilby, 12 I. C. R. 411. (R.)

XV. 4. b. 2. When Chattels, Stock, &c., pass; by what Words.

2. V. bequeathed to her "uncle, P., the interest on £200, being part of a greater sum, in government stock, now remaining in" her name in the Bank of Ireland; after his death, "this principal sum of £200 to be divided equally between the children of P." Neither at the date of her will, nor at her death, had V. any stock in her name; but she was entitled to £1000 stock standing in her mother's name, whose executrix and sole residuary legatee V. was. Held, that the legacy was specific, and that £200 of the stock, standing in the name of her mother, passed to the legatee.—Power v. Leneham, 2 Jon. 728. (E.E.)

3. Under a bequest of "all my Irish funded property, standing in my name in the Bank of Ireland," government debentures, which were in the hands of the testator's bankers at the date of his will, do not pass.

Semble—They would not pass under the description of "Irish funded property" generally.—Ridge v. Newton, 4 I. E. R. 389; 2 Dr. & War. 89; 1 Con. & L. 381. (C.)

4. Semble—Stronger words are required to exonerate personal estate from payment of debts than of legacies. A gift of household furniture, plate, house linen, and all other chattel property, is not a general bequest of the entire personal estate, but merely of personal estate, ejusdem generis.—Lamphier v. Despard, 1 Con. & L. 200; 2 Dr. & War. 59; 4 I. E. R. 335. (C.)

5. A bequest of "foreign bonds and other securities"—Held, to pass foreign securities only, notwithstanding that testator had a very large personal estate vested in the British funds.—Ferguson v. Ogilby, 2 Dr. & War. 548; 1 Con. & L. 554. (C.)

6. Leaseholds for lives—Held, not to pass under a bequest of £1500, "together with any further property," but to pass under a residuary devise of the testator's "worldly estate and fortune not heretofore or hereby disposed of." The word "property" is quite sufficient, if not restrained by the context, to pass real estate.—Acheson v. Fair, 2 Con. & L. 208; 3 Dr. & War. 512. (C.)

7. A mere gift of money may pass whatever is the representative of money. The expression "money" may represent the entire personal estate.—Stratton v. Hilles, 2 Dr. & War. 51. (C.)

8. I. O. U.'s do not pass under a specific legacy of money and securities for money.—Barry v. Harding, 7 I. E. R. 317; 1 Jon. & L. 475. (C.)

9. Money in the hands of the salesmaster whom a testator was in the habit of employing, is not "ready money," within the meaning of these words in a will.—Smith v. Butler, 9 I. E. R. 398; 3 Jon. & L. 565. (C.)

10. V., after devising fee-simple estates to A. for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail, and like remainders to B. for life, and to his sons in tail and to several others, bequeathed real and personal chattels, in trust, to permit A. to receive the issues and profits for life, and after his decease, to permit "each and every of the several other persons aforesaid, to whom an estate for life in the real estates was herein before limited, successively and as each of them shall become seized of said real and freehold estates under the aforesaid limitations thereof, to take and receive the rents, issues, and profits thereof, for and during the term of his and their natural life and lives respectively; and from and after the decease of the last of the said last-mentioned tenants for life as shall become seized in manner aforesaid, or if none of them shall so become seized, then, from and after the decease of the said A., upon trust to grant, assign, and convey" the chattels "to such person or persons as shall then become seized of the said real and freehold estates under any of the limitations aforesaid." Held, that the chattels vested in a son of A., who was tenant in tail of the real estates at the death of A.; and did not vest in an elder son of A., a prior tenant in tail who died in the lifetime of A., or remain in contingency until the death of the last of the successive tenants for life.—Potts v. P., 9 I. E. R. 577; 3 Jon. & L. 353. (C.)—[Affid.: 1 H. L. Cas. 671.]

11. Under a devise to A., of testator's house, with the lands adjoining thereunto, as then used and occupied by himself, and also all the household and other furniture, pictures, plate, books, and all other things whatsoever usually therein, or considered as belonging thereto, except only cash, bank notes, and securities for money; neither carriages, carriage and riding-horses used by testator to accommodate himself and his family, nor farming stock and utensils used by him in cultivating said lands, pass, although some were usually in the stables and on the lands, and were there at the testator's death.—Pennefather v. Bury, 9 I. E. R. 586; 3 Jon. & L. 727. (C.)

1. By an ante-nuptial settlement, £7356, the property of the wife, were vested upon trust that, in case the husband, V., should within six months, by covenant and by a mortgage of hereditaments belonging to him, secure payment to them of £4000, they should pay £4356 to him out of the trust money (£4356 out of the sum so paid to be for his own use); and upon trust, as to the residue of the trust-money left after payment of the £4356, for the wife for her separate use during the joint lives of husband and wife, and to the survivor of them for life; and after the decease of the survivor, upon trusts for the children of the marriage; if no children, upon trust for the wife absolutely if she survived V., but if she died in his life, upon trust as she should appoint; in default of appointment, upon trust for V. absolutely. As to the mortgage debt of £4000, it was declared that the trustees should stand possessed thereof, and of the securities for it, upon trust to pay the interest to V. for life; after his decease, to the wife for life; after the decease of the survivor, upon the same trusts as to the principal of the mortgage debt as were declared of the residue of the trust-money, for the benefit of the children of the marriage; if no children, upon trust for V., his executors, &c., absolutely. Shortly after the marriage, V. mortgaged W. for £4000, to the trustees, who thereupon paid him £4356. By will, V. gave other trustees all his property, real and personal, upon trust to hold the lands of W. and B., first to fulfil the trusts of his settlement; then for his nephew S. for life; and after his death to his children as he should appoint; remainder over. Several of these remainders over were to females "as femmes soles." V., after bequeathing stock to his sister M. and her children, proceeded thus:—"I wish to alter a portion of that part of my will above relating to the funded property bequeathed for M. or her family: should my wife have a child by me, they are to pay S. £500 out of it; should such child or children survive me, my heirs, though life-tenants, may cut, sell, and carry away turf off said lands, and cut timber as well off the demesne of W. as in the churchyard therein." There was also the following clause:—"I give to my beloved wife all our furniture, horses, and moveables at Chester, as well as all her own fortune not included in our marriage settlement, for her sole use as a femme sole should she marry again." V. died without issue. Held, that by the devise of W. and B. upon trust to fulfil the trusts of the settlement, V. operated both those estates with the mortgage debt; but that he did not devise them upon the same limitations as were contained, in regard to the mortgage debt, in the settlement; and accordingly that neither V.'s wife took, nor would the children, if there had been any of the marriage, have taken any estate or interest in those lands under that devise, save as securities for the mortgage debt, but were excluded in favour of S. and the other devisees over.

That V.'s ultimate absolute interest in the £4000 mortgage debt passed to the wife under the bequest to her of all her own fortune not included in the marriage settlement.—O'Reilly v. Smyth, 1 I. C. R. 349; 3 I. Jur. 229. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed to his wife F. all his household furniture and plate, and subject thereto left all his property to his executors, in trust, immediately after his decease, or so soon as they conveniently could, to sell all his chattels (except his household furniture and plate, and his horse "Harkaway"), and to invest the produce thereof; and as to his horse, desired that, should £1000 or upwards be offered for him, his executors should sell him; but if that sum could not be realised for him, that he should be kept so long as he should live, and let each season; and that, if sold, the price should likewise be invested. He then devised an annuity, and subject thereto left all the rest of his property in trust to pay the rents, issues, and the whole and entire produce thereof, to his wife, for life, and after his decease to convey it over. The horse was not sold, but was let out as a sire. Held, that F. was not entitled during her life to the clear earnings of the horse.

Semble—That a value should have been placed on the earnings of the horse, and F. was entitled to the Court rate of interest on such value.—Arnold v. Ennis, 2 I. C. R. 601. (R.)

3. V., by will, after devises and bequests, left the residue of his property to his brother, whom he appointed his executor. By codicil, he left to his wife one-fourth part of all moneys which he might be possessed of at his decease, for her own absolute use and property; and left her the life interest, during her life, of the other three-fourths of the moneys. He also left her a house, together with all furniture, wines, carriages, horses, linen, china, and other effects there and elsewhere in England; and by another codicil bequeathed to his wife other property in England, which he particularly described.—Held, that £3 per cent. stock, consols, and bank stock, did not pass under the bequest to the wife.

A bequest of "moneys," unless aided by the context, will not pass stock in the funds.

The word "effects" will comprise the entire personal estate of the testator, unless restrained within narrower limits by the context.—Dunally v. D., 6 I. C. R. 540. (R.)

4. V., living in India, and possessed of a share of £10,000, charged on lands in Ireland, made his will in India, and thereby, after making several bequests in Company's rupees, proceeded as follows:—"I desire that my plate, clothes, horses, and books, with the exception of those my wife shall select, together with all my other personal property, with the following exceptions, be sold to the best advantage, and the proceeds be appropriated to the liquidation of my just debts; the balance, if any, to be handed over to my wife, to assist in defraying her expenses to England." He then bequeathed his watch and chain, and mathematical instruments of every description, and his professional books, to his brother-in-law; and appointed executors for India, and executors "at home." Held, that the share in the Irish charge passed as part of A.'s "other personal property."—Armstrong v. A., 9 I. C. R. 487; Dr. Rep., temp. Napier, 280. (C.)

1. Bequest, after several pecuniary legacies, "of all my bonds, shares in the bank, to A., by paying the above-mentioned sums." The testator was possessed of several bonds, upon which judgment had been entered, and of some which were barred by the Statute of Limitations. Held, that the moneys due on the judgments entered on the bonds passed by this bequest.—Mercer v. M., 10 I. C. R. 505; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 296. (C.)

2. V., having no government or railway stock, but having stock-in-trade, which he specifically bequeathed, farming stock, furniture, plate, and a small quantity of wine, &c., directed by will that his wife should have the use of all his furniture, stock, and house linen, and all his plate, until his son B. should have arrived at the age of twenty-one years. Held, that the farming stock passed by the bequest.

Two persons carried on business in partnership: one died, having bequeathed his stock-in-trade.

Semble—That his executor was chargeable with a moiety of the value of the stock-in-trade at the time of his death.

V. held lands from B., under an agreement for a lease, at a rent of £54. A receiver was appointed over B.'s interest; and the rent was abated by the Court to £33. V. died, having appointed C. executor and guardian of his children. B.'s interest was sold in the I. E. Court, and purchased by C. The rental and conveyance referred to the agreement, but stated that the lands were held at the abated rent (£33). Held, in a suit to administer V.'s estate, that C.'s executrix was entitled to credit for the abated rent only.—Creagh v. C., 13 I. C. R. 28. (R.)—[Affid. ibid, 504; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 406. (C.A.)]

3. Bequest of "all my right and title to my property in the town of R., namely, my dwelling-house and household furniture, and all things now therein, in my possession, especially my car-horse, and covered and side-cars." Held, that bank notes, known by the testator to be in the house at the time when the will was made, passed to the legatee.—Mahony v. Donovan, 14 I. C. R. 388. (C.A.)—[Affg. 14 I. C. R. 462. (R.)]

4. V. devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate to his daughter, subject to the following conditions, and to the further disposition of his property in the event of the non-observance thereof:—First, that his daughter should not marry a cousin-german. If she made such a marriage, he gave her £1000, subject to the next condition; and left all his property, that should remain after payment of the £1000, to his brother and his brother's wife, and the survivor of them; and, after such survivor's death, left his farms of C. and O. to their sons and their issue as tenants in common; with like remainder to his brother's unmarried daughters; and all the residue of his property, save his said farms, he left to his nieces, after payment of the £1000. Second condition:—That, if his daughter should marry, a jointure of £200 a-year should be settled on her, and £4000 at least should be secured to the issue of such marriage. In the event of such a jointure, and the £4000 not being so secured, he left all his property, if his daughter did not marry a cousin-german (or, if she did, then in lieu thereof, said sum of £1000), after such marriage, upon trust, to pay its annual income to her, for her separate use; and after her death to dispose of all his property, or of the sum of £1000 among her issue, as she should appoint; if there should be no issue, as she should direct; but, having regard to the condition that, if she married, and died without lawful issue, the lands of C. and G. should go in the manner therein mentioned. He left all the residue of his property, save those farms, to his nieces, subject to a sum which he empowered his daughter to dispose of in a certain event, which did not occur. She married her cousin-german, who made no settlement, and died without issue, and without having made any appointment of the £1000. Held, that her administrator was entitled to it.—Welby v. Cormick, 16 I. C. R. 74. (R.)

5. A testator, V., directed his household furniture, &c., to be sold, and the produce thereof, with other moneys, to be laid out in stock; the interest to be paid to his wife for life; after her death, the stock to be sold, and one-half of the produce paid to H., eldest son of his niece, E.; the other moiety to be divided equally among E.'s children. Secondly; V. left all stock, &c., of which he should die possessed to his wife for life; and directed that, after her death, it should be sold, and £3000 of the produce paid to H.; the remainder to be divided equally among all E.'s other children. He appointed executors. Thirdly; V. devised his lands in France to his wife for life; after her death, one-half to go to H.; the other moiety to be divided equally among all E.'s other children. He appointed an executor of his property in France, and directed that his executors should not be liable for any loss which might happen in placing out his property according as his will directed, except for wilful neglect, &c.; and that, if H. died before he attained age, the "said property and effects" should go to V.'s nearest heirs on his mother's side, equally. E. was his next-of-kin, and his nearest heir on the side of his father and of his mother. H. died under age. Held, that the words "my said property and effects" did not mean all V.'s property, but was confined to that portion thereof which had been devised and bequeathed to H.

That those words were not confined to the clause in which they occurred, but applied to all the property which H. would have taken.

That E., though next-of-kin, and heir on the father's as well as on the mother's side, took H.'s share under that third clause.

The word "said" applies to the immediate antecedent.—In re Willomier's Trusts, 16 I. C. R. 389. (R.)

2. V., possessed of £4000 stock, bequeathed £2000 of it to X.; £1000 of the remainder he bequeathed for the use of the Protestant school of St. Peter's parish, and another £1000 for the use of the school attached to the Episcopal Chapel in B.-street. The chapel in B.-street had no school attached to it; B.-street was in St. Peter's parish. Held, that with regard to the second £1000, the will showed a general charitable intention, which might be executed cy-pres in favour of Protestant schools in St. Peter's parish. It was referred to the Master to settle a scheme.

The costs, down to, and including the hearing, were ordered to be paid out of the residue; the costs of the reference to be borne by the fund.—Daly v. Att.-Gen., 11 I. C. R. 41; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (C.)

XV. 5. b. Remoteness and Perpetuity. See PERPETUITY.

8. V., by a codicil, reciting that specified lands produced a clear yearly rental of £237, devised them in trust for charitable purposes. V. then directed that, if the rents were increased by any new letting, the surplus so to arise should go to the sole use of the person or persons of the S. & C. families who, for the time being, should be lords or ladies of the manor of D.; and, if those families did not protect those charities, or if the families became extinct, in either case, the trustees were directed to apply the surplus rents as an addition to the provision already made for the charity. Held, that the gift of the surplus rents to the members of the S. & C. families was a good equitable devise in fee; and that the gift over to the trustees of the charity was void for remoteness.—Comwrs. of Ch. D. & B. v. Clifford, 1 Dr. & War. 245. (C.)

4. V., entitled to leaseholds for years, bequeathed them to trustees on trust to permit his grandson, B., to take the profits during life; after his decease to permit such person who, for the time being, would take by descent as heir male of the body of B., to take the profits until some such person should attain age; then to convey same to that person, his executors, &c.; but, if no such person should live to attain age, then in trust to permit such person and persons successively, who for the time being would take by descent as heirs male of the body of V.'s son, the father of B., to take the profits until one of them should attain age; then to convey same to such heir male first attaining age, his executors, &c. At the death of B., his son and heir, A., having attained age, entered into possession of the leaseholds. V.'s next-of-kin filed a bill against A. Held, that he had not a good title to the leaseholds;—that the bequest to the heir male of the grandson attaining age was void for remoteness, and therefore that the next-of-kin of V., at his death, became entitled to their distributive shares of the property on B.'s death.—Lord Dungannon v. Smith, 12 Cl. & F. 546; 10 Jur. 721.—[Affg. Fl. & K. 638. (R.); 1 Dr. & War. 543, n.; 5 I. E. R. 84.]

5. A testator bequeathed leaseholds in trust to apply the rents for the maintenance of his grandson, A., until he should attain 21 years; and then to permit A. to take the rents and profits for his life; and from and after his decease to permit the person who for the time being would take by descent, as heir male of the body of A., to take the rents and profits thereof until some such person should attain the age of 21 years, and then to convey the same to such person on attaining the age of 21 years.

Semble—That all the limitations after that to A. for his life, were void for remoteness.

When the first limitation is void, all those following it are void also.—Ker v. Lord Dungannon, 1 Dr. & War. 509, 539, 540; 1 Com. & L. 385; 4 I. E. R. 943. (C.)

6. V. bequeathed chattels real upon trust to permit his grandson to receive the rents for life, and after his death to permit the person who, for the time being, would take by descent as heir male of his grandson, to receive the rents until some such person should attain age, and then to convey to such person so attaining twenty-one. But if there should be no such person who attained twenty-one, then to permit the persons successively who would take as heirs male of V.'s son, to receive the rents until some such person attained twenty-one, and then to convey to the first such person so attaining age. The eldest son of V.'s grandson attained twenty-one, and survived his father. Held, upon demurrer, that the limitations after the life interest given to V.'s grandson were void for remoteness.—Smith v. Lord Dungannon, 5 I. E. R. 84. (R.)

1. A money fund was settled in trust for the issue of the marriage of V. and his wife; after their deaths, in such shares, &c., and at such times as V. should appoint. V., by his will, appointed the fund to his three sons in equal shares; "their respective portions to be paid to them as and when they should attain their respective ages of twenty-five years, and not before." Held, that the appointment was void for remoteness.—Massey v. Barton, 7 I. E. R. 95. (R.)

2. V., by will, in 1806, bequeathed a chattel lease to R. and the heirs of his body; and if R. should happen to die without issue, then to C. and the heirs of his body; and if both R. and C. should happen to die without issue, then to J. and the heirs of his body. V. then directed that if R. and C. died without issue in the life of J., "whereby J. would become entitled to the said premises," £2000, bequeathed to J., should be paid to other persons; and further, that if R., C., and J. should all happen to die without issue, or if R. and C. should die without issue in the life of J., and he should refuse to pay the £2000, if he had received it under the will, then, and in either of such cases, V. gave the lease to G. and the heirs of his body. He then directed that, if "by either of the events aforesaid happening in the lifetime of G., he should become entitled to the lease," then he should pay the £2000 bequeathed to him to other persons; and if R., C., J., and G. should all happen to die without issue, or if R., C., and J. should die without issue in the lifetime of G., and he should refuse or neglect to pay over the £2000, then, and in either of such cases, he gave the lease to T. and the heirs of his body; and if by "either of the events last mentioned happening in the lifetime of T., he should become entitled to the lease," then he was to pay over £2000 to certain persons.

R., C., and J. all died without having a child, in the lifetime of G. and T. G. did not pay over the £2000. Held, that the bequest to T. was too remote, and did not entitle him to the lease.

V. then gave other lands to X. and the heirs of his body; and if he should "happen to die without issue living at the time of his death," then V. gave these lands to R. and the heirs of his body, and to C. and the heirs of his body the first named chattel lease; and if X. and R. should "die without leaving issue," then he gave the second set of lands to C., and the lease to J. and the heirs of his body. V. then declared that, if X., R., and J. should "die without issue," or if J., becoming entitled to the lease by the last bequest, should omit to pay over £2000 to the persons named, then he gave the lease to G. and the heirs of his body; and directed that, "in case X., R., and C. should die without issue as aforesaid," then the second set of lands should go over to J. and the heirs of his body, and the lease should go to G. and the heirs of his body; and if J. and G. should respectively become entitled to the lands devised to them, in case of the deaths of X., R., and C., without issue, in the life of G., then G. was to pay £2000 bequeathed to him over to certain persons. And if "X., R., C. and J., should die without issue as aforesaid," then he gave to "G. and the heirs of his body the second set of lands, unto T. and the heirs of his body, and his several estates and interests in the leasehold lands." Held, that the words "die without issue" were to be read in all those bequests "die without leaving issue;" that the word "and" in the last clause might be transposed, and placed immediately before the words "unto T. and the heirs of his body," and that X., R., C., and J. having all died childless, T. was entitled to the lease.—Falkiner v. Hornidge, 6 I. C. R. 551. (C.)—[Affid.: 8 I. C. R. 184. (C.A.)]

3. Bequest of a portion of a chattel real "to my son J., and if J. dies without a lawful male heir, his part of the land falls to his brother R. I also order that the part of the lands which I bequeath to my son J. is to fall to his youngest son without any incumbrance." Held, that J. did not take an absolute interest in his portion of the lands, and that the gift over to R. was not too remote.—Dodds v. D., 11 I. C. R. 374; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 75. (C.A.)—[Affg. decision, 10 I. C. R. 476; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 357. (C.)]

4. Bequests to unborn sons which did not vest within 21 years after the death of the testatrix—Held, void.

Limitations over within 21 years, which depended on a void gift—Held, void.—Armstrong v. West, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 144. (M.O.)

XV. 5. c. Accumulations.

5. When the limitations (which are valid) of an estate have annexed to them trusts for accumulation which are in their creation invalid, by reason of their indefiniteness, the Court, when dealing with the instrument, will not support the trusts for accumulation so far as the testator might have carried them; but will reject them altogether.—Ker v. Lord Dungannon, 4 I. E. R. 343; 1 Dr. & War. 509; 1 Con. & L. 335. (C.)

XV. 5. d. Mistake or Uncertainty in.

6. V. bequeathed all her property, real and personal, to her son; and, in the event of his receiving a sum of £450 or thereabouts, to which she considered herself entitled, she requested that he would add to that sum £50, to make up £500 which she left to her granddaughter. V. received the £450. Held, that the legacy, as to the £450, was not specific or demonstrative, but conditional on the son's receiving the £450; and that the granddaughter was not entitled to be paid that sum out of the general assets of the testatrix. That "£400" should by construction be read "£500."

Though the Court may inspect the original will of personal estate, with a view to its construction, it has not jurisdiction to decide that the probate is erroneous.—Taylor v. Creagh, 8 I. C. R. 281. (R.)

XV. 6. a. Legitimate Children and Grandchildren.

1. V. bequeathed specified property, after his wife's death, thus:—"To our three children, H. and J. now residing with me, our sons, and the before-named A., our daughter." This last member of the sentence had been stroked with a pen, as if to obliterate the words; but they remained quite legible. Afterwards, V. re-acknowledged the will in the presence of three witnesses. Held, that the descriptive words, "our three children," were sufficient to entitle A. to take, even if the obliteration was complete, which it was not.—Boyd v. Martin, 2 Dr. & Wal. 355. (C.)

2. A general gift of the corpus of a fund to the children of A., described as "her children," after a previous gift of the interest to her for the maintenance of her children, W. and R.; Held, to be confined to the two before-named, and not to include after-born children.—In re Connor, 8 I. E. R. 401; 2 Jon. & L. 456. (C.)

XV. 6. b. Illegitimate Children.

3. Semble—Every gift to illegitimate children not in esse is void; and there is no distinction between cases in which they are described by reference to a particular father, and when not.—In re Connor, 8 I. E. R. 401; 2 Jon. & L. 456. (C.)

4. A. devise to an illegitimate son and his heirs gives an estate in fee-simple.—Daly v. Aldworth, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 141. (C.)

XV. 6. c. Heirs; Heirs Male.

5. V. devised upon trust, "and, in case my said son M. shall leave no child or children him surviving, then upon trust to convey so much of my estate of X. as shall be worth or can be let for £130 as aforesaid, without prejudice as aforesaid, to my own right heirs for ever." M. died without issue. Held, that "right heirs" meant the person who was heir at the death of the testator; not the person who was heir of the testator at the death of his son and heir, M., without issue.

Locke v. Southwood, 1 My. & Cr. 411, considered.—In re Mathews's Estate, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 47. (I.E.C.)

XV. 6. d. Issue.

6. When a will contains a general absolute devise of real and personal estate, and in a subsequent clause the testator uses language plainly restricting the absolute gift to one species of property, but the words do not confine it to that one, the restriction will be held applicable to both, in order to carry out his clear intention, unless there exists a plain necessity for excluding the other from its operation.

The word, "issue," in a will, may be held to mean "children," when that is the testator's manifest meaning.—Ridgeway v. Muskittrick, 1 Dr. & War. 84. (C.)

7. The word "issue" throughout marriage articles was confined to children, when in some clauses it was used as synonymous with "children."

The articles directed that if there should be no issue of the marriage, or all such issue should die in the husband's lifetime, the property should go to the husband, "issue" being held to mean children, after the usual clauses for vesting shares at twenty-one, &c., and survivorship and accruer. Held, proper to introduce a clause giving the fund to the husband absolutely in the event of his surviving the children.

The articles gave no direction, in case of no child's share vesting and some surviving the father; the property would have resulted to him. Held, proper to introduce also an express limitation to him in the latter event, though this would be the legal effect without one.—Roche v. R., 8 I. E. R. 714. (C.)

8. V. bequeathed to her daughter A. the interest of £500 for life, and after her death to A.'s daughter B., upon her attaining age; and if B. died in the life of her mother, and if A. left no lawful issue living at her death, that sum was to go to V.'s grandchildren share and share alike; but if A. should have issue living at her decease, the £500 to go to and amongst such issue as she should appoint; for want of appointment, share and share alike; if A. had but one child living at her death, the £500 to be paid to such one child. B. died in her mother's (A.'s) lifetime, leaving nine children. A. died without children. Held, that "issue" in the will meant

"children;" and that the grandchildren of the testatrix were entitled to the fund in preference to the children of B., who were great-grandchildren of V.—Murphy v. Segrave, 6 I. C. R. 417; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 385. (R.)

1. A testator bequeathed four houses to his brother for life, then to the wife of his brother, and after the decease of them both, "to such of their children or issue as should survive them, to take and hold under the will; if more than one child, to take in equal shares; the issue of such children also to derive upon the death of their parents." One of the testator's nephews died before his mother.—Held, that his children did not take under the term "issue."—Draper v. D., 4 I. Jur. 221. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed legacies, to his nephews and nieces, and directed that if any or all of them should leave legitimate issue, that issue respectively should have, possess, and enjoy the bequest which he made and intended for the parents of such issue respectively; but the sums devised to such of his nephews and nieces respectively as should not leave issue should go to the survivors or survivor of his said nephews and nieces, and to their issue. Held, that "issue" meant all the descendants, and that the survivors of the nephews and nieces, at the death of one of them, took her share absolutely.—In re Kavanagh's Will, 13 I. C. R. 120. (R.)

3. V., by will, directed the interest of the residue of his property to be paid to his three surviving daughters, and his son-in-law, the husband of his deceased daughter A.; and as to the principal sum directed that it should be vested (subject to certain bequests) for the issue of his late daughter A., and the issue of his other three daughters, so that after the decease of each of his respective daughters who should die and leave any issue, such issue should be entitled to receive the share of the interest of the property which his, her, or their mother respectively would be entitled to receive, and that the principal should be disposed of and given to such issue of his daughters respectively, share and share alike, on their respectively attaining age, or if female issue on their attaining age, or marrying with the consent of their guardians, therein after mentioned; and if any of his daughters died without leaving issue, then that the share of interest which said daughters so dying would be entitled to should go to the issue of his surviving daughters, and the issue of his deceased daughter A.; and the share of the principal sum whereon the same arose should go to the child or children of his said daughters; and if any of said daughters should die leaving children, and any of them should die before being entitled to receive his proportion, the surviving child or children, the issue of such daughter so dying should receive it; and he appointed guardians to his said grandchildren. Held, that "issue" meant "children."—Black v. Campbell, 14 I. C. R. 92. (R.)

4. V., owner in fee, by will, left his third son, Meredith Thompson, the lands of G., for ever; "but in case he should die unmarried, or without lawful issue, in that case he may will one-half of it as he pleases; and the other half to go share and share alike between my surviving sons or their families." The will ended in these words:—"All the bequests given my son, Robert Thompson, my grandson, Meredith Thompson, son to my son John, and also my other three sons, Meredith, Charles, and Hugh Thompson, of my property no part of it shall or will be liable, or pay any debts they may contract, nor sell or mortgage same; but always go in the male line, free of any debt of theirs." Meredith Thompson died without issue, having executed a disentailing deed of the lands of G., and devised them to B. and his heirs. Held, that Meredith Thompson took an estate tail under V.'s will.—In re Thompson's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 517; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 193. (L.E.C.)

XV. 6. e. Relations.

5. Bequest of personalty "to my relatives not named in my will, to whom and in what proportional sums my executors shall think fit and expedient." Testator appointed two executors—one proved the will, and died, the other renounced. Held, the surviving executor, not claiming to exercise the power of selecting the objects of the bequest, that this power was entirely gone, and the distribution of the fund devolved on the Court.

The testator at his death left surviving him children, grandchildren the issue of a deceased child, brothers, nephews, and nieces, some the issue of a living brother, and others the issue of two deceased brothers; and in his will left legacies to all his children, to one brother, and to all the issue of one living brother. Held, that the parties entitled under the bequest were the grandchildren, who were the next-of-kin according to the Statute of Distributions, omitting those to whom legacies had been left by the will.

The petition was filed by the nephew and nieces not named in the will, but their claim was displaced by the coming in of the grandchildren, who, having filed a charge, were declared entitled to the entire fund. Held, that there being a question for the Court upon the construction of the will, and the petitioners having instituted the suit upon fair grounds, and brought a fund into Court, the petitioners, though failing, should have all their costs of the petition as the first charge upon the fund in Court; and that the grandchildren now saying that they did not want the declaration of the Court upon their rights made no difference.—Ryan v. R., 1 I. Jur. N. S. 275. (M.O.)

XV. 6. f. Next-of-kin.

6. It is now settled that the words "next-of-kin," when used simpliciter, mean "nearest."—Heron v. Stokes, 4 I. E. R. 296; 1 Con. & L. 270; 3 Dr. & War. 89. (C.)

1. V. bequeathed all her personal estate to her executors, upon trust, to place it out at interest for the sole use of E., until she attained age, or married; and directed them to draw the interest during E.'s minority, or until her marriage, and apply it towards her maintenance and education; and, when E. should attain age, or marry, then to pay the principal and interest to her, as and for her own proper money; and, if E. died under age and unmarried, V. bequeathed the money and interest to her next-of-kin, share and share alike, as tenants in common; if but one, the whole to that one. At V.'s death, E. was her sole next-of-kin, but afterwards died under age and unmarried. Held, that the trust fund belonged to E.'s personal representative—not to V.'s next-of-kin at E.'s death.—Murphy v. Donegan, 8 Jon. & L. 534. (C.)

XV. 6. g. Personal, or Legal Personal Representatives.

2. A bequest to the representatives of the late mercantile house of A. and K., or to such person or persons as should be entitled at testator's decease to their personal property, in satisfaction of a debt due by the testator's father—Held, claimable by the legal representative of the surviving partner, as representing the firm of A. and K., and not by the persons beneficially entitled to the properties of A. and K.—Kerrison v. Redington, 11 I. E. R. 451. (C.)

XV. 6. h. Executors. See EXECUTORS, VII.

3. A will did not name any executor, but the testator named A. and B. "trustees, to carry out his will as named, with full power to take full charge of any property he left." Held, that they were executors according to the tenor.—Hasler v. Salmon, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 140. (P.)

XV. 6. i. Family: Name and Blood: next Eldest.

4. Bequest to younger sons as tenants in common, and, if any of them died before the distribution, not leaving any wife or children, his share to go to his next eldest brother, and so on to the youngest. The fifth son having died without leaving a wife or child, his share was held to go to the sixth.—Fitzgerald v. F., 12 I. C. R. 442; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 9. (C.)

XV. 6. j. Nephews and Nieces, Uncles and Aunts, &c.

XV. 6. k. First and Second Cousins.

XV. 6. l. Government.

XV. 6. m. Servants.

5. V. bequeathed to each of his servants who should have been living in his service for six months before his decease, the amount of one year's standing wages. B. had been living in the service of V., as a gardener, for more than six months, at a rate of wages payable by a weekly allowance in money, and by the use of a house and certain rations, calculated to amount to £52 a-year in value. Held, that B. was not entitled to any legacy under the above bequest.—Breslin v. Waldron, 4 I. C. R. 833; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 185. (C.)

XV. 6. n. When to be in esse. See infra, LAPSED LEGACIES.

6. Bequest of personal estate, in equal shares, to each and every of my children and their issue, whether sons or daughters, "with benefit of survivorship." Held, that the period of survivorship was, the death of the testator.—Caulfield v. Giles, 12 I. E. R. 427. (R.)

XV. 6. o. Whether per Capita or per Stirpes.

7. Under a bequest, "to be equally divided between my sister and her daughters, and my sister-in-law and her children," the property is to be distributed per stirpes and not per capita.

It is abundantly clear that a bequest substituted for another which has failed to take effect, is subject to the same conditions, and is to be construed in the same way as that for which it is substituted.—Heron v. Stokes, 8 I. E. R. 163. (C.)

8. Testator, by a codicil to his will, directed property to be equally divided between A. and her daughter, and B. and her children. Held, that the property was divisible per capita and not per stirpes.—Heron v. Stokes, 2 Dr. & War. 89; 1 Con. & L. 270; 4 I. E. R. 284. (C.)

XV. 6. p. Mistakes. See supra, XV. 5. d.

XV. 6. q. Wrong or Imperfect Descriptions, &c.

9. P., having four sons, A. R. P.; J. P.; R. P.; and G. P.; in some passages of his will spoke of A. R. P. by that designation, and in others as "my son, A." He devised certain property "to the children of my sons A., R., and G." Held, that on the construction of the whole will, the children of A. R. P. and G. P. only were meant, to the exclusion of the children of R. P.

Semble—The Court may look at the punctuation of a document, to discover indications of the intention; but if the punctuation be confused, little weight can be given to any inferences drawn from it.—Pope v. P., 4 I. C. R. 66; 6 I. Jur. 297. (C.)

10. V. by will leaves to F., M. F., and to "his sister M. F., my granddaughter, share and share alike, said M. F. now living in France with her uncle M.," all his estates. M. F. was not then living, nor had she ever lived, while her sister C. F. was living, and had lived for some time with the said uncle M. Held, that extrinsic evidence was admissible to explain the ambiguity in the will.

That there was not such a perfect balance of probabilities as to suspend the action of the Court.

That the name should control the description, and that M. F. was therefore entitled.—In re Plunket's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 861. (L.E.C.)

XV. 6. r. Witness. See PRACTICE, EVIDENCE.XV. 6. s. Classes.

1. Under a devise of freehold property among all such children of the testator as should be living at his death—Held, that the testator having, by a codicil, revoked the devise as to one child, that revoked share went among all the other children, and did not descend to the heir.—Shaw v. M'Mahon, 4 Dr. & War. 231; 2 Con. & L. 528. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed the residue of his property to trustees, upon trust, to have same invested, to form a fund for payment of annuities, one for K. during the minority of any of his children, for their maintenance and education, until the youngest should attain 21, or be married; and another for the education of the children of S., in like manner; and as to all the residue he bequeathed the same to and amongst the children of his sister S., and of his brothers C. and W., share and share alike; and directed that the share coming to the said children respectively should be paid to each of them on their respectively attaining (if boys) age or, if girls, age, or being married.

At V.'s death W. had no child, but there were five children of C. and six of S. then living.

Four years after V.'s death, D., a child of C., attained 21, and in the interval a daughter, E., was born to W. Held, that the members of the class to take were ascertained upon the attainment of 21 by D., and that E. was entitled to a share.—Scott v. S., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 205. (C.)

3. V. bequeathed to his four daughters unmarried £2000 each on their day of marriage with the consent of his trustees, with interest by way of maintenance in the meantime; and directed that if one daughter died unmarried her fortune and legacy should go to and be divided equally among such of his married sons and daughters as might have issue at her death. The four unmarried daughters survived V. One of them died unmarried, and without issue. Held, that her legacy was divisible among V.'s sons and daughters who, being married at the date of the will, survived her, and had issue living at her death.—Elliott v. E., 14 I. C. R. 482; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 349. (R.)

4. Legacies were bequeathed to A., B., C., and D., to be paid to them on their marriage; but in case any of them married without the consent of their mother, then a gift over to the others; "and if any of them should die unmarried, or marry without such consent, then the sum so bequeathed should go and be paid to the survivors or survivor of them." A. married with consent, and dying left B., C., and D. surviving, who all died unmarried. Held, that V.'s personal representative was entitled to three several legacies, and that the words "survivors or survivor" in the will ought to be read "others or other."—M'Blain v. Swanton, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 122. (C.A.)

XV. 7. Words Precatory and of Recommendation, and herein of Executory Trusts.

5. Testator, seized of B. under a lease for lives renewable for ever, gave his wife his dwelling-house, a cow's grass for her in summer, and fodder for her in winter, yearly and every year, as long as she lived; with four bushels of potatoes, set, dug, and ground; with half a peck of flax-seed, and a cart of made turf, brought and drawn up, yearly and every year. He then gave his son John four acres of land; and his son Andrew the remainder of his farm of B. "And further, I allow my son Andrew to make good the aforesaid benefits that I do leave to my wife. To him, the said Andrew, and my son John, I do allow that they both shall, equally between them, be both alike in doing whatever labour belongeth to it." Held, that John took the absolute interest in the four acres devised to him.—Morrrough v. Lord Dufferin, 2 Jon. 719. (E.E.)

6. V. devised his property to trustees. The will contained the following passages amongst others:—"The said sum I will shall be taken from my real, freehold, and personal property; the residue to be divided between them by my said trustees share and share alike, at such time, and in such manner, as to my said trustees shall seem most expedient, subject to this limitation," &c.; shares of sons, in certain events, were to go to survivors, "subject, however, to such jointure as my said sons, or any of them, may settle on any wife," &c. Premises were devised to the son carrying on the testator's business, "at such reasonable rent as my trustees shall think proper." "I further will my trustees shall lend out at interest" sums bequeathed in the way prescribed. A small annuity was given to W., "to be paid to him by my said trustees out of the issues," &c. A codicil bequeathed other property "to be divided equally among," &c., "agreeable to the real intention of my will." Held, that the provisions of this will did not constitute executory trusts.—Boswell v. Dillon, 6 I. E. R. 389. (C.)

7. V., seized in fee of three estates, devised one of them, called the Tempo estate, to his daughter, L., for life; remainder to her issue in tail; in default of such issue to his nephew Robert James, for life; remainder to Robert James's issue in tail, with several remainders over. The ultimate reversion in fee remained undisposed of.

V. then devised his two remaining estates to his other daughters in strict settlement, but made no disposition of the ultimate reversions in fee.

V. was also seized of divers freehold lands, and possessed of considerable personal property. He devised various parts of the former to different persons; and, bequeathing some pecuniary legacies, concluded his will thus:—"I leave and bequeath the rest, residue, and remainder of my properties, both freehold and personal, of whatsoever nature and kind I may die possessed of, to my brother Robert; and if my said brother Robert shall survive, I request and desire that he shall convert all the personal property into fee-simple property, and at his decease leave the same entailed on his son, Robert James, in the same manner as I have myself entailed the Tempco estate." Held, that the freehold estates, which passed under the residuary devise, as well as the residuary personal property, were within the trust to entail.

That this trust should be executed by giving a life estate to Robert James, with remainder to his sons and daughters in tail, according to the limitations of the Tempco estate.—Tennent v. T., 7 I. E. R. 361; 1 Jon. & L. 379; Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 161. (C.)

1. In 1839 V. bequeathed the residue of his property to his brothers A. and B., to be divided equally, with a request to A. that "should he die without lawful issue the property which I bequeath him shall revert back to my nephews, sons of my brother B." Held, that A. was entitled to the interest of the fund during his life only; and that the sons of B. were entitled to the principal.—In re O'Beirne, 7 I. E. R. 171; 1 Jon. & L. 352. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed a farm to P., with a direction in the will that his widow should have her diet and lodging in the house. Held, that on refusal by P., the widow could enforce the direction by bill in Equity against P.

A bequest to a widow, of diet and lodging, provided she wished to remain in a certain house—Held, not forfeited by her leaving the house; but that she was entitled subsequently only from the time of demand made.—Ryan v. R., 12 I. E. R. 226. (C.)

3. £1000 were left by will to V. By a codicil, if V. should be married, and not leave children or child alive, the £1000 were to become the property of E. & F.; but if V. "should ever marry, and leave a child alive, or children, in that case she can leave the said £1000 as she thinks proper, to one, or amongst any children she may have." By a further codicil, the £1000 were left "to V.; but if she died without children it was to become the property of E. & F." V. married, and died, leaving no child, but leaving a grandchild, the son of a deceased daughter, to whom she had appointed the £1000 on her marriage. Held, that the bequest was an absolute one to V., with an executory bequest over to E. and F., if V. should die without leaving issue living at her death, whether children or remoter issue, which, in the events which had happened, had failed.—In re Synge's Trusts, 3 I. C. R. 379. (R.)

4. V. having, under his marriage settlement, a power of appointing amongst his children £1500 (which was, in default of appointment, to be divided amongst them equally); and having only two sons, H. and W., appointed to H. £1; to W. £1; and the residue to W., adding:—"I request him to have the same invested on mortgage or in the purchase of lands, and settled on himself for life, with remainder to his child or children as he may appoint; with remainder to such child or children of my son H. as he may appoint; with remainder to my own right heirs." V., out of his own property, conferred by will other benefits upon W. Held, that W. was bound to elect between his rights under the settlement and his rights under the will.

W. having, during his lifetime, done acts which were held to amount to an election to take under the will, and having died without children—Held, that the precatory words in the will constituted a valid trust in favour of the children of H., although they were not objects of the power contained in the settlement.—Moriarty v. Martin, 3 I. C. R. 26; 4 I. Jur. 321. (C.)

5. F. was seized of real estate, subject to a mortgage of £4000, over which J. had a power of appointment amongst her children. F. was also possessed of large personal estate; and by will desired that all his debts, which he stated to be very trifling, should be paid out of his assets by his executrix. He then bequeathed all his property, real and personal, to J., and earnestly recommended that if S., the son of J., should, during his future life, follow such line of conduct as should merit her full approbation, she should appoint the £4000 to him, and should add £16,000 from F.'s personal property, also all his landed property; all which he wished her to grant to S., by deed or will; conditionally, and in case he should conduct himself so as to merit and possess her full approbation, and he pursued her advice, but not otherwise; but if he should misconduct himself, and not merit her entire approbation, and not obey her as his mother and guardian, she might dispose of all the properties in such manner as, and to whom she thought fit. Held, that upon the true construction of the whole will, which was very lengthy and informal, the words of recommendation did not create an absolute trust in favour of S.

The rule with respect to precatory words in a will is, that there must be a complete withdrawal of discretionary power from the legatees, or there is no trust created.

Held also, that F. intended the £4000 to be continued on the security of his estate, and not to be paid off out of the personality.—Lefroy v. Flood, 4 I. C. R. 1; 6 I. Jur. 273. (C.)

6. A testator having declared, by parol, to his residuary legatee, trusts, to which he wished £2000 to be applied, afterwards made a codicil, stating that he had instructed the residuary legatee as to the disposition of his property. Held, that the parol trusts could be enforced against the personal representative of the residuary legatee.—Att.-Gen. v. Dillon, 13 I. C. R. 127; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 251. (C.A.)

7. Testator devised to his wife his house at G., and declared it to be "his earnest wish that his sister should reside at G., with his wife, during her life." Held, that there was not any trust created in favour of testator's sister.—Graves v. G., 13 I. C. R. 182. (C.)

8. Bequest:—"My wish is this, that my dear brother, M. G. Waters, will get the sum of £1000 of my money, which is lodged in the Bank of Ireland. I also wish my dear sister, Charlotte Waters, will get the sum of £500 of the money I have lodged in the Bank of Ireland. Now, my dear sister, Susan, I wish you to get the remainder for yourself and daughters after my death—I mean the money that remains in the Bank of Ireland.” Testatrix never had any cash account with the Bank of Ireland, nor money lodged therein on deposit receipts; but possessed government new £3 per cent. stock standing in her name in the books of that bank. Held, that the stock passed under the bequest of “money;” and that the two legacies should be paid in money, not in stock, and were not liable to her debts and funeral expenses.—M'Cauley v. Waters, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 265. (C.)

1. Testator appointed his ever dear and beloved wife residuary legatee, to have and to keep for her own use any further sum or sums of money I may die seized or possessed of . . . convinced she will never desert my dear and beloved children, . . . and at her death divide whatever she may have among the most deserving of her children; . . . and my will is, if ever she shall marry, she shall forfeit all title, power, or control over my children and property, and shall have but £60 a-year during her natural life; and that all power and authority vested in her shall devolve on (persons named). Held, merely a recommendation, not legally binding the widow to divide whatever she had among her children at her death; and that a bequest to grandchildren was good.—Tuohy v. Burke, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 292. (C.)

XV. 8. a. Concerning Specific Legacies generally.

2. Testatrix bequeathed to her “uncle, P. P., the interest on £200, being part of a larger sum of government stock now remaining in my name in the Bank of Ireland;” and, after his decease, “the said principal sum of £200” to be equally divided between the children of P. P.

Neither at the date of the will nor of her decease, had the testatrix any government stock standing in her own name in the Bank of Ireland; but she was entitled to £1000 government stock standing in her mother's name. She was her mother's executrix and sole residuary legatee. Held, that the legacy was specific; and that £200 of the stock standing in her mother's name passed to the legatee.—Power v. Lenehan, 2 Jon. 728. (E.E.)

3. V., by marriage articles, agreed to settle £50 a-year on his wife (if she became a widow), payable out of C. Afterwards V., by will, bequeathed “to his wife, during her life, the sum of £50 yearly (£50 yearly being settled on her by me on our intermarriage), payable out of the lands of C.” Held, that the widow took only one annuity of £50.—In re Power, Fl. & K. 282. (R.)

4. On the construction of the entire will, annuities were held successive, not cumulative.—Bayley v. Quin, 2 Dr. & War. 116. (C.)

5. V., by will, after devises and bequests, left the residue of his property to his brother, whom he appointed executor. By codicil, he left to his wife one-fourth of all moneys which he might be possessed of at his decease, for her own absolute use and property; and left her the life interest, during her life, of the other three-fourths of those moneys. He also left her a house, together with all furniture, wines, carriages, horses, linen, china, and other effects there and elsewhere in England; and by another codicil bequeathed to his wife other property in England, which he particularly described.—Held, that £3 per cent. stock, consols, and bank stock, did not pass under the bequest to the wife.

A bequest of “moneys,” unless aided by the context, will not pass stock in the funds.

The word “effects” will comprise the entire personal estate of the testator, unless restrained within narrower limits by the context.—Dunally v. D., 6 I. C. R. 540. (R.)

6. V. being possessed of a chattel reversion, and of a profit rent in a house which he had leased to a tenant, with an option to redeem the rent by payment of £400, bequeathed all his real and personal property to his son and mother, whom he appointed executors, upon trust, to pay £25 a-year to his wife for life, out of the profit rent of the house, and directed, that if the tenant paid the £400, his executors should place it, together with whatever sum or sums there might be in the Bank of Ireland to his credit, and whatever sum or sums might appear, entered in his name, or his grandchildren's names, in the Savings Bank; and together with whatever cash might be had after paying his just debts, funeral expenses, and legacies, at interest, and pay the interest to his wife for her life, and, at her decease, divide the sum between two of his grand-daughters. The tenant did not pay the £400. Held, that the profit rent of the house, after the wife's death, was cash applicable to the trusts of the will.

Semble—V.'s interest in the house was devised to the executors upon the trusts of the will.—Taylor v. Bunne, 13 I. C. R. 382; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 26. (R.)

XV. 8. b. Rights of Specific Legatees. See LEGACY, X.

XV. 8. c. Their Abatement and Ademption. See LEGACY, I, III, X.

7. V. devised the lands of D. to trustees, to the use of her son, C., the ptf., for life, remainder to his sons in tail. She then bequeathed, amongst other annuities, one of £100 to the deft. H.; and charged the annuities on "the lands so devised to the use of" her "son, Y." and on the residue of other lands which she directed to be sold.

A subsequent codicil contained this clause: "And whereas I did by my said will give the lands of D. to the use of my said son, Y., as therein, now I do hereby revoke so much of my said will as gives said lands of D. to my said son, Y.; and I direct that my trustees shall stand seized of the said last mentioned lands to the use of my daughter, H., for her life, in addition to what I left her by my said will." Held, that V. merely meant to substitute one devisee for the other, and did not intend to discharge D. from contributing to the payment of the annuities with which the will charged them.

A codicil is never held to revoke a will further than is necessary to effectuate the testator's intentions.—Young v. Hassard, 1 Dr. & War. 638. (C.)

1. A tenant for life had a power, by deed or will, to charge a jointure, not exceeding £100 a-year for every £1000 which he should actually and bona fide receive with his wife. On his marriage, a life estate of his wife, in a chattel interest in lands, was conveyed to him for life. The tenant for life received before the date of the will about £2000 out of the rents of the lands. Held, that the charge by his will of a jointure of £200 a-year was valid if £2000 was received, and that if that sum was not received the jointure should abate proportionably.—Brereton v. Barry, 11 I. C. R. 97. (R.)

XV. 9. Concerning General Legacies, their Ademption and Abatement. See LEGACY, I, III.

2. Testator bequeathed to his natural daughter £2000, and, by a codicil, £3000 in addition; and by a subsequent testamentary instrument, stating his wish to alter his will, charged his estates with £20,000 for her. Held, that the £20,000 were substituted, and that the three gifts were not cumulative.—Russell v. Dickson, 1 Con. & L. 284; 2 Dr. & War. 133. (C.)

3. G. being entitled to a lease for years, determinable on three lives, of the lands of K., devised it to his wife for life, and, after her death, to his son, H., and his grandson, R., and the longest liver of them. Shortly afterwards he surrendered the lease and took a new lease of K. By a codicil made after the surrender and acceptance of the new lease, he directed his executors to pay out of a fund the head rent of F., and fulfil any payment he might thereafter appoint; and "relinquished the settlement made on R., on that occasion." By a second codicil of the same date, he vested £4500, in trust to pay the head rent of K., during his wife's life, and after her death to extend the interest in K., if that could be accomplished.

The trustees took no steps to extend the interest, although it could have been accomplished, until after the expiration of the lease, when it could not be done. Held, that the first codicil did not revoke the devise of K.; that H. and R. were entitled to the £4500; and that it did not go to G.'s next-of-kin.—O'Shea v. Howley, 7 I. E. R. 56; 1 Jon. & L. 391. (C.)

XV. 10. Concerning Lapsed Legacies.

4. V., after several bequests, directed the investment of the residue of his property; and bequeathed thereout to M. an annuity during life, with liberty to will it, or the principal thereof, to any or all of his children, in such proportions as she might think fit: in default of appointment to his children, share and share alike; and that the surplus, if any, of his property, after satisfying the bequests, should be added to each bequest proportionately to its amount. M., by will, reciting the power, gave S. so much of the stock as would, at the price on the day of her decease, produce £700; to E., in like manner, £700; and gave all the rest, &c., of said government stock upon trust to pay the interest thereof to her daughter I., for her separate use; remainder as I. should appoint. S. died in M.'s life, leaving issue. Held, that the legacy to S. lapsed, and did not fall into the residue bequeathed to I., but passed, as undisposed of, under V.'s will, the gift of the residue being a specific bequest.—In re Browne, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 315. (C.)

5. V., having a general power of appointment over a fund which was settled on her husband for life, by will bequeathed several legacies thereout, and the remainder or residue of the fund, share and share alike, to her sisters; and, as to "any other" residue or moneys or property not specified and disposed of, directed it to be given, share and share alike, to her then surviving sisters who might be living at the time when her will and the bequests therein might become available. One of the sisters died in V.'s life. V. predeceased her husband. Held, that the lapsed share of the deceased sister passed under the general residuary clause to the surviving sisters.

That those sisters only who survived the husband took under the general residuary clause.—Hickson v. Wolfe, 7 I. C. R. 452. (R.) —[Affd.: 9 I. C. R. 144. (C.A.)]

6. V., after various bequests, left all his remaining properties, on trust, upon his wife's death, to divide his plate amongst his surviving children; and bequeathed to all his "daughters then unmarried his house" (a freehold), "furniture, pictures, &c., to have and enjoy the same; and to the last married, as long as she pleases, or any one of them in succession; then in remainder to the next male heir, upon the express condition," that the house should be kept in repair (to which purpose he appropriated property), same being for, and intended as a residence for two of his grand-daughters; it being his will, wish, and desire that it should be maintained as a family mansion. At his death, V. had five daughters, of whom four were unmarried; a grandson, son of the married daughter, and two grand-daughters, his co-heiresses, daughters of a deceased son. All V.'s daughters married during his wife's life. Held, that the gift to V.'s daughters was limited to daughters who should be unmarried at his wife's death, and had failed.

That the gift to the "next male heir" had failed, because, if those words were words of limitation, and meant the next male heir of a daughter who should take under the preceding gift, that gift had failed; and, if they were words of purchase, there was not any person to answer the description of "next male heir" of V., at his, or at his wife's decease.—Loftus v. Stoney, 17 I. C. R. 178. (R.)

XV. 11. Concerning Conversion. See EXECUTORS, IX.

XV. 12. Of Vested Legacies, and Interests out of Personal Estate, Exoneration of. See INTERESTS IN PROPERTY, II.

1. V., by will, directed that his funeral expenses and simple contract debts be immediately paid, in the first instance, out of his personal estate, if sufficient, and if not, out of the sale of lands and houses at C. He then devised all his real estates (except a part specifically bequeathed), and all his personal estate and chattel property, in trust, in the first place, to pay out of his personal estate, in six months at the furthest after his decease, all his debts, funeral expenses, and legacies thereby bequeathed; and upon further trust, to raise out of C. £2000, and to pay the interest of it to his daughter F. for life; with limitations over; in the event of their not taking effect, the £2000 were to sink and become part of the residue of his personal estate. He devised his real estates in strict settlement, giving a life estate in them to F.; and, after reciting that on the marriage of his daughter, E., he perfected to trustees two bonds for £2000 and £4000, and declaring his intention that the £2000 bequeathed to F. and the £6000 due to the trustees of E., should be paid out of C., he directed that C. should be sold, and the produce applied in paying those sums; and if C. should not be sufficient to pay them, "making in the whole" £8000, he directed the deficiency to be paid out of the profits of his lands of B., or by sale or mortgage of a competent part thereof, and empowered his trustee to sell them. He bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to the trustee, upon trusts; and, in order to save him trouble, directed that F. should call in all the debts due to him, and dispose of all his personal estate, and thereout, in the first place, pay his debts and legacies; and, after payment thereof, pay over the residue to the trustee, whom he named executor. Held, that the personal estate was exonerated from the bond debts of £2000 and £4000, the same being charged on B. and C.

The Court is bound to look at the whole will, in order to collect an intention to exonerate the personal estate. When there is a general direction to pay all debts and legacies, and a clear intention to throw particular debts or legacies on the real estate, the Court is bound to effectuate that intention, and to exonerate the rest of the property.—[An error in report of Hancox v. Abbey, 11 Ves. 179, corrected.]—Bateman v. Lord Roden, 7 I. E. R. 240; 1 Jon. & L. 356. (C.)

2. V. gave his estates, real and personal, in Ireland, after payment of all his just debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, on trusts, chiefly for the use of a cousin. V. gave all his real and personal property in England to such uses as his widow should appoint; in default of appointment to her for life, remainder to the same uses as his freehold estates in Ireland; provided that if his personal estates in Ireland should be insufficient to pay his debts and legacies, they should be charged on his freehold and leasehold estates in Ireland; and he exonerated his real and personal estates in England therefrom. V. died in England. Held, that his funeral and testamentary expenses in England were, as well as his Irish testamentary expenses, charged on his Irish estates, in exoneration of the English personalty.—Coote v. C., 9 I. E. R. 197; 3 Jon. & L. 175. (C.)

3. V., by will, reciting that H. had married in opposition to his wishes, yet that it was not his intention to disinherit him, but to charge his real estates with the payment of legacies, bequeathed to J. £2000, directing same to be paid twelve months after his decease. V. then charged all his real estates with the payment of his debts and legacies; and devised same, subject to a mortgage for £14,000, which he charged thereon in exoneration of his personal estate, to trustees for 1000 years, upon trust for sale, and payment of his debts and legacies; subject thereto, to the use of H. for life; remainder over. By codicil he revoked all the uses after the term. Held, that the personal estate was not exonerated from payment of the legacy.

V., by will, bequeathed to trustees, in trust, a policy of assurance for £2000. By indenture of a prior date, V. had assigned the policy to B., a mortgagee, as a collateral security for £14,000, which under the will was charged on the real estates in exoneration of the personalty. Upon V.'s death, B. received the amount of the policy. Held, that the devisees were entitled to stand in his place for that amount.—Osborne v. O., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 219. (C.)

XV. 13. Of Vested Legacies and Interests out of Real Estate. See ibid, III.

XV. 14. Charges on Real Estate: of Exoneration. See ESTATE, VIII, IX — PORTIONS, III—COPYHOLD, I.

4. Testator, by will, confined exclusively to real estate, after devising same among the several members of his family, concluded by "desiring that all his just debts should be paid as soon as convenient after his decease." Held, that the debts were charged upon his real estate.—Harding v. Grady, 1 Dr. & War. 430; 4 I. E. R. 371. (C.)

1. When a testatrix devised real estate to A., charged with annuities and legacies, and by a codicil revoked that devise, and devised the lands to B., and "confirmed her will in every other respect"—Held, that the lands were charged in the hands of B.—Young v. Hassard, 1 Dr. & War. 638. (C.)—[See s. c., 8 I. C. R., App. vii. (R.)]

2. V. directed his debts and legacies to be paid by his brother B., to whom he devised a real estate in tail male, after the decease of his wife and another, to whom he had given life estates therein. He then gave B. the timber growing on the devised lands, to pay his debts and legacies; and bequeathed two legacies, which he directed should not be paid for five years, as it was his wish that the timber should not be cut for that period. He then directed the produce of the timber, after payment of the two legacies, to be paid to his wife. Held, that the general personal estate was the primary fund for the payment of the debts, and the produce of the timber was liable only in case that proved deficient; but that the produce of the timber was the primary fund for the payment of the two legacies.—Lamphier v. Despard, 4 I. E. R. 334; 2 Dr. & War. 59; 1 Con. & L. 200. (C.)

3. Testator devised a freehold estate to his wife, and gave her specific chattels. He then gave her an annuity charged upon all his real estate, except that before devised to her, with power of distress, and directed the first payment to be made on the first of the gale days which should occur after his decease. He then charged his debts upon all his real estate (except that devised to his wife), in aid of his personality; and gave another annuity in terms similar to those used respecting that given to his wife. He then gave pecuniary legacies, which he charged on all his real estate (except that devised to his wife), in aid of his personality, and gave two other annuities, in terms similar to those in which he gave the former annuities. Held, reversing a decree of Lord Plunket's, that, as regarded the real estate, the annuitants had no priority over the legatees.—Creed v. C., 4 I. E. R. 525; 1 Dr. & War. 416. (C.)

4. Testatrix devised fee-simple lands and leaseholds for years to Y. and his issue, and other fee-simple lands to H. and her issue, and charged all the lands so devised, with the payment of the annuities bequeathed by her will. The freehold and leasehold are liable to contribute, in proportion to their respective value at the decease of the testatrix, to the payment of the annuities; and the leasehold are not liable in the first instance.—Young v. Hassard, 1 Jon. & L. 466. (C.)

5. V., by will, directed her debts to be paid; devised her real estate to her brother; and directed that all costs due to her law agent,

D., should be paid out of the devised real estate. V. died in 1813, indebted to D. for a considerable amount of costs, and on a promissory note. The owner of the real estate, and V.'s executors, resided out of the jurisdiction from 1815. In 1817 that owner's agent paid money to D., who, in 1819, filed a bill to recover his demand out of V.'s assets. The debts, being out of the jurisdiction, no subpoena was served. In 1828 D.'s executrixes filed a bill of revivor. The debts, being still beyond the jurisdiction, no subpoena was served. In 1838 another bill of revivor was filed, and subpoenas were served upon the debts, who were still beyond the jurisdiction. Held, that the real estate was charged with the amount of the promissory note, as well as with the costs.—Foster v. Thompson, 6 I. E. R. 168. (C.)

6. A testator charged the estate of C. with debts, and devised the residue of his real estate (which included C.), to his widow, for life, with remainders over; and then gave her all his personal estate not theretofore bequeathed; and at the end of his will devised and bequeathed a pecuniary legacy to be payable after the death of his widow. Held, that the legacy was not charged on the real estate.—Smith v. Butler, 7 I. E. R. 467; 1 Jon. & L. 692. (C.)

7. A testator having an estate charged with his wife's jointure, but held for an interest which must expire immediately after his own death, devised to his son all his property, subject to the jointure, and £70 per annum for his wife, which £70 he thereby charged on all his property. Held, that the jointure was not charged by implication.—Doolan v. Smith, 9 I. E. R. 426; 3 Jon. & L. 547. (C.)

8. V. devised his real estates to the use of trustees for years, on trusts for his wife for life, or dur. vid., and after the decease or second marriage of his wife, and subject as aforesaid, and without prejudice to the same, upon trust to raise out of the lands, by sale, &c., for all or any part of the residue of the term, £3500, which he bequeathed to three persons. He desired that the several sums might be paid to the legatees respectively "as soon after his decease as might be convenient," and that in the meantime they should be paid interest thereon at the rate of £5 for each £100 by the year. Held, that the legatees were not entitled to interest out of the wife's life estate, but that it was to be raised after her decease or marriage out of the residue of the term.—Pennefather v. Bury, 9 I. E. R. 586; 3 Jon. & L. 727. (C.)

9. V. devised to his sons, to be disposed of as after mentioned, all his estate in W., and to the survivor, &c., of his sons; and all his estate in P., subject to his proportion of the head rent; and also subject to and in trust to pay out of the rents thereof an annuity to his daughter, and the remainder of the rents until she should be paid £500. Then followed a bequest of an annuity of £40 charged on parts of W. There was a residuary devise to the three sons. Held, that the bequests to his daughter were charged only on P. and not on any part of W.—Borough v. Williamson, 11 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

1. The whole will must be looked to for the testator's intention. Though the will contains a general direction to pay all debts or legacies, yet, if there is an intention shown to throw a particular debt or legacy upon the real estate, the Court must effectuate it.—Bateman v. Lord Roden, 7 I. E. R. 240; 1 Jon. & L. 356. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed all his property to be invested, and out of the proceeds to pay his daughter C., £10,000, on her attaining age, or marrying, if she married under age, provided she married with the trustees' consent, but not otherwise. He directed them to pay out of the interest a sum for maintenance until C. should attain age, or marry with consent; the surplus to be invested and then paid to her. After like bequests to other daughters, V. bequeathed all the residue to his daughters, C. and the others, share and share alike; and directed that, if any daughter or daughters died before she or they attained age and unmarried, her portion and her share of the residue should be divided, share and share alike, amongst the survivors. A codicil directed that, if any daughter married under age without consent, the interest only of her or their portion or portions should be paid to her or them for life, for her or their separate use; after her or their decease, the principal to be divided equally amongst the children of any such daughter, to be paid at 21 or marriage, with interest from the mother's death. C. married P., with consent, and died under age, leaving a son, who died under age and unmarried. Held, that the £10,000 vested in C.'s son, and passed to P., as his representative: that the marriage referred to in the bequest of the residue meant a marriage with consent: that the portions referred to in the codicil did not include the residue: that therefore, C.'s share in the residue did not vest either in C. or in her son.—Hackett v. Lord Oxmantown, 12 I. E. R. 534. (C.)

3. By an ante-nuptial settlement, a sum of £7356, the property of the wife, was vested in trustees upon trust that, in case the husband should within six months, by covenant and by a mortgage of certain hereditaments belonging to him, secure payment to them of £4000, they should pay £4356 to him out of the trust money (£356 out of the sum so paid to be for his own use), and upon trust, as to the residue of the trust money left after payment of the £4356, for the wife for her separate use during the joint lives of husband and wife, and for the survivor of them for life; and after the decease of the survivor, upon certain trusts for the children of the marriage; and if no children, upon trust for the wife absolutely if she should survive the husband; but if she should die in his lifetime, upon trust as she should appoint, and, in default of appointment, upon trust for the husband absolutely. As to the mortgage debt of £4000, it was declared that the trustees should stand possessed thereof, and of the securities for the same, upon trust to pay the interest to the husband for life, and after his decease to the wife for life; and after the decease of the survivor, upon the same trusts as to the principal of the mortgage debt as were declared of the residue of the trust money for the benefit of the children of the marriage; and if no children, upon trust for the husband, his executors, administrators, and assigns absolutely. Shortly after the marriage, the husband executed a mortgage of Whiteacre for the sum of £4000, to the trustees, who thereupon paid over to him the sum of £4356. By his will the husband gave to certain other trustees all his property, real and personal, upon trust to hold the lands of Whiteacre and Blackacre, first to fulfil the trusts of his settlement, then for his nephew S. for life, and after his death to his children as he should appoint, remainder over. Several of these remainders over were to females "as femmes soles." The testator, after bequeathing certain stock to his sister M. and her children, proceeded thus:—"I wish to alter a portion of that part of my will above relating to the funded property bequeathed for M. or her family. Should my wife have a child by me, they are to pay S. £500 out of it; should such child or children survive me, my heirs, though life tenants, may cut, sell, and carry away turf off said lands, and cut timber as well off the demesne of Whiteacre as in the churchyard therein." There was also the following clause: "I give to my beloved wife all our furniture, horses, and moveables, at Chester, as well as all her own fortune not included in our marriage settlement, for her sole use as femme sole, should she marry again." The testator having died without issue—Held, that by the devise of Whiteacre and Blackacre upon trust to fulfil the trusts of the settlement, the testator operated both those estates with the mortgage debt, but that he did not devise them upon the same limitations as were contained, in regard to the mortgage debt, in the settlement; and accordingly that neither the wife of the testator took, nor would the children of the marriage, if there had been any, have taken, any estate or interest in those lands under that devise, save as securities for the mortgage debt, but were excluded in favour of S. and the other devisees over.

Held also, that the ultimate absolute interest of the testator in the £4000 mortgage debt passed to the wife under the bequest to her of all her own fortune not included in the marriage settlement.—O'Reilly v. Smyth, 1 I. C. R. 349. (C.)

4. When a mixed and general fund of real and personal estate, in the nature of a residuary fund, is created by a testator to pay his debts and legacies, and for the general purposes of his will, the costs of a suit conversant about the disposition and administration of that general fund will be properly payable out of the whole of it; and must be borne rateably by the real and personal estate constituting that fund. This is so, although by lapse or by operation of law the whole or part of that fund becomes undisposed of, and returns to the heir-at-law or next-of-kin. But when a mixed fund is dedicated by the testator to specific purposes, and distinguished by him from his general personal estate, that part only of the mixed fund which consists of personal estate will be resorted to for payment of costs, if the general personal estate be insufficient to defray them. And when a mixed fund is dedicated to specific purposes, and directed by the testator, on the occurrence of a certain event, to sink into and become part of his general personal estate, and that event does not happen, if the general personal estate prove inadequate to discharge the costs, their payment will be decreed out of that portion of the mixed fund which consists of personalty only.—Cane v. Fitzgerald, 2 I. C. R. 216. (C.)

1. V. devised lands in trust for R. for life, remainder to his first and other sons successively in tail male, remainder over; and directed that R. "shall charge and incumber" those lands "for the younger children of him the said R., or of such person as shall be seized of the same under the limitations before mentioned, with a sum not exceeding £2000." A. died in 1794. R., in 1825, his creditors then being in receipt of the rents and profits of the lands, executed a deed charging the lands with £2000 for his daughters, M. and C., share and share alike, with legal interest from the date of the deed until the time of payment. R. died in 1848, without any issue except M. and C. Held, that the £2000 was a valid charge upon the lands in favour of M. and C.

That interest was payable upon that sum from the time of the death of R. only, as he must be presumed to have kept down the interest payable during his life.—Hinds v. H., 2 I. C. R. 227; 2 I. Jur. 105. (C.)

2. V., tenant for life of estates incumbered to the amount of £3600, by marriage settlement covenanted that he should have power to charge them with £2000 "provided he paid off all the incumbrances then affecting the lands." He paid them off. His personal representative presented a cause petition praying that two sums, which he had paid, might be declared to be still charged on the estate; and for payment.

The tenant for life, by will, declared his intention to have been not to exonerate the inheritance. Held, that this declaration of intention was sufficient, the expression of the intention being ambulatory during the life of the tenant for life.

That as, from the terms of the contract in the settlement, the tenant for life was bound not to charge the estate with more than £2000, his representatives could not raise charges beyond that amount.—Lysaght v. L., 4 I. Jur. 110. (C.)

3. A petitioner claimed a legacy by her petition and charge; and claimed priority for it over the other legacies, by reason of a contract with the testatrix that the legacy should be bequeathed to her in consideration of her services as companion. The alleged contract was denied by the discharge, and no evidence was given to prove it. Held, that having claimed as legatee, by her petition and charge, she could not, on an appeal from the Master's decree, abandon the legacy and claim as creditor. That she could not claim as a creditor, having given no evidence in support of her claim as such.

V. first devised real estate to A., subject to specified legacies, charged thereon, and exonerated her personal estate from them. Secondly, she devised other real estate to B., subject to other legacies, also charged thereon, and from which her personal estate was also exonerated. Thirdly, she devised other estates to C., subject to other legacies. Fourthly, she devised other real estate to D., in trust to sell and pay two legacies and the residue of the purchase-money to E. Fifthly, she devised other lands to F., subject to a legacy; and bequeathed stock to G., and her household goods, plate, cash, and other personal property to H. She bequeathed the residue of her property, real, freehold, and personal, after payment of her just debts, funeral expenses, &c., and legacies aforesaid, to A., whom she appointed her sole residuary legatee; and if such residue proved insufficient for the purposes aforesaid, she ordered that such deficiency should be paid out of the produce of the sale of the lands devised to D.; and appointed A. and F. her executors. V. had no other lands but those specifically devised. Afterwards, by a codicil duly attested and made in England, her will being then in Dublin, she bequeathed the legacy to the petitioner, and charged it on her real and personal estate; and ratified her will in all other respects. Held, that the petitioner's legacy was not charged on the lands specifically devised to A., B., C., and F.

That if there had been any lands not specifically devised, which passed under the residuary devise, they would have been charged with the petitioner's legacy.

That the residue of the purchase-money of the lands devised to D. in trust for E., after payment of the two legacies, was subject to the petitioner's legacy, as E. was to be considered a residuary and not a specific devisee.—Dyer v. Bessonet, 4 I. C. R. 382. (R.)

4. Testator bequeathed as follows:—"I leave to A. all that and those, the lands, &c. I also leave A. all my furniture, stock, . . . I also leave A. all and every sum of money left me by . . . Also the lands of . . . I also leave him all moneys and debts of every kind due to me at my decease, to be subject to all my debts and the several bequests and legacies hereinafter mentioned, that is to say, I leave and bequeath to my sons, F. and T., the several sums of £100 each." He then went on to leave several other pecuniary legacies, without stating further any fund out of which they were to be paid. Held, that the words "to be subject to," extended to all the preceding clauses; and that the pecuniary legacies were charged on all the real and personal estate.—Millet v. M., 6 I. Jur. 149. (R.)

1. V. bequeathed two pecuniary legacies; and, as to all the rest of his real and personal property, bequeathed and devised it to his son, M., in the fullest manner he could, with liberty to M. to dispose of it as he thought proper. M. mortgaged the real estate. Held, that the legacies were well charged on the real estates devised to M., who had not power to sell the lands discharged from the legacies.—Greville v. Browne, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (H.L.)—[S. c. 7 H. Lords Cases, 689.]

2. A tenant for life of estates, with power to appoint them to his issue male, and to charge a sum for the benefit of his younger children, executed on the marriage of his third son a bond and warrant of attorney on which judgment was entered for a sum as provision for him. On the marriage of a daughter he made for her also a provision by way of annuity, charged on one of the settled estates; and afterwards, by will, devised some of the estates to his eldest son, subject to all his debts and incumbrances of every description, and subject to charges made by his will in favour of his other children. He then charged sums in favour of others of his children, and devised an estate to his fifth son, freed and exonerated from all his debts, charges, and legacies; his will being that, if any creditor should recover any demand from the lands so devised to his fifth son, that son should be recouped by the estates devised to testator's eldest son; and stated that he had avoided mentioning his married children, as for them he had already provided by bond or otherwise, at their respective marriages, fully and adequately to the provisions thereby made for his other children. The testator did not appear to have left property other than that which was the subject of his power. Held, by the majority of the Council, that the charge of the judgment debt to the third son by the will operated as an execution of the power to charge for younger children.

That an instrument should operate as an execution of a power, it is not necessary that the donee should intend to execute the power, or that he should have it in contemplation. It is sufficient if the act which he intends to do, or the benefit which he intends to confer, cannot be done or conferred otherwise than by an execution of the power.—In re Morgan, 7 I. C. R. 18. (P.C.)

3. V. devised lands, in trust for B. (a minor), and his sons, in strict settlement, giving B. a power of charging the lands with £5000, for younger children, "to be raised by sale or mortgage of a competent part of said lands, or out of the rents and profits." V. then bequeathed legacies, amounting in all to £12,000, to his grand-daughters, and directed that his executors "should place these legacies in some of the most eligible public funds," and accumulate such portion of the annual interest of them as was not required for the maintenance, &c., of the legatees. He then, after giving some small legacies, declared "that if his assets, not thereby specifically disposed of, should prove insufficient to pay his debts and legacies," it was his "will that such deficiency should be made good and supplied by his said trustees out of the annual rents and profits arising out of his said estates, which he thereby desired that his said trustees might receive and apply until such deficiency should be made good thereby, allowing, however, to his said grandson B., so much as the said trustees should deem expedient and fitting for his education and maintenance;" but if it happened that there was a surplus of his personal estate, after payment of his debts and legacies, &c., he bequeathed such surplus among his several grandchildren above mentioned. The personal estate proved insufficient for the purposes contemplated. On V.'s death, B. and the other grandchildren were made wards of Court, and one of the executors acted as guardian. In the accounts and dealings in the matter of the minors, the legacies were treated as charged on the corpus of the estate, and B. paid interest on them until he died, leaving a son, who refused to pay those charges. Held, that only so much of the legacies as the personalty was inadequate to pay was charged on the real estate; that the charge was only on so much of the rents and profits of the real estate in the years immediately following V.'s death as would have made up the deficiency; and that B.'s son was not bound by the dealings in the minor matter.

It is desirable that questions of construction should be settled in the first instance, before the Master proceeds to take the accounts of an estate.—Scott v. Clements, 8 I. C. R. 1; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 91. (C.)

4. V., having two estates mortgaged, with judgments collateral to the mortgages, by will, made after 1854, devised them in strict settlement to two of his sons, bequeathed several pecuniary and specific legacies, and directed that his debts and legacies should be paid out of the residue of his personal estate and property, which he bequeathed to his sons. Held, that the mortgage debt should be paid out of the personal estate in preference to the pecuniary legacies.—Smith v. S., 10 I. C. R. 89; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 88. (R.)—[Affid.: 10 I. C. R. 461; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 201. (C.A.)]

5. V. devised all his estate in a chattel leasehold interest in lands, and "all other my property and worldly estate whatever," to a trustee, upon trust, in the first place, to preserve the chattel interest, by payment of head rent and renewal fines. He then bequeathed pecuniary legacies, and, among others, £100 to the trustee; "and as to, for, and concerning all the residue of my interest in my said lands, and as to, for, and concerning the residue of my interest similarly of my other personal estate and effects, subject to the hereinbefore trusts, I hereby give, bequeath, and devise all such residue of my interest in the said lands, as also all such the residue of my personal estate and effects, in trust for my eldest son." V. then charged the lands and the residue of his personal estate with sums for younger children; and declared that, if he died leaving no son, but leaving an eldest or only daughter, then he devised all his interest in the lands, and all the residue of such estate, in trust for such daughter, with remainders over; and directed "that all the intermediate rents and profits of my said lands, as well as of the residue of my said other personal estate and effects, which shall accrue, arise, or be made out of both said funds," subject only to the provision made for his wife by their marriage settlement, and to his debts and funeral expenses, "and to the several legacies hereinbefore enumerated," should go to the trustee. In 1846, Master Henn had made a report, afterwards confirmed by a decree in Ch., finding that the legacies under the will were not charged upon the testator's interest in the lands. Held, that, upon the true construction of the will, the legacies were not charged upon the lands.

That the legatees were bound by the Master's report.

The Judges of the L. E. Court are bound by a final decree of the Court of Ch.—[In re Kelly, 9 I. C. R. 103, commented on].—In re Lanauze, 11 I. C. R. 19; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 30. (C.A.)

1. V. bequeathed to each of his four daughters a legacy of £500, to be paid to them respectively on the days of their respective marriages with the consent of his wife and executors, with power to each of them to dispose thereof by will or deed, as they might think proper; such four legacies to be charged on his personal estate, and the deficiency to be raised out of his real estate, which he empowered his trustees to do by demise, sale, or mortgage; and directed his executors to pay not less than £30 or more than £40 a-year for his daughter's maintenance until their respective marriages, out of his personal estate, and, on a deficiency, out of his real estate. By a codicil to his will, he devised four additional legacies of £500, to be paid to his daughters at the time and in the manner in his will mentioned. One of the daughters died unmarried, having bequeathed her legacies to the survivors. Held, that the legacies of the daughters who died could not be raised out of V.'s real estate.

That the legacies to the surviving daughters were not raiseable out of the real estate before their marriage with consent.—Bolton v. B., 12 I. C. R. 233. (R.)

2. V. seized of real estate, subject to a mortgage which he had covenanted to pay, by will, in 1829, bequeathed pecuniary legacies, and directed that all his chattel property whatever (except as before bequeathed) should be sold, and the produce thereof be applied, first, to pay his just debts and funeral expenses, and, next, in discharging his legacies.

The mortgaged estate descended to the heir-at-law. Held, that he was entitled to have the mortgage paid out of the personal estate, in preference to the legacies.—Burley v. Armstrong, 12 I. C. R. 270; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 50. (R.)

3. V. bequeathed lands in C. and L. to the use that M. should receive an annuity of £50 per annum out of C., and a like annuity out of L., and devised C. to H. in strict settlement. He devised L. subject to the annuity of £50, and "to the charge of £1000 hereafter mentioned," to H., in strict settlement. He then gave to X., W., and R., £1000, and charged it upon L.; and bequeathed the residue of his real and personal estate to X., W., and R. Held, that the £1000 was charged on L. in exoneration of the personalty.—Dauat v. D., 13 I. C. R. 175; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 315. (C.)

4. Testator, by will, directed as follows:—"I direct all my just debts to be paid by my executors and trustees hereinafter named, whom I also direct to pay the following legacies" (which amounted to £800); "and, as to my freehold estate of D., in the King's County, I devise and bequeath same to P. O'S. and T. D. O'F., whom I hereby nominate, constitute, and appoint executors of this my will, upon the trusts" (therein mentioned; and, as to his household furniture and other effects), "My will is, and I order and direct my said executors to sell same by auction, and out of the funds to be realised thereby, and also with the debts and costs due to me, when collected, to pay the several pecuniary legacies hereinbefore bequeathed by me." The creditors of testator having been paid out of the personal estate, which was insufficient to pay them and the legatees, it was contended that the pecuniary legatees were entitled to have the assets marshalled in their favour as against the devisees, and that the debts were well charged on the realty. Held, that the real estate was charged in aid of, but not in exoneration of the personalty, which was the primary fund for the payment of the debts.—Lyster v. O'Sullivan, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 212. (M.O.)

5. V. devised a rentcharge of one hundred guineas to A. for life; and after her death "unto and amongst B., C., and D., the children of the said A. and me, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike; to hold to the said B., C., and D., and to their heirs for ever, as joint tenants; but in default of such heirs," the annuity to sink into the lands.

B., C., and D. were V.'s and A.'s illegitimate children. B., on her marriage, put in settlement her undivided reversionary share.

C. and D. died intestate and unmarried in A.'s life, without having dealt with their shares. B. survived A. Held, that B. was entitled to raise out of the lands only one-third of the rentcharge.—Daly v. Aldworth, 15 I. C. R. 69. (C.)

6. V., by will, made in 1828, and attested by three credible witnesses, devised freehold estates in lands to his sons, M. and T., share and share alike; and then bequeathed to his two daughters £1000 each, and charged and incumbered all those lands with payment of their fortunes.

By an unattested codicil, added in the same year, V., having recited that by will he had charged all his real and personal property with payment of those two legacies, ordered and directed "that said sums of £2000" should in the first instance be paid out of whatever money he then had, or might have in bank at his decease, as also out of whatever sums of money might be due to him by bond or otherwise, as far as the same would go towards making up the two sums of £1000, with interest thereon from his decease until fully paid; and if the sums so remaining in bank and so due to him should, when called in, appear inadequate to the payment of those two sums of £2000, with interest as aforesaid, he ordered and directed that the deficiency should be made up from the produce of the sale of his stock of cattle, as by his will was directed. Held, that the freehold estates, on which the will charged the legacies, were not exonerated by the codicil.—In re O'Donel's Estate, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 83. (C.A.)

1. V. bequeathed all debts which should be due to him, and all chattels which should be in his possession, and all other personal property to which he should be entitled at his decease, to his wife and her assigns absolutely; devised all his real property and real estates to her for life, remainder over in fee; and appointed her executrix. She proved the will, and went into possession of the real estate. V. was lessee for years of a house which he had sub-let at a rent lower than that reserved by the lease. The personalty proving insufficient to pay the rent;—Held, that the wife was bound to keep down the rent of the house out of the rents of the real estate, in exoneration of the inheritance.—Talbot v. The Earl of Radnor, 3 Myl. & K. 254, examined and considered.—Fairtlough v. Johnstone, 16 I. C. R. 442. (R.)

XV. 15. Conditional Legacies and Bequests. See LEGACY, VI.

2. V. devised the residue of his estates, which were freehold, to his son S., for life; remainder to such issue, male or female, as S. should think proper to appoint to; but if S. died without issue, male or female, V. devised his estates to his daughter M., provided she married with consent, and to the issue of such marriage, male or female.

After V.'s death, and in the life of S., M. married with consent, and had issue, the deft. S. died without issue, leaving M. and the deft. surviving. Held, that the deft. did not take any estate in the devised lands under the will.—Beasley v. Hourigan, H. & J. 497. (E.E.)

3. V. devised lands to the persons of the S. and C. families, who should, for the time being, be lord or lords, lady or ladies of the manor of D., "and if the said families should become extinct," then over to a charity. After

V.'s death, the manor of D. was sold by the families of S. and C., but they had not become extinct in blood. Held, that the event upon which the estate was to go over was the extinction of the blood of the families of S. and C., and not their ceasing to be lords or ladies of the manor of D.—Comrs. of Ch. Don. v. Baroness Clifford, 1 Dr. & War. 245. (C.)

4. In case L. married a professional gentleman, or a man engaged in trade or business, and not possessed of landed property whereon to make a suitable provision for her, a will directed that the fund should be settled to her separate use; but if she married a gentleman of landed property who should make suitable provision for her, the trustees were directed to pay him the whole of the fund, on such settlement being made. L. married a gentleman having no profession or trade, and no landed property at the time of the marriage, who afterwards acquired landed property. Held, that this marriage was within the first clause of the will; and that a settlement of the property acquired after marriage, and the death of L., on her issue, would not authorise the trustees to pay him any part of the fund.—Briscoe v. B., 7 I. E. R. 128; 1 Jon. & L. 334. (C.)

4. A testator devised all his real, freehold, and personal property to his son "in case he shall recover from his present illness," and made his daughter "residuary legatee," recommending her, if she married, to have such property as he left her settled to her separate use. Both son and daughter survived him. Semle—The condition annexed to the son's devise was void, or only extended to his surviving his father, and he would then have taken the property absolutely; and Semle also, the residuary clause would have carried the real estate if the son had died in the father's lifetime.—Alleyne v. A., 8 I. E. R. 493; 2 Jon. & L. 544. (C.)

5. V., seized of houses and lands for lives renewable for ever, and of no other real estate, devised to trustees all his freehold messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments whatsoever and wheresoever, upon trusts, viz., to permit his daughter during her life to receive an annuity of £100 payable out of all and every other his freehold estate or estates situate (here the houses and lands above named were mentioned), to her separate use (and without power to alien or mortgage it); after her decease the annuity was to stand to the heirs of her body lawfully issuing, in such shares as she should by will appoint, in default of appointment to her children share and share alike.

V. directed that £50 per annum should be applied in maintaining his daughter until she attained twenty-one or married, and that upon either of those events, the trustees were to assign the annuity of £100, and all interest and dividends due thereon, and all securities wherein the same should be placed out or invested, to her for her own sole use and benefit absolutely for ever, with the usual powers of distress and entry upon the devised premises, and every or any part thereof. After a bequest of plate and household furniture to his daughter, and of a small annuity to another person, the will contained this clause:—"And in further trust, that in case my said daughter shall happen to die before she attain twenty-one, and unmarried, I give, devise, and bequeath said annuity of £100, and all and every other my freehold estates wheresoever as aforesaid, unto my brother E. C., for and during the term of his natural life; and from and immediately after his decease unto and to the use of his right heirs for ever, in such manner as by his last will he should direct, limit, and appoint:" and V. bequeathed all his personal estate, subject to his debts, to E. C. V.'s daughter survived him and attained twenty-one. Upon a petition presented under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 11, on behalf of the children and devisees of E. C., who died almost immediately after V., the Court was of opinion that upon the context of the will, the words of contingency, "in case my daughter shall happen to die before she attain twenty-one or marriage," must be confined to the annuity of £100, and that accordingly E. C. and his children took estates to the exclusion of V.'s daughter in the freehold property of V. immediately upon his death; but the case was sent for the opinion of a Court of Law.—Campbell v. C., 1 I. C. R. 503; 4 I. Jur. 45. (C.)

1. V. devised to M. lands, and directed that if M. died before twenty-one, "or at any other age not having lawful heirs begotten by him," the estate should go to the elder brother of M. and to his heirs. M. died over twenty-one, and without issue. The petitioner claimed as heir of the elder brother. Held, on the authority of Glover v. Monckton, 3 Bing. 13, that the petitioner was entitled to recover.—Mahaffy v. Rooney, 5 I. Jur. 245. (C.)

2. A bequest of an annuity to a widow, "so long as she shall continue single and unmarried," will fail if the widow marry in the testator's lifetime, though with his knowledge, unless some general intent in the mind of the testator, that the widow should have the annuity notwithstanding her marriage, can be inferred from the terms of the bequest.—West v. Kerr, 6 I. Jur. 141. (C.)

3. V. bequeathed all her property, real and personal, to her son; and, in the event of his receiving a sum of £450 or thereabout, to which she considered herself entitled, requested that he would add to that sum £50 to make up £400, which she left to her grand-daughter. V. received the £450. Held, that as to the £450 the legacy was not specific or demonstrative; and the grand-daughter was not entitled to be paid that sum out of V.'s general assets.

That by construction "£400" should be read "£500."—Taylor v. Creagh, 8 I. C. R. 281. (R.)

4. V., by will devised (inter alia), unto B. the interest in lands, held pur autre vie, to have, receive, and take the rents, issues, and profits thereof; but if B. died before he attained age or married, over. Held, that "or" could not be read "and;" and that although B. attained 21, yet that, having never married, he had not acquired an absolute estate.—In re Clegg's Estate, 18 I. C. R. 163. (L.E.C.)

5. V., devised and bequeathed his interest in his freehold and chattel property to his grandson J.; "but in case my said grandson J. should happen to die before he attains the age of 21 years, or marries," then over. Held (reversing the decision of the Judge of the L. E. Court) that "or" should be read "and;" and that J. had acquired an absolute estate, having attained 21, though he had not been married.—In re Clegg's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 70; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 21. (C.A.)

XV. 16. Of Paying and Appropriating Legacies, &c. See LEGACY, VIII.

XV. 17. Of the Satisfaction and Release of Debts and Portions.

6. Semble—Stronger words are required to exonerate personal estate from the payment of debts, than from the payment of legacies.—Lamphier v. Despard, 4 I. E. R. 335; 2 Dr. & War. 59; 1 Con. & L. 200. (C.)

7. V., by will, in 1838, devised real estates at M. to his nephew, and bequeathed legacies amounting to £8000 to other persons, which legacies were primarily charged upon the moneys which might be in bank to V.'s credit at his death. In 1839, the nephew, in compliance with V.'s express desire, purchased real estates at C. V., out of moneys standing to his credit in the bank, lent the purchase-money to the nephew, who shortly afterwards repaid it in part; but a balance of £7700 remained due to V. By a codicil made in 1840, V., reciting that he had by will devised real estates to his nephew, charged them with £8000, with interest at £5 per cent. from his decease, and directed that sum and interest to be paid to his executors within six months from his decease, for the purpose of paying off legacies named in his will. Held, that parol evidence was admissible of facts showing that V. stood in loco parentis to the nephew; and also to show the circumstances attendant upon the purchase of C.; and that, the nephew being unable to repay the balance, V. refused to accept from him a security for it, but instead thereof had directed his own solicitors to prepare a codicil, charging £8000 upon M., which sum was to be applied towards the purposes to which he had by will directed a similar sum formerly in cash at bank to be applied; in consequence of which direction the codicil executed by him in 1840 was prepared.

That these facts amounted in Equity to a release by V. of the debt of £7700 due to him from the nephew; and that the charge of £8000 upon M. must be considered as substituted for that debt.

The Court admitted the parol evidence, not for the purpose of construing the will or codicil, but to ascertain whether or not the £7700 was a debt due to V. at his death.

Semble—The dictum of Wigram, V. C., in Cross v. Sprigg, 6 Hare, 552, that if a debt be not released at Law it cannot be considered as released in Equity, is not sustainable.—Hedges v. Aldworth, 13 I. E. R. 406. (C.)

XV. 18. Of Bequests to Charity: of Mortmain.
See CHARITY, MORTMAIN.

[10 G. 4, c. 74; 8 & 9 Vic., c. 97.]

1. A devise of lands in Ireland, to Trinity College, Dublin, for the promotion of the knowledge of the Irish language—Held, void.—Att.-Gen. v. Flood, Hayes, 611; Hay & J., App. xxi. (E.E.)

2. A direction as to charitable trusts upon which real property devised by a will is to be applied, contained in a codicil referred to by the will, but not attested, is not binding on the Master when settling a scheme; but, if proper, should be adopted by him.—Att.-Gen. v. Madden, 2 Con. & L. 517. (C.)

3. Testatrix devised all her fee-simple, freehold, and leasehold estates to R. for life, remainder to J. for life, with remainder, save a rentcharge, to the Commissioners of Ch. Don., in trust to pay the head rent, and to apply the profits to charities specified in the will. Held, that the charitable bequests were to be paid out of the rents and profits of the property devised, and not out of the general personal estate of the testatrix; and that no charitable trust attached upon the devised estates, until after the death of R. and J.—Comms. of Ch. Don. v. Espinasse, 3 I. E. R. 324. (C.)

4. V. being seized of fee-simple lands, had, by articles before his marriage, agreed to convey them upon trust for himself for life, and at his death to secure a jointure for his widow; and, subject thereto, upon trust for the first and other sons of the marriage in tail; remainder to his issue male by any other marriage; remainder to his daughters as tenants in common in tail male; and if he died without issue, or without making a will, the lands were to go to his mother in fee. He subsequently purchased other fee-simple lands; and devised "the residue of his unsettled estate," after payment of his debts and legacies, which he charged upon his real estate, in exoneration of his personal, to his wife for life, remainder to "the Incorporated Society for promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland." The Society had been incorporated by royal charter, by that title, before the date of the will, and had a license to take in mortmain. Held, that the reversion of the lands included in the articles passed by devise; and, that though the devise to the Society, being to a corporation, was void at law, yet, that as it was for a charitable purpose, there was an original jurisdiction inherent in the Court to sustain it.

The 10 Car. 1, sess. 3, c. 1, is analogous in Ireland to the 43rd Eliz. c. 3, in England.

Semble—Charity estates are not within the recent Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27.—The Incorporated Society in Dublin v. Richards, 4 I. E. R. 177; 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58. (C.)

5. A testatrix gave such sum of stock as she should be possessed of at her death to A. and B., "to be by them applied to charitable purposes," according to her instructions deposited with A. The instructions given to A. were verbal, leaving it to his discretion to select the charitable purposes to which it was to be applied. Held, that this was a good gift of the stock to charity, and that the Court would direct a scheme for its application.

It is perfectly well settled that, in either case, either where a charitable purpose is expressed generally, or where a particular charity is contemplated, but has not been specified, the Court has jurisdiction to apply the fund to such charitable purposes as it shall select.—The Commissioners of Ch. Don., &c. v. Sullivan, 4 I. E. R. 280, 282. (C.)

6. Testatrix bequeathed the residue of her personal property to W., to be by him applied for such pious purposes and uses as should appear to him to be most conducive to the honour and glory of God, and the salvation of her soul. Upon a bill to administer her assets, this bequest was decreed to be a good charitable bequest; and it was, with the consent of W., referred to the Remembrancer to settle a scheme. W. died before the Remembrancer reported. Held, that, therefore, the disposition of the fund belonged to the Crown by sign-manual.—Felan v. Russell, 4 I. E. R. 701. (E.E.)

7. The Charitable Bequests Act (7 & 8 Vic., c. 97) gives the Commissioners an interest such as entitles them to file a bill to remove a testamentary trustee for a charity, and to procure the appointment of new trustees. The proceeding need not be by information; relief will be granted on the mere ground of the personal unfitness of the trustee.—Comms. of Ch. Don. & Beg. v. Archbold, 11 I. E. R. 187. (C.)—[Rev'd: 2 H. L. Cas. 440.]

8. V. bequeathed £500 to two R. C. priests, or the survivor of them, to be applied as they should deem best for the maintenance and education of two priests of the order of St. D. in Ireland. Held, that the bequest was null and void, as being opposed to the 10 G. 4, c. 74, and should accrue to the residue of V.'s personal estate.—[Affirming Rolls decision, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 404.]

V. bequeathed £500 to another R. C. priest, on a secret trust disclosed to him by V. during his life. The trust was, to apply that sum towards redeeming the rent of the church of the D. Friars in Cork. Held, that the bequest, being given on an invalid trust, was void, and could not be carried out cy-pres.—[Reversing on the cy-pres point the Rolls decision, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 404.]—Simms v. Quinlan, 17 I. C. R. 43; 10 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (C.A.)

1. Bequest to V. of a residue, to be by him disposed of in such public or private charities as he should think fit. Seemle—A void gift, incapable of being carried out either in Ch. or by the Crown.—Goods of Burrowes, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (P.)

XV. 19. Of Interest on Legacies, Intermediate Maintenance, and Disposition of Mesne Profits. See INTEREST PECUNIARY, I.

2. Maintenance will not be allowed out of funds which, by direction of the will, are to accumulate, and be laid out in the purchase of lands to be entailed on the minor in tail, with remainder over.—Shaw v. McMahon, 8 I. E. R. 584. (R.)

3. V., who adopted his niece at the age of three years, and until his death maintained her as an inmate of his family, made the following bequest:—"I give, devise, and bequeath, and hereby charge upon all my aforesaid lands and premises, to my niece D., the sum of £3000 sterling, to be payable to her upon her marriage, with the consent of my wife A.; but in case of her marrying without such consent in the lifetime of my said wife, the said charge of £3000 is to merge in the inheritance, and I hereby charge thereon and give to her the sum of one shilling, and no more. It is my wish and will that my said niece D. should live and reside at Q. with my said wife." V. also bequeathed to a brother and sister of D. an annuity of £100 per annum, directing that it should be payable out of certain lands and at certain times. At V.'s death, D. was 19 years of age, and unmarried. A petition having been presented by her for the purpose of enforcing payment of interest upon the £3000 by way of maintenance—Held, that she was not entitled to interest upon that sum.—Bourke v. Kane, 7 I. Jur. 169. (C.)

4. Trustees under a will were thereby directed to pay a legacy to an infant legatee when she attained 25; and in the meantime to pay at their discretion for her support and education such portions of the interest as they thought fit: such interest to be paid to the infant's mother on her sole receipt. The legatee, after attaining 21, ceased to reside with her mother, and the Court ordered the dividends to be paid to the legatee herself thenceforward.—Campbell v. De Verdon, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 29. (R.)

5. V. bequeathed one-half of the interest of a sum to A. and B., and the other half to C. and D., during their natural life, and after the death of A., B., C., and D., he bequeathed the principal to E., and appointed residuary legatees. A. died. Then B. died, leaving C. and D. surviving. Held, that no part of the principal and interest went to E. during the life of C. and D.

That the executrix of B., and not the residuary legatees, was entitled to the interest of one-half during the lives of C. and D.—Gray v. Robinson, 11 I. C. R. 205; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 233. (R.)

6. The rule—that a gift of interest in the meantime will convert a legacy, otherwise contingent, into a vested one—applies to a limitation of a money fund by deed.—Mostyn v. Brunton, 17 I. C. R. 153. (R.)

XV. 20. Of the Surviving of Accruing Shares.

7. V. bequeathed to his four children, A., B., C., and D., £8000, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, but with benefit of survivorship, to be paid and payable to them respectively upon their attaining age, the interest thereof in the meantime, or so much as by his executors should be considered sufficient, to be applied to their maintenance and education; and left to B. and C. all the residue of his personal estate; and in case of their decease before 21, bequeathed the residue to A. and D., or the survivor of them, share and share alike; and in case of the decease of all his before-named children before 21, gave the residue, including his lapsed legacies, to his brother. By a codicil he gave to his children, E., F., G., and H. (born after the will) £4000, in equal shares, with benefit of survivorship, not only as to them, but as to the rest of the children named in the will, payable at 21; maintenance to be granted by the Court of Chancery. Held, that the share of G., who died under 21, went to all his surviving brothers and sisters, and not to his widow and child.

The cases as to the period to which survivorship is to be referred, reviewed and classified.—Forester v. Smith, 2 I. C. R. 70. (R.)

8. "Surviving daughter" must be taken to mean "other daughter."—Osborne v. Smith, 4 I. C. R. 58. (C.)

9. V. bequeathed all his property to his four daughters, share and share alike, the share of each to be given to her on her day of marriage, with consent; and directed that, if any of his daughters should happen to die unmarried, the share of said child to go, share and share alike, among his surviving daughters or daughter so surviving. Held, that "surviving daughters" meant "other daughters;" and that the children of a deceased daughter were entitled to a share of the legacy of a daughter who died unmarried.—In re Connellan's Trusts, 16 I. C. R. 524. (R.)

XV. 22. Respecting Limitations of Chattels, and of Chattel and Personal Interest.

1. Under a bequest of personality by a will executed after the 1 Vic., c. 26, to "A. and B., to be divided equally," with a request to A. that "should he die without lawful issue, the property which I bequeath him shall revert back to the sons of B.;" A. does not take an absolute interest in the moiety.—In re O'Beirne, 1 Jon. & L. 352; 7 I. E. R. 171. (C.)

XV. 23. Of Election. See ELECTION, II.

2. V., by will, directed that "if he had but one younger daughter she should have £15,000." This event took place; but she having survived her elder sister, subsequently became entitled to the estates of the testator. Held, that this circumstance did not deprive the younger of her portion as the sole younger child.—Byrne v. B., 5 I. Jur. 345. (C.)

3. V., having three sons, A., B., and C., devised property to A., and other leasehold property, together with all the stock-in-trade which should be in the premises, to B. and C. as tenants in common; and directed, that if those sons, or either of them died without leaving lawful issue surviving, the share of such son so dying, in the premises, and in the stock-in-trade which should be therein at the time of such decease, should go to and be divided, share and share alike, between such of those sons as should be then living, as tenants in common. B. and C. carried on the trade after V.'s death. B. died without issue, leaving A. and C. surviving. Held, that no case of election arose, there being no condition attached to the bequest, that the stock on the premises, at the death of either of the sons, should be subject to the bequest. A. therefore was only entitled to a moiety of the stock-in-trade at V.'s death.—Thornton v. T., 11 I. C. R. 474; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 95. (R.)

4. V., by marriage settlement conveyed real and personal property therein specified, and all the real and personal property of which he was then, or might die, seized or possessed, on trust, if the petitioner, his intended wife, should survive him, to raise £400 for her. V., by will, bequeathed a considerable portion of the real and personal property specifically mentioned in his settlement, to his wife, for life, with remainders over. He directed other portions of his property to be sold, and the proceeds invested for the benefit of his wife for life, with remainders over; and constituted F. his residuary legatee. V. died, leaving his wife surviving. Held, that she was bound to elect between the £400 provided by her settlement, and the benefits conferred by the will.—Heazle v. Fitzmaurice, 13 I. C. R. 481. (C.)

5. Two judgments, and a policy of insurance, amounting together to £3084. 12s. 4d., were assigned by marriage settlement in trust for the wife of V., who received the amount of the policy. By will, V. confirmed the settlement, and bequeathed specified funds and moneys upon trust to pay his wife the £3084. 12s. 4d., "same being the amount secured by certain judgments in said settlement mentioned: viz., a judgment against G. for the principal sum of £1200; and two other judgments against the said G. and W. for the principal sum of £500; and the amount of a policy of insurance for the sum of £1500, late Irish currency (equivalent to the sum of £1384. 12s. 4d. of the present currency), said sums making together the sum of £3084. 12s. 4d., which has been received by me." Held, that the wife was not entitled to the legacy and the sums secured by the judgments and policy; but must elect.—Cooke v. Franklin, 16 I. C. R. 469. (R.)

6. In 1804, W. conveyed premises of which he was seized in two several streets in D. to the Commissioners of Wide Streets, for £10,579, on which they were to pay W. interest at £5 per cent., equal to £528 a-year until the reconveyance hereinafter mentioned. They covenanted that they, so soon as any of their ground should be set, so that the rent payable thereout to the Commissioners should be sufficient for the payment of the said annual sum of £528, would grant and convey unto W., his heirs and assigns, so much of the ground so to be demised, and the rents and reversions incident thereto, as should amount to that annual sum. In 1818, W. devised "all the rest, residue and remainder of" his "property, real, freehold, and personal"—the personality amounted to £100,000—"which I shall die possessed of or entitled to," to his two sons, V. and J., and their heirs, &c., in equal shares. In 1823, the Commissioners, pursuant to the covenant, conveyed premises amounting in yearly value to £528, to W., his heirs, &c. In 1826, W. died, leaving V. and J. surviving. Held, that since the will was made before the Wills Act, the real estates in those reconveyed premises were not operated upon by the will; and that, respecting them, W. died intestate.

That the heir-at-law was bound to elect whether he would take under, or against the will.—Sweetman v. S., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 313. (C.)—[See Sweetman v. S., Ir. Rep., 2 Eq., 141. (V.C.)]

XV. 24. a. Rights of Residuary Legatee.

7. V. seized of an estate pur autre vie, and possessed of personal property to the amount of about £4500, bequeathed "the sum of £1500, the other part of the £4500, together with any further property," in trust for the use of his father, to be disposed of by him, share and share alike, as he by deed or will should appoint among V.'s brothers, H. and J., and the daughter or daughters of his sister E. The will contained a residuary clause in these words: "As to the rest, residue, and remainder of my worldly estate and fortune, not heretofore and hereby disposed of, in trust to the use of my affectionate father, J. C., and his heirs, executors, and administrators for ever." Held, that the estate pur autre vie passed under this residuary clause, and not under the words "any further property," upon the true construction of the entire will.—Acheson v. Fair, 8 Dr. & War. 512; 2 Con. & L. 208. (C.)

1. The testator bequeathed all his moneys in government stock, and all his other moneys, on trust to sell so much of the stock as should be sufficient to pay the following legacies. He then bequeathed legacies, and directed that his trustees should expend all the residue of his government stock and other moneys which he should die possessed of, after payment of his legacies, debts, &c., in land. Held, a gift out of the general residue, and that the legatees should not abate in favour of the devisee of the land to be purchased.—Jackson v. Hamilton, 9 I. E. R. 430; 3 Jon. & L. 702. (C.)

2. A testatrix who died possessed of a mortgage in freehold lands, after reciting that she was possessed of several sums lent to several persons, and charged on freehold and other lands, gave and devised them to D. and O., upon trusts; and, after several primary and specific legacies, proceeded thus:—"I leave all the rest, residue and remainder of my property, of what nature and kind soever I may die possessed of, to the said O., in trust for the children of W." Held, that the legal estate in the mortgaged premises passed to D. and O.—Dorcas v. Doherty, 1 I. Jur. 220. (E.E.)

3. A bequest of "all my houses, farming stock, carriages, plate, furniture, rent, and arrears of rent due to me at my decease, and all the residue of my real and personal estate not hereinbefore specifically bequeathed," is a residuary bequest.—Osborne v. O., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 219. (C.)

4. V., seized of premises subject to a head rent, by deed conveyed a portion of them to trustees, to collect the rents and apply them to B.'s use; but gave no directions regarding the payment of their proportion of the head rent. V., by will, devised the residue to C., "subject to the payment of the head rent and renewal fines." Held, that the conveyed portion was relieved from contribution, and C. must pay the whole head rent.—Carolin v. Hewson, 5 I. Jur. 328. (C.)

5. V. devised her estates of M. and C. to A. upon trust to sell, and out of the produce pay a legacy, and pay the residue to B. She also specifically devised other real estates, and appointed C. her residuary legatee and devisee. The will contained this clause: "And in case such residue should prove insufficient for the purpose aforesaid, then and in such case it is ordered and directed that the said deficiency should be paid out of the said lands of M. and C." V., by will specifically devised other lands, with legacies charged thereon, some exclusively, others generally. By codicil she bequeathed to D. a legacy of £2000, charged as well on her real as on her personal estate. Held, that the real estate specifically devised was not subject to the latter; and that the price of M. and C. was only bound to make good any deficiency of the residue to answer the debts and legacies bequeathed by the will itself, but was not charged with the legacy of £2000 created by the codicil.—Dyer v. Bessonet, 7 I. Jur. 162. (M.O.)

6. V., seized for lives renewable for ever of the reversion expectant on a term of 99 years in G., by deed, dated 16th March 1797, settled his interest in G. upon W. for life; with remainders over; with the ultimate reversion to himself in fee. On the 20th May 1797, V., by will, devised "whatever residue might remain of his fortune undisposed of by his will" equally amongst all his children, sons and daughters. V., by codicil, in 1802, reciting that he had intended to divide the residue of his fortune between his wife and all his children, but that having since considered that it would be "great ease" to his wife to leave his children specific sums, instead of their respective shares of the residue of his fortune, he thereby bequeathed to his children specific sums, "in lieu and stead of all residue of his fortune;" and, after payment thereof, left and bequeathed the rest and remainder of all such residue to his wife. All the limitations in the settlement of 1797, prior to V.'s reversion, were exhausted after the death of V. Held, that V.'s interest in G. passed by the residuary devise in the codicil. The word "fortune" in a devise prima facie includes both real and personal property.—Spearing v. Hawkes, 6 I. C. R. 297; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 406. (C.A.)

7. V., having a general power of appointment over a fund which was settled on her husband for life, by will bequeathed several legacies thereout, and the remainder or residue of the fund, share and share alike, to her sisters; and, as to "any other" residue of moneys or property not specified or disposed of, directed it to be given, share and share alike, to her then surviving sisters who might be living when her will and the bequests therein might become available. One sister died in V.'s life, who died before her husband. Held, that the lapsed share of a deceased sister passed under the general residuary clause to the surviving sisters.

That those sisters only who survived the husband took under the general residuary clause.—Hickson v. Wolfe, 9 I. C. R. 144. (C.A.)—[Affg. 7 I. C. R. 452. (R.)]

8. Lands, held for lives renewable for ever, were conveyed by marriage settlement to trustees, to the use of V. for life; remainder, subject to a jointure, upon trusts, to convey for the benefit of the issue of the marriage; in default of issue, as V. should appoint; in default of appointment, to the heirs of V. There being no issue, V., in 1854, devised the lands, stating that he held them for lives renewable for ever, to B. for life, subject to the rent and renewal fines payable thereout; and devised all the residue of his property to his executors C. and D. In 1856, one of the lives in the original lease subsisting, a f.-f. grant of the lands was made to V. under the Ren. Lease. Con. Act., subject to a rent; and in 1857 V. purchased and obtained a conveyance of the f.-f. rent. Held, that the devise of the lands to B. was not affected by the f.-f. grant.

That the rent was not merged or extinguished, and passed under the residuary devise to C. and D.—Dixon v. Rowan, 9 I. C. R. 365. (R.)

1. V., after giving many pecuniary and some specific bequests, proceeded:—"The remainder of my property I leave to my sister, S.;" then, after a few legacies, "I appoint my two sisters, S. and G., my executrixes and residuary legatees of this my last will." Held, that the gift of the remainder of her property to S. was not revoked, and that the appointment of S. and G. residuary legatees only gave them any legacies which had lapsed.—In re Jessop, 11 I. C. R. 424. (C.)

2. A testator bequeathed pecuniary legacies to each of his children, some of whom were minors; and the residue of his property, after payment of all his just debts, &c., and the several legacies bequeathed by his will, to be equally divided between all his sons and daughters; and directed that the "interest of the legacies" thereby given to such of his children as should not be of age at the time of his decease, should be paid to his wife, to be applied by her for and towards their maintenance and education. Held, that the interest of the respective shares of the residue, as well as that of the pecuniary legacies, was applicable to the maintenance of the minor children.—Guinness v. G., 14 I. C. R. 218; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (R.)

3. V. bequeathed whatever money he should die possessed of to his brother, J.; and, after several other bequests, bequeathed all the residue of his property not theretofore disposed of to his nephew, who was appointed residuary legatee.

Part of the money of which V. died possessed was secured by mortgage or charges on land; and part in government stock. Held, that, while the sums secured by mortgage, as also arrears of rent and rentcharge, interest, and dividends on consols and stock, passed under the word "money" to J.; the sums invested in consols and stock did not pass thereunder, but went to the residuary legatee.—Hewitt v. Bredin, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 85. (C.)—[Affid. ibid, 265. (C.A.)]

5. V. devised his real and personal estate to his wife E. and her heirs, in full confidence that she would pay thereout specified legacies to which the real estate was subject, and clear it from all incumbrances:—His "intention being, to give her as full a power and as absolute a dominion over my real and personal estate for that purpose, as I have myself," and to dispose of same amongst their children. In consideration of a fine, E. demised part of the premises to R., under whom ptf. claimed, for three lives renewable for ever; and died, having devised the residue of her real and personal estate to her only child, W., and appointed him executor. There was not any evidence whether E. had applied the fine in disencumbering the estate; but W. never alleged that E. had misapplied the money. On a bill for a renewal against deft. claiming under W.; Held, that the power enabled E. to raise the money to disencumber the estate by taking fines on leases for lives renewable for ever; and that, as against W. and deft., it must be taken that the fine had been properly applied. The deft. could not refuse to renew; for, if he did, he would render E.'s personal estate, bequeathed to W., liable to compensate ptf. for breach of the covenant to renew. —Lewis v. Swift, 1 Jones, 422. (E.E.)

1. In 1772, V. devised to trustees, and their survivor and his heirs, all his real and personal estate, on trust to pay an annuity to his daughter A.; the residue of the rents to be applied in paying his debts; after her death, in trust to permit the second son of A., by J. her husband, afterwards Earl of O., and the heirs male of his body, to receive the same in preference to her eldest son; it being V.'s meaning that such second son "do take and be preferred, &c., until he shall become an eldest son, and so shall each and every second and younger son or sons take place and enjoy the said estates according to seniority, &c., and the heirs male of the body of such second son. In default of such issue, the estates were to go to the use of the daughters of A.; as tenants in common in tail, &c., with ultimate remainder to V.'s trustee in fee. A. had four sons by J.; namely, Walter, John, James, and Charles. All of them were born during V.'s life. John was the second son living at the date of the will, and at V.'s death. In 1793, John joined A. and J. in a recovery of the W. estates so devised by V., and executed a deed declaring the uses to A. for life; remainder to John for life; remainder to John's sons in tail; remainder successively to James and Charles for life, and their respective issue in tale male. The deed contained a proviso for shifting those estates from John to James, and from James to Charles, if the O. estates of J. came to John or James. In 1796, John died. In 1795, J. had died, whereupon Walter had become entitled to, and had suffered recoveries of the O. estates. He became Marquis of O., and died in 1822. James then became Marquis. A. died in 1830. In 1834, James filed his bill against Charles, the present ptf., and the heir of the surviving trustee, claiming the W. estates as tenant in tail, under the will, or as tenant for life, with remainder to his eldest son in tail male, under the deed of 1793. Charles answered the bill. Issue had been joined, and publication passed, when the ptf. died. In 1838, the present ptf. filed his bill against Charles and his three sons, setting out all the charges contained in the former bill, and the several proceedings had thereon, and claiming to be entitled to the W. estates, either as issue in tail under the will, or as tenant in tail under the deed of 1793, and the recoveries. The bill stated that Charles and his sons claimed some interest in those estates, and in the subject matter of this suit, and in that respect were necessary parties. It prayed that ptf. might have the benefit of the former proceedings, &c., and that the trusts of the will might be carried into execution, &c. Charles's three sons demurred to the bill for want of equity. No grounds were assigned on the record. At the bar, one cause of demurrer was—that ptf. showed no title to the W. estates. Held, that A. did not take any estate under the will; that the devise, to her second son and the heirs male of his body, was an executory devise to such son as should answer that description at her death; and, therefore, that the recoveries suffered in 1793 and 1795 were bad for want of a tenant for the præcipe, so as to bar the remainders over limited by the will, even supposing that on John's death James took an estate tail by way of executory devise.

That the limitation to the trustees and their survivor, and his heirs, vested in them the legal estate in fee.—Ormonde v. Wandesforde, 1 I. E. R. 238. (R.)

XV. 27. d. Rights, Duties, &c., of Tenant for Life and Remainderman.

[See ESTATE—INTERMEDIATE PROFITS.]

2. Testator devised his real estate to the use of trustees, for a term of years, upon trust, that if his personal estate proved insufficient to pay his debts and legacies, the trustees should, after the decease of his wife, by sale or mortgage, raise such sums as should suffice to discharge his legacies, for the discharge whereof his personal estate should prove insufficient; subject thereto he devised the estates to his issue; and for want of issue living at the time of his decease, to his wife for life, remainder to the use of E. for life, remainder to the first and other sons of E., in tail male. He died without issue. Held, that the tenant for life should pay the interest on the deficiency, to be ascertained either within a reasonable time after the death of the testator, or to be ascertained by the actual result of the account; and that the estate was to bear the capital only of the deficiency. And that if the personal estate was got in in sums composed partly of capital money, and partly of interest, the interest should be applied in payment of the interest on the legacies, and the capital should be attributable to the capital of the legacies, in case of the term.—Cooté v. Lord Miltown, 1 Jon. & L. 501; 7 I. E. R. 391. (C.)

XV. 27. e. Rights, Duties, &c., of Heir-at-law and Devisee.

[As to Payment of Mortgage by the Heir-at-law, see 17 & 18 Vic., c. 113.]

3. Devise of real estate to W. and his heirs, upon trust to receive the rents and profits, and apply them in discharge of the testator's debts and legacies, and after payment thereof to convey a portion of that real estate to testator's brother, R., for life, and the residue thereof, and the part so devised to R., after his decease, to such of the sons of W. as should at his decease be his second son, for life; remainder to the first and other sons of such second son in tail male; remainder to the third, fourth, and other sons of W. successively, in strict settlement. Testator appointed W. his residuary legatee. The debts and legacies were all paid, and R. died in the life of W. Held, that the heir-at-law of the testator was entitled to the rents and profits of the real estate until the death of W. as undisposed of realty.—Wills v. W., 1 Dr. & War. 489; 4 I. E. R. 53. (C.)

1. The proviso at the end of the 17 & 18 Vic., c. 113, that it shall not affect the rights of any person claiming under any deed or document made before the 1st of Jan. 1855, does not save a right to the heir to be exonerated from the mortgage debt out of the personal estate bequeathed to a legatee by a will made before that date.

In 1834, V., by will, devised to B. all his right and title to, and interest in certain real estate; and also devised and bequeathed to B. all his personal property, together with all other real, freehold, and chattel property of every nature and kind whatsoever of which he might at the time of his death be seized or possessed; and appointed C. his executor. After making his will, V. granted mortgages, for the purpose of securing which he executed a disentailing deed, which was held to be, as to the real estate, a revocation of the will; and died in 1856.

Quære—Whether the bequest of the personal estate was specific, so as to exonerate it from the mortgage debts?

Held, that the 17 & 18 Vic., c. 113, applied; and that the heir was not, as against the legatee of the personal estate, entitled to be exonerated from the mortgage.—Power v. P., 8 I. C. R. 340. (R.)

XV. 28. Of Powers: their Execution: by whom: of the Estates created under Powers.

2. By marriage settlement of 1773, specified estates were limited to V.'s sons in such shares as he should appoint by will; in default of appointment, to them in fee, as tenants in common. V., having three sons, B., C., and D., by will appointed all the lands to B. for life; remainder to B.'s first and other sons in tail; remainder to C. for life, with limitations to his issue; and gave other valuable properties to C. and D., and appointed D. his residuary devisee. Held, a bad execution of the power.

B., C., and D., entered into possession of the estates devised to them. In 1802, B. settled the lands to his own use for life; remainder to his sons as he should appoint, &c. In 1817, B., C., and D., executed a deed whereby, after reciting doubts touching the validity of V.'s appointment to B., and that C. and D. had elected to abide thereby; and had accepted, enjoyed, and elected to abide by the lands devised to them; and had agreed to confirm V.'s will; C. and D., in order to confirm the uses of the settlement of 1802, released all their right under the settlement of 1773 to the uses of the settlement of 1802. Held, that the settlement of 1802 was not an election to take under the will, since its limitations did not accord with those in the will; and that the deed of 1817 ratified the appointment so far only as it was an exclusive appointment, and then confirmed the limitations in the settlement of 1802.—Beere v. Prendergast, Hay. & J. 384. (E.E.)

3. It is clear and settled law of the land, that a gift in default of appointment gives vested interests to all the objects of the power, subject to be divested by its exercise.—Heron v. Stokes, 4 I. E. R. 285. (C.)

4. V., having devised all his estates to three trustees, whom he named his executors, and having charged the estates with various annuities and pecuniary legacies, thus concluded: "I give, devise, and bequeath unto my said trustees, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike, all the rest, residue, and remainder of my property not herein disposed of, to answer any contingency that may arise or happen with respect to the trusts of this my will, or in case of non-payment of my rents, as also to answer the several legacies and bequests herein mentioned, and to pay the expense of agency."

By codicil, V. altered the bequests of the annuities given by the will, and thus proceeded: "I leave my brother-in-law, P. (one of the trustees named in the will), residuary legatee to all my property; and I hereby empower him to keep clerks, agents, &c., in any manner he thinks proper, and also to fee one of the first lawyers upon any question he may think fit to consult for advice, and to do all other acts he may think proper, with or without the consent of my other trustees or executors." Held, that all V.'s real estate, not previously disposed of, passed to P.; and that he took the beneficial interest therein.—Warren v. Newton, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 464. (C.)

5. V. having power to give a fund to all and every her child or children, and to the exclusion of any one or more of them, in such shares and at such times as she should appoint, by will, reciting that her daughter had gone into a convent, bequeathed £1000, part of the fund, if her daughter should change her mind and return to her family and friends, in trust to pay the interest to her for life, remainder to her children, if any; and in case of her not leaving the convent or not leaving issue, the £1000 to go to V.'s other children. The daughter continued in the convent. Held, a gift on a contingency authorised by the power, and that the daughter was not entitled to the interest or any part of it as unappointed, but that it went with the principal, which should be invested, with liberty to the legatees in remainder to apply for it on her death.

By will, made under a power, personal property was given to such children as the testatrix should have living at her death, and in default of such issue over; and other personal property was bequeathed to C., wife of M., for her separate use; and if she died without issue by her present husband, or any other husband she might thereafter take, then to other persons. Held, that C. took the money absolutely, for her separate use.—Caulfield v. Maguire, 8 I. E. R. 164; 2 Jon. & L. 141. (C.)

1. Estates were settled to uses, with a remainder in fee to V., subject to a power of revocation. Under the power they were resettled to other uses, with a remainder in fee to V., subject to a proviso, under which this settlement became ultimately defeated. V. made a will before 1838, devising the estates, and they were afterwards settled, reserving the remainder in fee to V. Held, that the will was inoperative, as the old remainder did not subsist, and the estates went under the latter deed to V.'s heir-at-law.

A will of lands, made before 1838, is entirely revoked by an alteration in the estate, though made after 1838.—Lord Langford v. Little, 8 I. E. R. 546; 2 Jon. & L. 618. (C.)

2. V. having by will, in 1837, bequeathed legacies, proceeded as follows:—"To my son, I give, devise, and bequeath all my lands and tenements, rights and credits, subject to the legacies aforesaid and my debts, the remainder of my property to be disposed of by him to and amongst his children in such shares and proportions as he shall think proper." The words in italics were inserted by interlineation. By the last clause in the will the interlineations, as well as the original text, were declared to be in V.'s handwriting. In 1839 V. added a codicil, by which he merely made a declaration with reference to one of the legacies. In 1845 the son died, in V.'s life, and without having made any appointment amongst his children. V. having died—Held, that the will gave the son a power, coupled with a trust, and that accordingly his children were entitled as well to V.'s real as to his personal estate, in equal shares.

Semble—V.'s general personal estate would have passed under the words "rights and credits" alone, even if the interlineations had not been made.

The effect of interlineations considered.—Hutchinson v. H., 18 I. E. R. 332. (C.)

3. £8000 were charged on the lands of K., by marriage settlement, as portions for children, to be divided between them in such parts, &c., and to vest and be paid to them respectively at and upon such age, days, or times, and to be subject to such charges, provisos, and limitations (such charges or limitations being for the benefit of some or one of them), and in such manner as V., the younger, by any deed or deeds, instrument or instruments, in writing, or by will should direct or appoint; in default of appointment, to be equally divided between or among such children, share and share alike; the shares of sons to be paid at 21, and the shares of daughters at 21 or marriage. V. bequeathed a legacy of £2000 to his wife, and the interest of the remainder of the money of which he might die possessed, for her own use, and for the maintenance and education of his two daughters; and charged K. with £8000, which, together with the residue of his fortune he wished to be divided in equal shares between his two daughters; and left the residue of his fortune in money, after paying the £2000 to his wife, together with the £8000 charged upon K., to be equally divided between them; the entire to belong to either of his daughters, should the other not arrive at the age of 18 years. Held, that the will operated as an execution of the power under the settlement, and that the portions of the daughters, vested at M.'s death, and bore interest from that date.—Murphy v. M., 3 I. C. R. 95; 4 I. Jur. 273. (C.)

4. A tenant for life of estates, with power to appoint them to his issue male, and to charge a sum for the benefit of his younger children, on the marriage of his third son, executed a bond and warrant of attorney, on which judgment was entered for a sum as provision for him. On the marriage of a daughter, he made a provision for her, by way of annuity charged on one of the settled estates. He afterwards, by will, devised some of the estates to his eldest son, subject to all his debts and incumbrances of every description, and subject to charges made by his will in favour of his other children. He then charged sums in favour of others of his children, and devised to his fifth son an estate, freed and exonerated from all his debts, charges, and legacies; his will being, that if any creditor should recover any demand from the lands so devised to his fifth son, the latter should be recouped by other estates devised to his eldest son; and stated that he had avoided mentioning his married children, as he had already provided for them, by bond or otherwise, at their respective marriages, fully and adequately to the provisions made thereby for his other children. The testator did not appear to have left any other property but that which was the subject of his power. Held, by the majority of the Council, that the charge of the judgment debt to the third son, by the will, operated as an execution of the power to charge for younger children.

That an instrument should operate as an execution of a power, it is not necessary that the donee should intend to execute the power, or that he should have it in contemplation. It is sufficient if the act which he intends to do, or the benefit which he intends to confer, cannot be done or conferred otherwise than by an execution of the power.—In re Morgan, 7 I. C. R. 18. (P.C.)

5. A fund was by marriage settlement vested in trust, in the first place to pay the interest to the husband for life, after his death to the wife if she survived him, for life; after the death of both, to assign the sum to and amongst the issue of the intended marriage, in such shares and at such times as the husband should by will or deed appoint; in default of appointment, to assign the sum to and amongst the issue of the marriage, share and share alike; but if no issue of the marriage living at the decease of the survivor of the husband and wife, then to assign the sum to the husband his executors, &c. There were four children of the marriage. Three died unmarried and without issue, in the husband's lifetime; one of them having attained 21, the others under age. The husband (who survived his wife), while two of the children were alive, appointed by deed a part of the fund to a son who alone survived him; and directed that the remainder should go and be held in all respects as the entire fund would have gone if no appointment had been made. Held, that the word "issue" was not confined to children, but meant all descendants.

That the issue took vested interests in equal shares on their births, subject to the amount of the shares being varied by the husband's appointment, and subject to his right to appoint in favour of surviving issue, to the exclusion of the representatives of the issue who had predeceased the appointment; and therefore that the unappointed part of the fund was devisable equally amongst a son who survived the father and the representatives of three children who died in the lifetime of the father, whether they had attained 21 or not.—In re Howard's Trusts, 7 I. C. R. 344. (R.)

1. By marriage settlement of L., a fund was vested upon trust, after the decease of L., and his intended wife, for the children of the marriage, as L. should appoint; in default of appointment, equally. There was a hotchpot clause, but no advancement clause.

The fund produced £4700, and was, with £300 belonging to L., invested on mortgage. There were five children. In 1844, on the marriage of A., one of these children, L. settled £1000 of his own upon A., her husband, and issue. In 1845, L., by will, appointed and bequeathed the £5000 invested upon mortgage, as to £1000 to J., another of his daughters, and as to the residue among his remaining children excepting A. By the will he also bequeathed £1200 to the trustees of A.'s settlement, for her benefit. In 1848, L., on the marriage of J., gave £1000 of his own, and secured £1200 upon trusts for J., her husband and issue. By a subsequent codicil, L. revoked the appointment and bequests made to J., by his will, "in consequence of what he had paid and secured on her marriage." Held, that the sum appointed to J., and revoked by the codicil, was to go as in default of appointment.

That A. and J. were not excluded from sharing in that sum.

That L. could not be taken to be a purchaser of the shares of A. and J., in the unappointed part of the settled fund.

Folkes v. Western, 9 Ves. 456, approved of.—Noblett v. Litchfield, 7 I. C. R. 575; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 158. (C.)

2. V. bequeathed all his estate, real and personal, in trust to pay the rents and dividends to his wife for her life; and directed that after her death his real and personal estate, and all moneys which might have been got in or might be still due and owing, should go to and be paid in such manner as he should by a codicil or codicils direct; in default of such direction, to his wife, as his residuary devisee and legatee. By codicil he left an annuity of £600 to W. for life, and if W. married and had children, then the £600 per annum was to go to them in what manner W. might think proper; but should he not leave any issue, then the £600 per annum to go to E. and his family, to be so divided as E. might think proper. Held, that W. had power to dispose of it among his children as a perpetual annuity; and that there was a trust for them in default of appointment.—Warren v. Wright, 12 I. C. R. 401. (R.)

3. There is no rule of law more sacred than this, that no limitation will be construed to be a springing use, when it can take effect as a contingent remainder. This is one of the settled landmarks of the law.—Cole v. Sewell, 2 Con. & L. 359; 4 Dr. & War. 1; 5 I. E. R. 66. (C.)

4. V. devised to his son, T., all his lands and tenements, rights, and credits, subject to legacies and debts; the "remainder" of his property to be disposed of by T. among his children, in such shares and proportions as he should think proper. T. died in V.'s life, without making any disposition of the property. T.'s children filed a bill to ascertain their rights under V.'s will. Held, that "remainder" referred to real and personal estate.—Hutchinson v. H., 2 I. Jur. 81. (C.)

5. Articles of agreement provided that the interest of a fund, vested in trustees, should be paid to Lady C. for life; after her death, the principal to go amongst the then unmarried children of herself and her husband, as the husband should by deed or will appoint; in default of appointment, equally among the children living at the death of the husband. The fund was vested in lands pursuant to a trust in the articles; and the husband by will appointed the lands among his four sons, as follows:—A. to John, B. to George, C. to Henry, D. to Nelson, to go to them immediately from and after the decease of Lady C.; with a clause of survivorship among the brothers, if any of them should die before they became respectively entitled thereto. The testator, by two subsequent deeds of appointment, irrevocably appointed A. to John, and C. (before given by the will to Henry) to George; and by a codicil, referring to the two deeds of appointment, revoked the appointment in the will contained of C. to Henry, and, "instead thereof," appointed to him B. Henry died after the testator, but before the death of Lady C.; the tenant for life having by will devised C. upon charitable trusts. Held, that the period for the vesting of the estates was the time of the death of the testator, and not of the death of the tenant for life, and, consequently, that the devise by Henry was good.—Commrs. of Ch. Don. v. Cotter, 1 Dr. & War. 498; 2 I. E. R. 196. (C.)—[Affg., the decree; 2 Dr. & Wal. 615.]

1. V. devised all his "part of the lands of A., being lately part of the estate of J. K.," purchased by him under a decree of the Court of Ch., to his son M., "during his natural life, and no longer, unless it shall so happen that my said son shall survive his present wife and marry a second or other wife, by whom he shall have lawful issue; and then and in that case" he devised his "said part of said lands, upon the death of my said son leaving issue male of such second or other marriage, to such issue male, share and share alike; and for want of issue male, to the issue female of such second or other marriage, share and share alike; and, in case it shall so happen that my said son shall die without leaving any such issue of such second or other marriage," he devised the lands to his grandsons. Held, that M. took for life; remainder to the issue of a second or other marriage, in fee, as tenants in common; and that the grandsons were to take only on the contingency of the devise to the issue not taking effect.

The rule in Shelley's case, as applicable to wills, considered and explained; and the cases on the construction of "issue" and "heirs" in testamentary gifts, reviewed.—Montgomery v. M., 8 I. E. R. 740; 3 Jon. & L. 47. (C.)

2. Bequest of portion of a chattel real to "my son J.; and if J. dies without a lawful male heir, his part of the lands falls to his brother R. I also order that the part of the lands which I bequeath to my son J. is to fall to his youngest son, without any incumbrance." Held, that J. did not take an absolute interest in his portion of the lands, and that the gift over to A. was not too remote.—Dodds v. D., 10 I. C. R. 476; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 857. (C.)—[Affd., 11 I. C. R. 374; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 75. (C.A.)]

3. V. by will, in 1806, bequeathed a chattel lease to R. and the heirs of his body; and, if R. died without issue, V. gave it to C. and the heirs of his body; and, if both R. and C. died without issue, V. gave the lease to J. and the heirs of his body. He then directed that if R. and C. died without issue in the life of J., "whereby J. would become entitled to the said premises," £2000, bequeathed to J., should be paid to other persons; and that if R., C., and J. all died without issue, or if R. and C. died without issue in the life of J., and he refused to pay the £2000, if he had received it under the will, then, and in either of such cases, V. gave the lease to G. and the heirs of his body. V. then directed that if, "by either of the events aforesaid happening in the lifetime of G., he should become entitled to the lease," then G. should pay £2000 bequeathed to him to other persons; and if R., C., and J. died without issue in the life of G., and he refused or neglected to pay the £2000, then, and in either of such cases, V. gave the lease to T. and the heirs of his body; and if, "by either of the events last mentioned happening in the lifetime of T., he should become entitled to the lease," then T. was to pay over £2000 to certain persons.

R., C., and J. all died without having a child, and in the life of G. T. and G. did not pay over the £2000. Held, that the bequest to T. was too remote, and did not entitle him to the lease.

V. then gave other lands to X. and the heirs of his body; and in case he died "without issue living at the time of his death," then V. gave those lands to R. and the heirs of his body, and to C. and the heirs of his body the first-named chattel lease; and if X. and R. should "die without leaving issue," then V. gave the second set of lands to C. and the lease to J. and the heirs of his body. V. then declared that if X., R., and J. should "die without issue," or if J., becoming entitled to the lease by the last bequest, should omit to pay over £2000 to the persons named, then V. gave the lease to G. and the heirs of his body, and directed that "if X., R., and C. should die without issue as aforesaid," then the second set of lands should go over to J. and the heirs of his body, and the lease should go to G. and the heirs of his body; and if J. and G. should respectively become entitled to the lands devised to them, in case of the deaths of X., R., and C. without issue, in the life of G., then G. was to pay £2000 bequeathed to him, over to certain persons; and if "X., R., C., and J. should die without issue as aforesaid," then V. gave to "G. and the heirs of his body the second set of lands; unto T. and the heirs of his body, and his several estates and interests in the leasehold lands." Held, that the words "die without issue" were to be read in all these bequests, "die without leaving issue;" that the word "and," in the last clause, might be transposed, and placed immediately before the words "unto T. and the heirs of his body," and that X., R., C., and J. having all died childless, T. was entitled to the lease.—[The Lord Justice of Appeal dissenting.]—Falkiner v. Hornidge, 8 I. C. R. 184. (C.A.)—[Affg. decision, 6 I. C. R. 551. (C.)]

4. Bequest to younger sons as tenants in common; and, if any of them should die before the distribution, not leaving any wife or children, his share to go to his next eldest brother, and so on to the youngest. The fifth son having died without leaving a wife or child, his share was held to go to the sixth.—Fitzgerald v. F., 12 I. C. R. 442; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 9. (C.)

XVI. CODICIL. See supra, VIII.

5. A will was dated before the change of currency made by the 6 G. 4, c. 79. A codicil, dated after that Act, Held, a republication of the will such that the legacies were deemed bequeathed in British currency, though the codicil merely appointed new executors. — Hamilton v. Carroll, 1 I. E. R. 175. (C.)

1. A codicil is never held to revoke a will further than is necessary to effectuate the testator's intentions. — Young v. Hassard, 1 Dr. & War. 688. (C.)

2. By will, reciting that the testator was entitled to a remainder in fee expectant on the death of his wife, he devised it, after her death, to his son, W., for life; after his death, to W.'s child or children; for default of such issue, to testator's own heirs. By codicil, he retracted the devise to W., and gave to his wife and grandchildren (issue of his son, J.) what he had originally bequeathed to W. Held, that the remainder in fee passed by the the codicil to the wife and grandchildren.

Semble—The codicil revoked the gift to W.'s children. — Madden v. Kirwan, 7 I. E. R. 570. (C.)

3. When a codicil contains an unbroken set of limitations irreconcilable with those in the will, and exhausting the fee, it is to be inferred that the testator intended to dispose of the whole fee by the codicil, though he had disposed of it otherwise by his will. — Daly v. D., 2 Jon. & L. 752. (C.) — [On re-hearing:—9 I. E. R. 508. (C.)]

WINDING-UP ACTS.

See JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.

4. P. and L., lessees of a mine, agreed to sell it to the Irish Consols Mining Company, and to accept, as the purchase-money, 10,000 shares in the company. By a secret agreement they were to re-transfer to the directors 5000 of the shares. B. was employed by P. to "rig the market." In return for his services, P. transferred to B. 175 shares, which B. stated to have been a free gift. Of these 175 shares, P. was a trustee of 50 for the company. B. immediately assigned all, except 25, of the shares for value. The affairs of the company were decreed to be wound up. B. was not made a contributory in respect of the 50 shares, though he was in respect of others. Held, that as B., being the voluntary assignee of the company's trustee, would be liable in a plenary suit in respect of those 50 shares, an order of the Master declaring him liable in respect of them should be affirmed.

Quere—Whether the Master had jurisdiction under the sections of the Winding-up Acts to make the order? — Ex parte Banks, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 85. (C.) — [Affg. Rolls decision, ibid. 44.]

5. In a Mining Co. conducted upon the cost-book principle, the cost-book rules contained no proviso entitling the directors to fees or payments; but they from time to time retained sums as remuneration for their personal services. At a general meeting of the company, accounts were submitted and passed. These accounts, under the head of "Cost and merchants' bills," included the amounts so retained by the directors. They were specifically entered in the cost-book of the company, and could have been discovered by any shareholder on reference to such book. Held, that the directors had no right to retain such sums in the absence of a special rule entitling them to remuneration; and that they were bound to repay same on the application of the official manager.

That, assuming the general meeting to have had the power of sanctioning such a retention by the directors, the accounts were not submitted to the general meeting in a form sufficiently open and unequivocal to bind them by its adoption.

Quere—Would such a general meeting, under any circumstances, have had the power of sanctioning the payment of the directors?

The directors who received the fees were held primarily liable to repay same; and the directors who signed the cheques for such payments, or who directed same, were held liable in the secondary degree. — Ex parte Lord Kinsale, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 216. (M.O.)

6. In a deed, the extensive and ordinary signification of the word "heirs" will be limited, when the intention of the parties is perfectly apparent. — Wall v. Wright, 1 Dr. & Wal. 1. (C.)

7. V., after bequeathing legacies to his relations, A., B., C., and D., and others for charitable purposes, proceeded thus in his will:—"To meet those I have £200 in the Bank of Ireland: the little matters of furniture will be sold. If anything shall remain, after all being paid, the Rev. Mr. G. will divide it amongst the poor." At his death, V. had not any such sum as £200 in the Bank of Ireland, but his property consisted of £1462. 2s. 8d. of £3½ per cent. stock, and £52 in cash. Held, that the general residue of

V.'s personal estate passed under the residuary clause.—Gaffney v. Hevey, 1 Dr. & Wal. 12. (C.)

1. Devise to "children, share and share alike." A first codicil appointed a guardian "during minority." Second codicil:—"In the event of the death of any of the children, their portions to be divided among the survivors, share and share alike." Held, that the phrase, "in the event of the death," &c., meant death during the minority.

In a will, the words, "in the event of the death of" the devisee are never construed to mean the event of a lapse by death before the testator's death, unless necessity requires that construction.—Montgomery v. M., 2 I. E. R. 161. (C.)

2. In my opinion the word "tenant" in the Tenantry Act, 19 & 20 G. 3, c. 30, means "tenant in possession;" and the word "assignee" means in that Act the same thing as if the legislature had said "assignee in possession." [Plunket, C.]—Smith v. Shannon, 3 I. E. R. 467. (C.)

3. The word "issue" in a will may be held to mean children, when such is the testator's manifest meaning.—Ridgeway v. Munkittrick, 1 Dr. & War. 84. (C.)

4. The Crown is not included in the words "all persons" in the first, or in the words "any person or persons" in the second sec. of the 8 G. 1, c. 4 (St. of Lim.).—Reg. v. Bayley, 4 I. E. R. 146, 147. (C.)

5. V. devised the lands in question to trustees, to A.'s use for life; remainder to the use of A.'s first and other sons; in default of such issue, over. Held, that the words "in default of such issue" did not enlarge by implication A.'s life estate.—Purcell v. P., 2 Dr. & War. 219, n. (C.)

6. Respecting the meaning of the words "for the time being"—See Smith v. Lord Dunsannon, 5 I. E. R. 96. (R.)

7. "Leave" construed "have," in a deed, to favour the vesting of portions.—Houston v. Barry, 5 I. E. R. 294. (E.E.)

8. The term "assignee," in the 11 Anne, c. 2, ss. 2, 4, applies to under-tenants, as well as to assignees, in that word's proper sense.—Malone v. Geraghty, 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 239; 2 Con. & L. 235. (C.)—[Affd.: 1 H. Lds. Cas. 81.]

9. The judgment in Doe v. Wainwright, 5 T. R. 427, lays down the abstract point, that "survivors" is to be construed "others."—Cole v. Sewell, 2 Con. & L. 362. See 4 Dr. & War. 1; 6 I. E. R. 66. (C.)

10. In ascertaining whether the words "die without issue," in a will posterior to the 1 Vic., c. 26, mean an indefinite failure of issue; a contrary intention, within the meaning of

sec. 29, is not to be inferred from the use of those very words.—In re O'Brien, 7 I. E. R. 171; 1 Jon. & L. 352. (C.)

11. Under a bequest of "money and securities for money," an I. O. U. in testator's possession, and made to him—Held, not to pass.—Barry v. Harding, 1 Jon. & L. 475-483. (C.)

12. The word "issue," in marriage articles, read "children."—Roche v. R., 2 Jon. & L. 561. (C.)—[See 7 I. E. R. 436.]

13. V., seized of real, and possessed of personal estate, devised a chattel interest to B., her executors, &c., and devised freehold estates and chattel interests to C., her heirs, &c., with a proviso; that, if either should die unmarried, or, being married, should die without issue, the bequests appointed for such of them so dying unmarried, or, being married, dying without issue, should go to the survivor, her heirs, &c. Held, that the words "without issue" meant an indefinite failure of issue, not issue living at the devisee's death.—O'Donohoe v. King, 8 I. E. R. 185. (E.E.)

14. Money in the hands of the salesmaster, whom the testator was in the habit of employing, is not "ready money" within the meaning of those words in a will.—Smith v. Butler, 9 I. E. R. 398; 3 Jon. & L. 565. (C.)

15. Neither the word "thereout," nor "paying," is requisite to make the payment of a legacy a condition so as to give the devisee the fee in lands charged with it.—Johnson v. Brady, 11 I. E. R. 386. (C.)

16. Under the 93rd G. O., the term "Vacation" is referable to the period when the Court is not sitting.—Anderson v. Mulvany, 1 I. Jur. 154. (R.)

17. A devise upon trust, "and in case my said son, M., shall leave no child or children him surviving, then upon trust to convey so much of my estate of X. as shall be worth or can be let for £130 as aforesaid, without prejudice as aforesaid, to my own right heirs for ever." M. died without issue. Held, that "right heirs" meant the person who was heir at the testator's death; not the person who was heir of the testator at the death of his son and heir, M., without issue.

Locke v. Southwood, 1 My. & Cr. 411, considered.—In re Mathews's Estate, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 47. (I.E.C.)

18. A plea of confession is not included within the meaning of the terms "warrant of attorney" or "cognovit" in the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 95, s. 2.—Gibbon v. Magan, 2 I. Jur. 60. (R.)

19. V. devised to his son T. all his lands and tenements, rights and credits, subject to legacies and debts; the remainder of his property to be disposed of by T. among his children, in such shares and proportions as he should think proper. T. died in V.'s life without making any disposition of the property. A bill having been filed by the children of T. to ascertain their rights, under the will of V., and a reference having been made; the Master found that by the will of V. a trust and power was vested in T.; and that no disposition being made by him, pursuant to the trust and power, all the children of T. became entitled to the real and personal property of V., subject to the legacies and debts. Held, that the word "remainder" referred to real and personal estate; and, on exceptions, the report of the Master was upheld.—Hutchinson v. H., 2 I. Jur. 81. (C.)

1. Semble—That the words "rights and credits," in a will, pass the testator's general personal estate.—Hutchinson v. H., 13 I. E. R. 332. (C.)

2. "Satisfaction" of counsel means reasonable satisfaction.—Gordon v. Mahony, 13 I. E. R. 383. (C.)

3. When there are debts affecting the inheritance, a creditor, having a judgment affecting the life estate, is not an "incumbrancer" within the I. E. Act, 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77; and is not entitled to present a petition to this Court to sell the inheritance.—In re the Earl of Glengall's Estate, 4 I. Jur. 65. (I.E.C.)

4. A prior mortgagee, having the legal estate, is not "an owner of land" within the 11th and 12th Orders, and may be served with notice under the 32nd Rule in the Master's office.—Leonard v. Hartwell, 4 I. Jur. 74. (R.)

5. A prior mortgagee, having the legal estate, is not an "owner of land" within the 11th and 12th Orders, and may be served with notice under the 32nd Rule in the Master's office.—Cleland v. Montgomery, 4 I. Jur. 90. (R.)

6. Bequest to testator's brother for life, then to that brother's wife for life; and, after their deaths, "to such of their children or issue as should survive them, to take and hold under the will; if more than one child, to take in equal shares; the issue of such children also to derive upon the death of their parents." One of testator's nephews predeceased his mother. Held, that that nephew's children did not take under the term "issue."—Draper v. D., 4 I. Jur. 221. (C.)

7. The word "insolvent," in a decree or deed, is to be construed in the ordinary sense of a person who is unable to pay his debts; not in the technical sense of one discharged as an insolvent debtor.—Caulfield v. Maguire, 5 I. C. R. 78. (R.)

8. The word "fortune," in a devise, prima facie includes both real and personal property.—Spearing v. Hawkes, 6 I. C. R. 297; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 406. (C.A.)

9. The word "effects" will comprise the entire personal estate of the testator, unless restrained by the context within narrower bounds.—Dunally v. D., 6 I. C. R. 540. (R.)

10. A bill was filed against A. and B., and referred to the Master to ascertain the rights of parties, and apportion the funds accordingly. He reported that in 1819 there remained due to ptf. in a previous cause, on foot of the demand therein decreed to them, a sum which, with post costs in said cause, amounted to a specified sum; and that, for payment thereof, with subsequent interest, the funds mentioned in the decree in the present cause, as then remaining in the Bank of Ireland to the credit of the previous cause, were applicable. Held, that the words "subsequent interest" did not apply to post costs.—In re Brownrigg's Estate, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 363. (I.E.C.)

11. V., seized of freehold estates, and possessed of chattels real, by will, directed his executors to make out an inventory of his effects, which were to be sold by auction; and that, if he died "possessed of any funded or other property," they should sell all for the benefit of his children. Held, that the word "property" passed the real estates.—Clibborn v. C., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 381. (C.)

12. V. devised lands to his son G. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; remainder to his daughters, tenants in common in tail; and, if either died without issue, then to his surviving daughter and the heirs of her body; in default of such issue to his right heirs for ever. Held, that the word "surviving" meant "other."—Smith v. Osborne, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (H.L.)—[S. c., 6 H. Lds. Cas. 375.]

13. The "memorandum" mentioned in Sugden's Act (7 & 8 Vic., c. 90), s. 2, must contain the names, place of abode, title, &c., of the ptf. in the original judgment.—In re Boate, 9 I. C. R. 524. (C.A.)

14. The words "Court of Chancery," in an Act of Parliament, do not per se refer to the Court of Ch. in Ireland.—In re M'Clintock, 10 I. C. R. 469; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 209. (C.)

15. In the Sub-letting Act, 6 G. 4, c. 29, s. 2, the word "void" means "voidable" only.—Strickland v. M'Nicholas, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 258. (C.)

16. The three months "within" which every appeal must be entered from the date of any decision or order, excludes the day on which the order is pronounced, and includes the day on which the appeal is entered.—Kennedy v. Cruise, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 11. (C.A.)

17. The word "vicarage"—Held, to include an improper curacy. [See this case at length; Title:—ECCLESIASTICAL PERSONS AND THINGS.]—Auchinleck v. Bishop of Ossory, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 205. (Court of Del.)

18. In the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 92, s. 68, the phrase "money subject to be invested in lands" means "money directed" to be so invested.—Smithwick v. S., 12 I. C. R. 181; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 282. (R.)

1. The word "officers," in the statutes authorising the Lord Lieutenant to appoint officers in district county lunatic asylums does not include a chaplain.—Nelligan v. Jones, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 39. (Consist.)

2. In gifts of personal estate, the word "survivor" may be taken as referring to the period of distribution. Regarding real estate it is not equally settled that it applies to the determination of the prior limitation. When that word is applied to a class of persons of whom individuals are named, its natural meaning is "the longest liver" of those named.—Taaffe v. Connée, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 229. (H. L.); 10 H. Lords Cas. 64.

3. The word "vest" prima facie means "come into possession;" not "accrue in point of interest."—Richardson v. Robertson, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 269. (H. L.)

4. The word "legacies," in a will—Held, to apply to a gift of the residue, which included real property.—In re Trusts of Guinness's Will, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (R.)

5. The words "survivors or survivor," in a will, read "others or other."—M. Blain v. Swanton, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 122. (C. A.)

6. V. bequeathed to his brother, J., whatever money he should die possessed of; and, after several other bequests, bequeathed all the residue of his property, not theretofore disposed of, to his nephew, who was appointed residuary legatee. Part of the money, of which V. died possessed, was secured by mortgage or charges on land; and part in government stock. Held, that while the sums secured by mortgage, as also arrears of rent and rentcharge, interest, and dividends on consols and stock, passed under the word "money" to J., the sums invested in consols and stock did not pass thereunder, but went to the residuary legatee.—Hewitt v. Bredin, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 85. (C.)—[Affirmed: ibid, 265. (C. A.)]

7. V., seized in fee of lands situated on both sides of a road, demised those on the west side for years; and covenanted, that he would not convert, or permit to be converted any portion of the ground opposite the demised premises, or any part thereof, or any dwelling-house or building to be erected thereon, for any purpose whatsoever, save and except and other than as a private dwelling-house, to be erected and built in the manner in the lease provided. Held, that the word "dwelling-house" included stables; and that the subsequent lessee (with notice of this covenant) of the opposite premises, who built a "dwelling-house" thereon, could not be restrained by injunction from building stables at its side, and fronting the premises demised by the first lease.—Smith v. Crowe, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 105. (C.)

8. In the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, the word "person" includes bodies corporate: e. g., a railway Co.—In re The Bagnalstown Ry. Co., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 156. (B.)—[Affirmed: ibid, 253. (C. A.)]

9. A codicil recited that the testatrix had in the Bank of Ireland "money not theretofore disposed of." By that codicil she bequeathed that sum to trustees, upon trust, to pay legacies. She had not any "money" in the Bank of Ireland, but possessed government "stock" sufficient to pay the legacies. Held, that they were payable out of her general assets, and in equal priority with other legacies bequeathed by the will and prior codicils.—Reilly v. Stoney, 16 I. C. R. 295. (R.)

10. V. bequeathed money to his two daughters, share and share alike, to be paid to them by his executors in twelve months after their respective marriages with the consent of his executors; and directed that his daughters should be paid a yearly sum, less than the interest of their shares, until their respective marriages as aforesaid; and that from their respective marriages each of them should be paid the full legal interest: until their respective marriages, the remainder of the interest on their fortunes was directed to go to V.'s son; and if V.'s daughters, or either of them, died before the age of 21 years or day of marriage, her share of the sum so bequeathed was directed to go to V.'s son, to whom the entire sum should go if both daughters died.

Semble—That the daughters' legacies did not vest until marriage.

Held, that "or" should be read "and;" and that therefore the legacies did not go over to the son on the death of his sisters unmarried, but remained undisposed of by the will, and divisible amongst V.'s next-of-kin.—In re Cantillon's Minors, 16 I. C. R. 301. (R.)

11. The word "said" applies to the immediate antecedent.—In re Willomier's Trusts, 16 I. C. R. 389. (R.)

12. "Surviving daughters," in a will, held to mean "other daughters."—In re Connellan's Trusts, 16 I. C. R. 524. (R.)

13. "Presently" held to mean "immediately," in a Scotch deed, which operated as a marriage.—In re Lockhart's Trusts; ex parte Lady Lockhart, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (R.)

14. V. devised his estates in several Irish counties (which he named), "and elsewhere in Ireland." Through the word "Sligo," one of the named counties, V. drew a line in ink, and initialed the alteration. The word remained quite legible. The attestation clause ran thus:—"In witness, &c., the word 'Sligo' being struck out before the execution, and initialed by me." Held, that "elsewhere in Ireland" meant "elsewhere in Ireland, except in Sligo," and that the estate in Sligo was not devised thereby.—Cooper v. Warre, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (C.)

1. By Lord Westbury:—"In the maxim, "Ignorantia juris haud excusat," the word "jus" has the sense of general law, or of private right, according to circumstances.—Cooper v. Phibbs, L. Rep. 2 H. L. 149.—[Rev.], s. c. 17 I. C. R. 73; 10 I. Jur. N. S. 239. (C.)]

THE FOLLOWING CASES WERE OMITTED FROM THEIR PROPER PLACES IN THE DIGEST:—

AGREEMENT, SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE OF. VIII. 2. b.—Vendor and Purchaser, IV. 3.

2. The particulars of a sale by auction described the subject as a plot of ground held for a term of 111 years from the 23rd of April 1853, subject to the annual rent of £5. One condition of sale was, that the vendor should deliver to the purchaser or his agent an abstract of title, and deduce a good title to the premises sold, down from the 23rd of April 1853 to the date of the sale: that the lessor's title should not be questioned, nor should the vendor be bound to go behind it: that compared copies of registry searches against the vendor's lessor should be handed to the purchaser; as also of judgments from June 1845 to June 1853, with a compared copy of his abstract of title, also common searches by the vendor, from the date of his lease to that of the sale, in the Registry and Judgment Offices, and not further or otherwise.

The plot of ground was part of two properties, held under two distinct leases, made in 1845 to the vendor's lessor. By those leases respectively rents of £31 and £9 were reserved. The interest sold was under a lease made on the 25th of July 1853, to the vendor of portions of both properties, and was subject to a rent of £5. Held, that the title was bad.

That the condition of sale was so ambiguous and uncertain as not to preclude the purchaser from objecting to the title.

That there had been, in the particulars of sale, a suppression of facts such as amounted to a misrepresentation, and disentitled the vendor to a decree for specific performance.—Geoghegan v. Connolly, 8 I. C. R. 598. (R.)

DEBTOR AND CREDITOR, VIII. — PRACTICE, CREDITOR'S SUIT.

3. There was in Court a clear surplus fund, which had been produced by a sale under a decree. On the motion of a subsequent judgment creditor, the Court granted a reference to the Remembrancer to enquire and report who was entitled to the surplus, and whether the applicant had any, and, if any, what lien upon it?—and, if so, whether there was any, and what prior lien thereon.—Mackey v. Martins, 1 I. E. R. 331. (E.E.)

ECCLIASTICAL PERSONS AND THINGS.

II. 2. Purchases of.

4. When, under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37, the Bishop's immediate lessee purchased the fee of the demised lands, and obtained a conveyance thereof, including the royalties—Held, that his sub-lessee, having a t. q. covenant for renewal, and contributing his proportion of the purchase-money, &c., was entitled, under the 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 99, as to the sub-demised lands, to a like conveyance of the fee thereof, including the royalties.—Byrne v. Hugo, 1 I. E. R. 351. (R.)

PRACTICE, ANSWER, SUPPLEMENTAL—PRACTICE, CHARGE & DISCHARGE—PRACTICE, MASTER, REVIEWING REPORT.

5. E., being seized in tail of the X. estate, including the lands of B. and G., with remainder to V. in tail, levied fines and suffered recoveries of the estate (except B. and G.) in 1814. In 1844, after the death of E., the Master made a report in the matter of V. and others minors, and found thereby that E. had, by fines and recoveries, barred all estates tail in the X. estate. In 1845, there was filed for the minor V., in the cause of V. v. O'B., an answer admitting that E. had, by fines and recoveries, legally barred all estates tail in the X. estate. A similar admission was made in an answer filed for the minor, in 1848, in a creditor's suit of O'B. v. V. A decree to account having been made in W. v. V., the ptf.'s charge stated that E., being seized of the X. estate, made his will, &c.; and the discharge of the minors admitted that statement. The Master reported that E. had levied fines and recoveries of all the X. estate, and had acquired a fee-simple therein; but no evidence to support that finding was given before the Master. The cause of W. v. V. having been set down for final hearing, was directed to stand over until the return of the report in O'B. v. V. A petition having been presented to the I. E. Court, after the sale of one denomination it was discovered that B. and G. were not included in the fines and recoveries. On motion made in 1852, the Court refused to allow V. to file a supplemental answer, but ordered that the Master be at liberty to review his report in relation to the fines and recoveries of 1814, so far as related to B. and G., and in such other particulars as might be made necessary by correcting the error; and that, notwithstanding the admissions in the answer: and gave to V. liberty to file a further discharge, in order to put the matter properly in issue, but upon the terms of accounting for the rents of a part of the X. estate of which V. had been allowed to go into possession; of his executing a disentailing deed of the denomination sold; and of his paying off, out of the purchase-money, a creditor, who had become such at his request.—Cripps v. Villiers, 2 I. C. R. 179. (R.)

PRACTICE—EVIDENCE—AFFIDAVITS.

1. When additional time for filing affidavits is required, an application for an extension of the time ought, in the first instance, to be made to the opposite solicitor.

Affidavits by way of evidence should contain only legal evidence directed to the matters put in issue by the pleadings.—Moclare v. M., 8 I. C. R. 610. (C.)

PRACTICE, XXXVIII, 11, h: AFFIDAVIT ON APPLYING FOR LEAVE TO SUE IN FORMA PAUPERIS.

2. An application in this Court for liberty to sue in forma pauperis must be made on an affidavit that the ptf. is not worth £5, except the matter in question in the suit.—O'Donnell v. M'Mahon, 9 I. E. R. 471. (R.)

PRACTICE, MASTER—PRACTICE, PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

3. Under the 182nd G. O. of Nov. 1834, the Master should exercise his discretion, and certify what books, papers, or writings respectively should be lodged in his office, or produced for inspection only; although the decree under which he may be proceeding requires the parties to bring in and deposit with the Master all deeds, writings, &c., in anywise touching or concerning the premises, in their possession or power respectively.

The deeds need not be produced until the Master certifies.—Chaytor v. C., 1 I. E. R. 432. (R.)

PRACTICE, TAKING PLEADINGS OFF THE FILE.

4. On an application to take the answer off the file, in order to institute a prosecution for perjury—Held, that, in order to sustain such an application, a special case must be made.—N— v. N., 1 I. E. R. 17. (C.)

VENDOR AND PURCHASER, IV, 3.

5. A condition of sale provided that the "purchaser shall not be at liberty to require any evidence of the title of the lessors in said lease, or any of them; or object by reason of incumbrances, if any, affecting the title of such lessors; nor require the production of any title deeds connected with the premises, prior to, or of previous date to said lease; but shall admit that said lease has been duly executed and acknowledged by all the parties thereto, and be satisfied with same being handed over to them, and the title deduced therefrom to the owners." Held, that this condition did not preclude the purchaser from rejecting the title on the ground of objections to the lessors' title.

Lessees for lives renewable for ever granted to L., his heirs and assigns, a lease at a rent. Held, that L.'s estate did not answer the description of a lease for ever.—Musgrave v. M'Cullagh, 14 I. C. R. 496. (C.)—[See also Geoghegan v. Connolly, 8 I. C. R. 598. (R.), p. 1409 (2).]
